LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

DEBATES AND PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

FOURTH SESSION OF THE TWENTY-SECOND LEGISLATURE OF THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: The Honourable J. DE C. HEPBURN

Wednesday, the third day of March, 1948, being the first day of the Fourth Session of the Twenty-second Legislature of the Province of Ontario for the Despatch of Business pursuant to a Proclamation of the Honourable Ray Lawson, O.B.E., LL.D., Lieutenant-Governor of the Province.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1948

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province then entered the House, and, being seated on the Throne, was pleased to open the Session by the following gracious speech:

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

On this opening day of the Fourth Session of the Twenty-second Legislature of the Province of Ontario, I am happy to extend my greetings to each one of you and to express the hope that much good will result to the people of Ontario from the important deliberations which you are about to undertake.

It was just a year ago that I first met and addressed you at the opening of your Third Session. Within that time many events have occurred which were of special significance to the members of this Legislature. I should like to mention one which is a source of great regret to all of us. The County of Huron lost its late representative, you lost a personal friend and the people of Ontario an unselfish public servant. Dr. R. Hobbs Taylor devoted his life in an unusual degree to service of the public in the practice of medicine, as a country doctor, and through his participation in public affairs. Because of his untimely death, at 50 years of age, it is no exaggeration to say that he gave his life in the service of his constituents and his country. It is gratifying to know that Huron County will again be represented at this Session. I shall be very pleased to welcome its new Member to this Legislature.

Some further comment on the events of the past year may be desirable, as it provides a background for the problems which you will be considering. It has been a year of great production and high wages. The income and expenditure of individuals, the municipalities and the province have never been greater. Industrial activity and production, after a temporary decline in the period of transition, stand at record levels for peacetime, but are still unable to meet the demand and the capacity of our people to pay for goods and services of all kinds.

IMMIGRATION

Our standards of living and nutrition are much higher than in the Old World and are as high as any comparable area in the New World. It is not surprising therefore that immigration is moving to Canada as fast as transportation facilities make that possible. Nor is it surprising that over 50 per cent. of all immigrants to Canada in the past year have come to this province, and that we are retaining a substantial population which migrated here from other provinces during the war.

In 1947, as soon as the Dominion Government eased its immigration regulations, my Government made arrangements for Transatlantic Air Transport from the British Isles at charter rates substantially less than those charged for scheduled flights. A system of selective immigration was organized, which has been administered by the office of the Agent-General in London and a branch office of the Department of Planning and Development. Immigrants are selected at Ontario House in London. Preference is given to those who can be quickly employed.

The first Airborne Immigration Plan put into effect by any government began operating on August 2nd last. Since then most of the flights have been made by Transocean Air Lines, acting as sub-agents for Trans-Canada Airlines. By this means some seven thousand men and women have been flown from Great Britain to this province.

Under the organization set up by the Department of Planning and Development in co-operation with the Red Cross Society, the Salvation Army and National Employment Service, most of these new citizens have been quickly established in a great variety of occupations throughout the province. Many hundreds of members of their families have followed by sea. My Government has arranged for this immigration plan to continue during 1948.

INFLATIONARY TRENDS

During the year, prices have risen to inflationary levels. My Government has no choice but to recognize that responsibility for checking and controlling inflation rests with the Federal Government, with its jurisdiction over monetary policy, international trade, and the major sources of taxation, as well as its power to control the bulk of public expenditure. My Government is however greatly concerned with the attempts now being made to maintain the Canadian dollar at an artificially high level through the use of restrictions on imports, embargoes on exports, high excise taxation, and other restrictive controls.

The effect has been most noticeable on gold mining, an industry which should produce in Ontario hundreds of millions of new wealth annually, and also upon the great communities which are dependent on gold mining. My Government was able to report last year:

"the largest number of mining claims ever recorded, a greater volume of provincial assays, and a higher demand for geological maps, reports and blue prints."

This year the Department of Mines reports that the number of claims recorded was barely half of that in the previous year and the number of claims cancelled rose from 6,003 in 1946 to 18,116 in 1947.

You will be asked to consider appropriations which will give assistance to the great communities which depend on gold mining.

WELFARE

During the past year, unemployment relief regulations have provided for increases in allowances due to the increased cost of living. Mothers' Allowances have also been increased. By agreement with the Dominion Government, Ontario has undertaken to pay its twenty-five per cent. share of Old-Age Pensions increased from $25 per month to $30 per month. In addition, my Government has provided for a further provincial payment up to $10 per month in cases of need, over and above the $30, making a total of $40 monthly in such cases.

Preliminary steps have also been taken to inaugurate a system of rehabilitation for handicapped persons.

HEALTH

High costs have created special problems in the important field of public health. An increase in the cost of hospital supplies and wages has resulted in an operating deficit in three-quarters of all public hospitals, notwithstanding increased charges to private patients. The cost of maintenance in sanatoria for the tubercular, which is dependent almost entirely on provincial funds, has risen to a point where further substantial maintenance grants are required.

Increased payments have been made to hospitals by the province and the municipalities.

During the past year, provincial grants have been provided on a systematic basis for new hospital construction. You will be asked to continue this provision and increase the appropriation for this purpose.

It is of interest that this province is again able to report a new low in maternal and infant mortality. There has been a steady increase, to about 50 per cent. in the number of expectant mothers who take advantage of my Government's provision for free prenatal examination.

Examination by X-ray for tuberculosis has been greatly extended in the province. In addition, such examination has been provided in the Ontario immigration office in London for all prospective immigrants to this province.

Public interest in the formation of county health units has now reached the point where the lack of qualified staff is the only barrier to province-wide adoption of this programme.

The shortage of nursing help in hospitals is being partially offset by certified nursing assistants being trained under a plan, which you will be asked to continue.

EDUCATION

There is great need of additional school accommodation in Ontario, due largely to the inability of boards to build in the depression years and during the war, and partly to normal growth and the voluntary movement towards larger administrative areas, which has brought 53.4 per cent. of the old rural school sections into township school areas and formed high school districts in about 40 per cent. of the area for which county councils are responsible.

Education is regarded by my Government as its highest responsibility. To assist construction of new schools and the expending educational programme, the 1947 grants rose to a record level of $30,134,336, of which $19,374,749 went to elementary schools, $7,392,684 to high schools and $3,366,903 to vocational schools. You will be asked to make substantially higher grants for 1948. Notwithstanding this great assistance from the Provincial Treasury, the cost of education borne by the local ratepayers is still high. The need for strict economy is obvious. The steadily rising cost of education cannot be ignored.

A word might be said about some new aspects of educational activity, the continued development of which you will be asked to approve. I refer to the Physical and Health Education Branch of the Department. Fifty-five communities are now conducting recreation programmes under full-time directors. A notable part of this programme is the provision of citizenship classes for recent arrivals in the Province.

The Student Aid Programme enables an ever-increasing number of capable students to enjoy educational opportunities which they would otherwise be denied. Nine hundred and sixty-six scholarships and bursaries were awarded last year, representing an outlay of almost $200,000, of which the Ontario Government provided $150,000.

The concert tours, which the Music Branch began to sponsor last year, continue to bring fine music to Ontario communities and to encourage young artists by providing opportunities for professional experience. During the past year, 26 towns have enjoyed 96 concerts.

HOUSING

The housing shortage has, I know, been a matter of great concern to all of you. Now that the increasing availability of essential supplies, for the first time, makes it possible for the Provincial Legislature to deal effectively with this matter, you will be called upon to consider measures designed to greatly increase the construction of low-cost accommodation to this province.

PUBLIC WORKS

Prior attention will be given in this programme to works relating to the development and protection of the natural resources of the Province; to the accommodation for the care of the sick and other charges of the Province; as well as to the extension of facilities for police protection in the northern districts and for the improvement of the tourist trade generally.

COMMISSIONS

In the course of the year three comprehensive studies have been completed for the advice and assistance of the Legislature and Government.

FORESTRY REPORT

The enquiry into the forest resources of Ontario by a staff of expert forest engineers, under the direction of Major-General Howard Kennedy, was completed and a report presented to the Legislature last October. You will be informed of the steps already taken by the Government to implement very important recommendations in the report of the Royal Commission on Forestry. Measures will also be placed before you for your consideration which will give statutory effect to other important recommendations which require new legislation.

MILK REPORT

You will recall that following the removal of the subsidies paid by the Dominion Government to the producers and distributors of milk, an extensive enquiry into the costs and methods of production and distribution of this basic commodity and essential nutriment was undertaken by Mr. Justice Wells, assisted by counsel and accountants. You will be asked to consider legislation based on this report to replace and extend the temporary measures introduced last October.

RESEARCH COMMISSION

The final report of the Ontario Research Commission will be presented to you and you will be asked to approve legislation providing for the establishment of a permanent Research Council for Ontario which will co-ordinate research activity and advise generally on research problems, through the agency of advisory committees in each important field of research. You will be asked to provide scholarships and bursaries to develop needed research workers, as well as funds which will be used as a contribution of one half of the costs of approved research projects which industry, and smaller industries, will be encouraged to undertake on a co-operative and group basis.

My Government wishes to pay a well deserved tribute to Dr. R. C. Wallace, the Chairman of this Commission, and the several leaders in university and industrial life who have unselfishly devoted their time without remuneration over a period of two years to the examination of research and scientific investigation in the Province and have, in their report, made a noteworthy contribution to this vital aspect of development in this Province.

I come now to those great departments of government whose duty it is to assist our citizens in the creation of wealth from natural products and resources.

AGRICULTURE

The year 1947 was a difficult one for Ontario Agriculture. In the spring unfavourable weather interfered to a large extent with the sowing of spring crops, with the result that the crop production of cereal grains fell below normal. This created a shortage of feed grains in Ontario, which, coupled with the removal of ceilings on feed grains in October, resulting in sudden and substantial rises in the price levels for oats and barley coming into Ontario from the western provinces, and brought about a condition of hardship and instability for the livestock producers of the province. For the remainder of the year 1947 they were forced to pay greatly increased prices for their feed grain and concentrates, without any corresponding increase in the price of their livestock products. The new prices under the British contracts, announced early in 1948, have helped to level up this situation, although the shortage in feed supplies continues to create problems for livestock producers.

While the year 1947 was a year of difficulties for farmers generally, it was also a year of positive progress in the development of long-term plans for the improvement of agricultural conditions in the province. This was particularly marked in the field of livestock, in which new policies initiated by the Ontario Department of Agriculture are being accepted with favour by farmers throughout the province.

The extension of scientific research at the Ontario Agricultural College, the Ontario Veterinary College and the various experimental stations under the jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture has gone ahead rapidly in the last year. This research programme has covered many phases of agriculture, both in field crops and livestock, and is bringing to the aid of the farmers of Ontario all the resources of agricultural science.

The policies of the Department of Agriculture are designed to assist farmers to formulate and set down long-term programmes suitable for the great and expanding future of agriculture in Ontario.

MINES

Notwithstanding the blow to gold mining, higher prices for base metals and increased activity in the non-metallic industry throughout the Province, resulted in a large increase in the value of the aggregate output of all mineral products in 1947. This figure amounts to $241,371,337 for 1947 compared with $191,690,779 in 1946 and $234,049,323 in 1939.

You will be asked during the course of the Session to consider amendments to the Mining Act with special reference to operations of the mines. These will provide for an expanded geological field programme which will place 14 geological parties in the field during the season, one of which will investigate the potential iron bearing areas in south-eastern Ontario.

TRAVEL AND PUBLICITY

exceeded all previous totals. During the 12 months ending December 31st, more than 1,000,000 automobiles carrying touring parties entered the province from the United States for vacation purposes. This figure exceeded by more than 100,000 the previous "record" years.

In addition to the important work of stimulating the flow of visitors to Ontario, the Department of Travel and Publicity continued its many-sided campaign to elevate the standards of the tourist catering industry generally. Inspectors from the department visited tourist camps throughout the season and were able to render a service to operators by way of advice and assistance. An important aspect of the department's operations was a programme of survey work in connection with the development of winter recreation facilities.

The Reception Centre service established at the main border entry points, was used by more than 250,000 groups of visitors during 1947, and will be expanded during the coming year by the operation of 2 additional units, bringing to 14 the number of Centres now established.

An additional responsibility was undertaken by the department during the past year in the organization of a Division of Public Information for the purpose of co-ordinating and supervising the existing government information services, apart from the travel field. Publication of a news bulletin dealing with governmental activities, was undertaken, and met with a very favourable response on the part of the public.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER

The people of this Province are the owners of the greatest publicly owned Hydro-Electric system in the world. Measured in terms of combined assets and annual production it is one of the largest businesses in Canada. It has before it a five-year programme of construction which will almost double its capitalization and increase its production by approximately 1,250,000 horsepower exclusive of the St. Lawrence River development.

As the representatives of the people of Ontario, you will have very important decisions to make with respect to:

(1) the recommendation of my Government that the Southern Ontario system be converted entirely from twenty-five cycle to sixty cycle.

(2) the authorization of a programme of expansion which will require the commitment of Provincial credit to the extent of several hundred millions of dollars and will provide for generation of Electric Power from steam in addition to the water-generated powers.

You will further be asked to approve the acceleration of the already rapid extension of electrical service to the farms and rural sections of the Province.

At the end of the year nearly 196,500 rural consumers, of all classes in the operating areas were served by 24,500 miles of new lines. Despite the shortage of men and materials, which affected all the Commission's construction activities, service was extended to 21,000 new consumers, the largest annual increase in the history of the provincial system. One thousand miles of new primary lines were built.

The objective of the Commission for 1948 is to construct 3,400 miles of new rural lines which will serve some 30,000 new consumers. This programme calls for a Government grant-in-aid of approximately $10,500,000.

PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

The Department of Planning and Development has carried forward its programme of guiding and encouraging the sound, long-range planning municipalities under the Planning Act. Planning Boards have been constituted in many municipalities and their work shows substantial progress. Under the direction of this Department eight Conservation Authorities have been formed in Southern Ontario. Following Conservation surveys undertaken by the Department, plans have been adopted and work is proceeding in the control of floods, reforestation and improvement of natural resources.

Through the Trade and Industry Branch of this Department, industrial development has been encouraged, particularly in the smaller towns. Handicrafts have been promoted in several industrial centres, through instruction and guidance offered by the Department.

As a new service to industry, the Ontario Industrial Research Service has been established, to assist in the solution of technical industrial problems.

HIGHWAYS

The great highway-building programme of last year, which included the Red Lake Road, 330 miles of new surfacing of all types, and 117 miles of resurfacing, will be surpassed in 1948. Although the completion of the Toronto-Barrie Highway will be delayed for lack of steel and other materials, it is proposed to proceed during the coming season with the relocation of Highway 11 from Severn Bridge to Gravenhurst, and at South River; to continue work on the mining roads southwest of Timmins and between Matachewan and Swastika; and also to proceed with the surfacing of gravel roads and, where necessary, reconstruction of depreciated pavements.

Equipment pools in the Northern Townships and direct financial assistance to municipalities will be continued.

LABOUR

As my Minister of Labour has already announced, the Government will recommend that in the labour code which is now before the Dominion parliament, be considered for adoption as the labour code for all industry in this province which is not subject to federal jurisdiction.

It is to be hoped that the Bill before the federal parliament will be passed at a time and in such form as will enable you to accept it in accordance with this recommendation, and to that end discussions between the provincial and federal departments of labour have already taken place.

The enrolment of civilian apprentices in all trades will be in excess of 3,000 for the fiscal year 1948-1949 and classes of instruction for apprentices will have an approximate enrolment of eleven hundred.

The system by which partial vacations with pay are provided to employees in seasonal industries has operated with such success that the total credits which will be cashed this year will likely reach $4,000,000.

You will be called on to consider an amendment to The Factory, Shop and Office Building Act which will provide for a closer check on certain types of very dangerous equipment. An amendment to The Apprenticeship Act will give authority to define the work-content of various trades and permit apprentices to become qualified as specialists in one or more branches of a trade.

LANDS AND FORESTS

The Department of Lands and Forests has greatly enlarged its research programme to extend into all phases of our renewable resources. Many field parties were in the woods during the year. This work will be continued in 1948 so that answers to our most urgent long-term management problems can be found.

The province-wide inventory of our forest resources is now in its second year and already 50,000,000 acres of forest land have been photographed from the air to form the basis for a broad plan of Forest Management. This is almost half the work contemplated in the original photographic plan, so that the work originally planned for five years is well ahead of schedule.

During the past year the government introduced a plan to curtail and eventually to eliminate the export of unprocessed wood from the Crown lands of Ontario.

A new type of bush aircraft has been developed in co-operation with an Ontario aircraft company. The finished product is highly successful, and several of them will be placed in service this spring to provide better fire protection and resources management.

Management of fur resources was improved by bringing in a system of trappers' zones, giving to each trapper a definite area.

Work will continue on hatchery renovation, pheasant breeding, the training of licensed guides, fish culture, various aspects of fish and wild life management, forest soils and regeneration surveys.

DOMINION, PROVINCE AND MUNICIPALITIES

During the past year my Government has endeavoured by inter-departmental conferences and official exchanges with the departments and officials of the Dominion Government to extend the large area of co-operation in administrative matters already established.

Nevertheless the larger problem of setting the respective responsibilities of the Dominion and Provincial Governments, particularly in the fields of taxation, health and social legislation, seem to be no nearer solution than they were a year ago.

You will recall that health and social legislation are on the agenda of that conference, but have not been discussed by reason of the adjournment of the conference in May, 1946, on the motion of the Dominion Government, in the midst of a discussion of tax matters.

Last year I reported the refusal of the Dominion Government to reconvene the Dominion - Provincial Conference adjourned since May, 1946. I regret to report that there is no indication of a change in the attitude of the Dominion Government notwithstanding the fact that my Government and those of most of the other provinces, as well as the representatives of the Ontario municipalities, have all requested the conference be resumed.

The municipalities are concerned with this matter because an orderly and efficient division of administrative duties and tax revenues between the province and its municipalities is conditional to a large extent on the settlement of similar problems between the Province and the Dominion.

The municipalities are only able to carry their present administrative load because of very large direct and indirect payments from provincial funds. The only substantial tax which the municipality has is the tax on real estate. My Government, when it assumed half of the cost of education, was determined that owners of homes and real property should not be over-taxed, and, with this end in mind, has extended provincial grants to municipalities, direct and indirect, and for many purposes, until they now reach very large proportions.

A system which requires such large payments from one government to other governments obviously needs review.

This review could have been made much more satisfactorily after the positions of the Province and the Dominion had been settled. For that reason such a review has been deferred in the hope that the Dominion Government would eventually meet the provincial governments to discuss their tax problems. As there is, however, no indication that they are prepared to resume the conference, my Government, in accordance with the announcement made to municipalities some time ago, will not postpone action on this account, and will ask you to approve of the establishment of a joint provincial-municipal committee to make the review which I have mentioned and to recommend such adjustment of responsibilities and revenues as it may think desirable.

In the meantime the municipalities have been sharing in the general prosperity of the province, as is shown from increases in population, assessment of buildings and corresponding increases in taxes. They deserve much credit for the continued reduction of their debenture debt, which, at the end of 1946, was down to $214,648,000 as compared with $504,756,000 at the end of 1932.

During 1947 an Assessment Branch was added to the Department of Municipal Affairs. The department is now in a position to give any municipality advice on assessment law and modern up-to-date methods of valuing property for assessment purposes. From the applications already received by the department it is anticipated that this service will be requested by a large number of municipalities during the year 1948.

The work of municipal treasurers will be simplified and a clearer picture presented to the ratepayers as the result of a new method of preparing municipal audit reports adopted by the department this year.

Amendments to The Assessment Act and The Municipal Act will be proposed at this Session to meet changing practices and conditions in the Ontario municipalities.

Legislation will be introduced permitting the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to designate any area in the province, in which Wartime Housing has erected a housing project, as an area under the sole responsibility of the Dominion Government in cases in which the local municipal authorities have been unable to reach satisfactory arrangements with the Dominion Government.

REFORM INSTITUTIONS

In spite of difficulties in getting the necessary personnel and materials, this new department has greatly improved the provincial institutions through the systematic training of officers and guards and the adoption of methods of segregation of different classes of offenders. Discipline and training directed towards rehabilitation, particularly of the younger prisoners, have been very successful.

The new institution established early last year at Brampton for selected young prisoners has shown excellent results.

Important steps have already been taken in developing an industrial farm system which will eventually replace the common gaols.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

The installation of the Ontario Provincial Police radio system in the eleven Provincial Police Districts in Southern Ontario is well advanced. In district No. 5, comprising the counties of Ontario, Peel and York, it has been fully installed, tested and accepted by the government and now is in full operation.

Even in the short time that the system has been in operation to this limited extent it has demonstrated its value in law enforcement in a spectacular way by bringing about the immediate apprehension of bank and other armed robbers.

In three other Provincial Police districts the installation has been completed and as soon as the testing is done by the government engineer the system will be accepted in those districts and will be put into operation almost immediately.

Schools for the training of municipal police officers are being opened up in strategic centres in the province in co-operation with municipalities. The first schools have already started at Port Arthur, and at Windsor.

VARIOUS AMENDMENTS

A variety of new provisions and amendments to existing Acts will be presented for consideration, including provision—

- (a) For the posting of rates in hotel rooms and tourist resorts.
- (b) For the reciprocal enforcement of orders for the maintenance of deserted wives and children made by courts in British countries.
- (c) For regularizing the practise in regard to putting parking tickets on automobiles, and making the fines available to the municipalities.
- (d) For improvement in companies' legislation.
- (e) For improvement in the procedure of publication of marriage banns.

CIVIL SERVICE

It is fitting that I should extend a word of appreciation to the permanent service, that body of loyal men and women through whom your efforts for the welfare of our people are translated into administrative action. Our thanks go to those who have completed their period of service and are retired. Our respect is also extended to the memory of those who have died during the past year.

CONCLUSION

The Public Accounts for the last complete fiscal year and the estimates for the year 1948-49 will be submitted to you later for your consideration and approval.

Finally, may I express the hope that your deliberations may be so guided by Divine Providence that your work here will contribute to the general welfare and happiness of the people of this province.

His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, was then pleased to retire.

Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: I beg to inform the House that, to prevent mistakes, I have obtained a copy of His Honour's Speech, which I will now read.

Reading suspended.

MR. SPEAKER: I beg to inform the House that I received during the recess, as provided by the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1937, Chapter 12, Section 32, notification of a vacancy which had occurred in the membership of the House by reason of the death of Doctor R. Hobbs Taylor, Member for the Electoral District of Huron; and that I issued my Warrant to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery for the issue of a Writ for the election of a Member to serve in the present Legislature for that Electoral District.

I beg to inform the House that the Clerk has received, and laid upon the Table the Certificate of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery certifying that an election held since the last Session of this House resulted in the election of Thomas Pryde, Esquire, as the Member of this House for the Electoral District of Huron.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present Mr. James Pryde, the Member-Elect for the Electoral District of Huron, who has taken the oath, signed the roll, and now claims the right to take his seat.

MR. SPEAKER: Let the honourable member take his seat.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

MR. R. E. ELLIOTT (Hamilton, East): Mr. Speaker, we are very glad to welcome to this House the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde). We hope he will enjoy his stay with us, and we know that he will be truly representative of the people of his riding and the people of the Province of Ontario.

The hon. members of this House will be very happy and proud to have you with us in the future. In recognition of the land from whence you came, we are very happy to present you with this spray of heather.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

PROTECTION OF BIRDS ACT

HON. H. R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Dunbar, that leave be given to introduce a Bill intituled An Act to Repeal the Protection of Birds Act, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the Bill.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Are you not going to protect the birds any more? What do you mean by that?

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): I do not want to remind you of the Act that you usually introduced when you were here.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Kennedy that the Speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor to this House be taken into consideration tomorrow.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Kennedy, that, during the present Session of the Legislative Assembly, provision be made for the taking and printing of reports of debates and speeches and to that end that Mr. Speaker be authorized to employ an editor of debates and speeches and the necessary stenographers at such rates of compensation as may be agreed to by him; also that Mr. Speaker be authorized to arrange for the printing of the reports, as authorized, in the amount of 1,200 copies daily, copies of such printed reports to be supplied to The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor and each member of the Assembly and the balance to be distributed by the Clerk of the Assembly as directed by Mr. Speaker.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Kennedy (Minister of Agriculture), that Select Committees of this House, for the present Session, be appointed for the following purposes:

1. On Privileges and Elections;
2. On Education;
3. On Miscellaneous Private Bills;
4. On Standing Orders;
5. On Public Accounts;
6. On Printing;
7. On Municipal Law;
8. On Legal Bills;
9. On Agriculture and Colonization;
10. On Fish and Game;
11. On Labour.

Which said Committees shall severally be empowered to examine and enquire into all such matters and things as shall be referred to them by the House, and to report from time to time their observations and opinions thereon, with power to send for persons, papers and records.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Kennedy (Minister of Agriculture), that a Select Committee of eleven members be appointed to prepare and report, with all convenient despatch, lists of the members to compose the Select Standing Committees ordered by the House, such Committee to be composed as follows:

Messrs. Begin, Cathcart, Chaplin, Creighton, Davies, Murdoch, McEwing, Murphy, Pringle, Stewart (Kingston), Taylor.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, I would like, first of all, to express the regret that I know all here feel at the very untimely death of a man who was truly a friend of every member of this Legislature, Dr. R. Hobbs Taylor. I am sure that every hon. member on both sides of the House will agree with me that he was one of the most faithful and unselfish members we have had in this Legislature at any time. There is a particular reason for my saying this, which is perhaps unknown to a great many people outside. You will recall that some three years ago, Dr. Taylor was stricken while in this Legislature, actually in the middle of his speech. It was not known to many of the members that he had suffered a heart attack at that time. There were very severe complications, but, by the greatest of good fortune, he recovered at that time. I think it can be very truly said that Dr. Taylor died on active service for his people and for his country.

He was completely unselfish, as is so often true of our doctors whose work is so close to the people they know. In the service of those with whom he had been associated from his early years, and even with the knowledge that his health had been gravely impaired by what he had gone through, he continued to represent, without any regard for differences in party or other considerations, those by whom he had been chosen by our democratic system.

It is particularly significant that on the night before he died, in very inclement weather, he had gone to some considerable trouble to speak to a meeting of young boys in his own community. I cannot imagine anything that is a greater challenge to any of us than to assist in any way we can in the development of our youth, and it was always such public services that he performed. That was the very last public service he did perform, as he went home from the meeting that night and died before morning.

I know everyone here who was associated with him will join with me in expressing our very deep and profound sympathy to his wife and to his daughter. His death would have been a severe loss in any event, but it was particularly tragic at his comparatively young age.

Because of that very sad event, in the ordinary operation of our democratic processes, designed to continue representation at whatever level the Government may be, and without regard to these human events, there was a bye-election in Huron County, so that a representative could sit at the opening of this Session as a representative of that very important part of Ontario. For more reasons than one, it is only natural that I should personally feel a great deal of satisfaction that we have sitting in the Legislature today a very excellent representative of that riding, Mr. Thomas Pryde.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: He comes here with a record of great public service already established. He has served in the same public offices which have been occupied by such a very large number of the hon. members of this Legislature in their own communities. He served in the council and was Reeve of his own town, and not only did he give public service in full to any and all the many volunteer organizations which play their vitally important parts under our system, but he also served, and served gallantly, on active service in both wars. He was a fighter pilot in the first World War, and an administrative officer on active service in the Royal Canadian Air Force in the war which ended two years ago.

With that background he comes to us well qualified in every way to represent the fine riding from which he comes.

May I add that in addition to qualifications of that nature, he also comes here with the excellent qualifications of being an extremely friendly and pleasant gentleman, who I know will become an intimate friend of everyone here before very long.

Then to a particular part of those in this Assembly and elsewhere, there is a very special qualification, which he should probably assert was the best qualification of all, that is, that he was born in Scotland.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: Even from my Irish friend on my right (Hon. Mr. Kennedy) I was able to get some mild response to that.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: I think it is significant that, like all of us who cherish the traditions of our own racial background, whatever it may be, we find that there are none who are more deeply impressed and more proud of their background, who have done their best to dominate our public life in every way, than the people who have come here from Scotland, or are descendants of the Scottish people.

I remember during the first war there was a book with a wide publication in England at that time, written by Sir Ian Hamilton, with the title "The Oppressed England," and it explained that virtually all in the important positions in Britain were natives of Scotland. It has not reached that point here as yet, but undoubtedly a surprisingly high percentage of those who do assume public responsibility, can trace their ancestry back to Scotland, that isle where on porridge and other meagre fare, they developed that measure of hardihood which prepares to tackle any hard jobs, anywhere they go.

He is not merely one of those Scotsmen who is proud of that fact, that his ancestors come from there, but that he was born there, and his voice still betrays him in a very pleasant way. So we might indicate to him that we recognize that special qualification, and it is only fitting that there should be placed on his desk today a sprig of heather, which was sent here through the kindness of Mrs. John R. Glynn, of Georgetown, who had received this really magnificent bunch of heather sent her from Scotland, and perhaps the hon. member will be interested to know that it came from Gairloch, in Rothshire, and she thought it would be appropriate that a Scotsman should not come here without being duly confronted with that evidence of his own proud background, and I think it will be of special significance to him, as she has pointed out, that in the middle of that spray, is a sprig of white heather, and no one will know better than the new hon. member from Huron (Mr. Pryde) that the white heather is truly symbolic to all Scotsmen of good luck, and I know I can safely say on behalf of every hon. member here that we wish the newly elected hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) the best of luck.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I follow the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) in the sorrow that we all feel over the passing of Dr. R. Hobbs Taylor. I particularly liked Dr. Taylor for the very fine human qualities and traits which he possessed. Oftentimes we had talks together on subjects apart from political discussions, and it was easy to talk to Dr. Taylor, and easy to get from him a sound, basic philosophy of life and I join with every hon. member in the House in regretting his passing, the passing of a public servant who did so much for this Province, and who did so much for the County of Huron.

Now, as regards the hon. member (Mr. Pryde) who has replaced Dr. Taylor and who has taken his seat in the House this afternoon, I do express on behalf of the Opposition our—what shall I say?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. OLIVER: —appreciation of his fine qualities, which he carries so visibly. But I do want at once to disclaim any responsibility for the coming of the hon. member (Mr. Pryde) to this august chamber.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. OLIVER: Any help that I may have given him was done wholly unintentionally—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. OLIVER: And of that you may be sure. The great obstacle we found in Huron County was the hon. member (Mr. Pryde) who has taken his seat this afternoon.

Surely he possesses, as you may see, great qualities of heart and mind, and those qualities became known throughout the riding of Huron.

I would rather have had another welcomed in this Chamber this afternoon. It is in the ordinary process of democracy, and we welcome the verdict, although we cannot endorse the whole of it.

But I do say to my hon. friend, the new member for Huron, (Mr. Pryde), that we do welcome him from this corner of the house, and we feel, even with the limitations with which he may be surrounded, that he will be able to give to this House, and to the province generally, a great deal that stands for good and for progress.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I join with the hon. Prime Minister, (Mr. Drew), and with the Leader of the Opposition, (Mr. Oliver), in expressing my deep sorrow at the loss of the former member for Huron, Dr. R. Hobbs Taylor. Perhaps I had occasion to know Doctor Taylor better than some of the others. About three years ago I was a little under the weather during the Session, and Doctor Taylor heard about it, and he made it a point to search me out, and talk to me about this slight illness that had kept me away from the House. I appreciated that action on his part very much, and I got to know Doctor Taylor and to regard him as a friend, and it was a great shock to me when I heard of his passing.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that I express the sentiment of all the members of our group, when I say that we feel very deeply the loss of Doctor Taylor, and desire to express to his widow and family our very deepest sympathy.

As for the new hon. member: I am not quite in the same position as the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), feeling a great deal of pride in having the new hon. member here, nor are we in the position of the Opposition of suffering a loss in the riding. I am independent.

But, Mr. Speaker, I can say that we look forward to hearing from the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) in this House and perhaps at this session. Sometimes new hon. members do not have much opportunity to speak at their first session. From our own observations we feel that this Scotsman will make his name known in this House, at this session, and I am sure that all hon. member will be interested in what he has to say, and we extend to him our assistance and our advice, if he wants it—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. GRUMMETT: —at any time, and our friendship.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I should like to join with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), with the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and the leader of the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett) in the sincere and well-merited tribute which has been paid to the memory of the late Doctor Taylor. It was very regrettable, indeed, that he was the first of the membership of this house to depart this life. I say quite sincerely that in the years since 1943, during which we had the opportunity of coming into personal contact with the late Doctor Taylor, we learned to respect him very much indeed. We did not have to agree with his politics to appreciate the fine, rugged qualities of character and citizenship which animated his life as a public servant of this province. My colleague and I desire to be associated with the expressions of sympathy, which you,

Mr. Speaker, will convey to Mrs. Taylor and her daughter, in the very sad bereavement which has overtaken them.

Now, may I say a word about the new hon. member from Huron (Mr. Pryde). He happens to be of the same race as myself, and while I cannot claim any credit for having contributed in any way to his election I am also in the position of being able to say that I contributed nothing to the efforts which were made to keep him out of the House.

To the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) I would simply say that it is my sincere hope that the virtues of his race will overcome the vices of his politics.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: And inasmuch as the sprig of heather on his desk comes from the birthplace of my grandmother, I hope when the House adjourns he will give me a piece as a memento.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the adjournment, I want to say a word briefly about one of our officials—and do not be alarmed, because definitely there is no sad news that goes with it. For the first time in many years we have not with us at the opening of the Legislature, the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, Mr. Charles F. Bulmer, as his doctor has ordered him to remain at home, and it is quite certain that he will not be in the Legislature at any of its present sittings.

I feel that it is appropriate that I bring this to the notice of the hon. members, and on behalf of all the hon. members extend to him our good wishes.

Mr. Bulmer has, for twenty-one years, been sitting at the table in this Chamber when the sessions opened, in his capacity as Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and has been a civil servant of this province continually for fifty-seven years. It may be a matter of more than passing interest to say that he started his civil-service experience in the old Legislative buildings on King street. In spite of all that may be said—and I do not in any way suggest that this applies to one side or the other—but sometimes it may be said in a misunderstanding way concerning the term of office of the civil service, he stands, in himself, a demonstration of the long continuity of service, which applies to those who form such a vitally important part of the functions of government, and the legislative body here, the nature of their service and the long service that they perform.

I merely mention this now because—although fortunately there is no reason to be alarmed concerning his condition, I feel that having regard to the thoughts he will be having on this first occasion when he is unable to be here in those many years, he would be more than happy to hear from us, and to receive the expression of good wishes, and the hope that it will not be too long after the session, until he is able to return once again.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I propose to move the adjournment of the House, but before I do, I think it would be appropriate to indicate the order of business tomorrow. May I say to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) that he will have his wish, as the first speaker in this Legislature will be the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: When we resume tomorrow, we will proceed with the debate on the motion for the adoption of the Speech from the Throne, which will be moved by the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde), seconded by the hon. member for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton).

Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion approved.

The House adjourned at 4:27 o'clock, p.m.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): First order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: First order, consideration of the speech of The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor at the opening of the Session.

MR. THOMAS PRYDE (Huron): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to move, seconded by Mr. Hamilton, that an humble address be presented to The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor, as follows:

To The Honourable Ray Lawson, O.B.E., LL.D., Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario, we, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has addressed to us.

Mr. Speaker, at this time, as the most recently elected member of this House, I feel a little uneasy in launching this debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

However, at the outset, I would like to make mention of the many flattering remarks that were passed yesterday, and to express my deep appreciation of the kindly remarks made by the hon. the Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and the hon. leaders of the other groups in this House.

It was quite noticeable that the remarks were not so much personal, as they were remarks directed to the circumstance that I was born in Scotland, and that being so, much was expected of me. I also want to say the bouquet of heather which adorned my desk was a gracious tribute to my native land, and I want to thank the donor. I want to express my thanks for all the kind things that were said, and the manner in which those remarks were received by the hon. members of this House. I would just like to say a very sincere thanks to all those who made the kindly remarks at the opening of the debate yesterday.

There was ample evidence that there are only two races in this world, "The Scotch and those who would like to be Scotch."

SOME HON. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

MR. PRYDE: I believe fifty-one per cent. of the hon. members who came forward to congratulate me cast longing eyes on that bouquet of heather. I was happy to present each one with a sprig provided they could prove they, or one of their ancestors, came from the land of Burns, the land of porridge and the shorter catechism. Yes, I was born in Scotland and am quite proud of the land which gave me birth. Proud of many Scottish traditions.

I think it was Scott who said:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself hath said—this is my own, my native land."

Loyalty to your native land is no mean virtue, but I am a Canadian by adoption. I chose this country in which to live of my own free will. This is the land in which I have lived for nearly forty years, where I have earned my living, raised my family and made my home. I owe much to Ontario.

Although not an Ontarion by birth, I am proud to be one of her citizens and have tried in some small measure to serve the people with whom I live. Now that I find myself where I am today, I hope it will only mean a further opportunity to serve my fellow Canadians and be of some value to this House.

I would like to say that my being here at all is the result of a vacancy which I am sure fills every hon. member with regret. This Province was shocked, and the County of Huron in particular was tremendously shocked, when the announcement was made last December 17th that the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Taylor) had passed away. We all remember the unfortunate illness which overtook him in this House three years ago and how he hovered at death's door for several months, how he conducted his election from his hospital bed, and the overwhelming vote of confidence given him by his constituents.

Despite many fears to the contrary, he was able to resume his labours in this House, although prudence demanded that he cease the practice of his profession. Those of us who were close to him detected a gradual return of his old vigour, but he suffered a relapse and he was called from his labours.

His numerous friends throughout the country mourn his passing, but as he spent his adult life ministering to the needs of a rural community, it is there his loss is most acutely felt. It seldom falls to the lot of a person to be so universally respected and beloved, and when Dr. Hobbs Taylor passed away the community for many miles around his home in Dashwood regarded it as a personal loss. He left his mark on the community in which he lived, first as the family physician of hundreds; second, as their representative in this Legislative Assembly; and third, as a man to whom thousands had turned in time of need. He vigorously represented his constituency and he will not soon be forgotten. I am quite sure that I am voicing the sentiments of all hon. members of this House when I say our heartfelt sympathy is extended to his bereaved wife and daughter, to whom he was intensely devoted. Surely a fitting epitaph would be

"To live in the hearts of those we leave behind is not to die."

Mindful that it is the right of the electors in every constituency to continuous representation in the Legislature, the Government lost no time in calling an election. Despite the intensive campaign conducted by the Liberal Party, the policies of the Government were endorsed.

I said "intensive campaign," because the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) was for three weeks continuously in the riding and personally met and shook hands with many people. He made a host of friends and he is now well known in Huron.

The most amazing thing to me, however, was the ease with which he moved throughout the riding. You will recall the cries of alarm which went up about a winter election, how voters of a certain political persuasion would be unable to get to the polls, but the more hardy souls would get out to vote for the Government. I think the Hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) received a personal appeal for more snow-plowing equipment to open up the snow-blocked roads. Despite all this, the total number of votes recorded exceeded those cast in June, 1945, by 1,108; the Government candidate in 1945 received 52 per cent. of the total vote cast. In this election the Government candidate received the same percentage of total votes cast. This, to me, indicates complete confidence in the present Government.

Let me say, too, Mr. Speaker, that this was no snap victory. This represents the opinion of a section of the province which takes an interest in public affairs, because 78 per cent. of the eligible voters exercised their franchise. In my own home town of Exeter, 82 per cent. of those eligible cast their ballot.

Huron is not on a main east-west artery. I feel quite sure you have become better acquainted with its location since the by-election, yet, while I am on my feet, I would like to tell you something of our county and of its importance in this province. The County of Huron is on the shore of Lake Huron and bounded by the Counties of Bruce, Perth, Middlesex and Lambton, so we have important neighbours.

I have the assurance of my hon. friend from Huron-Bruce that if he gets my support, together we will put Huron "on the map." Needless to say, he has that assurance, and I will try to pull my weight in any effort toward that end.

The people of Huron are mostly old Canadian stock, principally Anglo-Saxon and Northern European people of the third and fourth generation Canadian. I need not here recite all their virtues but they are the salt of the earth, and not easily swayed. They think a question through before reaching a decision. That is why I believe the Government should be so happy in receiving the endorsement of people of that type.

It is not highly industrialized, but is principally an agricultural county. There are a number of factories in the towns and villages which we wish to see developed, and which, in turn, will add to the prosperity of the neighbouring agricultural districts.

But in Huron we also have something else, which should not be overlooked and of which we are very proud. I refer to two Air Training Schools. One R.C.A.F. station, located at Centralia, trains air crew and other specialized flying training, and an R.C.A.F. station at Clinton, where students receive their training in radar and allied fields of communication.

There are many hundreds of young men stationed at those two schools and, together with their wives and families, make an important contribution to the life of the adjoining communities. I want to say a word on their behalf. These young men are training and preparing themselves in advance to protect this country—your homes and mine, and should another war come upon us, remember that these are the men to whom we will look, to organize, train and equip the defence forces of this country. I have met many hundreds of these men, officers and airmen, and they are of a very high standard of intelligence. When the test comes you may depend upon it they will measure up to the high standards of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

During an election campaign you hear many points of view. There is the rabid partisan who can see nothing but his party. There is the one who sees the men. There are those who tell you there is no difference, one is as good, or as bad, as another. I met those types, so did you—but to the latter I had this to say. At this time, there is a difference, a distinct difference in the parties offering themselves for your approval.

I will say there is all the difference in the world. We, as the Government party, have a clear-cut programme, a long-range programme, one that is comprehensive. It was conceived by big men, men of foresight, and men of capacity. In contrast, we have the negative policies of the opposition with its failures to see the opportunities of the future—afraid to venture.

The province has no control over foreign affairs, therefore international dealings do not greatly enter into our calculations. However, we should not forget that this is a small world and what happens anywhere will have an effect on our lives here in Ontario.

We can look forward to an increase in the flow of immigrants to this country and the Province of Ontario will receive large numbers of them. Indeed, we should be very proud of the efforts of our own Department of Planning and Development which is in charge of the scheme for bringing selected settlers from Great Britain. But there will be many thousands from other lands, many with an outlook on life far different from our own. We must be prepared to give leadership to these people.

It is with that thought in mind I am so much in accord with the great changes being made in our educational system.

Our educational system had not kept pace with developments in other parts of the world, but due to the foresight of the hon. Minister of Education (Hon. Mr. Drew) a commission is giving intensive study to the whole question. To give effect to all these changes the whole system of school taxation has been revised and today the burden has been shifted from the backs of the property owners to the shoulders of the province. The result of this has meant that we now offer our teachers a salary in keeping with other professions thereby inducing a high type of citizen into the teaching profession. The school buildings are being improved, the curriculum has been so expanded that the needs of an agricultural community are now better taken care of than at any time in the past. This all means that young people in the rural areas are now able to receive an education suited to their needs and in modern school buildings right at their own door. They are enabled to live at home and not be put to the expense of paying board as so many of their older brothers and sisters were obliged to do in the past.

This has been accomplished at a reduced cost to the property owners. In a word, it is a fulfilment of the promise of this Government to assume 50 per cent. of the cost of education, which hon. members of the opposition said could not be done.

In my riding, as an example, the ratepayer in Clinton saved—in 1947, on every $1,000 of assessment, $23.00; in Goderich, $13.30; in Seaforth, $16.80; Exeter, $24.70, and in Hensall, $13.00. These are examples of the savings effected all across this province because of the wise policy of this Government.

Education is considered of prime importance. If we are going to give leadership to our new Canadians, it must be able, educated leadership—leadership in the Canadian way of life. Should we fail to set these high standards, those people themselves may or may not build the Canada you and I would like to see.

Agriculture, as I told you, is the basic industry in Huron, and it is still the basic industry in the province. We are aware that one of the greatest difficulties experienced in rural districts is to keep the young people in the community and prevent their migration to the city in too great numbers. Nothing will help this more than improved conditions, conditions of living similar to those found in the city.

The farm population is declining and yet the greatest need of the world today is the products of the farm. People the world over cry out for more of the necessities of life. We remember the four freedoms for which we fought—freedom from want was one of them—but that ideal is far from a reality in many lands. Our farmers are doing their utmost to produce food under difficult conditions, and this Government is to be commended for its efforts to assist them in every way.

We heard from his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, something of the plans of the Department of Agriculture, ably led by the hon. Minister (Hon. Mr. Kennedy) who is so highly respected by the farmers of this province.

I am particularly interested again in what is being done for the young people. I note with satisfaction the expansion of strong, self-reliant, self-governing organizations such as Junior Farmers and Junior Institute girls.

A new feature in 1947 was the establishment of Leadership Training camps for Junior Farm Leaders. Seven schools of instruction were conducted at various points in the province.

Once again this proves that the policy of this Government is of great benefit to young people. It is the long range view and will prove its value in the years that lie ahead.

We were all delighted to hear in the Speech from the Throne the announcement that at long last we had a Government which had the courage and the vision to see the necessity of changing Hydro in Southern Ontario from 25 to 60-cycle frequency. This is a huge undertaking which can only be carried through by men of foresight, such as we have directing our affairs at this time. The name of the Prime Minister of this province will go down in history linked with those of Sir James Pliny Whitney and Sir Adam Beck whenever and wherever the people speak of our great public utility.

The vision of these men is being fulfilled. They saw the day when Ontario would be a network of hydro lines, serving every town, village, hamlet and farm. That day is being hastened and in this way a great contribution is being made to the development of the rural life of this province. The basic reason is to improve production in the face of extremely adverse labour conditions, but it will raise the farmer's standard of living and lighten his labours.

This great work of extension of rural hydro will go on at an increased pace. With the new power developments which will come into production this year many thousands of farmers will share with their fellow citizens in the urban centres the benefits of this great utility.

In the fall of this year about 160,000 additional horsepower of electrical energy will be made available to the people of this province. When all the developments now under construction are completed over one million horsepower will have been added and made available to industry and agriculture in the Province of Ontario.

In the Department of Highways, we, too, have able, far-sighted leadership. The great north country is being developed. New mining roads are being constructed and easy access is being made to our vacation lands. We should not underrate the importance of this. As tourists come pouring into this province they bring much needed American dollars to help our balance of trade, and create work for thousands of our own people. We heard much during the election campaign about a reduction in gasoline tax. Tourists are not going to be scared away on that account. We should never forget all taxes come from the people and the greater the number, the less each will pay. Last year over 1,000,000 motor cars entered this province from the U.S.A., 100,000 more than the previous record. We can readily see something of the huge revenue received from this source which helps to pay for the highways now being built.

In the rural areas we fully approve of the increased assistance to townships for road maintenance, bridges, etc. Farmers wish to use their cars twelve months of the year as city people are privileged to do. With the increased assistance new snow plowing equipment is being procured, thereby making motor travel possible all the year round.

Hon. members who came into the riding of Huron just recently will know that never once was it necessary to resort to sleighs to get around. We had snow in abundance but the roads were clear. It might be mentioned that this was just a normal winter in Huron and the snow will ensure good crops next season. Our wells and springs will be replenished, once again demonstrating that Huron County is well blessed by nature.

The Department of Municipal Affairs brings the Government of the province into close contact with the lives of the people through municipal councils. The Municipal Board gives advice and guidance in the matter of capital expenditure so that we will avoid a repetition of the disastrous conditions of the 30's. New services must be provided but supervision is given to prevent unwarranted expenditure.

I am pleased to note that debenture debt of all municipalities had decreased over $16,000,000 at the end of 1946. By way of comparison, the gross debenture debt of all municipalities at the end of 1946 was $214,648,000, compared with a total gross debt in 1932 of $504,756,000.

This is something we should note with a good deal of satisfaction, when we know the demands that will be made for further capital expenditures in the near future.

An Assessment Branch was added in 1947 which will give advice to municipalities on assessment law and assist in setting up new and up-to-date methods of valuing property. Many applications have been received for this service and I am happy to tell you Huron County has adopted the system and appointed a full-time county assessor.

The hon. Minister of Health has shown a keen interest in the smaller hospitals throughout the province. Due to the new policy announced last summer, grants are now available for capital expenditure.

In Huron County, three hospitals, at Goderich, Clinton and Seaforth, have been greatly assisted in making new additions to their buildings by reason of these grants. It is well known that more people are hospitalized today than ever before in the history of the province and it is imperative that increased accommodation be provided.

These new grants for capital expenditure have given fresh encouragement to those public spirited citizens who comprise the boards of these small hospitals. They struggle along against heavy odds to provide hospital accommodation for the sick in their community and I am happy to note the new policy of this Government.

In the field of law enforcement we see a great modern development in the equipment of our Provincial police force with a radio system. This has already demonstrated its value in the apprehension of criminals. It will also add greatly to the prevention of crime, when it is known that a net can be thrown around a given area in a matter of minutes.

Much that I have said pertains to legislation which affects rural Ontario, but I am not unmindful of the fact that we have also great cities which form an important part of the life of this province. Much is being done to improve the life and welfare of these great centres of population and the aim of all Government policy should be to bring together urban and rural people.

The happiness and prosperity of one depends upon the other. Busy, prosperous cities provide a ready market for the produce of the farm, and a happy, contented and prosperous farmer spends his money in the city.

There can be no real progress where one section of the people is barely able to procure the necessities of life.

At the outset of my speech, I made mention of the citizen who made the claim that there was no difference in political parties. In my own way I have tried to point out the difference—the people of Huron on February 16th said there was a difference and indicated their preference.

This is really a Government looking ahead, a progressive Government with faith in the future of this great province. This was what appealed to the people of Huron. They saw it led by a man of vision, able to grasp a problem — however big — courage to tackle it and ability to see it through. That's what the people want, that is what they are getting.

And, too, this is what our young people want. There are many "isms" in the world today. The only way to fight them is to give the people something better. The young people see this and that is why they are flocking to the banner of the Government of this province.

During the recent election our opposition was well briefed in the shortcomings of our country, but the people have shown they want something constructive, something big, something with an appeal to the imagination. We want to show youth that big things are to be obtained in Canada and there is no need to go elsewhere to find it.

Today we are suffering for the negative policy of the past. Let us not forget the accomplishments of this nation in both peace and war.

Young Canadians are not to be excelled. If I may quote from my own experience in war years, I will refute the assertion that youth is decadent, that it is not what a past generation was. Let me tell you, we have some of the finest young people to be found anywhere on the face of the globe.

That is why I am here to day. That is why I support the Drew Administration. That is why the people supported me as their candidate. The youth of Huron were behind us and when the time comes, the youth of this province will follow suit.

We have the leader, we have the policy, we have the courage, and faith in the future of this great province to do big things.

Although I have exalted youth, I do not forget the contribution made by an older generation to the development and upbuilding of this province. They will continue to give leadership and stability in every walk of life.

New Canadians? Yes but let us do everything to retain our own Canadian youth—provide opportunities for intelligent young men and women, so that they will not find it necessary to seek their fortune elsewhere.

Therefore, my closing words are these: Let all parties in this Legislature co-operate to produce sound legislation, which will give encouragement to industry, stability to agriculture, freedom and security to all the people, and create opportunity for youth. Let us not sell our province short. Let us see in it great things. Let us work and strive to make it the best place on earth in which to live and raise our children.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

MR. WILLIAM E. HAMILTON (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, in rising to second the motion for the adoption of the address by His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, I do so with a keen sense of the high honour that is being shown to the constituency I represent.

I would like to join with others who spoke yesterday in the tribute which they paid to the late Hobbs Taylor, a former deskmate of mine at the last Session. I was greatly touched by the remarks of each of the speakers, and as one who had the opportunity of attending the funeral ceremony, I was more than impressed by a slight notice which I saw on all the doors of the business establishments of that community. It impressed me because of the regard which it exhibited of the people of that community for their esteemed fellow citizen. The notice was brief. It said:

This place of business will be closed today as a mark of respect to our esteemed fellow citizen, Dr. R. Hobbs Taylor."

To me, the expression "our esteemed fellow citizen" seemed to show the great regard in which the lovable doctor was accepted by all in that community.

It is pleasant to be associated with the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) in this motion. I think he carries with him a distinction which few of us can claim. He is the most recently returned hon. member to this House, and he was returned in a political battle in which all the forces of the opposition were arrayed on one side, and with the . . . should I say . . . great leadership given by the hon. member for Grey South, the official leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) to that rather memorable conflict, still with all the energy exhibited, the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) was able to come out on top, and the results reflected the very high regard in which this Administration is held and accepted in this whole province.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, and hon. members, that in the Speech from the Throne we heard his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor state that as the representatives of the people of Ontario, we would have very important decisions to make with respect to the recommendations of the Government regarding the conversion from twenty-five to sixty cycle power, and to give authorization to a form of expansion which would require the commitment of the Provincial credit to the extent of several hundreds of millions of dollars. It is my intention to focus my remarks on the subject of Hydro this afternoon.

I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that there is hardly a citizen who does not take Hydro for granted. Few, if any, will recall its early beginnings. As you will recall, from the events of history, it was in the latter part of the nineteenth century that scientists developed the "know how"—the knowledge for the transmission of electrical power far and wide over high voltage lines. That "know how" made it possible to harness the energy of the great streams of this country and of the world in order to turn the wheels of industry for the purpose of producing and manufacturing, the brightening of the homes, and the lightening of the physical labours of man.

Amongst those in this very province who were interested in that development were some men who met at the then town of Berlin in the year 1902. Amongst those men who met there were two from my home town, Mr. Christian Kloepper, a former Conservative member of Parliament, and the hon. Lincoln Goldie, who, some twenty years ago was a Cabinet Minister in the Conservative Government of that day. They joined with Mr. E. W. S. Snider and Mr. D. S. Detweiler of Berlin, and others who were gathered together from the group of communities, in the Grand Valley, that is, Berlin, Guelph, Galt, Waterloo and others, for the purpose of discussing and securing information on the question of obtaining power which was then being generated at Niagara.

From that day on, those communities, with Guelph in the forefront, were the leaders in the Hydro power movement.

In the year 1903 these men met with others who had shown an interest from the various municipalities in the Grand River area. They met in the town of Berlin. Through Mr. Detweiler they brought in this report, which I propose to read, because of the significance which it has to this subject.

In this report, Mr. Detweiler and his committee recommended:

"That legislation should be passed which would enable municipalities to co-operate, when authorized by vote of the property owners of the respective municipalities, for the purpose of developing and transmitting or distributing electrical energy; or to buy and transmit such power, or to buy power delivered at the several municipalities, and to sell and distribute the same within their own limits."

The report further stated that:

"In case of municipalities co-operating in such work, it would be necessary to devise means whereby the interests of the various municipalities would be protected, the rate for power kept uniform in the several municipalities, and a scale of rates maintained which would prevent any municipality cutting rates against any other.

"In carrying out such a co-operative scheme, provision must be made for apportioning the cost among the various municipalities, and provision should be made for subsequent admission of other municipalities upon a basis as to cost, which would be fair to the original municipalities forming the union."

You can see that the original principles as laid down in this report of that meeting 45 years ago, Mr. Speaker and hon. members, have been the guiding principles of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission.

In the year 1906, as a result of strong representations, the Government of hon. James P. Whitney, established the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission, and it was so named. The hon. Adam Beck was chosen as its first chairman, and he served, as many of you know, from 1906 to the year 1925, and to him and those associated with him, this province and all its people owe a great debt. It was his initiative, his drive, and his vision which made possible the privilege which we now enjoy.

As a matter of interest, in the year 1908, fourteen municipalities contracted for 26,235 horsepower to be delivered to the respective municipalities. Those municipalities were: The City of Toronto contracted for 10,000; London, 5,000; Guelph, 2,500; St. Thomas, 1,500; Woodstock, 1,200; Galt, 1,200; Berlin, 1,000; Stratford, 1,000; and Waterloo, Preston, St. Marys, Ingersoll and Hespeler.

May I, Mr. Speaker, at this time pay tribute to the leading spirits who from those early days have contributed so much toward the development of low-cost power. In the main, they were business men, manufacturers, and members of Boards of Trade.

In our own community, we had two men whose names are closely linked with that movement, the late Mr. J. W. Lyons, and the late Mr. Thomas Hannigan, who for many years was secretary of the Municipal Electrical Association. These men, and the vast number of others throughout the province who took part in the development, are men to whom we owe much.

All too often we hear people say—and they are people who unfortunately criticize all groups of our society—things which would seem to lessen the value of the great work of these men, and I say that it is time that we recognized the magnificent work of the business men and manufacturers and members of the Boards of Trade, which they have done for the benefit of all of us.

All too often, Mr. Speaker, the man on the street confuses Hydro with the Government. From the earliest beginnings it was the co-operating together of a few municipalities for the purpose of contracting to purchase power from private companies which was the start of the transmission and delivery of power to municipalities.

It was not until the year 1917 that the Hydro bought out their chief suppliers of power, the private power companies, and from that moment on started to generate its own power.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, when a municipality enters into a contract with the Commission for delivery of power, they have to agree to construct their own system, to pay their share of the costs incurred on transmission, charge rates to cover the wholesale cost, plus depreciation and retirement of the capital investment in works, in a period of from 20 to 30 years.

The business of the Hydro Commission falls into two distinct spheres—

- (1) The provision of power by generation or purchase and its transformation, and transmission and delivery in wholesale quantity, as a trustee for the municipality.
- (2) The retail distribution to consumers within certain areas served by the various utilities and throughout the rural areas of the province.
 - (a) In general, though, the retail distribution is done by the local utilities, but
 - (b) In the case of the consolidated rural power districts the Commission not only provides power at wholesale, but looks after all the physical and financial operations in connection with the retail distribution to consumers, and delivers in certain municipalities, throughout the rural areas of the province. In general, they deliver to the municipalities, and the retailing is done by the local utility.

As you know, the Commission also holds and operates the Northern Ontario properties in trust for the province.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it was not until the year 1920 that the Commission was able to tackle the problem of establishing rural power districts, and it is my understanding this was done in an area whose boundaries were defined, solely on the grounds of efficiency and economy.

At a later date, in order to reduce the costs to the farmers, the system of grants in aid up to 50 per cent. of the cost of the rural primary lines, established and then extended to secondary lines, service meters and other equipment, as well as loans to farmers for installations and the purchase of equipment, and later a low maximum service charge was established, and still later, in 1944, this Government wiped out that service charge completely, and that meant to the rural consumers an equivalent of a reduction of $12.00 per year to farmers, and to those who were resident in the hamlets, it meant the equivalent of a reduction of $6.00 per year, in their annual power bills.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the hon. members in this house heard yesterday His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor say that there was now 196,500 rural customers served on 24,400 miles of line, and that the Commission hoped to add to that, service for 30,000 more in 1948 through the construction of extra miles of line, and thereby take care of roughly 30,000 of the 35,900 applications which were on file as at October, 1947, cost of which would amount to approximately $10,500,000.

Last year in the House the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) tabled a report on the organization of Hydro. From that report I would just like to quote this. The Commissioners state that:

"Confronted with an unprecedented demand on its facilities and a corresponding overload on all of its functions, the Commission, in 1946, deemed it advisable to review very carefully its organization. It seemed obvious that the organization of the future would have to find the solution for almost staggering technical problems and that concurrently it would be required to effectively serve co-operating municipalities and direct customers during a difficult period of expansion. Appreciating the complexity of the problem and the value of sound, unbiased opinions regarding the most suitable type of organization to cope with the situation, a firm of Industrial Consultants was engaged to make a complete study of the matter and to make appropriate recommendations for a reorganization plan based on three cardinal principles:

"1. The organization must serve the customers of the Commission in a manner they have a right to expect.

"2. The organization must possess Administrative convenience.

"3. The organization must be flexible and adaptable to changes which will admit keeping pace with the requirements of the Commission."

That report was brought in last year and the Commission acted on it, and it is now in force and it is a matter of record in this book which I have here, entitled "The Organization of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario." The broad basis of the administration was broken down into three fields: (1), of administration; (2), of engineering; and (3), of personnel. As I turn the page and see the breakdown of the work, I see that the position of Chairman is occupied by a man whom most of you know, the former mayor of the City of Toronto. I have not had the pleasure of meeting this gentleman, but from all that we have heard of him, he has a definite capacity for work and a rare administrative ability. With that background, his occupancy of the post augurs well for the continuous management of the Commission. I was rather slightly amused as I read some of the reports of the by-election in Huron, when the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) stated that the new Chairman was said to have rare ability of a political nature, and was aligned with a political party. I said to myself that in the eyes of the opposition, that is an unworthy point of view to hold, but I thought as I read back in the history of Hydro, a great many of the men who were active in the early days of Hydro held the same political convictions. So in appointing this gentleman to the office, I am sure the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), and the Commission, have done a very good stroke of business.

The administration further breaks down into nine regions, and in charge of each region is a manager who is in touch with the day-to-day problems of the system and is able to give direction and answers at all times. He is not, though, responsible for construction or engineering.

Now, last year in addition to the administration problem, there were two other phases upon which the Commission desired assistance. The second phase was that of engineering, and having had the benefit of the advice of their own engineers, they wisely went outside that field in order to obtain the advice of independent engineers. I think that was sound business. There is not one of us today who, if enlarging a business and having major problems, would not feel it was good business to have the opinion of outsiders. They might seem more severe in their analysis, and as a result might be able to talk just a little plainer to the management of the business. On that basis the outside firm of Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation was retained. The Commission asked them to report on three main problems, and I quote the problems:

"1. The present and future sources of power, probable demands, types of power, the desirability of augmenting for certain areas hydro-electric development by steam or other auxiliary units.

"2. The proposed frequency change, with an assessment of advantages, review of estimated costs and particularly the timing of any changes and program that might be suggested.

"3. New sources of power for short-term requirements and related development of new power sites."

Well, the Commission have summarized the report of that firm in a booklet which has just been printed, and it is entitled Summary of the Reports of the Commission's Consultants Concerning The Problem of Frequency Standardization in The Southern Ontario System of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. This report was presented to the joint convention of the O.M.E.A. and A.M.E.U. at Toronto in the last few days.

It is not my intention to deal with that report. It is technical, and at a later stage in the proceedings of this House I rather feel you will be hearing more from those more competent to speak on it than I.

This now brings me, though, to a section of the subject in which I think the hon. members will be very much interested.

I have, in a few minutes, endeavoured to trace for the benefit of the members of this House, the development of Hydro from its early days. I would like now to deal with the production and transmission of power since the first 26,235 horsepower was contracted for in the year 1910. You will recall that I said it was in the year 1917 when the Hydro first bought out its private supplier of power, and some years later it started on construction of its generating plants. Up till now I have given you only a very few figures, and I hope you will bear with me as I go into some now and for that purpose I have prepared a table. See page 32.

I am now dealing with the Southern Ontario system. By the year 1924 the maximum normal plant capacity of the Hydro system was 791,000 horsepower. In addition to that the Commission took delivery of 45,000 horsepower, giving a total amount delivered to Hydro for its use in the Southern Ontario system of 836,000 horsepower. In the month of December when the maximum of 20-minute peak loads is reached that year the total amount of power delivered to Hydro for use in its Southern Ontario System was 728,000 horsepower, which gave a reserve over demand of 108,100 horsepower. It is not significant that we remember exactly the number of horsepower but the percentage of the reserve over the demand is important. In that year that represented 15 per cent. of a reserve in horsepower over actual demand of that which was used.

I am informed by competent engineers that in order to operate a system efficiently it is necessary to have at all times a reserve over demand of at least 15 per cent. or a minimum of 15 per cent. Now, that is not a surplus of power. That is a reserve solely for the purpose of taking care of those contingencies which would occur in a break-down at any one of the generating plants.

Now, by the year 1934 the maximum normal plant capacity had increased from 791,000 horsepower to 1,089,000, which was an increase in our generating ability of 298,000 horsepower. By that time we were taking delivery of purchased power in the amount of 608,000 horsepower and the total amount which was delivered to Hydro for its use in the Southern Ontario system in that year was 1,697,000 horsepower; whereas the maximum December usage was 1,359,000 horsepower, which gave us a reserve over demand of 338,000, representing not 15 per cent. but 25 per cent.

Now, by the year 1938 our productive capacity had developed up to 1,118,000 horsepower or an increase of 29,000 horsepower. But the province through the Commission had entered into contracts with the Quebec Power Companies to purchase power, and I would like to record these contracts; with the Beauharnois Power Company, a contract in the amount of 250,000 horsepower; from the Gatineau, 25-cycle, 260,000 horsepower; from 60-cycle current, 60,000 horsepower; 60-cycle from the Ottawa plant, 20,000 horsepower; from the McLaren Power Company, 100,000 horsepower; from the Ottawa Valley Power Company, 96,000 horsepower, making a total of 786,000 horsepower. That is a figure we should bear in mind. We actually in the year 1938 took delivery of 620,000 horsepower of that contracted for, and as a result the total amount of power which was delivered to Hydro for use in its Southern Ontario system was 1,738,000 horsepower, whereas the maximum December 20-minute peak was 1,603,000 horsepower.

Now, that gave us a reserve over demand of 135,000 horsepower. But please bear in mind we had not drawn all we had contracted for. There was still 166,000 horsepower which we could draw from the Quebec contract. So that actually we could have called upon a reserve over demand of 301,000 horsepower. That, Mr. Speaker, and hon. gentlemen, represented a percentage of reserve over demand of 18.8 per cent.

Now, earlier in this resume I have stated that engineers contend there should be a reserve over demand of 15 per cent., and at this point I would like to refer to two statements which are most significant on the bearing of the power situation as we have it in this province today. I am now quoting from a booklet printed by Edmond Cloutier, Printer to The King's Most Excellent Majesty, entitled "Correspondence and Documents relating to the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin Development—1938-1941." I am quoting from a letter written on August 19th, 1938, by the then Prime Minister of this province, the hon. Mr. M. F. Hepburn. The letter was written to the Rt. Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, Prime Minister of this country. I quote as follows:

"Insofar as power requirements are concerned, the fact is well known to you that Ontario has an ample supply for many years to come—indeed a huge surplus—for which it must pay and receive no benefit."

I am quoting that in direct relationship to the fact that at that very time the reserve over all demand in the Southern Ontario system was 18.8 per cent., whereas 15 per cent. is considered normal and desirable. Now, there is a wide difference between that slight margin of 3.8 per cent. and the huge surplus as reported in a further letter by the hon. Mr. Hepburn under date of September 21st, 1938, which I would like to quote. This letter was again written by the hon. Mr. Hepburn, the Prime Minister of that day, to the Rt. Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, and he states:

"We now have a surplus of power which we can carry, but which is rather larger than we require as a reserve and certainly is sufficient for many years. This Province is simply not interested in the production of any more power."

Now, that is a significant statement to be made at such a time in the affairs of this country which I would like you to bear in mind. By the year 1940, with a maximum plant capacity the same as in the year 1938, and with contracts, for the right to purchase power up to a total of 786,000, entered into in 1938, we were at that moment drawing 702,000; the total amount of power which was delivered to hydro in that year for use in Southern Ontario was 1,820,000, whereas the maximum December twenty-minute peak was 1,779,000 which gave us a reserve over demand of 41,000, plus 84,000, which as yet we had not called for under the contract, making a total of 125,000 available or percentage-wise 7 per cent., reserve over demand.

By 1941 the maximum normal plant capacity had now grown to 1,127,000, an increase of 9,000, but the terms of the Quebec Power contracts were still 786,000. We actually were drawing 849,000, which was actually 63,000 in excess of the contract. And it was only as a result of the good fortune of having power contracts in force that we were able to draw that amount of power.

The total amount of power delivered to hydro for that year was 1,976,000, whereas the maximum December 20-minute peak was 1,898,000, which gave us 78,000 of a reserve over demand. But mind you, we had taken 63,000 more than we had contracted for from the power companies. If it had not been for that, we had the slim margin of 15,000 horsepower, which would be less than 1 per cent. reserve over the actual demand.

By the year 1943, the maximum normal plant capacity was 1,221,000, an increase of 94,000. We were drawing under the contracts not 786,000 but 940,000 from the Quebec power contracts, which was an increase of 154,000 in excess of these terms which gave us a total of 2,161,000 horsepower which went into the Southern Ontario system. That figure as against the December peak of 2,115,000 gave us a reserve over demand of 46,000. When you contrast that against the fact that we actually had exceeded the contractual terms for 150,000, we were really short 108,000 horsepower for the normal operations of the system at the maximum peak in that year. That was in the year 1943, Mr. Speaker and hon. gentlemen, and by the year 1946, the maximum normal plant capacity was 1,229,000, our contractual terms were still 786,000; we were fortunate enough to be able to draw 991,000, for a total flow of power into that system of 2,220,000 horsepower against a December peak of 2,211,000 for a reserve over demand of 9,000 horsepower or .44 per cent., not even a half of 1 per cent.

As I studied these figures and as I hope all the hon. gentlemen of this House will, I could not help but be impressed with the gravity of the situation which faced the Commission as it tackled its responsibility of arranging for the delivery of power to industry and the homes of this province when this Government took office in the year 1943. I could not help but feel that the plans which I now propose to take up with you are plans of vision and foresight as contrasted with the situation with which the Commission found itself as a result of the policies of the previous administration.

There is issued a booklet that is public, "HYDRO-1947." In this booklet are listed plans which I propose to take up with you. In doing so, I ask you to ask yourself just what you would have done had you been members of the Commission faced with that situation as I have recorded it. Would you not have felt that it was urgent that a programme of expansion should be undertaken and the sooner the better, the moment men, materials and equipment were available, and that is exactly what the Commission, as supported by this administration, has done.

As I picked up the maps in connection with power projects of this Commission in this province, I was amazed at the breadth, the area which they cover. The first, as is recorded, is at Stewartville on the Madawaska River, and according to the plans of the Commission, there is to be brought in 80,000 horsepower in September, 1948.

The second is at Des Joachims—I wish I had greater familiarity with the French language—there are to be four units in 1950 brought in and four in 1951, a total of 481,000 horsepower.

The third is at Chenaux, on the Ottawa River, bringing in six units in 1951 and two units in 1952, a total of 160,000 horsepower.

And then we go far across the province to these other locations and the fourth is at Aguasabon, near Schreiber or Jackfish on the north shore of Lake Superior where 53,000 horsepower are to be delivered in September, 1948.

Then there is Pine Portage on the Nipigon River which is to deliver 80,000 horsepower in 1950.

And then in that same area, north of the north channel of Georgian Bay, there is a point on the Tunnel Site on the Mississagi River which is going to deliver 56,500 horsepower in 1950.

And then we go away across the province to approximately 100 miles from the Manitoba border, close on to a 1,000 miles from east to west in this province, on the English River at Ear Falls, there is a generating station to produce 7,500 horsepower in June of 1948.

When you add these up you get a figure in the neighbourhood of 943,000 horsepower and when you compare that to the 991,000 horsepower which this province is buying under contract, it is but an illustration of the great need for power in this province today even if conditions were to remain static.

Now, when you add to that the tremendous possibilities of development which this province has, it is only good, common, business sense that this province, through its Commission, should enter into arrangements now for the immediate construction of the sources to generate the additional need for power.

That brings me to the point which is referred to by my hon. friend, the mover of this motion (Mr. Pryde) in which he said that in the Speech from the Throne there was a recommendation for frequency change-over which would be brought before this House. I ask the hon. members of this House if they were sitting in the position of the Commission and they had the responsibility of making a decision of adding 943,000 horsepower of new construction to a system which already in Southern Ontario in plant capacity had 1,229,000 and which, to use an expression which is current and with which we are all familiar, isolates us as users of 25-cycle power on this continent, would not you hon. gentlemen if you were members of the Commission, feel that the time had come to make a decision now and for all time to come: "were you going to arrange for a frequency change-over or were you not?" which was a question which was put to the Commission and which has been answered by them and which, I presume, will be implemented by the necessary legislation and financial support that this House will of necessity have to grant to the Commission to make that possible in order that that large area of Ontario quickly and briefly described as drawing a line just north of Goderich and coming across north of Palmerston, across to Bradford and up to the south shore of Lake Simcoe, down just east of Toronto and along Lake Ontario, the Niagara River, the south shore of Lake Erie, up Lake St. Clair, along the shore of Lake Huron; in other words all that area of southern Ontario where there is concentrated the largest concerns and industry and people in the whole province, it is that area which will be affected by the decisions of this House in implementing the recommendation of the Commission and in the years to come, we, who sit here,—and I feel sure who will take part in helping the implementation of this recommendation—will feel that we have played a worthwhile part in standardizing the frequency in order that we may have the advantages which go with sixty cycle power.

It has been a pleasure, Mr. Speaker, to be associated with the mover of this motion in presenting this address at this time. Thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I move the adjournment of the Debate.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, I should indicate that I think we had best proceed tomorrow with the bills on the Order Paper. The hon. members usually like to get away at a reasonable hour on Friday, and I should not like to change that practice. I assume that will be agreeable to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and we proceed with the debate on the Speech from the Throne on Monday.

MR. OLIVER: Could you not make that Tuesday? That is the usual practice, to adjourn from Thursday until the following Tuesday. That has been followed for many years, as I recall it.

MR. DREW: I think we should proceed. After all, the debate is before us and I think it would be well if we advance, and in the nature of things, bills must be introduced steadily before we can occupy our time fully with them. I hope the hon. Leader of the Opposition will agree with me it will be to the advantage of the business of this Legislature to proceed as rapidly as possible, without hastening it too much. I think from now until Monday will be plenty of time to prepare anything we have to say.

MR. OLIVER: I do object to the procedure, Mr. Speaker. I think you will find down through the years, invariably, the debate has been adjourned on Thursday night and not resumed until the next Tuesday. Why we should deviate from that practice, I am not aware.

I think we should follow the custom that has been in practice, and adjourn until Tuesday.

MR. DREW: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to press it, because the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has spoken. I am simply trying to facilitate the proceedings of this Legislature. It will undoubtedly mean that we will not have the time as fully occupied on Monday as might otherwise be the case, but, at the request of the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), I will concur in the proposal that the debate on the Speech from the Throne be resumed on Tuesday, and we will deal with other business before the Legislature on Monday.

I move that the House do now adjourn.

Motion approved.

The House adjourned at 4:46 p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: The Honourable J DE C. HEPBURN

FRIDAY, MARCH 5, 1948

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: For the information of the hon. members, may I say a few words in respect to Hansard?

Mimeographed copies of Hansard will be placed on the hon. members' desks on the day following the day of the proceedings, for instance, the record of a Monday's sitting will be on your desks on the following Tuesday.

Will the hon. members who have corrections, please see Mr. Sturgeon in the Hansard office on the third floor before six o'clock of the day that the mimeographed copies are placed on the desk? The corrections will be grammatical errors or reversal of figures.

My reason for calling this to the attention of hon. members is that I would like to get any corrections made so that they may go to Mr. Sturgeon and the proceedings will then be printed, and the printed copies will be on your desks two days following, that is, Monday's copy should be received on Thursday morning.

When the printed copies of Hansard are received, they will be placed in the green files on the hon. members' desks, that is, this coloured file that I have here.

I would like to call that to the hon. members' attention.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

BRAMPTON JUNIOR REFORMATORY

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I wish to secure permission from you to extend to the hon. members of this Legislative Assembly an invitation to visit our Brampton Junior Reformatory, on Tuesday next. Transportation will be at the main door at 9.30 Tuesday morning. Every hon. member is welcome. We feel we are doing a good job there. We have all new equipment brought there from the London Rehab. School; we have the instructors also brought from the school, and are carrying on an educational program under the direction of the Department of Education, both academic and vocational, and I think it will be very interesting for as many of the hon. members as possible to avail themselves of this opportunity to visit the Brampton Junior Reformatory.

While I am on my feet I might say that I am going to extend similar invitations at later dates when we find we have the opportunities, to the hon. members to visit the Bowmanville Boys'

School, the Galt Boys' School, the Girls' School at Cobourg, and the Guelph Reformatory, and if any of the hon. members want to go to Burwash, you will be very welcome. It is rather a long train ride, but I will go with you. We feel that we are doing a splendid job. So much so, Mr. Speaker, that you may have noticed that General Gibson said he has been very much impressed, as have the Federal people coming here, and they are going to pattern their reform institutions after the Ontario system. And, as you may know, we have had several people during the past few months visit us from different parts of the country. Last week we had a gentleman who is interested in reform institutions here from Nova Scotia, and he spent three or four days with us visiting our institutions, and we also have had, as you know, visitors from Scotland, England, Australia, the United States, and from all over, so do not blame me for feeling justly proud of what we are endeavouring to do for these unfortunate people.

I want your assistance and co-operation, and I am asking that you see for yourselves, with your own eyes, what we are doing, and if you think we are going too far, say so; if you think we are not going far enough, say so. We want to do these things with the full co-operation and assistance of every hon. member of this house, regardless of his political affiliation.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) permit a question? Is it your intention during the Session to table the report of an investigation carried out at Burwash, last October?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You did make that very broad. However, you were more fair than some of the newspapermen, who said that I was not going to make it public, or table it.

MR. MACLEOD: I am entirely without guile, in asking.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: When I was sick in bed, I read where I had given an interview to a certain newspaper and said I was refusing to make the report public. I never saw the man who wrote that statement, never was near him nor talked to him. I was down in the Royal York, in bed, under the care of a doctor.

However, that is only a sample of some of the loose statements you have to read in some of the press today, but I can assure you when the report comes in—I presume you will give me the opportunity to read it first—it will then be placed on that table.

MR. MACLEOD: I want to assure the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) that I was absolutely without knowledge that the report was not in his hands. I did not know that at all.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I wish to place before the Legislature a matter that I feel comes here properly, for two reasons, firstly, that it is a matter of major importance, and secondly, that I have been presented with certain requests, the answers to which I think can most properly be made here.

Following the announcement yesterday that the Dominion Government had given orders that alien Communists were to be banned from Canada, demands have been made that we take appropriate steps to prevent any interference with union organizers in this province. I think the best place for me to give my answer to these requests is in the Legislature.

This Government has demonstrated its belief in sound trade-union organization by placing on the Statute Books of this province labour legislation which has very greatly advanced the rights and protection of our industrial and other workers. In spite of carping criticism from some quarters, the truth is that nowhere in the world today are the legitimate interests of organized labour better assured and better protected than they are in here in Ontario.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: For that very reason, the Ontario Government is in full accord with this action of the Dominion Government, which is in fact long overdue. We hope the power they undoubtedly possess, and have possessed for a long time, will be used effectively to keep these dangerous saboteurs out of Canada or remove them, if they have already entered our country under a temporary immigration permit or any other device.

This Legislature has passed laws which make it possible for our people to solve their own problems in their own friendly, democratic way. If ever there were any doubts, world events of the past two weeks must by now have convinced everyone that the people of this province, and our workers particularly, should be protected from the subversive activities of these well-trained agents of a cruel dictatorship.

I trust that this decision by the Dominion Government does mean that all the imported Communist agitators who have come to this province within the past few months will be deported immediately.

This is no time for mincing words. The loud wails of our own Communists, and their appeals for protection against interference with the rights of organized labour, should impress nobody. Ask the workers of Czechoslovakia, of Poland, of the Ukraine, or any other part of the world under the Communist yoke, what rights they have to organize for the protection of labour. Not one of these Communists wants real labour security. Not one of them wants industrial harmony. No matter what the surface pretence may be, their job is to create industrial unrest which will undermine our free democratic system.

In the name of that freedom for which so many of our young men and women died during the long years of war, let us all do what we can to cleanse our society of this foul disease. Surely we need no better evidence than is now before our eyes to reach the conclusion that at no level of government is it possible to compromise with these enemies of freedom who profess their belief in democracy which they are doing all they can to impose on us, as it has been imposed on so many other nations, that vile, godless form of slavery which bears the stamp "Made in Moscow."

There is a very important reason why I bring this up at this time, when so many of you are returning to your homes for the week-end. I have received a number of communications which indicate the very ingenious way in which the Communists who have succeeded in obtaining important positions in our unions are doing their utmost to attack the loyalty of the new citizens of this country who have come here from amongst the many displaced persons.

If these people come here and, through the very nature of the agreements which exist in certain industries, their names are on the lists of the membership of these unions, in which there are Communist officials, their names become known to those officials, and in several parts of this province that information is being used to start a vigorous and constant campaign of propaganda amongst these newly-arrived people, the majority of whom are here to escape that very form of dictatorship. These people resent very greatly the fact that when they come here, they should be subjected to the continual evidence of the activity of these Communists who, in their homeland, have probably been responsible for the murder of members of their own families, wherever they happened to have been.

This is no light matter to men and women who have seen the full horror of Communism when it is out of control—as it always is when it gains power. These people should be protected, and I do urge every hon. member—that is, every hon. member who believes in our free system—to do all he can in his own community to further the activities which are being carried on in the courses in citizenship which have been set up throughout this province, to give to these new citizens of Canada, most of whom upon their arrival do not speak our tongue very freely, an opportunity to understand our system, to understand the way we live, and to understand the free mechanisms of our democracy, so that they may be fortified against this particular form of treachery which is so active in this province today.

I think this is a matter which we might well keep in its proper perspective. Some of us, who have been in this Legislature for a few years, will remember that it is only nine years ago since through the press and over the radio, we followed here in this Legislature, and elsewhere throughout Canada with great admiration and respect, the sublime acts of courage of the Finnish people who fought alone against mighty Russia. Those of you who were in this Legislature at that time will recall the expressions of sympathy conveyed to the Finnish people, and there is no doubt, had it been in the power of this Legislature to help in any practical way, they would have extended that help. In fact, some of the hon. members opposite will recall that a very gallant member of their own party was in the forefront in an attempt to take some very practical steps along that line.

Finland was crushed, but only after one of the most gallant struggles ever waged in the defence of freedom. Now those same fine people are once again being subjected to the same threat to their freedom by that same tyrannical power. The sympathy of every decent, freedom-loving Canadian will be with gallant Finland in these tragic days.

Let us not pass from this tragedy with any mere expression of sympathy. Let all of us who love freedom firmly resolve to do what we can in the years ahead to make sure that freedom does return some day to Finland, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, and all the Communist-dominated states. Yes, and that it comes before too long to the people of Russia, so that they may have the freedom they deserve as a result of the great courage they displayed in the defence of their own soil, when they were attacked by their former allies in 1941.

In the meantime let us make quite sure that, no matter how remote the possibility may seem at the moment of any of this coming to any practical consequence, other than these local disturbances which can be reduced, let us all firmly resolve that we will protect our own society in every way we can from the spread of this highly-organized form of international treachery. There is no higher duty today for every Canadian who really loves Canada.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Seventh order.

PROTECTION OF BIRDS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Seventh order, second reading of Bill No. 34, An Act to repeal the Protection of Birds Act. Mr. Scott.

HON. H. R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 34, An Act to repeal the Protection of Birds Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DREW: Tenth order.

INDUSTRIAL FARMS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Tenth order, second reading of Bill No. 37, An Act to amend the Industrial Farms Act. Mr. Dunbar.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 37, An Act to amend the Industrial Farms Act.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I was going to ask the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) whether he cared to explain the bill. There was no explanation given on first reading. If he would care to, I think it would help the hon. members.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It is to bring the Industrial Farms Act under the same Act as we have in our reformatories, where men are working outside of the grounds, should we say, of the industrial farms, so that by order-in-council we may have them work under the same discipline, and under the same officers, as they would be if they were working on the industrial farms. In some cases, as we go ahead with our program for industrial farms at the present time, it is absolutely necessary, because we have now a number of men working dismantling buildings and moving them to the Rideau Farms and Burk's Rapids; otherwise we would have to establish an industrial farm at Cornwall, and then cancel it again, whereas, if we could have this permission the same as we have in the Reformatory Act, where by order-in-council we can have the men work outside, it would improve the situation.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, a question to the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) for further elucidation: would that change enable the authorities, say, to have prisoners employed for private purposes?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh, no.

MR. SALSBERG: Institutions or individuals, or firms?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, not at all.

MR. SALSBERG: That is only for employment around the institutions or institutional undertakings?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That is it.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Government work.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DREW: Eleventh order.

DEPARTMENT OF REFORM INSTITUTIONS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Eleventh order, second reading of Bill No. 39, An Act to amend the Department of Reform Institutions Act, 1946. Mr. Dunbar.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 39, An Act to amend the Department of Reform Institutions Act, 1946.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I was wondering if the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) has given consideration to giving these powers to part of the guards rather than to all the guards? Is there any precedent in other institutions of a similar character where these powers have been given to the guards en masse? I mean to all the guards?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I do not like to have to say this in the House, but we have had our reformatories and industrial farms for a great number of years and men never have had any power. According to the interpretation given by the department of the hon. the Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), the keeper is the only person who can arrest a man outside of the farm, or even carry firearms. It was a mistake carried through, that was never noticed, so this is simply to enable us to carry it out as originally intended.

You will notice by some press reports that I said there was some secrecy regarding the swearing-in of these men by the magistrates. When we discovered the error in the Act we had to send magistrates to institutions to swear in all the guards. This is to overcome that, so that any guard there will be ex officio, a peace officer, so that he may go outside the grounds in case a man escapes and re-arrest him.

MR. OLIVER: I want the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) to say a word on the point that I raised. It seems to me that it is necessary that certain of these officers be clothed with the powers described in this amendment, but I was wondering if the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) felt that it was necessary to give these powers to all the guards at the institutions. Could the purpose not be served if certain of the officers were given these powers rather than all the officers? That is what I wanted to hear the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) speak about.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, I do not think it would be possible. We have the eight-hour day, three shifts — a number away on holidays and on sick leave and there are men working in different parts of the institutions, some perhaps, as in the case of Burwash, out in the woods, others in the sawmills and in the barns, so that we must have every person empowered as officers ex officio in order that they may be able to act not only outside of the grounds but also in the institutions. We have to give them the authority in order to save trouble.

We can, of course, as I explained, bring in a magistrate and swear them in as peace officers, but this Act will do away with that trouble. I do not think it is possible to get around it.

MR. OLIVER: Can the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) tell me of any other institutions similar in character, in other provinces where the guards are accorded these powers? In the Province of Manitoba, for instance?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That I cannot say. If they do not, I think they would be very foolish not to have them under some authority, so that they will not be placed in the position of seeing a man disappear down a laneway on the farm and not be able to arrest him or bring him back to his work. I do not see how one could have any discipline in any institution unless other officers there have the same full authority as the keeper. That is what brought this about. The Act said "the keeper" and the department of the hon. the Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) says that refers only to one man, the keeper, therefore if we have 160 guards working in different parts of the farm at different times, we must have them all peace officers.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. minister (Mr. Dunbar) would explain whether or not these officers are sworn in by anyone? Are you providing for the superintendents to have the power to swear in these officers? I am looking at it this way; when a new guard comes on duty, someone should instruct him in his duties and tell him: "Now, you have been sworn as an officer; you have such-and-such powers." I do not think it would be quite correct to allow a man to become a guard of an institution and be given these extra duties, or extra rights, beyond the limits of the institution, without some instruction or some direction from some officer. I admit that to bring in a magistrate to swear the men in has been a cumbersome and very unnecessary procedure. Your bill is in proper form, Mr. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), but I think that some officer in the institution should instruct each guard when he first comes on duty and point out to him just what is being done and swear him in at the same time. I do not think that any man joining an institution should have these duties without being sworn in as an officer also.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You are quite correct. That will be done. No man in these institutions will be taken on as a guard and put to work without first being given basic training. He is told all about his job and what is expected of him as he is sworn in. As he takes the oath of office, he becomes a peace officer and he takes his basic training. We have five courses of basic training in Burwash so far; which are the first courses of basic training ever given in the Dominion of Canada in regard to any institution.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DREW: Fourteenth order.

HOTEL REGISTRATION OF GUESTS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Fourteenth order, second reading of Bill No. 46, An Act to amend the Hotel Registration of Guests Act, 1944. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 46, An Act to amend the Hotel Registration of Guests Act, 1944. I think the explanatory note is quite adequate.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, just an inquiry of the hon. minister (Mr. Blackwell). The purpose of this Act, I think is very praiseworthy and deserving of support. I was wondering, though, whether it will constitute any real protection against a proprietor who may wish to raise the price at any given time. All he will have to do to conform with the law as amended would be to merely place another sign there saying: "This room is $10.00," whereas yesterday the sign may have read: "This room is $6.00."

I think I understand the purpose of the Act and I think it is very good but it does seem to me, as I have said, that you could get around it very easily by simply changing a sign. There is nothing in the amendment to suggest that the average or prevailing rate as posted shall be the price for given lodgings.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I think I am not entitled to speak twice on second reading of any bill, but I have always followed the practice of giving the hon. members of the legislature any information I possess. On the slim possibility that there is something about this the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) might not understand, I would simply say that these lists of prices were required to be posted in hotel rooms under the wartime regulations, and on the disappearance of these regulations, the price lists disappeared out of many of the rooms. This was raised, not in my department, but by the hon. the minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) who received a substantial number of complaints about this information not being available to hotel guests and that they were being met with what they believed to be overcharges in relation to what the Tariffs in the hotel might have been if required to be published. Therefor, this is a mere insertion in one of the statutes of the province of the very same provision that existed in the wartime measures. It is not a price-control measure; it is not intended for that purpose.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I want merely to ask another question. I agree with the intent of the amendment and I think the hon. the minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) is perfectly right in what he wants to achieve. But all I would like to know is why the bill could not be further amended, perhaps, when it reaches Committee stage, so as to achieve the objective that the hon. minister (Mr. Blackwell) desires.

I am suggesting that as it is now, the hotel owner can overcharge, which is something the hon. minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) wants to avoid, by merely posting it on the wall of the room, and I suggest that this be considered further and perhaps amended.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to be discourteous to any member of the House, but that was not a question. It started out as such, and then became a statement that was completely incomprehensible to me. I still do not know what question the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) wishes to ask me, what particular thing might happen as a result of these hotel-keepers posting up these lists, and I have no idea what suggestion he is making to accomplish the result he wants.

MR. SALSBERG: I will explain it, Mr. Speaker. The reason why it was a bit incomprehensible, if it was so, is because I know you do not speak twice on second reading and I felt that it was necessary to put it in the form of a question. However, I shall now, with your permission, Mr. Speaker, explain exactly what I am trying to do. It will take only a minute or two.

The hon. the minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) is desirous of protecting the travelling public from being overcharged and, therefor, this bill is introduced to make it necessary for an operator or owner of a hotel to post a sign in the room stating what the price of the room is. I suggest that the bill as at present worded will not offer the protection that the hon. minister (Mr. Welsh) desires, according to the explanation of the hon. the Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), because it would be possible for an hotel owner to increase the rates and merely change the card or the price by posting it in the room and would as a result be quite within his rights to charge higher than the hon. minister (Mr. Welsh) desires. That is the point I had in mind and I suggested that perhaps in order fully to achieve the desires of the hon. minister (Mr. Welsh) that this bill be further amended so as to make sure that prices will not be changed overnight or from day to day, but that there will be a legitimate price established and maintained for a season or a year, or whatever period the hon. minister (Mr. Welsh) will designate.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is advocating is price-control on the prices charged for hotel rooms. That policy was not put forward by the bill, and that policy has no relation to this bill.

MR. SALSBERG: What is the purpose of the bill, then?

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DREW: Fifteenth order.

TICKET SPECULATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Fifteenth order, second reading of Bill No. 47, An Act to amend The Ticket Speculation Act. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): I move second reading of Bill No. 47, An Act to amend The Ticket Speculation Act. I think there again the explanatory note is adequate and I will not take up the time of the House unless there are some questions about it.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I find that another bill is listed in the orders which I had not called. Twelfth order.

ONTARIO NORTHLAND TRANSPORTATION COMMISSION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Twelfth order, second reading of Bill No. 44, An Act to amend The Ontario Northland Transportation Commission Act. Mr. Michener.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of hon. Mr. Michener (Provincial Secretary) I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 44, An Act to amend the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): That is the completion of the bills on the order paper. I now propose to move the adjournment of the House, but before doing so may I say that we will, as I said yesterday, in view of the express desire of the hon. the leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver), continue the debate on the Speech from the Throne on Tuesday, and deal with the order paper as it now stands on Monday.

I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 4:04 p.m.

This report, I am advised, is available in mimeographed form for the hon. members of the Legislature.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Might I ask the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), if he anticipates any legislation based on this report which has just now been presented?

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I had hoped to take this report down to the Department of Agriculture almost immediately and see what is to be done about it.

PROTECTION OF BIRDS ACT

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

Bill No. 34 reported.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 19th order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 19th order, House in Committee on Bill No. 37, An Act to amend the Industrial Farms Act, Mr. Dunbar.

INDUSTRIAL FARMS ACT

On Section 1.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) would mind an amendment to this section? The amendment I have suggested here is:

"That subsection 1 of section 9 (a), as enacted by section 1 of this Act be amended by the addition of the following words:

"Provided that nothing in this Act shall permit the use of any prisoner in private employment."

A question in regard to that was asked the other day when the bill was first introduced, and at that time the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) gave us his assurance, but to make it a fixed policy, I believe that amendment should be in the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): I do not believe that is necessary, Mr. Chairman, because we have never used men outside of these institutions in private industry, and we have no intention of doing so, and I think the hon. leader of the C.C.F. (Mr. Grummett) should have sufficient confidence in whatever government may be in power, to be assured that they are not going to take the prisoners out and put them into private enterprise. I do not think it is necessary to have the amendment, and I am opposed to it.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I asked the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) for his assurance on that point when the Bill was before us for second reading, and the record shows the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) replied that no such danger existed, or would exist as a result of this Bill being passed, and that no prisoners would ever be used for outside labour. I accepted the assurance of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar).

However, it seems to me that the amendment brought forward by the leader of the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett) in no way offers just reason for objection; it merely attempts to make unmistakably clear the point with which we are all concerned, and which prompted me to ask my question the other day.

I do not question the assurance of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) when he tells this House there is no such intention on the part of the government, but since laws are made for a long time, why not include this amendment, and I think it would make it unmistakably clear that no such thing would take place.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): I do not think we should have on the record any suggestion that any prisoners are or should be used for any private enterprise. If that was put in, it might create an impression that prisoners have been so used. I think we can take it for granted that no prisoner will ever be used for any private work, or engage in private enterprise at all.

MR. G. I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Chairman, if this raises any doubt in the minds of the hon. members in this House, I presume it would raise a doubt in the minds of people outside. If the work which these prisoners are to do is to take place on outside property, other than on the industrial farms, I presume in a way they will be working on private property, and, therefore, if they are working on private property, it might be suggested they are engaged in private enterprise on such property.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Member for Sault Ste. Marie (Mr. Harvey) is entirely astray on that. It is not the intention at all to have any prisoner working on any property other than institutional property. However, when we have to dismantle buildings secured from the War Assets, and remove them to industrial farms, we do not want to declare the property on which those buildings were erected as an "industrial farm," because they will never be. There is a lot of nonsense going around in the press that we are going to have industrial farms when no such thing is intended. All we are doing is dismantling these buildings and moving them to where we are going to have industrial farms.

Section 1 approved.

Bill No. 37 reported.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 20th order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 20th order, House in Committee on Bill No. 39, An Act to amend the Department of Reform Institutions Act, 1946, Mr. Dunbar.

REFORM INSTITUTIONS ACT 1946

On Section 1.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, in this bill I see that, according to clause 1, section 5-A, every guard is appointed ex officio a constable. The sentence ends with that wording.

Is it the intention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) that a guard is to be a constable for all purposes, or is he a constable for the apprehension of escaping prisoners only? If it is the intention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) to make him a constable only so that he can arrest escaped or escaping prisoners outside of the boundaries of the institution, then I believe this section should be amended, and I would suggest that it be amended as follows:

"Section 5-A of the Act, as enacted by section 1 of this Act, is amended to read as follows:

"5-A: Every officer having any custodial duties at any penal or reformatory institution under the jurisdiction of the Department shall have ex officio the powers and duties of a constable with respect to any inmate of the institution or any person who may have escaped from the institution."

I do not believe it is the intention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) to give these guards the duties of a constable beyond the duties which pertain to the institution. For instance, would he have the right to go into a private residence without a search warrant, and so on? Would his duties be the same as the Provincial constables? or are his duties in connection with the institution only, and he to be given authority to apprehend escaped or escaping prisoners beyond the boundaries of the institution?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I may say, Mr. Chairman, that this is not clothing the guards with any more power than we always thought they had. As a former Provincial Secretary, the hon. Member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) knows he himself always thought the guards had this power, for the sake of discipline within the institution, and in order that orders might be carried out. If a man was escaping from an institution, the guards were clothed with that power, but we found from the Department of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that although they were exercising that power, and had been for the last 20 to 25 years or more, they had no authority to do so.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Should there not be a lot of prisoners released, if that is the case?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I was not saying anything personal about this.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh!

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, I was just explaining that it was always understood that the guards had this power. There is no intention whatever to use the guards for any purpose outside. The hon. Member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) might have in mind such occupation as strike breaking, but there is no intention of that at all. It is only to clothe them with the authority we always understood they had, for the control of the institutions, and arresting escapees outside of the institutions. No further power than that is requested at all.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Yes, Mr. Chairman, but may I say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) that a constable would still be a constable outside of the prison, and could, I suppose, under certain circumstances, exercise the authority of a constable. That is the point that came up, and I think it is a very legitimate one.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, he is ex officio a police constable, Mr. Chairman.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, in or out.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: He is a peace officer. Prior to the enactment of this Act, only one man was a peace officer.

We want them all peace officers, to look after the operations of the institutions.

There is nothing asked for in this Bill further than what we always understood they had—nothing at all.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I agree with the powers the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) claims he is asking for, but at the same time I think the powers should be clearly defined in the Act. The amendment defines the powers which the guards would have, and I cannot see anything wrong with the amendment. I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) is perfectly correct, but I do not think he goes far enough. If he will limit the powers of the constables, by stating that the powers apply only to escaped or escaping inmates or prisoners, that defines exactly what is being asked for.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, I am not a lawyer, and so I will ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to explain the purpose of the bill.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, I am sure that with the explanation I will give, you will agree that this discussion is rather a waste of time.

As the hon. members know, we have many police forces in the province, including the Provincial Police and the forces in the various municipalities. If it was the intention to send the guards out of an institution, it would be easy to do so, as all we would have to do would be to swear them in. The fact of the matter is that the use of the guards depends entirely to what use the administration puts them.

I think every hon. member of this Legislature is familiar with the practice, for instance, of not using the police of one municipality in another municipality. It could be done if there was occasion for it, but it just does not work out that way.

We could take section after section of the Statutes and could add six more volumes to the Revised Statutes of Ontario, if we were going to put in this protective wording relating to every section. I think it will be time enough to have a discussion on this sort of thing when an abuse takes place.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

Bill No. 39 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 21st order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 21st order; House in Committee on Bill No. 46, An Act to Amend The Hotel Registration of Guests Act, 1944, Mr. Blackwell.

HOTEL REGISTRATION OF GUESTS ACT, 1944

On Section 1.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I am sorry to return to this Bill again. I spoke on it briefly when it was before the House on second reading. I would like to ask the Hon. Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell) if he would agree to an amendment to subsection 1, which now reads:

"In every room used for sleeping accommodation in a hotel, there shall be kept posted in a conspicuous place a notice specifying the rate charged for such room."

Would the hon. Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell) agree to amending that section by adding:

"the rate charged for such room for the season"? I think that is very clear—even the hon. Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell) should understand that quite readily.

In other words, the addition of these few words would offer protection to the tourists that the rate charged as stated on the card would be the rate prevailing for the season, and that there would not be a day-to-day change in the rate.

I do not think this is "price control" of which the hon. Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell) seems to be afraid. Personally I am not afraid of price controls; I think they are necessary, generally speaking, but in this instance I suggest that the addition of these few words would really achieve the purpose which the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) is trying to achieve.

HON LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney General): Mr. Chairman, the reason I thought the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) was going to give us another thesis on "price controls" was that he was talking about protection. This is entirely different, and it is quite unnecessary to add the words "for the season." If a tourist resort is operating and is renting rooms by the day, by the week, by the month, or by the season, it would make it more general to add these words. If they were renting by the day, week or month, all of the rates would have to be on the notices when posted.

Mr. Chairman, while I am on my feet, I would like to say that it is some gratification to me, as a lawyer, that the laymen want me to keep adding verbiage, and I am very glad that our drafting department prepares these bills as briefly as possible, and I feel grieved that the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has not fully appreciated it.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I fully appreciate the fine work that the staff of the hon. Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell) is doing in drafting our Legislation. If there is any fault to be found in the drafting of the Legislation, it is not the fault of the staff, but the fault of those who dictate the policies upon which the Legislation is drafted.

I confess that this is not a big thing, but it does seem to me, as a layman—and I say this with all respect to the members of the legal profession—that the Bill is useless for the purpose desired by the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) unless these few words are added. I repeat this does not mean "price control." It would mean that a hotel keeper could fix whatever price he wants and post it, and he could not change it overnight. If it were raining in the neighbourhood and travellers on the highway were obliged to stop at his hotel, as the Act stands now he could change the card, increase his rates, and post the increased rate, which is the very thing the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) wants to avoid.

I repeat that my proposal does not suggest the institution of "price control," but strengthens the Act and more nearly achieves what the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) desires.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

On Section 2.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, has the Provincial Auditor been auditing the books in the past, or have they had their own auditors?

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): An external auditor has been retained by the Commission ever since its inception, and has made an annual audit which has been submitted to the Legislature. The Provincial auditor has only made enquiries under special instructions from the government. This section will make the Provincial Auditor the regular auditor of the Commission.

COMPANIES' ACT

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 35, an Act to amend the Companies' Act.

The amendments are to meet certain circumstances which have arisen from time to time in the administration of the Act. There are none of them of great significance, and there is no principle that runs through all of them. I think it might be preferable, unless hon. members wish otherwise, to leave explanation of the sections until the Bill reaches committee. I shall, however, be pleased to make any further explanation now which hon. members would like.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 25th order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 25th order; second reading of Bill No. 36, an Act to amend the Companies Information Act, Mr. Michener.

COMPANIES INFORMATION ACT

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of this Bill, I should like to say, as was indicated to the Legislature some time ago, an effort is being made to move towards uniformity in company legislation, and to that end the Government of Ontario was represented at a conference called by the Secretary of State, at which all of the Provinces and the Dominion discussed this problem of uniform company legislation. Some progress was made and committees were formed on the various aspects of company law. One of them is a committee to deal with uniform returns. Each Province and the Dominion require companies which do business within its jurisdiction to file an annual return or report of some kind or other.

In the case of Ontario, Quebec and the Dominion, a great many companies are required to file returns in all those jurisdictions, and the returns differ very little in substance and form.

The Committee which was appointed to deal with this problem of returns and prospectuses includes representatives from this Province, Quebec and the Dominion, and I believe that in the course of this year, it will be possible to agree upon a uniform type of return which will be acceptable in all the provincial jurisdictions and probably in all the jurisdictions of Canada.

That will be a step forward because companies then doing business within several jurisdictions will simply have to duplicate the one return instead of preparing different returns for each jurisdiction.

This amendment gives authority to the Government in the coming year to change the form of a company's return by Order-in-Council, so that if we do succeed in achieving the agreement to which we look forward, we shall not have to wait until another session of the Legislature to adopt the form. In due course, when it has been tried and accepted in sufficient jurisdictions, it can again be given the rigidity of the statutory provisions which are now in the Act, but in the meantime, the statutory provisions remain and the Government has the authority under this section by Order-in-Council to make modifications as may be agreed upon in the best interest of uniformity.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 26th order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 26th Order, second reading of Bill No. 45, an Act to amend the Regulations Act, 1944, Mr. Blackwell.

REGULATIONS ACT

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 45, An Act to amend the Regulations Act, 1944.

This amendment is simply to remove the necessity of filing under the Regulations Act the legal description, or route description, of the King's Highway. Those descriptions are filed in registry offices throughout the Province in the different registry districts through which the highway passes, and are also in the Department of Highways.

Although they are legislative in character, the amount of work and amount of space they take up in the regulations is entirely unnecessary, as those concerned with determining an accurate description of a highway can do so in either the registry office or by resorting to the Department of Highways.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 27th order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 27th order, second reading of Bill No. 48, The Coroners Act, 1948. Mr. Blackwell.

THE CORONERS ACT

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 48, The Coroners Act, 1948.

As hon. members will observe by the explanatory note, this bill is a revision, after many years, of this Act. It contains a number of minor revisions, none of which is of great consequence in principle, and it is the type of bill that, I submit, Mr. Speaker, will be best dealt with, section by section, in Committee.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): It looks as though it might be of considerable importance to provincial coroners if you are going to abolish the office.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I did not catch what the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) said.

MR. NIXON: I notice the office of Provincial Coroner is to be discontinued, "As it has not been required since the passing of The Fire Marshalls Act." What in the world has the Fire Marshalls Act got to do with the chief coroner?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: There is now a supervisory coroner for the Province, and the other position has disappeared. It has not been in existence in practice for many years under the Statutes. The Statute is simply being brought into accordance now with what is actually done.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that completes the bills that are printed and it is necessary, therefore, for us to adjourn. As I indicated before, we will proceed tomorrow with the debate on the Speech from the Throne. If the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will indicate to us his pleasure and approval for what the Government has been doing in past years, and proposes to do, I think we can safely say this will be the last of the short sittings of the Legislature, because we will now be in a position to carry forward the Legislative programme, and that will occupy our time.

Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER
(Leader of the Opposition): I was going to ask, are you contemplating a night sitting tomorrow?

HON. MR. DREW: It will not be necessary to have a night sitting tomorrow, as it is not customary to continue with the debate on the day that the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the head of the Government take part in that debate.

We will have other matters on the order paper with which we can continue. As I indicated earlier, we will try to limit the night sittings to only Tuesdays and Thursdays unless more should be necessary as a result of the extension of the debates. I think it would be possible to indicate tomorrow whether it would seem advisable to have a night sitting on Thursday, so the hon. members can make their plans accordingly.

Motion approved.

The House adjourned at 3.55 o'clock p.m.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Seventh order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Seventh order; resumed the adjourned debate on the motion for the consideration of the speech of the Hon. the Lieutenant Governor at the opening of the Session.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in rising to continue the debate this afternoon I want, first of all, to offer my congratulations to you upon your reappearance in the chair of authority for another session. I trust our relationships will be of the very highest order, and that we will not indulge in anything that will lower either ourselves or your office, Mr. Speaker.

I want to say, as I commence my remarks this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, that I am very appreciative of the hon. member for North Cochrane (Mr. Habel) who has been ill during the past week, and who has today just been able to take his seat in the Legislature, and also my hon. friend from Gengarry (Mr. MacGillivray), who is ill in bed and perhaps will not be with us in the capacity of a member sitting in the House for another week. These illnesses come and go. We seem to have little control over them, and we can only regret that the services of those hon. members have not been thus far available to the Legislature and to the Province.

I want, Mr. Speaker, to congratulate the mover and seconder of the address, my hon. friend from Huron (Mr. Pryde), and my hon. friend from South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton). May I say that I did appreciate the very fine manner in which they delivered their remarks to this House. My hon. friend from Huron (Mr. Pryde) in his first speech in the Legislature, did himself credit. I rather thought that he would be able just to do that, from my past appraisal of his abilities. So far as my hon. friend from South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton) is concerned, while it was not his first speech in the Legislature, he did the other afternoon give us a very lucid and comprehensive—and I would say factual—summing up of the Hydro supply situation. It may be, in the course of my remarks this afternoon, that I will deal in greater detail with some of the things my hon. friend (Mr. Hamilton) said, not in a critical manner, but calling upon him, and the remarks he made, for the authority upon which to base some statements, concerning which I would like to speak this afternoon.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. members of the Legislature, irrespective of party, do appreciate the complexities that exist in the world picture as we look at it today. Meeting in our capacity as legislators, in this year 1948, even a student with a most casual knowledge of the world situation and the world picture would be forced to agree that all is not well, as one looks out over the international horizon.

As we seek to appraise the international picture today, we are forced to the realization that it is looking more and more every day as if the efforts and sacrifices of the days that have gone have almost been in vain, and the thing that was done will have to be done over again. I think we cannot escape our relationship to that picture; we cannot escape a measure of responsibility for the part we must play in that picture, as it unfolds in the days that lie ahead. One only has to look at the situation as it exists in Europe today, where countries that until recently had a democratic form of government similar to our own, have seen before their very eyes that form of government give way to a totalitarian system.

I am one of those who believe that there are two kinds of dictatorships, both equally bad. You must have seen that we have a dictatorship on the right, and a dictatorship on the left. Both of these forms of dictatorships are equally at bay; they are equally at variance with your opinions and my version of the way of life we would want to live in this country of ours.

And it will become in Canada increasingly evident that we who love democracy, we who value our way of life, must take our place side by side with those who think alike with us in turning back any semblance of any real effort on the part of those who would transplant the ideology for which we have no use in place of the one under which we have grown up, and through which we are living.

I want to say to you, Mr. Speaker, and through you to the hon. members of this House, that I have a keen appreciation of the difficulties and troubles that lie along the path that leads into the future. We in Canada have a great heritage to protect; we have a great tradition to live up to, and we want to see to it that every move we make, and every advance we make, are made along the line of preserving our liberties for ourselves, and for those who come after us.

There is no compromise with those forces which would destroy our way of life. There is no possibility of a compromise with those forces. They are out for one purpose alone, and that is to disrupt and to destroy, and we who do not believe in that philosophy, we who say that philosophy is foul and has no part of our conscience, must take our places and see to it that any attempt to transplant the ideology into the soil of Canada is frustrated at every attempt, because I want to say—and I want to make abundantly plain—that we have not any use in this country for changes by force, for changes by revolution. The democratic way provides that changes can be made in an orderly and democratic fashion by evolution. I am not one of those who believes that the democratic way, as we see it, is all that we would like it to be. The democratic order, if it is to fully serve the needs of the people of this country, cannot be a stationary form of government; it must be a form of government that is susceptible to change, a form of government that lends itself to improvement and to amendment as time goes on.

But I do believe, notwithstanding what some people call the slowness of democracy, that, in the circumstances to which I am referring, it is better to be slow and sure, than to be swift, and most uncertain. There is a quality in democracy that we seldom think about, and that is a quality to differentiate between things that are good for the country and good for its people and things of contrary stature. Democracy has been able to differentiate between these down through the years; she has been able to do it with the methodical course which democracy pursues; she is not hurried, nor held back by public opinion; she pursues her own course and takes her time about it, and ninety-nine times out of one hundred she has registered what is the popular need to meet the demands from the people as a whole.

I want to say as definitely as I can—and I refer to a remark that I made a moment ago—that we cannot in this House or in this province make any compromise with communism; we cannot afford to. The time has come in this country when we must stand together to turn aside any aspirations of those who would move our ship of state by force rather than by evolution.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. OLIVER: I want to make it abundantly clear that to me we can do little to change the ideology of any particular country outside of our own. I do not know what steps we would take, what methods we would employ to change the system or the way of thinking of the people who live in Russia. I do not know why we should be particularly exercised about that situation. The thing we must move against and guard against in this country is not the internal government of another country, but it is that when that other country has a system which is at total variance with our own, seeks to transplant that ideology into the soil of Canada, that is when we in this country must be on our guard, when we must stand prepared and ready to turn back with certainty, with effectiveness and with despatch, the transplanting of that ideology into the soil of Canada, and, so far as the inroads have already been made into this country of ours—and there are few of us who doubt that inroads have been made—we should at all times do what we can to eradicate the disease insofar as it has spread within our country.

There was a suggestion made the other day by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) having something to do with communism as it affects trade unions. I think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) agrees with me when I say that the unions generally recognize their position in respect to communism. I think they are doing a gigantic task in trying, and in a measure succeeding, to rid their organizations from the disease, and it will be our part and our duty to work along with these forces in our community who are looking toward that end, and wanting to see to it that we in Canada for generations to come will have the right to say—and the obligation to say—how we shall be governed from those we elect from amongst ourselves.

After all, Mr. Speaker, we can talk as we like in this Legislature about Hydro, about education, and about the other things that fall within the scope of our Provincial Legislature, but unless we keep the carpet clean in the picture that engulfs us all, then the things we might discuss here would have really very little practical value.

It is because of that, I make these remarks this afternoon and pledge myself and those who sit with me to do all we can in our several capacities to make Canada great and strong, so that those who live here can be proud of this country, and will never have hanging over their heads any shame because they were apathetic, because they were lethargic, because they did not see the danger when it appeared before their noses.

The greatest cure that I know of for this disease within our own country is this: that men and women in all walks of life should realize that they have a responsibility in citizenship and in government; that men and women the Province and the Dominion over should take their responsibilities of citizenship seriously, that they should all say to themselves: "I have a part to play in the election of a member to the Legislature, or to the House of Commons," not to sit back and say: "It's all right; let the other fellow do it; I am not vitally concerned."

Every Canadian citizen is, and should be, vitally concerned in government. It is the biggest business in our country, it is the most important business, and therefore I suggest to the people at large that the time has come for an awakening of interest in the needs of government in this country, and the time has come for each individual to take upon his shoulders the responsibility that rightfully belongs to him, establishing his or her own part in the evolution of government and in its working out in the Province of Ontario and the Dominion of Canada.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I want to turn to some things that were mentioned in the Speech from the Throne and to discuss each of them for some little while this afternoon.

I want to talk, first of all, about the agricultural industry, and to say to you, Mr. Speaker, that it is recognized generally, I think, that agriculture is one of, if not the basic industry of this province and it naturally follows that if there is prosperity in agriculture itself, that prosperity which is prevalent in the agricultural industry will branch out and go into other walks of life and other vocations of our land. It is very important therefore that we keep the basic industry of agriculture virile, progressive and able to meet the problems that beset it along the way.

I am going to suggest now, Mr. Speaker, that the paragraph in the Speech from the Throne dedicated to the agricultural industry is very anæmic. It does not set out any great advances that this Government has in mind for the agricultural industry; indeed, the farmers of Ontario, generally, speaking through their organization are not very well satisfied with the record of this administration and its agricultural programme.

I read just a short while ago in the Rural Co-Operator, which is after all the mouthpiece of the Federation of Agriculture in Ontario, an editorial written by, I suppose, the editor; I do not know who wrote it, but it was on the editorial page.

HON. MR. DREW: I do, if you do not.

MR. OLIVER: Well, that may be enlightening, I do not know, but anyway it was on the editorial page and I want to read it to the House. I want to put it in Hansard because after all the opinion—

HON. MR. DREW: Give the name.

MR. OLIVER: I beg your pardon?

HON. MR. DREW: Give the name. It was not an editorial.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, it was an editorial.

HON. MR. DREW: It was a special article.

MR. OLIVER: No, no, I disagree with my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) in that regard. It was an editorial, on the editorial page of the Rural Co-Operator on the 13th of January, 1948, and this is what it says:

“See Here, Mr. Drew.

“Now is the time when it can be done in a non-partisan way for farm people to examine the promises which the present Ontario Government made to agriculture, and to attempt to secure action in fulfillment of those promises.

“Friends and critics of the Government”—all are included—“could join in an effort to secure action which would help agriculture and strengthen the Government. The Government’s agricultural record as against Mr. Drew’s promises is a sorry one. In a year or two there will be a provincial election.”

I am not so sure—this is an aside—I am not so sure it will be so long delayed—anyway, this is the writer’s opinion:

“In another year or two there will be a provincial election when the elfin spirits of partisanship will again claim their victims and it will be too late for farmers to take united action. Today Ontario farm people could still unitedly send their Federation representatives to Queen’s Park to meet members of the Cabinet personally and say: ‘You promised us this and you promised us that, but you haven’t half done that and you haven’t touched that. We don’t want some of the things you promised anyway, but we do want so-and-so.’”

That is the editorial in the Rural Co-Operator. I am still quite sure it was an editorial. If I am wrong I am quite ready to step aside for a more mature and a more certain judgment.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): We should know who wrote that editorial.

MR. OLIVER: My friend, I do not know who writes all those editorials.

MR. DENT: I happen to know.

MR. OLIVER: All right, we will get that name after a while. The hon. the Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has it. I am quoting an editorial from the Rural Co-Operator and I think that that editorial has some substance in fact in relation to the present Government's agricultural administration.

The two main things that they started out with in 1943 were county committees, and to set up a committee to study the farm problem. These county committees, as the House is well aware, were to be set up in each county, and the function of these committees was to assist the farmers and to advise them on matters of production. I do not know how many of these committees have been set up, but I do know this—and I said so when the bill to establish these committees was brought into the Legislature—that I did not feel that it answered in any way the needs of the people of this province. I said then, and I say now, that the county committees are but a fifth wheel in agricultural organization. There are plenty of agricultural organizations that can be the mouthpieces of agriculture and to set up in each county another committee which, after all, is sponsored by the Government, is, to me, adding something where it will be valueless and of no account.

The committee that was to enquire into the condition of agriculture sat for a good long time, it has not now had sittings for 22 months I understand. The Agricultural Federation a week or so ago made representations, I believe, to the Government that this committee should sit again. They have more hope for this committee than I have, because I do not think it matters very much whether it ever sits again or not. It was not necessary in the first place and it becomes less necessary as time goes on.

These committees of inquiry into agricultural problems are not what will make agriculture stronger in this province. The thing to do if you want to help the basic industry of agriculture is not to sit for months inquiring, but it is to do the obvious thing that needs to be done. The hon. the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), who is a farmer, knows quite well what things should be done to help the farming industry. He knew just as much about it before the committee was appointed as he knew after it had made its report. I do suggest to the Government that these two things, which were the mainstay of their agricultural program and their agricultural promises in 1943, have not given a good account of themselves so far as rendering service to the basic industry of agriculture is concerned.

I believe that the time has come in this province when we should place more emphasis on the marketing of farm products than we do on their production. There has always been, it seems to me, the tendency in the Department of Agriculture to place particular stress on the production of agricultural products, and there has been a tendency to do too little for the marketing end of agricultural products. The day is coming in this province, and I think we all realize it, when our markets overseas will not be as large as they are today. Those countries that are war-ravaged are getting back on their feet. They will be into production in the course of a short time. Many of them will be self-sustaining, so far as agricultural products are concerned, and the day will come in the not too distant future when the problem of Ontario and Canadian farmers will not be how we can produce more but how we can sell what we have so effectively produced. I would say further in regard to this matter that we should be laying great stress in the Department of Agriculture at the moment on agricultural research. We should be trying to find ways and means of utilizing agricultural products in different processes of manufacture, rather than using them all for foodstuffs. I would say that in a country such as Canada, with her great productive capacity along agricultural lines, that we would do well to study and to harness every vestige of research that we can towards using some of these agricultural products for other purposes than feeding the human beings of this or any other country.

Mind you, I do not want to say that, to the extent that I think that we should not export agricultural products. I am all for trade of that character. What I am pointing out is that world conditions will put themselves in this position, that Canada in the days that lie ahead will not be able to sell so easily so much in world markets, and when that time comes we should be able, if we are going to keep up production, to harness our manufacturing plants to use agricultural products, after we have used research to determine the best method of their use.

I want to say a word or two about housing, and I will not debate this at length, because I anticipate, Mr. Speaker, that there will be before the House some legislation dealing with housing matters. There was a suggestion, or a promise, in the Speech from the Throne that the Government had become interested in low-cost housing. I am glad that a reversal of faith, or conversion has come over them, because we do need low-cost housing in this province, and we do need a central authority to push and to make possible low-cost housing. So it is with pleasure that the group in this corner realizes that the Government at last—at long last—have decided to meet the problem of housing and to do something of a really tangible nature in that connection.

I do not think anyone doubts that there is a need for housing not only at the present time but there will be for many years to come in Ontario. It is not a passing problem; the need for housing is so great that it will extend over at least a number of years, and there is still time for this province to show that it desires to play a very important part in building houses for people who need them in this Province of Ontario.

We always thought that the Government promised in 1943 that they were going to build houses, but of late they have denied their child and said that under that promise they did not intend to build houses at all and that really they had gone much farther than they had intended to in actual performance. I am glad that promise has now been clothed with some semblance at least of action and that we are going to get some move on the part of the Government to meet this very great and grave problem.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that I do hope when the legislation comes down, whatever legislation there is, will be of a far-reaching and definite character. I have read with interest in these last few weeks the story of the Quebec housing scheme. I do not think very much of it, I think it goes only a very small way towards meeting the need and part that a government should play in a housing enterprise. The Quebec scheme, as I see it, is one that is just playing with the problem, one that does not meet it squarely nor deal with it adequately and it is to be hoped when the legislation comes down in the House that after waiting so long we will be able to say that at last it is adequate and that it meets the problem as it exists.

I want to say a word or two about northern Ontario, because I think all of us have an interest in northern Ontario. We have an interest as legislators and we have an interest gained through travelling in that important part of this province.

The northern part of this province lends itself, in my judgment, to great development, to development that will pay dividends over a long period of time, and anything we might do as a government towards the development of the great northern areas of this province must not be considered, on the basis of a short term. Anything we do to develop the north should be considered over a long term, and if we do consider it from that view point we will, I am sure, realize that anything we do for the north will repay itself one hundred fold in the years that have yet to come.

The north needs many things, as all of us know. They need roads; they need main arteries of travel, but I think what they need particularly is what might be called "feeder" roads, roads that will open up small, isolated communities, roads that will open up new mining, new forestry and new tourist wealth in the great northern areas of our province.

I think I am safe in saying, and correct in saying, that roads are one of the prime needs of the great northern part of Ontario.

I am quite persuaded, too, Mr. Speaker, that the north needs, if it is to develop the way it should develop, a land settlement policy that is modern in its design, that is up-to-date in the way that it seeks to move ahead, and one that is far removed, may I say, from the kind of colonization schemes that heretofore have been part of government policy, both present and past—particularly past in this instance—in the Province of Ontario. We have got to provide, as a government and as a province, in many areas of the north, the clearing machines, the big bulldozers and so on, to clear the land in an emphatically up-to-date way. We have got to make these blocks of land so that they are available, so that they are accessible and lend themselves to the building up of a community from an isolated area that can be easily served by churches and schools and by the other services that go to make up a very real community. I do not think that there is any doubt in any of our minds that northern Ontario, if it is properly helped, can grow much more in the line of agricultural products than it does today. There is one thing about agricultural farm products in northern Ontario; you have a market right at your door for the great proportion of the products. You do not have to send them hundreds of miles away. The growing cities of the north can and will absorb the products that are produced there, or could be produced there in such abundance. I do believe, as my friend Mr. Martin suggested—I think it was last year—that the Government might well interest itself in establishing a processing plant in some part of northern Ontario, as a trial experiment. It has always seemed to me to be utter foolishness to ship the cattle from some parts of the north down to Toronto to process them, and ship them back. I do not know why. I do not know why we could not establish a processing plant at some important point in northern Ontario and allow it to prove itself, to see if it is one of the things that would meet the need for that sort of thing in northern Ontario. I think we could very well try it out as an experiment. We spend a lot of money on lots of things that could be called experiments. I doubt if we could spend money any better than by establishing a processing plant and allowing the north to build around it and to be serviced from it.

There is one other thing I want to say about the north, and that is this. I think we have not developed to its full the north as a tourist attraction. I am not going to criticize my hon. friend (Mr. Welsh) who handles the tourists, but I think he will agree with me in this: that there are countless areas in northern Ontario that have not been tested or developed yet, countless lakes there that lend themselves admirably into the making of tourist resorts, and I think the Government could well do something towards opening up some of those areas. We talk a lot about tourists who come from the United States. We talk about the density of population in the United States, it is only a day or so travel from our tourist resorts, but I want to say, as well as wishing that these people come back again and again, we want to pay perhaps more attention to the people in our own province who want and should have a holiday. I look towards the day, Mr. Speaker—and I do not know whether my hon. friend, the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) will agree—I do not ask him to agree—but I look towards the day when all industrial workers of this province will have two-weeks' holiday, and when they have the holiday, you are going to find them in thousands and thousands making for our resorts in northern Ontario. One week's holiday does not give a man time enough to get up to a place of recreation and have any stay there at all, but two-weeks' holiday will see the greatest increase in tourists from our own province that you can imagine, and we should now be looking for the time when this army from amongst ourselves, who have very well earned a holiday, can easily find a place in which to spend it in enjoyment and in comfort and in leisure, and I do say to you—this is not said in a political or censorious way at all, but in the interests of the great potential areas of the north—how easily they lend themselves to improvement as tourist attractions.

I am impressed also by the fact that we still have that great number of tourists from the United States, and that we can add to them many, many thousands of our own people who, before long, will be getting two-weeks' holidays and will be anxious to spend that time in a resort of some kind in northern Ontario.

Now, I want to touch for a moment or so on the question of welfare. I do not intend to go into it at any great length because we can perhaps do that later on. I want to say here and now that I think the time has come when, if it is at all possible, we should undertake to pay old-age pensions at 65. We will in the course of time enter into a recession in this country. I do not want to be a pessimist—the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has raked me for this before—but really you know we have to face the facts once in a while—you cannot be carried on your own enthusiasm forever—we will have a sort of recession; there will come a time when we are not as prosperous as we are at the present time. Even now a man of 60 or 65 will not be able to get employment in industry. I think the day is here when we should use every means at our disposal to see that these worthy citizens are given a pension at 65 years of age.

I have argued in this House before for a pension for disabled persons. It has always seemed to me that is one element of our community with whom we have not dealt fairly, men and women who, through no fault of their own, become crippled or disabled, with no income or no revenue with which to meet medical bills. I think it is proper, in this progressive province of ours, we should have a pension for that class of citizen.

I want to say further that I think that as a province we should do something of a more definite character for the crippled children of Ontario. You might put it in this way, we should have some legislation dealing with the problem of crippled children. One of the first things that would have to be done in respect to crippled children would be to catalogue these children who have infirmities. I do not think there is any catalogue of those at the present time, of the youngsters who are crippled or who are infirm in any way. I think that is a move we might make. I think that we could pass legislation—perhaps not taking all financial responsibility ourselves—to see to it that there was a proper proportion of the financial cost divided between private and government sources. At the present time, as hon. members of the House well know, there are certain service clubs that are doing very great work for crippled children. I do not want for a moment to retard that work. I do not want to say anything that would seem to reflect on that work. What I am saying is that the Government has a duty in this regard, to catalogue the crippled children in the province and then, having done that, it should see its way clear to do what was needed by way of legislation to further that very worthy cause.

I want to say further that I think we should have, at the earliest possible moment, health insurance in this province and in this country. We have come to a time when a man is almost afraid to get sick. The cost of doctor's bills and costs of hospitalization of every sort, has created a condition where it is very hard for the ordinary wage-earning citizen to meet his doctor's bills.

I do not suppose the province on its own could initiate a health insurance bill that would be comprehensive in relation to meeting the problem in hand.

I was struck today — and perhaps other hon. members were—by an article appearing in the Toronto Star. What appeared in this newspaper will be taken I am sure by the government at its face value. The heading across the inside section is this:

“Martin will offer Ontario New Health Security Plan.”

I want to read with the indulgence of the House some of the things that hon. Mr. Martin says:

“I am hopeful that a national health scheme for Canadians will be announced sooner than most people anticipate, Hon. Paul Martin, Minister of national health and welfare, said last night in an interview.” He said:

“The scheme will be fundamentally the same as was presented at the Dominion-Provincial conference in 1945, he added. Cost if all provinces adopt it will be $250,000,000—”

Now, I am not sure of the figures at that time. These are probably correct.

“—of which the Dominion will pay 60 per cent., or $150,000,000. The balance would be met from payments by provincial governments and individuals participating.”

Now, further on in the article, hon. Mr. Martin is quoted as saying:

“A ‘more comprehensive’ scheme than the contributory old-age pensions proposed by Ottawa in 1945 is now receiving very serious consideration. The 1945 proposal was for a plan under which the Dominion would meet 100 per cent. of pensions paid persons over 70, and 50 per cent. for people over 65. Mr. Martin said also he was very much in favour of survivors’ and disability pensions.”

Disability pensions are what I have been talking about these last few minutes. There are two things that arise out of this article that I want to leave in the minds of the hon. members of the House; one is that no province will be barred in this scheme which is now about to develop according to this article.

I am not one of those who would say—and I think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) will give me credit for this—that we should grasp this thing with the open hand, until we have thoroughly analysed it and weighed the financial consideration involved. But it seems to me if it were possible for us in Ontario and those in the other provinces of Canada to come under this national scheme it will be one of the most forward steps this country has ever taken. We may find upon examination that the costs involved are more than we should bear. But that will come, of course, only after examination. A casual perusal of the matter would lead one to believe that in Ontario we should come under the scheme and do it in a way that would not be too great a burden on our citizens. If that is possible, Mr. Speaker, I say to the Government and to this House, that we will have taken a great step forward in social welfare and we will have laid a sound plank for future prosperity in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I want to touch on one more subject before I conclude my remarks, and that has to do with Hydro. I do not think anyone thought I would conclude my remarks without saying something about the hydro problem. We have in Ontario a great shortage of power. That shortage has become so acute that we have had to have black-outs and conservation plans of one kind and another.

No matter what the cause may have been—and I say this in a broad, general way—it is unfortunate that at this time when the possibility of development within our province was so very great, we should be short of hydro electric energy, because power, in essence, means development, power means new industry, and it is a well-known fact that industry will go where the power is. So, from that point of view, there is regret on our part that there is a shortage of electrical energy in this province today.

My hon. friend from South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton) the other day said in his remarks that in 1943 the output of hydro—or “income from hydro” is perhaps the better way to put it—was just about balanced with our consumption, in fact, our reserves, as he put it, were all but gone in 1943, and that condition continued up until we had to dip in beyond our reserves, and put on some conservation measures of one kind and another. I want to say to this House—and I think I should say it—that the power shortage we are going through at the moment is not one which will be over in a few months. It will not be over, according to Mr. Hearn, of the Hydro, until 1950 at the earliest.

What is the fact regarding the hydro shortage? The hon. member for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton) put his side of the case here the other day; I want now to say what in my opinion is the other side of the picture. My hon. friend (Mr. Hamilton) carried on up until 1943, and then he left us with the suggestion that in 1943 the Hydro power coming in was just about equal to what we were using, and our reserves were all but washed away.

What happened in 1943? In 1943 I think this house will recall the Liberal government of the day had been making plans to increase the production of Hydro electrical energy. They had negotiated with the Province of Quebec during 1942; they had brought the agreement to a place, in 1943, where they were able to bring it on the floor of the Legislature and ask the hon. members for ratification. This agreement provided, as the house recalls, for development of power on what is known as the upper Ottawa River. When this matter was before the house in February, 1943, there were two or three significant things, and one of them was that Mr. Conant, who was leading the house, and Mr. Houyk, who was Hydro Commissioner, and vice-chairman at the time, both stressed, in speaking on the bill, that it was necessary to pass this legislation and get to work on the development of power on the upper Ottawa because they felt in their judgment that a power shortage would result, unless we completed the plans and pushed them on to their conclusion.

The present hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and those who supported him in opposition at that time opposed very strongly the passage of this agreement on the floor of the Legislature. They argued, and I think pressed divisions on every phase of that bill as it went through the Legislature, but of course we had something like the majority in those days that my hon. friends have today, and in spite of their objections and their protestations, the agreement became law and was ratified by this house.

An unfortunate thing happened in 1943. The hon. members of the house will recall the government of 1943 was defeated in the election of that summer. From then on, Mr. Speaker, there are some things that any of us who want to understand this question must take into consideration. I have said before, and I say here now, that my judgment is that the present government did not proceed to develop power on the upper Ottawa as they should have done, if they were aware, as my hon. friend from South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton) pointed out, that our supply was very close to our demands in 1943. If they were aware of that situation it would seem to me that the course for them to pursue as a government would have been to speed as quickly as possible the development of new sources of power on the upper Ottawa river.

I think the house will agree with me that in 1943, after the present government was elected, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) went down to see Mr. Godbout, about this development of power. They apparently were not very co-operative. I do not know what matters were discussed, but I rather presume that the present hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) was asking the government of Quebec to proceed with the "joint" development, rather than the allotted ones, as was the case with the former agreement. But be that as it may—and it is not very important—nothing was done until the government changed in the province of Quebec, and hon. Mr. Duplessis came into power. Letters were tabled last year which show the correspondence between the hon. Premiers of this province (Mr. Drew) and the province of Quebec (Mr. Duplessis) relative to commencing the development on the upper Ottawa. That was in 1945, in November, I believe, so that actually three years were wasted by this administration—in my judgement at least—when they should have been developing power on the upper Ottawa; three years which were very important ones, three years which if utilized to the full would have gone a long, long way toward relieving the power shortage in the province of Ontario at the present time.

They were not taken advantage of by this administration; they were not used to build Hydro between 1943 and 1946.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) will make his contribution when he rises, but it is my honest opinion that the government should have proceeded with the development on the upper Ottawa immediately they were elected in 1943, and if they had done so, they would have averted, in the main, the power shortage we are suffering at the present time.

There is another matter, of course, in respect to hydro that is outlined in the Speech from the Throne, and that is the conversion of the Southern Ontario system from 25 to 60 cycle. I will not debate that now, except to say, as the hon. members will realize, that this is a tremendous project. I am one of those who feel that if it can be carried out in an equitable manner, it ultimately will be advantageous to this province. I feel, and quite earnestly, Mr. Speaker, that it is important for us to carry on indefinitely as a 25-cycle island in the midst of a 60-cycle province, or as part of a 60-cycle province. So when this matter comes before the Legislature, we will look on it not with a critical eye, but with an analysis that will seek to see in the legislation whether it adequately meets the problem that the government is aiming at in this regard.

There is one other matter—and I would be unfair if I did not mention it, because I have mentioned it elsewhere—which has to do with the composition of the Hydro Commission itself. I have said for a long time, both in this house and outside, that the Commission governing hydro should be one at which the finger of political partisanship could not be pointed. It is almost a year now since Mr. Hogg retired from his position as Hydro chairman. All during the year, when Hydro was going through very difficult times, the great enterprise did not have a chairman to direct its energies, and to direct its policies. Frequently and repeatedly through the summer I have urged the government to appoint a chairman to the Hydro Commission.

Just before the Huron by-election, and before the meeting of the Municipalities Hydro Electric Association, they did appoint a chairman of the Hydro Commission. This gentleman who now occupies the position of Hydro Chairman I have known for a while, and whose abilities I admire. As mayor of the City of Toronto he did a good job, and it may be that the streak of independence that has been so prominent in "Bob" Saunders up until the present time may serve the people well in his present position. I hope that turns out to be the case. My only criticism of the chairmanship of the Hydro Commission at the moment is that with the nomination of Mr. Saunders to be the chairman of the Hydro Commission, it completes the Tory roster of Hydro Commissioners. We have now three on the Commission about whose political affiliations one would not care to doubt, because he would be waging a losing battle if he tried.

I remember reading hon. Mr. Challies' statement in Port Arthur, made on the 7th of September, 1944, and it is rather interesting in view of the present situation. He said:

"The control of Hydro legally and in practise is, and always has been, the function of the Commission. I am not saying that a government could not influence the control of Hydro by appointing to its board three of its supporters who could follow its direction. That may have happened in the past and perhaps could happen in the future—but I can assure you it is not happening at present.

"The present commission is composed of Dr. Hogg, an independent, impartial judge; Mr. Ross Strike, representing the municipalities, and myself representing the government, which means the people. With such a set-up I do not think that anyone could claim that there are politics in Hydro today, or that any undue influence can be exerted by the government on the Commission."

In 1944 hon. Mr. Challies was claiming that there was no political partisanship in regard to the Commission, because the chairman, Dr. Hogg, was an impartial man. Of course Dr. Hogg has now gone to whatever reward awaits a faithful servant of this province, and in his place has come one who is supposed, by rumour, to be in the line of succession when my hon. friend the Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) goes down to Ottawa to take up the reins where hon. Mr. Bracken will some day leave off. It is all right to have your political opinions; it is a good thing some times to wear them on your sleeves, but in this case where my friend the ex-mayor of Toronto is so prominent in the Tory party as to earn a place amongst the elect, and amongst the most promising candidates for future advancement, then there can hardly be any suggestion that Mr. Saunders is on the Commission as an independent, impartial, and so on, as he should be. I want to leave that with the suggestion, Mr. Speaker, that I do feel that we have to remove any question of political affiliation dominating the Hydro Commission. It is most difficult to do that when you have three men on the Commission whose political affiliations are so well defined. I leave that to the House and to the Province in order that they might judge for themselves.

There is one more thing I want to say, before I sit down, in regard to hydro, and that is this: that I have come to the opinion that the day has arrived in this Province in regard to hydro matters when the hydro municipalities should have a man of their own choosing on the Hydro Commission, and those municipalities which actually own hydro have a perfect right to have a man of their own choice on the Commission, and I hope to see the day in the not too distant future when that will be done, when the man supposed to be representing the municipalities will not be one picked by someone else, but picked by the municipalities themselves. I do not want to say any more on hydro tonight, Mr. Speaker, but I do feel so strongly on this matter that I am forced, before sitting down, to move, seconded by Mr. Nixon, that the motion be amended by adding thereto the following words:

"That this House condemn the Government and the Hydro Electric Power Commission for their failure to provide adequate reserve of electric power to meet the needs of the people of Ontario."

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before I make any remarks about the address which has just been made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), I wish to mention two things that he covered in his address.

First of all, I share the regret that he expresses, at the illness of the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. MacGillivray) and I hope, as I know every hon. member of this Legislature hopes, that he will presently be with us again in this Legislature.

I also wish to pay a more formal tribute to the mover and seconder of the adoption of this address, not because they happen to be supporters of this Government, not because I certainly very warmly agreed with many of the things that they said about the Government, but simply because of the content and the manner of presentation. I want to say that we have not, in my recollection, had better speeches in the moving and seconding of the adoption of the Speech from the Throne than we had here on Thursday last.

I also wish to extend an expression of pleasure which I indicated before at the fact that the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) is the hon. member who is sitting now on the opposite side of the House, not in the sense that we ordinarily use that expression, but in that overflow on that side of the House which almost equals the whole of the Opposition ranks. And I can, perhaps without any unpleasantness, recall that by-election with some measure of pleasure in other respects. It is more appropriate that I should do so now than on the occasion when we formally welcome a new member here on the opening day.

There were many amusing aspects of that by-election, one of which occurred on almost the last day. I do not say this unkindly, but I could not help reading with a good deal of entertainment the report of a speech of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that we were "scared stiff," and also I could not help getting a good deal of pleasure out of a remark by the Opposition candidate that I "had a tiger by the tail." Well, Mr. Speaker, no matter how the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has been described, I can think of more appropriate descriptions than a "tiger." And I do feel that neither on that occasion nor on this, has there been any evidence of the very sharp claws that would go with that particular description.

The by-election was satisfactory in many ways. It was particularly satisfactory as a demonstration of the fact that the people of this Province form their own opinions in a careful way and are not unduly actuated by misleading statements that are sometimes put forward in the way of argument at a time such as that.

I do feel that the address that was made here by the mover of the motion to adopt the Speech from the Throne indicated why the people of his own riding felt so very warmly about him, as they indicated. I also want to say, in spite of all the remarks that have been made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), that the address by the hon. member for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton) was an extremely important contribution to the discussion and problems of power resources and is a very valuable address to have on the records of this Legislature because of the important facts which it contains, facts which will, as a matter of fact, be very useful in the time ahead.

Now, just as a matter of information to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and without in any way enlarging upon it, I might tell him that the article which he quoted was written by Mr. Andrew Hebb, and was a special article with his own name attached and not one of the general editorials.

MR. OLIVER: On that point, if my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) will allow me, if I am not mistaken, Andrew Hebb is the editor of the Rural Co-operator.

HON. MR. DREW: He is one of the editors and writes these signed articles. I thought you would like the information, since you did not know the name.

Now, to go on with the remarks made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), I feel it is desirable that I deal with them in the order in which he presented them.

First of all, may I express my satisfaction that at this very late date, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has finally come to agree with the views that we have expressed for a very considerable time as to the danger of Communism in this country and outside.

MR. OLIVER: Well now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say to my hon. friend (Mr. Drew)—and I have found him mostly fair,—that throughout the province on many, many occasions have I expressed myself on the matter of Communism. I did not think there was any doubt in anybody's mind as to where I stood in that regard and for my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) to say today that this is a new chapter in my career, is begging for an argument, that is all.

HON. MR. DREW: I would like to remind the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) he was very effectively allied with the Communists in 1945 and so was the Federal Party on the same occasion.

MR. OLIVER: I never was allied with Communism in my life.

HON. MR. DREW: There may be some whose memories are short but there will be some in this Legislature who will remember the very constant exchange across the floor of the Legislature between the then Leader of the Liberal Group and the Leader of the small Communist representation in this Legislature. However, to pass from that, but in utmost sincerity, I do say I am very pleased to find that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) does hold those views. I might remind him it is not a year ago since I was quite severely criticized by hon. members of his own group for having raised this very subject and it was suggested I was trying to divert attention from the alleged shortcomings of the Government.

I merely mention this as a matter of record. I do agree that the time has come and, in fact, is long overdue, for a full appreciation of this danger outside and inside the country. I certainly agree very warmly with the statement by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that the best way to meet the threat of Communism here in Canada is for everyone who believes in freedom to take an active part in the political and public affairs of this country. For a moment I thought he had been reading my speeches.

MR. OLIVER: I never do.

HON. MR. DREW: I regret that this was the first time I ever saw any indication in a speech of his that he had taken the trouble to take my advice, but on this occasion I thought he was improving. I thought I saw some indication that he realized the best way to deal with the threat to Democracy is to encourage the democratic process in the very way I have been suggesting for some time.

One point I would like to deal with is the suggestion that is sometimes made, —I am not referring now to any remark in the address by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver),—that you will never have to worry about the threat of Communism as long as conditions are good.

May I say that this is a very dangerous fallacy. Indeed it is a fallacy which should be kept in mind by those who may think that in the comparative prosperity of the moment there is little danger of the spread of this vile, un-Christian doctrine in Canada. We have seen a very vivid demonstration in these past two weeks of the fact that it is not necessary for a country to be under compulsion of poverty and of hardship to be subjected to the yoke of this most vile form of dictatorship, because Czechoslovakia was a country which of all the countries in Europe had succeeded in advancing most in the years since the war in the development of its production and in the activity of its people.

The people of Czechoslovakia were employed. The people of Czechoslovakia were producing and the people of Czechoslovakia were free. They were about to have an election when they would have driven these Communists out of office. That was the reason that with guns and bayonets, in the customary manner, this international treachery took its latest form in Czechoslovakia. Since then, we have seen magnificent little Finland subjected to this same domination simply by the abuse of power in the hands of a dictatorship as vile, as dangerous, and as opposed to everything we love, as were Nazism, and Fascism which were destroyed by the force of arms of the people of our country and other free countries so short a time ago.

Now to come to the remarks about the Speech from the Throne. I am not going to deal very extensively with what the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has said about agriculture because the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) who is, as a matter of fact, pursuing his duties, as he so regularly does in the field of agriculture, is away today. He will be very well able to deal with this subject and to indicate to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that the only place where agriculture is understood is not on Four-Winds Farm, but that it is also understood in Peel County and in other parts of the Province.

The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), is very intent upon demonstrating the failure of this Government to deal with the problems of agriculture.

The fact is, the Royal Commission on Agriculture was made up of some of the leading farmers of this Province, and if that Commission has not recommended the things that should be done for agriculture in this Province, then the blame would rest with those outstanding farmers and not with the Department of Agriculture which has implemented practically every one of the recommendations made by the farmers who were on that Royal Commission.

I do not believe that the members of that Royal Commission failed in their recommendations. On the contrary I believe that, as good and efficient farmers, they made recommendations that were in the interest of agriculture and that this Government acted wisely in accepting their recommendations and carrying them into effect.

As to the agricultural committees about which the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) does not think so very much, I might point out that they are voluntary bodies which are representative of the farmers in the county and the Government does not seek to impose its view on any member of those committees nor on any farmer in that county. They merely seek to provide a clearing house through which farmers can exchange their views and have those views in turn presented to the Government by way of advice. In order that those voluntary bodies may function as representatives of all the farm organizations, the Federation of Agriculture, the Junior Farmers Organizations, and so on, the Act makes provision for financial support of those committees and for assistance in the secretarial work. I believe that if the work of those committees are fully understood and their functions appreciated, much can be done in that voluntary way.

I come now to the next point made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). He said that the question soon will be not whether we can produce, but whether we can sell what we do produce. For that reason he laid emphasis on the necessity for research so that agricultural products could be employed in the industrial uses of agricultural products which are expanding all the time. First of all may I suggest, and not unkindly, that this is merely another expression of that constant fear of the future which has at all times prompted the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in everything that he has done. Actually we are able to assure him that while we do not fear the future in that way, we do recognize that with more intense agricultural developments and scientific methods of agricultural expansion never attempted by the government of which he was a member, we can look forward to the time when, even with the enormous food requirements overseas, we will be able to expand our production and devote a considerable part of it to those industrial uses which today are working magic in new and completely strange devices. We have as a matter of fact gone a very long way. The hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will have read in the Speech from the Throne—or heard, if he does not like reading what we sometimes prepare—that we are setting up under statute to be presented during the present Session, the Ontario Research Council which will have as its broad function the co-ordination and stimulation of research in every field in this Province. I would remind him that this Research Council is the logical successor to the Royal Commission on Research which we appointed more than two years ago.

I know that the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) does not like these royal commissions. He does not like enquiries. He likes to move without finding out what the facts are. We have the rather simple, old-fashioned idea that it is wise to find out what the facts are in regard to extremely important matters of this kind in regard to which the ordinary layman can seldom be fully informed. Therefore because of the great importance of advancing research activity in this Province, we appointed a Royal Commission which not only received instructions to enquire into research problems and to make recommendations, but at the same time along with their enquiries to direct research and to increase research activities as those enquiries proceeded. During these past two years there have been greater advances in research in every field than at any time in the history of this Province.

We have many research agencies. One of them, and the most important, is that associated with the Government, the Ontario Research Foundation, an extremely efficient body not exceeded in its ability to perform public service in that field by any organization in Canada. It carries on many projects connected with industrial enquiries and other fields of research. In addition to that, there are research activities in the universities. There are research activities connected with certain of the departments of government, and there is also tremendous research activity conducted by many of the private enterprises of this Province.

We found that there was no effective co-ordination of those research activities. We found that there was duplication. We found that there were certain projects not being undertaken simply because of lack of co-ordination in that field, and we found that there was not sufficient emphasis being placed on research into the uses of farm products for industrial purposes. That was one of the very things in regard to which instructions were given two years ago to this Commission to advance research in that field. Largely as a result of some of these research activities, there are many new industries in this Province today, employing thousands of men and adding millions of dollars annually to the accumulating wealth of this Province and which are producing industrial products which are using the resources of agricultural production.

Let me come now to the question of housing. I do wish that the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) would read some of the things that we produce. In fact I think it is important that before he claims to quote the things we write or the things we say, he read what we said about housing prior to 1943 when, to the great advantage of this Province, the government of which he was a member was removed from office very decisively.

Prior to that time we did put into print, so that no one could be in any doubt, exactly what we intended to do. If he will on this occasion overcome his reluctance and read what we said he will find that we did not at any time promise to build houses, never. He will find that what we did say was that we would develop a housing programme which would advance the proper construction of houses in this Province under conditions that the people would find desirable—a very different thing.

Let me leave no doubt about this. The present Government does not believe that it is the function of governments to go into manufacturing or other business of that kind. This Government has never left any doubt about its belief that the people who can best produce industrial products and the people who can best build houses, or automobiles or other products, are the people who have been trained to build houses, or to make automobiles, or to do things of that kind. I want to leave no doubt about the fact that so long as this Government is in power—and I think that will be a very long time by any present indication—

SOME HON. MEMBERS. Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW:—we have no intention of going into the manufacturing or other similar business.

There are certain fields of public ownership, such as that of the development of electric power and other services of that kind, or development of railways such as the Ontario Northland Railway, which certainly are the proper functions of government and which in fact have received all their effective support and all their real advancement from Conservative governments in this Province from the very beginning.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: The only periods when they have suffered from inactivity have been during the negative periods of those governments which on the one hand do not believe in the future of this Province; and, on the other hand, are confused in their thoughts as to the real functions of government in relation to industrial and other activities.

In regard to housing I have no intention of enlarging on what this Act will do. That Act will be introduced, and will be discussed when it is introduced. I feel sure that the hon. members of this Legislature, no matter what their individual affiliations may be, will feel that the Act does afford the opportunity to advance the construction of houses in this province on a basis that will actually reduce their cost and produce houses of a type which our people want. That discussion will come with the Act, and not now.

I want to repeat again, however, that this Government did carry out its undertaking. It did not set up a housing commission, that is true. As I have said in this Legislature before, and I repeat it again in the hope that by hearing it, even if he will not read it, the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will understand what we have done, we created a new department of government embracing a very much wider field than that of housing. We created the Department of Planning and Development. That department has introduced legislation in this House which is on the statute books and under which effective planning and slum clearance and other procedure for proper housing development can be carried forward in accordance with the intention of what we really said prior to the 1943 elections.

I come to the next point. The hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has said that he wants us to remember about northern Ontario. I am glad he said that. I am glad he has discovered the north, because there was a time when the interest of the government of which he was a member was not so very great in northern Ontario, nor was their confidence so very great.

If I go back to the things that were done by a previous government I only do so because of the fact that the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) does not come to his present position as a newcomer to this Legislature. The hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has in time of service been here longer than any but a very few of the hon. members who sit here. He has had long sitting experience.

SOME HON MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: He also had some time as a member of a previous government, so for that reason it is a matter of interest to know what he did and to see the tremendous changes that have come in his thinking in these past few years. That at least is a great sign of hope that our educational programme is advancing, to some degree at least. It also is of importance to remember what the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) actually did when he had it in his power to do something and was not only talking in a broad speculative field. It is interesting to go back to what that government actually did when they were in office and when they had a chance to express their confidence in northern Ontario.

When we took office in 1943 they had given instructions to tear up the northern tracks of the Ontario Northland Railway as they did not see any hope of development in that upper section of the Northland Railway. I might tell you that that upper section is now "in the black"—making money—and also I might point out that in the broad development of events that upper section of the Ontario Northland Railway is one of the most important keys in the development of northern Ontario and is moreover, a military factor with very great potential possibilities.

They were going to tear up the tracks, because they could not see any business ahead of them. All that, Mr. Speaker, is merely an indication of the measure of confidence they felt.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): May I ask, Mr. Speaker, has the hon. the Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) any evidence to support that statement?

HON. MR. DREW: Oh, yes.

MR. NIXON: Well, I never heard it before in my life.

HON. MR. DREW: I feel quite sure that the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) is correct. The trouble is their government never met and they did things without discussing the things that the government actually decided upon. However, I can assure the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) that there are communications on record with the Ontario Northland Railway, written by the hon. a Premier who preceded him, in which instructions were given and one of the reasons it was not proceeded with is that they could not find out how to remove a steel bridge that was in the way. In the delay in finding out how to do it, fortunately a change had taken place and we stopped that and now have gone ahead in the development of northern Ontario.

MR. NIXON: It would be very interesting to see those documents.

HON. MR. DREW: I will be very happy to let my hon. friend (Mr. Nixon) see them. I must express my sympathy with him in the difficulty he must have encountered in not knowing what the government was doing at that time.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: We come now to another part of the speech made by the present Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). He speaks of the fact that we should do what we can to develop new communities in the great northland. I know the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has been through that north country. I do hope that while he was there he stopped at Marathon, at Heron Bay, at Terrace and Espanola and quite a number of other places that have shown the most challenging development in this past couple of years.

I want to say that I wish every young person in the Province of Ontario could see Terrace today. I wish that every young person in the province of Ontario could see Marathon; I wish they could see Heron Bay. I wish they could see Espanola; it was a "ghost" town while the government of which the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was a member did nothing to bring it out of its complete inactivity.

There are tremendous developments going on: It is one of the most thrilling periods in the expansion of the north. Only three years ago where Marathon now is, there was virgin forest, and today there is a large community, with churches, with a hospital unsurpassed in equipment anywhere in Ontario, with an excellent school, with a good hotel, with moving picture accommodation, with excellent stores and with fine houses which would be attractive to any workman in this country or elsewhere.

A hundred miles away in Terrace, is another beautiful community, only two years ago this past winter work started. At Terrace today, as many hon. members know, there are in that large community some of the most beautiful small houses to be seen anywhere in Canada, with all the facilities of a well-organized community life.

Heron Bay is another fine example of what is going on, and Espanola, which was one of the most unfortunate communities in this province, is today a thriving town, as is Sturgeon Falls, which is another place where the confidence brought to northern industries by the activities of this government has created the very expansion of which the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) speaks, and which he will see if he goes to those places.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: Next let me deal with opening out new tourist areas. I regret that while he was in the north, the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) did not see some of the things we have done. I wish, for instance, that he had travelled up the new road from Quebel to Red Lake, that new road driven through 125 miles of forest, where it was necessary to blast out great rock cuts and make huge fills, a road which goes through one of the most magnificent sport areas in the whole province. That road was driven through that distance in record time as a result of the leadership and energy of our hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett)—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: It is one of the finest roads in the province, and I think that the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Docker) will agree with me, because with that courtesy which he always displays, and that sincerity which he always expresses on occasions of that kind, he paid tribute to our achievements when that road was opened last September. I do wish that all the hon. members could see that road which has opened a sporting area second to none. It is a place where no fisherman needs to stretch the truth in any way, and that is the greatest test to which I can possibly put it. It is a fascinating thing to see how our friends from the United States find out about these places, because that road had just been opened when we were up there last September, and there were hundreds and hundreds of cars from the United States in there the occupants of which were already getting good fishing while it was still at the very top. I have never seen a more enthusiastic crowd than those who had already seen those hundreds of un-fished lakes which were opened up, not only for fishermen, but for holiday resorts, for people who can go there in their thousands in the years ahead. It also is a great hunting area. But the road was mainly built for the purpose of giving land communication for the first time with one of the greatest developing gold areas in this province. This government has demonstrated its faith in that area in a very practical way by spending $6,000,000 in the construction of that new highway through the forest.

There are also other highways right across the whole of that northland, opening up new tourist areas on a scale never before equalled in the history of Ontario. I really think the hon. leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) should toddle over to the office of the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) and after that to the office of the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) to find out where he can go—and then go there—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: —and just see exactly what is being done to really improve the tourist and recreation facilities in the north country.

I come now to the next very interesting point raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). He says that he thinks there should be old-age pensions at 65. In this case again may I urge him to overcome his reluctance to read what we have written, and to read the brief we presented to the Dominion-Provincial Conference in 1945. If he reads the brief he will find that three years ago this government went on record as supporting that very proposal, and urged the adoption of that practice by the joint Dominion-Provincial Conference.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: And, Mr. Speaker, may I say that the brief clearly said that this should be done without a means test.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear!

HON. MR. DREW: Now I will refer to the next point he makes: He tells us he thinks we should do more for the crippled children. We are always glad to have suggestions. We have done a great deal already. Just a short time ago we deeded over a piece of land on the outskirts of the city for a model training school for crippled children. That piece of land is valued at $150,000. We claim no special credit for that. It was done for the benefit of the people of Ontario, and we believe the people of Ontario will feel the land was well dedicated for that service. In this matter we co-operated with service clubs, and other public bodies as was suggested, so that we might have a model training school of that kind.

I now come to something in regard to which I confess quite frankly the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) gave me some news about which I had not heard when I came into the Legislature, and that relates to the part of his speech in which he read the latest effusion of the hon. Paul Martin. He quoted hon. Mr. Martin as saying:

"I am hopeful that a national health scheme for Canadians will be announced sooner than expected."

I hope it will. At the moment we have not much reason to anticipate it, from the speed the Dominion Government has been showing in meeting us to discuss this subject.

I was interested in, and in agreement with the statement of the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) that in a case of this kind it is not practicable for the provinces alone to deal with this subject. About that I think there is no disagreement. In fact, there has been no disagreement for some time, and I think there are very obvious reasons which should never be forgotten. After all, it would be most improper if at any time we ever in this country of ours placed barriers between the provinces. Everybody who is a Canadian, should be free to move from one part of Canada to another. Those people who, because of physical disability, old age, ill health, accident, or any other cause, are in need of assistance from the state, should not be limited nor anchored by any disguised or imposed limitations. The only way this can be avoided and the only way our people who are in need and in receipt of assistance of that kind can be completely free to join their loved ones wherever they may be, or live where they would most like to live, is for this to be put on a uniform basis across the whole of Canada under some effective, general plan approved by the Dominion Government and all the provincial governments. That was the basis upon which we put forward our recommendations in 1945, and it is the basis upon which we have continued to press for a renewal of the Dominion-Provincial Conference so that we might discuss these subjects, along with others.

I do hope that the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) in his reading of what others say—if not of what I may say—has read what the Dominion Government said about their proposals. I hope he has read something in addition to what has appeared in the Toronto Daily Star, because I feel he would wish to be more reliable than that. The fact is, if he has not already read it, I hope he will read in detail the full proposals of the Dominion Government in regard to health and social security measures, because if he does, he will find that there was something more than merely a proposal for health and social security measures, something which is not yet sufficiently understood.

This has been mentioned before but it would be best to mention it again, because if we ever do succeed in getting a conference with the present Dominion Government, this is one of the things which must be discussed. The proposal they made for financing their health and social security measures should be understood. May I emphasize this fact, Mr. Speaker, so that hon. members, if they have not already done so, will examine the record and find out just what did go with the Dominion proposals.

They never at any time suggested that they were prepared to assume these financial responsibilities, simply in return for the provinces signing on the dotted line of an agreement they put forward—never.

They explained quite clearly how these were to be financed. They were to be financed by two new systems of taxation. I hope ever hon. member of this Legislature will remember this, and I hope that every person in the province of Ontario will come to understand this, before we have another conference, because this government does not feel that these proposals would be acceptable to the people of Ontario.

This was how they were going to raise the money for these social security and health measures. They were going to put a new and added five per centum income tax on every person in this province, on every cent they earned, without exemption, no matter how small that income might be. May I repeat that, so there will be no misunderstanding. In addition to the present income tax, and without any exemption because of taxes now paid, and without any level as a starting point, every person was to be called upon, no matter how small or how large his or her income might be, to pay an additional income tax of five per cent. right across the board. That is the first, but that is only part of it.

The other tax was a completely new tax, and a tax which has been regarded throughout the whole history of taxation as the most unsound and inequitable form of taxation that ever existed. If these proposals were accepted, there was to be a poll tax imposed upon every man, woman and child of sixteen years and over. Do not have any illusions about this. I will repeat that again, because some of you obviously are showing surprise that this is so. But the record is there. There was, however, a very ingenious device. They knew it was unpopular, and, therefore, they were going to compel the provinces to levy that tax. That was right in their proposals. They were going to levy the five per cent. income tax, but the provinces were asked to agree to impose the poll tax on everyone, of sixteen years or over, whether they were earning anything or not.

Remember if those proposals had been accepted as they were, and as they still are—and I emphasize the words “as they still are”—then if any of you have a boy or girl of sixteen or over still going to school or for any reason still living with you and not earning their own money, you will be obliged to pay a poll tax for yourself, for your wife and for every one of those children. In 1945 that poll tax was estimated in the case of Ontario to be $12 per capita. That was an under-estimate, but that was the estimate in 1945 agreed upon, mark you, by the joint Dominion-Provincial economic committee as the figure which would have to be applied in the case of Ontario.

That would mean that a man who had a wife and two children of sixteen or over, still going to school—and there are many families who have more than that number of children—would pay $48 per year under this new poll tax, plus the five per cent. on whatever he was earning per year. Supposing he were a man earning $2,000 a year—and there are many who do—and he had two children sixteen years and over, and a wife; under those new taxes, in addition to any other taxes, he would pay for these social security and health measures $100 as a tax on his income, plus the $48 poll tax. He would therefore pay $148 as a completely new tax on top of all others, for these social security measures.

All I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), Mr. Speaker, and to every hon. member in this Legislature, is that before you recommend our acceptance of the proposals be quite sure that you think the people of Ontario want this new form of taxation, because the two go together. The Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. King) said when he presented these proposals that all must be taken as integral proposals, and that they could not be separated. I hope with that on the record, we will not again be left under the impression that the Ottawa government has cast itself in the role of another form of Santa Claus, because even with his ruddy and rotund appearance, I cannot quite picture the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. King) in that role. I think it would be well also for all hon. members to keep this before the public, because they should not be misled by statements such as appear in the press from time to time about the social security measures. May I also point out how clearly the statement by hon. Mr. Martin quoted today, indicates that there never was a time when this government or any other government was in a position to deal with their health or social security proposals, because they have never known themselves what those proposals really were. Apparently they are now going to come forward with another one.

We have made it quite clear that we want to discuss this subject. We have emphasized that over and over again, but in view of the fact that the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) has seen fit to raise this subject, I think it would be well to place on the records of this Legislature my last exchange of communications in this connection, written during the absence of the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. King) in England.

Many of the hon. members will recall that in the early part of November there were press announcements—and very well-informed press announcements, as it turned out—that a new department of government was to be formed which would have the duty of dealing with the resources of this province and of the whole country. As you know, that department has been set up. At that time I had only seen the speculative reports which turned out to be quite correct. Therefore, I wrote this letter on November 6th, 1947, to the Rt. Hon. L. S. St. Laurent, as Acting Prime Minister, and is as follows:

“Right Honourable L. S. St. Laurent,
P.C., K.C.,

“Acting Prime Minister of Canada, “House of Commons, “Ottawa, Ontario.

“Dear Mr. St. Laurent:

“My attention has been drawn to a number of reports in the press during the past week which indicate that a new department of the Dominion Government is to be set up to deal with the development of resources. On behalf of the Ontario Government I wish to place before you some of the implications of these reports. If they correctly interpret the intention of the Dominion Government, then it is quite clear that a department is to be set up for the express purpose of dealing with a number of subjects which are within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Provincial Governments.

“I need not remind you that the Ontario Government has urged, over and over again, that the conference which adjourned on the motion of the Dominion Government on May 3rd, 1946, should be reconvened for the purpose of a general discussion of inter-governmental relationships under our federal system, and for the purpose of establishing an effective functional mechanism which would provide an opportunity for continuing co-operation between the governments in regard to all matters of common concern. Without repeating my earlier comments upon the explanation given for the Dominion Government's failure to reconvene the conference I do wish to place before you reasons why I believe it is now of the utmost importance that representatives of all governments meet in conference without further delay."

Mr. Speaker, may I emphasize these words?

"While we have always regarded it as essential that there be a clear definition of responsibility in the fields of health and social service, most of the earlier proposals put forward by the Dominion and Provincial Governments could have been carried into effect without serious duplication of governmental services. In this case, however, it would appear that the Dominion Government is proposing to set up a department dealing with matters which are not merely under provincial jurisdiction, but are government activities which have been administered by provincial departments for a great many years and for which large, highly trained staffs of provincial civil servants have been brought together. For that reason, there would be a useless and costly duplication of governmental services unless the whole field is explored in advance and a simple mechanism devised for effective co-operation between the governments.

"To illustrate what I mean let me point out the situation in regard to only one department. My observations apply with equal force, however, to other departments affected. The press reports indicate the intention of the Dominion Government to enter the field of development of forest resources and the conservation of forest areas. Since Confederation, eighty years ago, and in fact for many years before that, the Ontario Government has had a highly skilled administrative and supervising staff dealing with this extremely important subject. The Dominion Government at no time has had any occasion to set up a similar civil service organization. Any attempt by the Dominion Government to enter this field without previously exploring the practical problems in-involved with the provincial departments concerned would invite confusion and conceivably prevent the practical possibility of effective co-operation afterwards."

May I, myself, emphasize this last paragraph?

"This situation serves to emphasize the urgent need for a meeting of representatives of all governments to devise an effective plan for continuing co-operation in dealing with these and other matters in regard to which the Dominion and Provincial Governments may find it desirable to take joint action. Having regard therefore, to the press reports I have mentioned, I urge you to arrange for a conference of representatives of all governments at Ottawa at the earliest possible date."

Mr. Speaker, in the face of that letter, we still constantly hear statements about the refusal of the Ontario Government to meet the Dominion Government. You see statements made by hon. Ministers of the Dominion Government to the effect that the hon. Ministers of the Ontario Government would not meet them. You see statements, of course, in certain inspired publications of an even stronger nature. That letter however represents the real position this Government has taken at all times since this subject came up. In fact, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) well remember, the members of our party who were in the House before we formed a Government, were very insistent upon the Dominion - Provincial Conference, to deal with all these very subjects.

To that letter of mine, of November 6th which I have just read, I received in reply the following letter, dated November 15th:

"My dear Premier,

"I received on November 12th your letter of November 6th—"

he must have been away for the weekend—

“—relating to press reports to the effect that the Federal Government is about to set up a department to deal with the development of resources and stating your view that such action, without prior exploration with provincial governments, would involve duplication and interference with matters which are under provincial jurisdiction.”

May I ask you to listen carefully to the next paragraph of Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent's letter:

“I have not yet had any opportunity of discussing it with my colleagues but I may say at once that any reports which may have appeared in the press along the lines indicated in your letter are without foundation.”

You will remember we now have a Department of Resources with the very powers to which I referred. I go on with Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent's letter:

“I need hardly add that the Government would not contemplate the establishment of any department, the functions of which would involve entry into the constitutional field properly occupied by the provinces without prior arrangement with Provincial governments.

“Of course I need not remind you that for many years the Federal Government has included a Department of Mines and Resources and that the Minister and officials of that department are fully aware of the extent and usefulness of the Provincial departments to which you refer. You will agree, I think, that the measure of co-operation between Federal and Provincial officials in this sphere which has obtained over the years has been mutually helpful and in the national interest.

“In the circumstances, I can only say that the reports to which you refer in your letter do not appear to me to afford any new reasons for calling a conference of representatives of provincial governments at this time. The Government's attitude on that subject has been stated to you on a number of occasions by the Prime Minister and I would not feel justified in asking my colleagues to change that attitude in his absence.”

Mr. Speaker, if anyone knows of any clearer way in which this Government can ask for a resumption of the Dominion-Provincial Conference to discuss health and social security measures, or if anyone knows of anything which this Government can do which it is not doing to express willingness to meet the Dominion Government, I would welcome that suggestion.

This does not however end there. Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent, as Acting Prime Minister, stated that those press reports did not indicate the situation. The fact is that everything indicated in that report has come true—everything, and much more. He said if there was going to be any invasion of the Provincial authority in this or any other field, they certainly would call a meeting to consult with the provinces. They have invaded the fields of Provincial authority. They passed an act under the supposed “emergency powers” which gave them authority over a wide range of Provincial jurisdiction. In other words, they have completely broken faith in the face of that assurance given on November 15th, 1947. I am not going too far when I say that one of the difficulties encountered by this Government is that it cannot rely upon any statements made by the Dominion Government, even in writing. Was there ever a clearer breach of faith than that letter by Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent and the subsequent events which have taken place? The reports were true, and they have done what he said they would not do, without consulting the provinces.

Mr. Speaker, may I say however that no matter who the individuals may be who make up the Dominion Government, we are dealing with the Government as a continuing institution. The members of that Government are merely individuals who, for the time being—and only for the time being—occupy particular offices. We will deal with them at any time as the occupants of those offices without any change in our position, because of what our personal opinions may be of their conduct, past or present.

This Government is the Government of this Province. Not too complimentary things have been said about myself and some of the hon. members of this Government by members of the Government in Ottawa. I am not going to pretend for a moment that I have not said, and said with a great deal of feeling, very uncomplimentary things about more than one member of that Government. I may assure you that I feel no compulsion to be less emphatic in the future. But these are governments, and in their official relationships the personal feelings of the members of those Governments, have nothing to do with the duty of these Governments to deal with each other as the official representatives of the people in their own fields from time to time.

There are different political parties forming Governments right across Canada. If any attempt were made to establish the proposition that governments could only deal with each other because they happen to share the same political views, never for many years to come would it be likely that we would have a successful Dominion-Provincial Conference, because with all my optimism I do believe that it may still be a few years yet before there will be a Conservative Government in every province. I do make that very mild reservation.

This is a duty between Governments, and I place on the record to indicate to you how empty any criticism is of the conduct of this Government in regard to the Dominion-Provincial Conference, and the willingness of the Government of Ontario to meet the representatives of the Dominion Government and the other governments at any time.

We come now to the great subject of Hydro-Electric Power. Well, Mr. Speaker, if there is one subject that I would have thought the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) would not have chosen as a basis for attack, I would have thought that subject would have been hydro-electric power. I can only repeat that since he seeks to make comparisons and describe past events, he openly invites,—and I accept that invitation,—an opportunity to review exactly what did take place and to subject the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and those associated with him to the test of the record in regard to what they did and what we did when we came in.

It is quite true that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of this province has not been able to meet the expanding demand for power in this province, and this is the direct and inevitable result of the negative policies followed by the Government of which the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was a member.

Let us throw off any pretense. I did not on an earlier occasion, when the present hon. Leader of the Opposition occupied that position then on the basis of an unconfirmed authority, see there was any occasion to go into the past; we were too busy thinking about the future; but since he is not a new-comer and since he asks the public to judge upon the record, then it is important that the public should know what the Leader of the Liberal Party and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) really did when he was a member of the Government, and what other members of that Government did when he was associated with them. Remember, he occupied two portfolios. I cannot remember anything he did under either one of them, but he did occupy the two positions and for that very reason the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) is not merely repeating inaccuracies which have been passed on to him by others, he is stating something which he should know from his own experience is not in accordance with the facts.

In what I say in regard to this subject, may I extend my remarks a little beyond what he has said, and refer to other statements so assiduously reported by his ardent supporter, The Toronto Daily Star? May I deal with some remarks made during the recent by-election, which had such very satisfactory results, about the very subject of Hydro-Electric Power in Ontario.

You have been told through those statements and those inspired articles, which are more than reports of statements, that the previous Government signed an agreement with the Government of Quebec in January, 1943, just as the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) stated today, and you have been told that under that agreement they were to proceed with the development of a power site on the Ottawa River. You have also been told, and the people of Ontario have been told, that the present Government stopped construction on these sites. Let me remove any strain on the hon. Leader of the Opposition and avoid the necessity of his getting up, by saying—

MR. OLIVER: I want to get up, it is no great trouble for me to get up. I think you might keep the level of your remarks just a little higher—

HON. MR. DREW: Don't be childish.

MR. OLIVER:—on some of these things. Why you need to make those insinuations, I do not know.

In respect to this matter which you just brought up, I never in my life said you stopped the construction on the upper Ottawa River—never.

HON. MR. DREW: I do wish the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) would listen to what I say. I will ask the hon. Leader of the Opposition to read tomorrow in Hansard what I said, and he will find what I said or was about to say.

I was not merely referring to his remarks but to statements which had been made outside and which were reported in that paper which is his assiduous supporter, and also in inspired articles appearing in that and other publications. It is to that I am referring. I clearly tied these remarks so that I would not under any circumstance leave the impression I was referring only to the rather vague statements he made today. When the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) rises with such indignation, then I say it is time he examined the facts and stopped making these reckless and inaccurate statements around the Province which are not in accordance with the facts on the record of this Legislature.

MR. OLIVER: What are those statements?

HON. MR. DREW: I will tell you one. You made a statement in the Huron by-election over and over again that the reason that we were short of power today was because we did not get on with the development that you had undertaken under those contracts that you approved in January, 1943.

MR. OLIVER: That is a contributing reason.

HON. MR. DREW: That is exactly what I will deal with and where I will start.

Let us just go back to what actually happened at that time. The Government, of which Mr. Oliver was a member, did sign an agreement in January, 1943, and that agreement was with the Government of the Province of Quebec, that is true. And that Government had majority of which he has spoken, not quite the majority we have, but a very good one. It did put through in this Legislature an Act approving that agreement. This is a rather important point. Nothing whatever was done from the day that agreement was signed until we took office on August 17th, 1943, to proceed with the construction under the terms of that agreement which he says was so important, and so urgent.

Now, you also have been told in public statements elsewhere, not here today—I am not confining this to statements of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver)—that work had been ordered on the Ottawa River and that diamond drilling had been done. I feel sure that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), in view of the publication which he just read, will have read the statement to which I have referred. That statement in regard to diamond drilling was put forward as evidence in support of the contention that construction was actually under way, construction which it is claimed this Government stopped. Certainly diamond drilling had been done at Des Joachims and at Chenaux and other places on the Ottawa River. Certainly, there had been survey parties in that area. That is only part of the work being done all the time in every part of the Province of Ontario by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

Very extensive diamond drilling has been underway for more than ten years along the St. Lawrence, so that the Commission may be ready at any time to deal with that situation when the opportunity develops. The plans which have been made are based upon that diamond drilling and no plans could be made for construction at Des Joachims, La Cave, Chenaux or any of the other sites on the Ottawa River without diamond drilling and a soil survey of that kind. That is being done everywhere and this proves absolutely nothing except that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission was doing the job that it is supposed to do, of always keeping ahead of possible developments throughout Ontario.

Now, no person who had any regard for accuracy and who knew the facts would make the assertion that diamond drilling of this type constituted any evidence whatever that construction was actually under way. Before any actual construction can be undertaken, there must be official authorization both by the Commission and by the Government, and the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) is fully aware of that fact.

May I emphasize this. There had been no authorization of this undertaking by either the Commission or the Government up to the date we took office on August 17th, 1943—none.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: You also have been told, not only in relation to the suggestion of construction before we took office, but in reference to the possibility of proceeding earlier than we did, that there were priorities which had already been obtained and which would have made it possible to proceed with the construction and to have the metal available for the manufacture of the required turbines, generators and so on. Again let me make it quite clear that I am not quoting the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in this case, I am quoting statements that were made very generously and generally during the Huron by-election and which found their way to the readers of the Province, and always with the statement that they were by "a Hydro official". I do not believe any one of them was, but I am not attributing that mis-statement to the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) but simply to the publication where it appeared. That is the way they do—no name ever appears so that it can never be found out who did this strange and fantastic lying.

Please let me say most definitely that this statement in regard to priorities is equally untrue. I do hope that when I recall what took place we will not have that story repeated. I wish that those who were members of the government at that time would refresh their memory as to what did take place.

On February 10th, 1943, the bill approving of the Ottawa River agreements was before this Legislature. Many of you who are here now will remember that in that quick succession of Premiers at that time, Mr. Conant was Premier at the moment. I was then the Leader of the Opposition. I was questioning the real purpose of this agreement and of the bill which had as its purpose the approval of the agreement. In fact I stated—and this is a matter of record—that I did not believe that the Government had any intention whatever of proceeding under that agreement, a statement which has been borne out by subsequent events. I challenged Mr. Conant to say to the Legislature that any priorities had been obtained which would permit the Government to proceed with this construction and these were Mr. Conant's exact words in reply:

"We have no definite commitments in writing on priorities."

To those who suggest that we had priorities under which we could have proceeded, may I repeat again the exact words of the hon. the Premier of the day:

"We have no definite commitments in writing on priorities."

And that was true. At a later stage in the same debate I said: "There is a great deal behind this that we do not see." There was—a very great deal. I still do not believe that the government had any intention at any time of proceeding under the agreement of January, 1943. I explained then, and I will repeat it on another occasion if it is necessary, what I thought was up. I did not think it had anything to do with the development of power in the Province of Ontario.

The best possible evidence of that is to be found in the fact that seven and a half months later the government had done nothing whatever to proceed with construction under the agreement on the power sites covered by those agreements.

That is only one limited part of the whole story. The policy of the preceding government for the whole nine years it was in office had been that Ontario was not going to need more power, not for long, long years to come, not in any measureable future, and they were not going to embark upon any programme which would enlarge the power supply needed here in Ontario. This is not my opinion. This is not any supposition of mine. This was what they said. The expression of this policy is to be found in many statements by the head of the government, by the Chairman of the Commission and by the hon. the Attorney-General of that day.

For example, on March 16, 1936, Mr. Stuart Lyon, the Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission at that time said in a public statement that there was no foundation whatever for the alarm expressed about the possibility of shortage of electrical energy. He said that they already had sufficient power for the next two decades. Now remember—that was 1936. That would carry us up to 1956. They said they had enough power then for the next two decades.

Then there was the statement of the then Premier of the Province in 1938 which summed up the position of that government very clearly in these few words:—I am quoting his exact words—"This province is simply not interested in the production of more power."

At an earlier date the hon. the Attorney-General who was also for a while a commissioner in that "non-political commission" which we have had pictured here that was set up by the government which preceded us—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: There was a speech here which was the record speech for all time by the then Attorney-General of the Province, hon. Mr. Roebuck, who said over and over again that never could this province use the power available to them under the contracts with Quebec, and that for that reason they must cancel those contracts, which in fact they did.

That, Mr. Speaker, is the clear evidence of the attitude of that Government in regard to the need for power up to the outbreak of war. Everything done by the Government of which the hon. member, now the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was a member, was consistent with that stated policy "we do not need more power". They did not believe that Ontario would grow and that industries would soon absorb what they then thought was a surplus. With the rapidly-increasing demands by industry for war purposes, efforts were made to get more power. Even then they did very, very little to increase generated power supplies in this province. They did increase some of the power available under contract, but they did very little to develop new generating plants. During the whole nine years they were in office, the total construction of new plants only reached 155,000 horsepower, and of that, one unit came into production after we took office, but I give them full credit for that, because actually the work was completed while they were in office.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): You had a very good time.

HON. MR. DREW: I had a wonderful time in opening that new power site, and seeing this single piece of evidence that the Government had reluctantly started to wake up. It was a rather unfortunate situation, because they had held back construction during all those years. The fact is that these very sites were developed under plans which had been made before that Government took office. Just compare that almost completely negative record, with what has happened since this Government took office, just four and one half years ago. Through the confidence which has been established in adjoining jurisdictions by the conduct of this Government, it has been possible to add nearly 900,000 horsepower to the electric supplies of this province, largely through new contracts which have been made. It has, moreover, been possible to proceed with construction which was made possible by the efforts of the Commission with the co-operation of this Government.

In addition to the power which I have mentioned, there is under construction in Ontario today, plant capacity which will bring into the system of Ontario new, generated power to the extent of 1,250,000 horsepower within a comparatively short time. Some of this has come in, some will come in later this year, some next year, and in the years following. Please remember that you cannot order a generating plant from the grocery store. They take years to build, and there is an enormous construction job, not only on the spot, but in factories which build the turbines, the generators, the dynamos, and all the intricate devices which are required to produce power.

All of this, as part of our present overall plan, will be before this Legislature for approval and for decision. There is not only this 1,250,000 horsepower, but an additional 1,000,000 horsepower and more which will bring the new generated power supply to this province, within the comparatively near future far in excess of 2,000,000 horsepower, as compared with what happened in those nine years previous. I am only too happy to have that comparison placed side by side with what this Government has done in half the time.

Of course, I hope it will be remembered that this Government did not stand still. This Government did not "do nothing" as has been said, in connection with the production of a new plant until 1946. This Government did a great deal in co-operation with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. During that time, and starting away back in 1943, construction was started at Stewartville, and on the last unit of the Decew plant, which was put into operation just a few months ago. That has brought in more new power, in these years that have just passed, even with all the limitations of war, than all the new generated power that was brought in during the whole nine years the other Government was in power. We will accept the test of comparison at any time.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, that comparison goes a little farther than just a comparison of those past events. It is a comparison between two points of view. It is a comparison between the point of view which led to the order to tear up the northern tracks of the Ontario Northland Railway. It is a comparison with the point of view which said "we do not need any more power in Ontario." It was a point of view which did not have any confidence or expectation for the future. It is the point of view expressed today by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) who indicated what he thinks may happen in the years ahead to the agricultural production in the Province of Ontario. I would like the public to know the difference between us in that respect: What we have done during these past years to obtain the information and to make the plans which can be put before this Legislature for the greatest hydro-electric power development this province has ever seen. This is merely an indication of the confidence of this Government and those who support it in the growth which is going to take place in Ontario in the years ahead.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: We have not "done nothing" as had been stated by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). We were aware of the situation, and we pressed forward as rapidly as we could to meet the situation which was created by the inaction of the previous Government.

Mr. Speaker, it will only be a few moments before the close of my remarks, and the adjournment of the debate. If the hon. members would prefer to wait just a few moments until I conclude, it will enable the next speaker to move the adjournment of the debate before we rise.

Mr. Speaker, may I recapitulate what actually took place in regard to the new developments. We gave orders to proceed at Stewartville, and on the second site at Decew in the latter part of 1943. In addition to that we were doing everything we could to prepare our plans for the Ottawa River, just as soon as it was possible to proceed with that development. One of the very first things that this Government did when it came into power was to reach a decision to proceed with the Ottawa developments as soon as possible. I communicated with hon. Mr. Godbout and met him in Quebec City on September 12, three weeks after we took office. I indicated the decision of the Ontario Government to proceed as quickly as possible, and asked him to do all he could to facilitate the preparation of plans, because no plans were ready upon which we could proceed. We wanted to get ahead, but it was only possible to get ahead, even with the plans, when we knew what could be done. It was a naked cupboard; there was nothing there at all upon which we could act beyond the general preparatory surveys made in every part of the province. They are available on the Manitoba boundary today, and were made wherever they could find power resources. That was all that was handed to us. We wanted to go ahead. We did not stop there. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) who, as Minister of Mines, has also been dealing very largely with resources, saw Mr. Godbout again in December, 1943, on this same subject, urging immediate action, which we had not obtained as a result of our first visit. But we got no results. Then the Government changed in Quebec. It was not then a case of waiting until 1945 or 1946 as has been suggested. The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) met the hon. Premier of Quebec (Mr. Duplessis) in Quebec, in October, 1944, and placed these proposals before him. A general understanding was reached at that time that as soon as it was possible to proceed, we would go ahead with the development on the basis of joint development.

Subsequent discussions took place in Quebec on this particular subject, and they were followed in 1945 by discussions in which I took part. These, in turn, were followed by letters confirming the verbal arrangements that had been made. In the meantime, as a result of those verbal arrangements, instructions had been given for all the physical surveys to be made, for plans to be drawn up, so that the moment it appeared possible to get any metal for construction, we could immediately proceed under the new agreement with Quebec, under the plans we had made.

The reason for this completely fabricated story about an "earlier authority from the controller in Ottawa to proceed", is because they knew that there were these limitations, and they were trying to give some appearance of failure on our part to proceed as quickly as we could.

We proceeded as quickly as we could. Not one thing could have been done to advance the construction any more rapidly than it has been done, because of the shortage of supplies and manpower.

I have seen statements which have been repeatedly broadcast throughout the press of this province that generators had been ordered prior to the time we came into office. There is not an atom of truth in that, not an atom of truth. No order for generators had been placed.

Mr. Speaker, may I to keep the record clear deal with another statement, which has been made, in this case by a very high official of the party to which the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) belongs—I am sure he will know to whom I refer—that an order had been placed for 60-cycle generators to be placed in the upper Ottawa, and, therefore, we had committed ourselves to the frequency change-over plan before the public knew about it. The fact is there is not an atom of truth in that, either. Apparently what this particular gentleman, although he poses as an expert, does not know is that the metal construction for generators is precisely the same whether it is 25 or 60-cycle, and that all we did was to proceed with the construction of the metal portion, leaving the winding until a decision was reached upon that point. Construction of these generators was not being held up because this decision had not been reached. One of the reasons we want to reach a decision so quickly on this matter is because of the fact that the first of these generators will be finished within a few weeks, and we want the factory to be able to proceed with the winding the moment the metal work has been done. That is the situation, and there is no deviation from it in any way.

Mr. Speaker, before I close, may I refer to the rather impassioned concern expressed by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) about what he regarded as the political complexion of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. Has he forgotten the politics of Mr. Lyon? Has he forgotten the politics of Mr. McQuesten? Has he forgotten the politics of Mr. Roebuck, of Mr. Houck, of Mr. Smith, or of Dr. Hogg? I really think he must be getting very forgetful. As Leader of the Opposition I did not raise any complaint on that ground alone. I might have raised some complaint about members of this Commission on the basis of their incapacity to do the job, but I did not raise any objection on the ground that they were Liberals. The fact is that, as far as I am aware, the three members of the present Commission, if they have expressed any political convictions, have been members of the Conservative party. But the present chairman, the former mayor of the City of Toronto, was so highly regarded by the municipalities of this province, with whom the Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be doing business, as to be appointed president of the Ontario Mayors and Reeves Association last year, and by many men and women who are not members of the Conservative party. In fact, he was still actively engaged as president of the Ontario Mayors and Reeves Association at the time he was appointed.

May I also remind the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that another member of the Commission, who was not a member of the Government, Mr. Strike, was president of the Hydro-Electric Municipalities Association at the time he was appointed. I do not make any excuse for the fact that he is a Conservative. He is simply an example of the type of people who are members of the Conservative party.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: As a matter of fact, the Dominion Government found a great deal of difficulty in finding people to do the wartime jobs at Ottawa who were not Conservatives. Just go over the records. They showed good judgment. In that respect I think the Dominion Government used the best judgment they have ever exercised. Mr. Strike, after all, had been chosen by the members of the Hydro-Electric Municipalities Association, and by many people who were not members of the party to which he belonged. As far as the member from the government on that Commission is concerned I would remind the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that for a very long time the Act has provided that one of the Commissioners shall be a member of the government. The millenium has not arrived, and it simply did not occur to me that it was necessary to appoint a member who was not affiliated with the Conservative party, so there is no political significance in the fact that a man was appointed from the government who has had a long experience in hydro-electric matters. I do not think on that score we are open to any criticism at all.

I will not extend the discussion tonight on the details of the developments under the new plan. These details will be discussed separately and in considerable detail. I will assure the hon. members that they will be furnished with detailed information, which I hope will be delivered to them by tomorrow. Of course, I do not expect that we will deal with it for some time, because it will be an advantage to the hon. members to have an opportunity to study this information. Very considerable detail of what is proposed will be placed before the hon. members so that everyone will be able to form their own opinions, with adequate knowledge before they say what shall be done or shall not be done in dealing with this very important matter.

If I have found occasion to be critical this afternoon, I can only say with the utmost sincerity that I have done so only because I felt that criticism was necessary in relation to the remarks which were made. The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and I, in our ordinary contacts, have not found it too difficult to find agreement on many things, and I was happy to find that he was coming to agree with us on so many, as evidenced by his speech here today. If sufficient time is allowed, a lot of arguments work out in their own way. I realize that it was his duty, as Leader of the Opposition, to express some critical comments, and I can only say that the most convincing demonstration of the success of the efforts by this Government and those who support it is the complete absence of any effective criticism in the remarks of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) this afternoon.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): It took you a long time to answer them.

HON. MR. DREW: The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has not yet been able fully to discern the difference between concern about an opponent's argument and using the points he raises as appropriate pegs in which to hang one's own arguments.

I thought it was necessary to correct a number of mis-statements which have been made throughout the province by some who have been associated with him, and by certain newspapers which support him. I do not believe that the opinion of anyone would have been changed from anything he has said here this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker, in summing up these remarks, may I say that we have a motion before us which is a customary practice of the opposition, expressing disapproval of the Government. That motion may be regarded as a want-of-confidence motion. When we vote on that motion I would suggest that those who vote keep in mind the distinction between the Government of today and those who support it, and the Government we succeeded and those who supported it, many of whom are still in this Legislature. It is the difference between those who believe in the future of this province and those who have grave doubts that we will grow and expand. I would not want a vote supporting our Government unless it was given with the knowledge this Government will always act in the belief that we have one of the most favoured areas in the whole world, and that we are only at the beginning of our greatest period of development and growth.

SEVERAL HON. MEMBERS:
Hear, hear!

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane

South): Mr. Speaker, I now move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion approved.

The House adjourned at 6.18 p.m.

Introduction of bills.

PUBLIC SERVICE ACT, 1947

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary) : Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to move, seconded by Mr. Welsh, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Public Service Act, 1947, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

TOURIST CAMP REGULATION ACT

HON. G. A. WELSH (Minister of Travel and Publicity) : Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Goodfellow, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Tourist Camp Regulation Act.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MENTAL HOSPITALS ACT

HON. R. T. KELLEY (Minister of Health) : Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Griesinger, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Mental Hospitals Act, and same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

INDUSTRIAL STANDARDS ACT, 1947

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour) : Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Blackwell, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Industrial Standards Act, 1947, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DALEY : Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the fact that it is somewhat unusual to make a statement concerning a bill on its introduction, but I feel that this proposed amendment is of some considerable importance, and I would like, therefore, to make what might be considered a clarifying statement in regard to this proposed legislation.

I do not think that any single problem which has arisen, during the time that I have been Minister of Labour, has caused me more concern than the effects of the application of the Industrial Standards Act to the retail gasoline outlets, particularly as it applies to closing hours. As I believe the members of the Legislature are well aware, I have spent a great deal of time meeting representatives of this great public service, and also representatives of other bodies who are interested in the results of the application of this Act on the general public.

It seems quite clear that, when the Industrial Standards Act was originally passed by the Ontario Legislature, it did not contemplate such industries as the retail gasoline service industry. Nevertheless, judicial decisions did have the effect of extending its application so that there could be no doubt that it was possible for this industry to bring itself within the terms of the Industrial Standards Act as the law then stood. That being so, when applications were made for conferences to be called in certain zones, I complied with those requests and codes were established in different areas throughout Ontario.

It must be remembered that when the Industrial Standards Act was originally passed we had no law in this province limiting the weekly hours of work, nor were there laws assuring the right of collective bargaining such as we have today. The fact that these laws now do exist should be kept in mind when we consider the effect of any variation in the application of the Industrial Standards Act in this particular case.

I was most anxious to do what I could to bring to an end the very serious abuses in this industry. The industry was at a low ebb. Long hours with poor pay were the rule rather than the exception. I welcomed the opportunity to do something which would remedy this situation. Undoubtedly, the establishment of codes in some areas had the effect not only of improving conditions in those areas but of bringing about a general improvement throughout Ontario in this industry. I feel a very real measure of satisfaction that I have been able to do something to improve the working conditions in that industry in this way.

On the other hand, certain difficulties arose in regard to the effect of these codes which it is impossible to ignore. Many objections have been directed to the provisions of the code which closed service stations at certain hours, particularly in the summer months. I am satisfied that there was a great deal of misunderstanding as to the real extent of the application of these codes, but whether there was misunderstanding or not there is no escaping the fact that criticism, undoubtedly sincere, had been directed against the application of these codes in that respect.

Although we now have a statutory limitation of the number of hours a man may be called upon to work, and have assured effective collective bargaining, I would not wish to see the desirable features of the codes established under this Act disappear insofar as they affect other matters than the hours of closing.

In considering this situation, the Government could not disregard the fact that traditionally for many long years municipal authorities have had control over the hours of closing in any type of public service of this kind. Undoubtedly there are good reasons for this traditional practice. The local authorities are receptive to impressions as to the local needs in a way that a central government must always find it very difficult to reach. In any event, we had on the one hand the situation that closing hours for public services of this kind are generally regarded as being within municipal jurisdiction, and we had the fact that under the Industrial Standards Act the codes provided for closing under the provisions of that Act.

After very careful consideration, the Government has come to the conclusion that, having regard to the nature of this business, and the very wide public service it performs, it is desirable that the municipal authorities should decide whether there are to be closing hours for gasoline service stations, and if so at what time and in what area that will be done.

What I would like to have clearly understood is that the Act which I have introduced makes it possible for precisely the same type of zone to be established by municipal by-law as could have been established under the Industrial Standards Act.

One of the difficulties which presented itself was the possibility that a municipality, particularly a municipality adjoining a larger municipality, might not wish to close the service stations throughout the whole municipal area. For that reason provision is made that a by-law establishing closing hours for gasoline service stations may apply to any part of the municipality designated in the by-law.

Just to illustrate the result of this, I would explain that insofar as Toronto and the adjoining areas are concerned, precisely the same result might be achieved by municipal action as could be achieved by code. The City of Toronto might pass a by-law establishing a certain closing hour for the whole area. The adjoining municipalities might pass by-laws relating only to those parts of the municipalities as immediately adjoining the City of Toronto and over such areas as they deemed advisable for carrying out the purposes of the by-law.

It will be seen that the effect of this Act is deferred until the 30th day of April. The codes now in force will remain operative until that time. This will give those interested in this particular service plenty of opportunity to make their representations to the municipal authorities for appropriate by-laws to deal with this situation. In that way there need be no break in the continuity of any provisions which the municipal authorities will adopt.

I believe that this is a satisfactory solution of a very difficult situation which has resulted from a legal interpretation of the Industrial Standards Act which I feel sure went beyond the original intention of the Act. Nevertheless, I have made it clear that I would not wish those engaged in this industry to lose any of the advantages in the improvement of their working conditions which have resulted from the codes which they obtained. If the municipalities deal with this, to the best of their judgment, with due regard to the local situation, I feel sure that all the advantages which have been gained can be carried forward. I would also like to emphasize the fact that we now have laws which limit the hours of work and afford rights to workers in this and every other industry which did not exist at the time the Industrial Standards Act was originally passed.

I would like also to make it very clear that this amendment relates only to the retail gasoline service industry, because of the special circumstances I have mentioned and in no way affect the codes established in the many other industries which have worked very satisfactorily under that Act.

TEACHING PROFESSIONS ACT

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, moved by myself, seconded by Mr. Kennedy, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled an Act to amend the Teaching Professions Act, 1944, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

MR. T. K. CREIGHTON (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, with your indulgence and the indulgence of the House, I would like to make a brief reference to a matter which I feel has the general interest of the House.

A few days ago the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) was kind enough to invite hon. members of this House to go to Brampton to visit the Junior Reformatory there. Yesterday about 25 hon. members of this House from all parties were his guests, accepting that invitation. We were furnished with transportation. We spent a couple of hours at the reformatory. We were given a very fine opportunity of visiting class-rooms and workshops of that institution, meeting the boys there in their class-rooms, in their dormitories, and at their meal. We ended up by having a very good meal in there ourselves, with the same menu exactly as the boys were served for their mid-day meal.

I know that every one who took part in that trip was very much impressed with what he saw there. My purpose in speaking is to do two things: in the first place, to extend to the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) the thanks of the group who were his guests there, and to his officers and staff, the superintendent of the institution, Major Virgin, who accompanied us, and the staff at the reformatory.

In the second place, I would like—and I am sure every one who was there will join me in this—to congratulate the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) on the very fine programme of education and reform that is being carried out there. We realize that this is a new institution and that a certain amount of experimenting and pioneering is being done, but we feel that new standards and patterns are possibly being laid there which may well be adopted for this type of work in Canada and in fact everywhere.

I am sure those who were with me there would like to join in complimenting the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) on the work that is being done there, and thank him for this opportunity, which I think is one which might well be extended to other institutions of the same kind.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair, and that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion approved.

House in committee; Mr. Reynolds in the chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 24th Order.

COMPANIES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 24th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 35, An Act to amend the Companies Act. Mr. Michener.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2:

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa, East): Mr. Chairman, in connection with the amendment to sub-section 2 of Section 17 of this Act for the purpose of converting a public company into a private company, the proposed amendment as I see it is that a company of a public nature shall not be converted into a private company unless with the assent of all the shareholders.

In this respect I think that the effect of that amendment will be to render it practically impossible to convert a public company into a private company, as the hon. members of this House will notice, the various by-laws which may be passed under Section 17 require only to be confirmed by two-thirds of the shareholders present at the meeting, and under Section 64 of the Companies Act if a compromise or arrangement is entered into between the shareholders and the company, it has to be confirmed by three-fourths of the shareholders before the same may be approved by the judge.

There are many companies in which it is impossible to locate all the shareholders. A company by-law usually provides for a meeting of shareholders and that a notice should be forwarded to the shareholders at their last known address. If a shareholder cannot be located, the effect of the amendment would be to make it impossible for a public company to be converted into a private company.

I would suggest that the farthest we should go on this amendment would be to provide that the application for supplementary letters patent shall not be made until it has been confirmed by a vote of the shareholders present at a meeting for that purpose. This would allow any shareholder who wished to object to the procedure to voice his protest at the meeting and to vote against the proposed change, but it would not allow the blocking of such conversion by shareholders who are not interested, who are indifferent, or who cannot be located.

For the foregoing reasons, Mr. Chairman, I wish to voice strong objection to that section. I have not brought any amendment in substitution therefor, because I believe that once the proposed amendment is accepted by the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) it would be useless to bring forward an amendment to be voted against; therefore, I wish only to make these representations.

HON. MR. MICHENER: Mr. Chairman, perhaps this matter would be more clear if I explained the difference between a public and private company so that hon. members will understand the reason for the requirement that all of the members of a public company should be required to consent before the company is converted into a private company.

A private company is limited in membership to 50 members so that any company which is down to 50 members is not going to face a great problem in finding those 50 and getting their consent, and if it is not down to 50 members, it will not be qualified, as a matter of law, for conversion to a private company.

In the second place, a private company is entitled to restrict the transfer of its shares, and that is a very serious restriction on the ownership of shares. Any man who buys shares in a public company, knowing that he can transfer them, would feel aggrieved if he found that his company had been converted into a private company without his knowledge or without his consent, and he found himself then in a position where he could not transfer his shares. Thus it seems to be a condition or change which really should be made by the consent of all those concerned. It is sometimes asked for; it is not a very common occurrence in the administration of the Act, but occasionally the principal shareholders in a public company find that they have so reduced the outstanding shares by purchase that it really is a private company and is functioning as a private company, and, therefore, apply to make this change.

Mr. Chairman, I feel that the requirement as drafted is a proper one and I would not like to consent to the change.

Sections 2 to 6 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 35 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 25th Order.

COMPANIES INFORMATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 25th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 36, An Act to amend the Companies Information Act. Mr. Michener.

On Section 1:

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Michener) if the powers he seeks in this bill to amend the Companies Information Act by order-in-Council are so necessary that we should give that power? Could the form of which he speaks not be developed and then the Companies Information Act amended in the ordinary way at a session of the Legislature? There cannot surely be such a matter of urgency involved as to make it necessary to give you the power to amend it by order-in-council. I would like to hear the hon. Minister (Mr. Michener) on that point.

HON. MR. MICHENER: Mr. Chairman, the contents of any of these questions which companies are asked to answer are almost altogether stereotyped in form. There is no great scope for the exercise of discretion in what should be asked and what information should be supplied in the annual return that a company files, so that what is being delegated here is not of any great importance in that it does not permit any change in principle but simply a change in wording, a change in the method of verification of the return or matters of that kind, which are now different as between the provinces, or among the requirements of the different provinces. With this authority it will be possible to agree in the course of the year on a form and have it in effect.

As my hon. friend says, the matter is not of such urgency that it cannot be left until the next Session. I agree that is so, but as the powers which are delegated are not of great consequence, it would be a convenience if the committee of this Legislature would endorse this provision as a means of facilitating working out a uniform return, during the course of the year.

I might point out, Mr. Chairman, that, at the present time, there is another form of return under the Companies' Act known as a "prospectus" which is settled in the way that is proposed here. The actual details of the prospectus are not set out in the Statute, but are left to be prescribed by regulation. This Act, which is a very old Act, does set out the exact requirements of the return. All that is asked here is that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may vary the return in the course of the year.

Sections one and two approved.

Bill No. 36 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 26th Order.

THE REGULATIONS ACT, 1944

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 26th Order; House in Committee on Bill No. 45, An Act to amend the Regulations Act, 1944, Mr. Blackwell.

On section one.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, at the end of section 1 (e), with a small "3" I would like to move another inclusion, with a small "4," the words of which are as follows:

"A schedule of classifications for civil servants including their qualifications, duties and salaries prescribed in the Public Service Act, 1947."

The effect of that proposed amendment is simply to avoid the necessity of publishing the classifications and other regulations mentioned there, in the Regulations Act. They are of great volume, and technically they might be described as being "legislative" in character. It seems to me that they are not matters which concern the rights of the public of the province, and the proposal is simply to avoid the necessity of registering under the Regulations Act.

Section one (as amended), two, and three approved.

Bill No. 45 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 27th Order.

THE CORONERS ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 27th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 48, An Act to amend the Coroners Act, Mr. Blackwell.

Sections one to ten approved.

On Section 11.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the opposition): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) if there is any change in Section 11. Does the provision exist today, that Provincial Police can be delegated to act as coroners, or is that as it stood?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: This is the amended form.

MR. OLIVER: How is it amended from the original?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Let the question stand, I will refer to the statutes, and check it, and give you that information.

MR. OLIVER: Very well.

Sections 12 to 25 approved.

On Section 26.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell) if he considers that a majority verdict of a jury of five is a good amendment in this section? Previously, juries consisted of a much greater number of men. Some years ago an amendment was passed reducing the number on a jury to five, and at that time the verdict had to be rendered unanimously by all five members of the jury. This section provides that a majority may render the verdict, and I was wondering if that is a good amendment at this time.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is sub-section 1?

MR. GRUMMETT: I might say, Mr. Chairman, I had another copy of the bill which I marked and left in the office. I did not mark this one. I cannot see the reference here. Section 30 is the one to which I should have referred.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I will say to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) that the section of the old Act was section 22.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, I should have referred to section 30. I had marked another copy.

Sections 26 to 29 inclusive approved.

On section 30.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, this is the section to which I should have referred. Perhaps the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) would give an answer to that question.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, the provision in question is not new. The corresponding section of the existing Act is section 22, and in sub-section 2, it provides "an inquisition may be found by a majority of the jurors sworn."

The fact is that we have no departmental experience which would lead us to depart from accepting the result by a majority, and does not necessitate that it be unanimous. As a matter of fact, the departmental opinion is quite to the contrary, that it would make it impossible for a coroner's jury to function in many instances.

Section 30 to 41 inclusive approved.

On Section 42.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) under what circumstances a coroner could assess a fine, as mentioned in section 42.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, the assessment of a fine would be for failure to appear on a summons, or otherwise comply with what the coroner is entitled to require.

Sections 42 to 46; schedules A, B and C approved.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to clear up any question raised by any hon. member as we go along. The hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) was good enough to waive the question he asked in order to enable the bill to go forward, I now have the information he requested.

There is no change in substance in the section; it is merely to widen the application of the provisions.

Bill No. 48 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move that you rise and report three bills without amendment, and one bill with amendment.

Motion approved.

The House resumes; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the whole House reports three bills passed without amendment, and one bill with amendment, and moves the report be adopted.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 28th Order.

REAL ESTATE AND BUSINESS BROKERS ACT, 1946

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 28th Order; second reading of Bill No. 60, An Act to amend the Real Estate and Business Brokers Act, 1946, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 60, An Act to amend the Real Estate and Business Brokers Act, 1946. In view of the fact that the amendment to the Act is self-explanatory, I will refrain from making any statement about it, unless any hon. member desires it.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I have not had a chance to read the bill. I think it was placed on our desks only today. In view of the unhappy experience we have had in approving legislation on real estate sales, which made many of us look rather foolish in the eyes of the public, I think it would be proper to have some explanation. I think other hon. members are in the same position as I am. The bill was placed before us, and no one has had a chance to properly read it. It is not an important amendment, but a few words of explanation at this time would be welcome.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, of course I will do anything that the House asks me to do, but in view of the fact that the amendment is only eight lines long, the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) could have read it faster than he made his speech about it.

However, in view of the fact that the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has asked for an explanation, I will repeat the explanation I made at the introduction of the bill.

This applies to the sales of real estate and is now extending the section to make the very same principle applicable to commissions on renting real estate, as well as selling it. I think that will probably be understandable by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg).

MR. SALSBERG: I quite understand it, and I hope we will have no unhappy experience with it, as we did with another Act dealing with real estate sales.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 29th Order.

THE PUBLIC HOSPITALS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 29th Order, second reading of Bill No. 61, An Act to amend the Public Hospitals Act, Mr. Kelley.

HON. RUSSELL T. KELLEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 61, "An Act to amend The Public Hospitals Act."

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: I would like to ask the hon. minister (Mr. Kelley) whether this bill will prevent a municipality from agreeing to pay a higher amount in order to give a better funeral; as one of the members who served on a municipal council before, I recall this problem arising before us on more than one occasion where the Association of Undertakers and other organizations brought before us proposals which called for greater expenditure in such instances.

This amendment would limit the maximum amount payable to $40.00. I would like some assurance from the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) that this will not prevent a municipal government from providing the kind of service that they are inclined to grant.

Now that the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) has been advised by two of the Treasury Benchers, I am sure the explanation will be fully satisfactory and complete.

HON. MR. KELLEY: Mr. Speaker, all I can say is it has been $30.00 in our Department and $40.00 in two of the other departments, and it has been brought to a uniform figure across the board with the three departments. If any other person, a friend or lodge, wants to give more, over and above what council give, I am sure that is quite in order, but the municipalities will be required to pay $40.00.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Does the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) feel that the rate he has set would be satisfactory to McDougall and Brown? I think they fix the cost of their funerals at $100.00 and up, according to the advertisements in the street cars.

MR. SALSBERG: I am very serious about this matter. I do not think the explanation is satisfactory to the House and we should ask for a referral of the bill or agree to amend it. In all seriousness, the hon. members will understand there are municipalities where burial costs are rather high, relatively speaking, and indigents have in the past received a kind of funeral that was not satisfactory to the families involved and neighbours and the municipality.

I recall dealing with this question on the Welfare Committee in the Toronto government and we agreed at that time to increase the cost. I do not think we should tie the hands of a municipal government to a maximum figure of $40.00; if a given municipality wants to provide a larger amount, they should be permitted to do so.

HON. MR. KELLEY: A municipality can pay more. Might I ask the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) how far he would like us to go?

MR. SALSBERG: I would merely remove the maximum that you place on a municipality. Let the municipality decide that in accordance with prevailing costs.

HON. MR. KELLEY: This is not a maximum, this is a minimum, they must pay $40.00. If they want to pay more, it is up to them.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Surely that is not right.

HON. MR. KELLEY: They must pay $40.00. I cannot see there would be anything wrong if they wanted to pay more.

MR. OLIVER: I do not think they should have to pay $40.00; if they could "get away" with $35.00, they would "get away" with it. The Act says it must not exceed $40.00. You have just said the municipality, if they so desire, could pay beyond $40.00. Surely that is not the case when the bill specifically says the maximum is $40.00.

HON. MR. KELLEY: If any municipality wants to pay more, I cannot see there would be any trouble. It is true, the bill says \$40.00 is the amount they should pay. One explanation we could give is this; we have been asked for an increase and it is an increase of $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent., which we thought was sufficient at this time.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 30th Order.

SANATORIA FOR CONSUMPTIVES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 30th Order, second reading of Bill No. 62, "An Act to amend The Sanatoria for Consumptives Act, 1947."

HON. RUSSELL T. KELLEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 62, An Act to amend the Sanatoria for Consumptives Act, 1947.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I rise to raise the same objection that I raised on the previous bill and on the same grounds, and I do not think it is necessary to repeat the argument.

I do hope that the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) and the Government will see fit to amend the bills when they come before the House in committee stage so as not to place a maximum figure on a municipality.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): The hon. members of the Government have said it is quite possible for a municipality to increase the payment I would like to remind the House—

MR. SPEAKER: That motion carried.

MR. GRUMMETT: I do not think so.

MR. SPEAKER: You are speaking to the previous motion?

MR. GRUMMETT: I am speaking to this bill, Mr. Speaker.

Statements have been made that a municipality could increase the payment. Now, a municipality's books are audited and should a municipality increase this payment they would be severely checked by the auditors and they would be told they are exceeding their powers, and if they do, they are answerable to the electors of the municipality. Therefore, the municipality would say, "We have no power to increase the amount that can be paid for indigent funerals."

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 32nd Order.

ENFORCEMENT OF MAINTENANCE ORDERS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 32nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 64, An Act to facilitate the Enforcement of Maintenance Orders.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I wish to move second reading of Bill No. 64, An Act to facilitate the Enforcement of Maintenance Orders. I feel that in relation to this bill which is of some importance, I should give an indication to the House what it accomplishes.

This is part of a uniform legislative project. The bill is a bill of the United Kingdom which has already been adopted in the four western provinces of Canada and is now introduced for consideration in this Legislature.

This bill goes a trifle further than the other bills, and I will explain, in the first instance, what the other bills do. They provide that in any jurisdiction where the bill is adopted there will be reciprocal enforcement of orders made by the courts of the other jurisdictions who have the same type of bill. That simply means this, that if a maintenance order is made in Britain or in one of the western provinces of Canada against a husband who deserts his wife and family, or either, a copy of the order, with the evidence upon which it was granted, together with an indication of any possible defence to the application are forwarded to the equivalent court in this jurisdiction.

Then, the person against whom the order is directed who has deserted his wife and children, or either, has an opportunity of raising those defenses that were indicated would have been open to him if he had been in the original jurisdiction. Under those circumstances, the order subject to that procedure is then made an order of this jurisdiction.

The respect in which this bill goes a trifle further than other bills is that this one contemplates other states other than Britain and other members of the Commonwealth and it might very well extend that to the states of the United States of America to have reciprocal legislation.

Possibly, Mr. Speaker, if I may ask the indulgence of the House—I know this is out of order—I am sure the hon. members will permit me to say, while I am on my feet, we have a companion bill to this that deals with that very subject matter within the Province of Ontario. This companion bill gives a complete picture, if I might say something about it.

Under the companion bill an order of this nature made in one locality can go to another locality in the Province of Ontario, so a husband who has deserted his wife and child within the province can be followed from court to court and collections made. It is therefore with some satisfaction I move second reading of Bill No. 64, An Act to facilitate the enforcement of Maintenance Orders, which I submit is very timely legislation.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 33rd Order.

DESERTED WIVES' AND CHILDREN'S MAINTENANCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 33rd Order, second reading of Bill No. 65, An Act to amend The Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 65, An Act to amend the Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act. That is the companion measure I mentioned in making my remarks about Bill No. 64.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): As I understand the nature of these bills, it is that litigation will be divided into parts. The applicant may make application in one section of the province and obtain a prima facie order, and then this is transferred to another section of the province where the affected party may offer a defence. In case there would be conflicting evidence, so that the presiding magistrate or judge would be unable, on the evidence, to render a proper decision, would the case be closed or would it be remanded for further evidence?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest to the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) that on second reading what we are concerned about is the principle of the bill and I feel those are questions which, if the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) wishes to raise them, might be much better dealt with in committee.

MR. CHARTRAND: I won't press it. I was just asking the question.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I would like to ask a question respecting the principle of the bill. Will this legislation help us in cases where the husbands are in other provinces? The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) explained as far as the previous bill, which I think is a very good one, but on this one there is no explanation. We often have this problem of husbands moving out of the province. The difficulty is to get them. Will this in any way help us or is there corresponding legislation in other provinces?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The question asked by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) in relation to Bill 65 leaves me with a sense of frustration in relation to the explanation I made on Bill 64. However, for his information, in view of the fact that he has asked for it, I will refer to Bill 64 and what I said about it. I explained where a person left the province we have reciprocal provisions for enforcement, and Bill 64 provides mechanism whereby the Order would be sent to the proper court in the province to which the person had gone.

MR. SALSBERG: I hate to cause a feeling of frustration to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). I asked this question because in the explanatory notes of Bill 65 that matter was not referred to. It was referred to in the previous bill, and now, after this explanation, there is no danger that a feeling of frustration will exist.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You mean you understand the answer?

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 34th order.

THE JUDICATURE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 34th Order; second reading of Bill No. 66, An Act to Amend The Judicature Act, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 66, An Act to amend The Judicature Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW: 35th Order.

GENERAL SESSIONS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 35th Order; second reading of Bill No. 67, An Act to amend the General Sessions Act, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 67, An Act to amend the General Sessions Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW: 36th Order.

THE COUNTY COURTS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 36th Order; second reading of Bill No. 68, An Act to amend The County Courts Act, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 68, An Act to amend The County Courts Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW: 37th Order.

THE NOTARIES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 37th Order; second reading of Bill No. 69, An Act to amend The Notaries Act, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 69, An Act to amend The Notaries Act.

Motion approved, second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW: 38th Order.

THE DEPENDENTS' RELIEF ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 38th Order; second reading of Bill No. 70, An Act to amend The Dependents' Relief Act, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 70, An Act to amend The Dependents' Relief Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW: 39th Order.

THE CONDITIONAL SALES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 39th Order; second reading of Bill No. 71, An Act to amend The Conditional Sales Act, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 71, An Act to amend The Conditional Sales Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW: 45th Order.

THE SCHOOL SITES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 45th Order; second reading of Bill No. 77, An Act to amend The School Sites Act, Mr. Drew.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW: I move second reading of Bill No. 77, An Act to amend The School Sites Act.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (South Cochrane): I wonder if the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) would explain that bill. It is not printed.

HON. MR. DREW: Yes. I will be glad to explain what it is. It relates to the provision in The School Sites Act under which a city is permitted to buy land outside for school purposes, and the Act as it has stood so far described the boundary as "boundary road," and said that the city could buy property beyond the "boundary road." It is a very simple thing, but still one of those things that causes legal snarls. There have been cases found where there was no "boundary road" between city and township and the question arose whether under the Act as it stood the municipality had a right to acquire property in the adjoining township for that purpose, and the only effect of this amendment is to provide that a city can acquire any land outside the city boundary adjoining its own property in the township and removes the limitation of "boundary road" and simply describes the property outside of the boundary of the city.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DREW: 12th Order.

HOURS OF WORK AND VACATIONS WITH PAY ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 12th Order; second reading of Bill No. 49, An Act to amend The Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944, Mr. Salsberg.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, this is so sudden, so unusual, that I almost blush. I am very glad, however, that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has reversed the . . .

MR. SPEAKER: I draw the attention of the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) to the fact that there should be a motion before the House.

MR. SALSBERG: I move second reading of Bill No. 49, An Act to amend the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act, 1944.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Just a moment.

MR. SPEAKER: Wait until I put the motion.

HON. MR. DREW: Perhaps the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) might permit me to make an explanation before proceeding with his argument. It is not in any way to interfere with his argument or delay it. The present bill, No. 49, is an exact counterpart of Bill No. 50, which was dealt with last year.

The position of the Government taken in regard to the bill last year is on record in Hansard, and therefore there is no reason to repeat the statements made at that time. I simply say on behalf of the Government it is not their intention to support this bill, and that is all I have to say at the moment.

MR. SALSBERG: I am surprised indeed at the suddenness with which this bill is called. We have been accustomed in the last few years to have all private members' bills called on a given day or night prior to the adjournment or prorogation, and dealing with them in wholesale fashion. In most instances those bills were railroaded out of existence or, as we called it, they were "slaughtered," there was a "slaughter session" for such bills. I am glad that the Government has reversed its policy by not allowing these private members' bills to stand over until the end of the session. However, I do think that it would perhaps have been proper to advise private members who have bills on the Order Paper of the change earlier, so as to enable private members to prepare and marshal their arguments in a proper fashion for presentation to the House. However, I doubt whether the Government has any such intention to facilitate such a desire on the part of private members to prepare themselves and to have the arguments marshalled.

The bill being called, however, I will make a few remarks.

I am sorry to hear from the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) that the Government has not changed its attitude on this bill, and still opposes it. I think it is unfortunate for the province and it is regrettable from the point of view of the immediate future of the workers and of economy in this province that the Government retains its rather conservative and unprogressive attitude to legislation of this sort.

The bill tries to make into a law the introduction of the 40-hour week as a universal work week in industry and in occupations of this province. No one who has followed the development of industry, the rationalization of production, and the increased productivity of labour can argue against the need of such legislation. Indeed, it is true that in certain industries where labour is strong—I mean strong in organization—the 40-hour week has already been put into effect. Where the trade unions are weak, they are still working 48 hours, or they worked more than 48 hours prior to the adoption of the 48-hour week legislation by this House. Certainly with these changes taking place in industry, the need for which is now universally accepted as being a proper work week, namely, a 40-hour week, seems to be long overdue. I might say, Mr. Speaker, that in the past the argument was advanced that there was a shortage of labour, and that the change-over from war to peacetime production called for additional labour forces. Now, that argument no longer exists. There is no longer any justification for saying that there is a severe shortage of labour and that the change-over would be harmful. On the contrary, there are, unfortunately, signs of an increase in the number of unemployed people, at a time when the productivity per worker is rising month by month. I have not the figures and the facts before me, and I am not able to get them here. I did not expect to argue this bill today. That is a disadvantage I was put to by the sudden action of the Government. But it is not to be questioned that that process has taken place and the productivity per labourer is increasing month after month in every industry. There is no reason why the work week should not be reduced as a requirement for the preservation of the health of the worker. The health of the workers under the modern speed up method of production suffers far more than was the case in the past where production was of a slower tempo. Machinery was less developed, and manual labour was more unhurried than is the case today. So that in the interests of preserving the health of the industrial workers today and in order to create the possibilities for a wider spread of employment opportunities, the 40-hour week is essential, and that is what this bill tries to accomplish.

Furthermore, the bill wants to safeguard the workers against any reduction in their earnings as a result of the introduction of the 40-hour week. In other words, the second part of the bill provides an automatic safeguard of the earning capacity of the worker because of the reduction in the hours of work. In other words, whether a man or woman is employed by the hour or by the week, his or her earnings should not be reduced with the reduction of the work hours from 48 or 44 to 40.

I think this is a very necessary piece of legislation which is proposed. I regret to find the Government adhering to a position which is, in my opinion, without defence, without justification, and is an expression of a die-hard approach to legislation of such a character, and I do hope that the hon. members of this House, regardless of the official announcement of the Government, will vote for the bill. I believe that there are many hon. members on the Government side who favour such legislation, speak for it in their own constituencies, advocate it when addressing labour meetings on the eve of election, and privately hold views which coincide with those expressed in this bill, and I think that they and all other hon. members of this House should vote for this measure.

Mr. Speaker, I have already moved second reading and I hope that it will carry and that the Government will not put the whip behind every hon. member but will give them a chance to vote for what they believe is right and necessary, and I believe if that were done a majority of this House would vote for this bill.

HON. CHARLES H. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I am not going to debate this question at all because, as has already been said, Hansard of not so many months ago, recorded the Government's position in this matter. However, for the record, I think I should correct a statement that the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) made, that strong unions have the 40-hour week and weaker unions have not. It is true that the 40-hour week is in effect in some industries, the nature of their business enabling them to do this. It is brought into effect by collective bargaining and negotiation. It is also true that many strong unions in different types of industry have not the 40-hour week, and I do not want it to be implied that every strong union has accomplished the 40 hours, because not only have they not accomplished it, but in a great many cases they are not desirous of it.

MR. SALSBERG: Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like—

HON. WILLIAM G. WEBSTER (Minister without Portfolio): Just a second. The hon. member for St.

Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) cannot speak twice.

MR. SALSBERG: A question for the record.

HON. MR. WEBSTER: Sit down.

MR. SALSBERG: Is the question out of order?

HON. MR. WEBSTER: Of course it is.

MR. SALSBERG: Since when?

MR. SPEAKER: You cannot speak twice. You get around it by saying it is a question.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, all you have to do is let me proceed to find out whether it is a question or not.

MR. SPEAKER: You can appeal against my ruling by submitting it to the House, but my ruling is that you are out of order.

MR. SALSBERG: If all hon. members of this House agree that a request for a question is out of order I will sit down.

Second reading negatived.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 13th Order.

MINIMUM WAGE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 13th Order, second reading of Bill No. 50, An Act to amend the Minimum Wage Act. Mr. MacLeod.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 50, An Act to amend the Minimum Wage Act.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Just before this proceeds, and only as a matter of clarification, I might explain that the present Bill No. 50 is fundamentally the same as Bill No. 52, which was dealt with in the Legislature last year, except that there is an increase in the figure of the minimum wage provided from 65 cents to 75 cents. There is also the addition of a conflicting sub-section and a maximum-hours sub-section.

I thought it well to explain that the fundamental principle is the same as was dealt with last year. The Government is not supporting this bill.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I share the feelings of my colleague in the expression of regret that these bills were called so suddenly. I appreciate the desire of the Government to get on with the business of the House, but I do suggest that since in years past it has been customary to give private members notice, that the House would not have been unduly delayed if we had been given a day's notice to prepare.

My bill is of a technical nature, in a sense, and the argumentation for it inevitably causes one to gather together some notes, unfortunately I do not have my notes before me at the moment. I do not think that it is asking too much of the Government to agree to let it stand over a day. I do not think the answer will be in the affirmative. I think, however, that it is a very reasonable request and that if the Government were disposed to grant a day's delay I, for my part, would appreciate it very much. However, if the answer is "no," I shall have to proceed under the handicap of the moment and do the best I can.

Mr. Speaker, this particular bill is something for which the trade union movement in the Province of Ontario has asked on innumerable occasions. At the last session of the Ontario Federation of the Trades and Labour Congress, this legislation was asked for, and I believe was specifically mentioned in the submission made by that organization to the Government a couple of weeks ago. It is not to be regarded as something which emanates from the mover of the bill or a few hon. members in this House, but rather as something which expresses the desire of a very large body of citizens in the Province of Ontario, in both the American Federation of Labour unions and in the unions of the Canadian Congress of Labour. I do not think the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) will deny that. I think that if he checks back on the submissions made by the Canadian Congress of Labour and American Federation of Labour unions, he will find that minimum wage legislation stands rather high on the list of requests made by those two bodies, and I may say that this type of legislation has been requested on innumerable occasions by the president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, Mr. Percy Bengough.

I think that in this day and age, which is, relatively speaking, a prosperous age—certainly all the figures that we read in the press these days, and all the statements made by the genial hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) indicate that we are passing through a period of industrial expansion and prosperity. If one is to take into account the financial statements of great corporations in the Province of Ontario as they appear from time to time on the financial pages of the Globe and Mail, of the Toronto Evening Telegram and, of course, the Toronto Daily Star, it is quite evident that industry in the Province of Ontario is enjoying unprecedented profits.

Mr. C. H. Millard, the National Director of the United Steelworkers of America, speaking in this city a short time ago—on January 10th of this year to be exact—pointed out that corporation profits had jumped from $31 per worker in 1938 to a figure of $61 per worker in the year 1946. I think that that figure alone indicates that industry and business in 1948 is in a position to pay its employees a wage which will enable those workers to live in something approximating that type of security which people have a right to expect in the year 1948.

If I had my notes before me, I could prove to the satisfaction of the House that in scores and scores of businesses and industries in this Province, workers both male and female are being paid a wage which is totally inadequate to keep body and soul together, to say nothing of providing for the future.

A wage of 75 cents an hour, which is the figure mentioned in the submission by the Trades and Labour Congress on the basis of a six-day week, provides a worker with a weekly wage of $36.00. I do not think there is any hon. member of the house who would even attempt to "get by" on $36.00 a week. If you take the sessional indemnity alone, it amounts to more than that, and most hon. members of this House have earnings apart from what they receive in the way of a sessional indemnity. I say our failure in the past to compel industry to pay its employees a decent wage has resulted in an enormous increase in taxation for the people of the Province of Ontario. Where workers are not earning sufficient to maintain adequate standards of health and social security, then the State has to provide for them in the way of additional grants for medical care, and so on, and so forth.

I say it is a very sound proposition that industries and businesses, which derive benefit and profit from the labour of employees engaged in business and industry, should be willing to accept the obligation of paying a wage commensurate with the profits that these workers make for them.

Hon. members will recall that in 1943, when the present government was asking for a mandate from the electorate, there were many references in the 22 points to "good wages." Now, what is a "good wage"? Would the hon. members of this House consider it a "good wage," if they had to work for 30 cents or 40 cents an hour? Oh, I know there are great captains of industry, like Mr. C. L. Burton, who said he was happiest when he was earning $1.00 a day, and was happiest when working 80 hours a week, and so-on, and-so-forth, and the inference is that it would be good for the souls of the people in 1948 if they worked for $1.00 a day, and worked 80 hours a week. But, of course, such sentiments could only be expressed by a man who stands on the very top rung of salary earners and dividend earners, and coupon clippers, in the Province of Ontario.

I say that today, with the cost of living index standing at an all-time high—151%—and having regard to the tremendous increase in the cost of food and clothing, and having regard for the fact that what $1.85 would buy before the war, the average wage earner today requires $4.37 to buy. Those are figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

When we take these things into account I think what is asked for is very sound and very reasonable, and certainly ought to have the support of any government which professes to be both progressive and enlightened.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, as this bill comes in the same category as the other bills heretofore mentioned, and the Government has already given its decision on them at the last Session of this Legislature, I do not intend to elaborate to any particular extent upon this bill, but there are a couple of things which might be said, which might refresh our memories as to the position the Government takes in a matter of this kind.

In the first place. I think a minimum wage is often misunderstood, and is deemed to be a fair wage, which is not the case at all. A minimum wage is simply a floor below which wages may not go. It is quite evident, if we examine the payrolls of this province in industry, we will find that often the suggested minimum wage does not at all compare with wages actually being paid. Wages in a great many industries are higher than the minimum wage suggested, but, thereunder also lies a difficulty, because the Government is fearful that what might be considered a minimum wage was a fair wage by industry, and it might be used to establish a maximum. That we certainly do not wish to see come about, because wages are a matter—particularly in these days of organization, where most industries are organized—which are settled by collective bargaining, that is, the wages are a result of that bargaining and negotiations, and usually wind up as being considered fair.

For us, as a Government, to establish a wage which would inculcate into the minds of employers that it is a fair wage, and enabling them to say, "I am paying that amount of money, therefore, I am a fair employer, and should be considered so," I think would lend difficulties to negotiations presently proceeding.

In addition to that, to cover the province with all its varying conditions in various parts of the province, and to include everybody who works, from a boy delivering with bicycle after school, to perhaps the older gentlemen who may be able to get some minor employment, such as gardening or landscaping, and that sort of things—I say that to establish a minimum wage such as has been suggested, I think would simply eliminate a great many people from being employed at all.

Now, if conditions were such that we felt there was going to be a recession of any magnitude, there might be some reason for establishing a true minimum wage—a floor. But under present conditions, I do not think it is advisable, and I want it to be understood that this Government is as concerned with the workers and the people of this province being adequately paid for their efforts, as could be, but we certainly cannot and have not changed our opinion as expressed at the last Session of this Legislature when this minimum-wage question was dealt with.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, on this bill before us I feel that I should say something I should have said when the previous bill—my own bill—came up, but I was taken quite by surprise, when the bill was called.

I want to say that it may be quite proper for the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) to have called the bill as he did, but it certainly is not conducive to good legislation; it certainly is not fair to private members to either keep their bills until the last night of the Session, or to give them no notice when the bills are being called, which deprives them even of the minimum of facts which they need in arguing the bills they introduce.

Furthermore I wish to raise this point, that in the 1947 Session, and in the 1946 Session, the standing committee on labour was never called together for a meeting, and this was protested against by the private members. It was suggested and argued—and I repeat it now in connection with this bill as well as the bill we just dealt with—that bills of this character, dealing with labour, must be referred to the standing committee on labour, so that both the movers of these bills and all interested parties, labour and industry, be given an opportunity to appear and argue on these bills.

I do not know why we appoint a standing committee on labour if labour bills are not referred to it. Certainly these bills before us now require far more serious and careful consideration than is afforded at this moment.

Well, this trick may be legal, but it is a trick, just the same, calling a bill without any notification, and thus reducing the discussion to the very minimum, and have it killed. But the matter of establishing a high minimum wage in this province is one of the fundamental problems facing this Legislature, and other Legislatures, too.

All one has to do is to speak to the retailers in any neighbourhood shopping section to find out the fact that purchasing by the masses of people is declining. The dollar value may not show it fully because of the inflationary spiral, and with it the enormous profiteering that is going on, and the fact that the profits of industry have reached heights never before achieved.

I have in the room we are allotted—and for which we are thankful—a clipping from the Globe and Mail of last week, and on its financial page we see figures to indicate an increase in dividend payments which is 50 per cent. higher than two years ago. On the other hand, there is a shrinkage of the purchasing power of the mass of consumers, for clothing, and so forth. As the butcher and grocer will tell you, the people are more finicky; they are more particular; they do not buy as readily, and this is because they have not the money with which to buy, and the question of a minimum wage is a question that concerns the fundamentals of the economic future of the province.

Now, knowing the tendency that prevails in certain quarters at present, I can expect a reply to my very logical and reasonable presentation, that will deal with everything but this, and will jump to all corners of the globe. I hope that will not be the case. I am discussing the bill before us; let us stick to the bill and the issues involved.

I say the tendency in the country today of abnormally high dividend payments and profiteering and the declining purchasing power of the masses leads inevitably to a crisis. We can avoid that, or postpone it at any rate, by providing the masses of the people with the additional purchasing power they require. That is what the bill seeks to achieve. Therefore, it is a constructive piece of legislation which is proposed.

I would appeal again to the government to agree to refer this and other bills dealing with labour problems to the standing committee on labour, to give everyone an opportunity to make an appearance and present a position and an argument. Failing to do that, you are merely resorting to another means of eliminating these bills from the agenda, whereas it used to be done by lumping them together in one evening and killing them all. Today they are being handled in this different way.

I appeal to the government to refer these bills to the standing committee on labour. It is the least the government can do when faced with legislation of this kind.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there are one or two points I feel I should deal with before this bill is disposed of.

First of all, I cannot help expressing some amusement at the suggestion that what has been done is unfair. I quite clearly informed the hon. members of this Legislature that as our order paper filled up, it was the intention of the government to carry on the business of the Legislature in such a way that we would use the full time, without any limitation to the discussions, to permit the hon. members to complete our work and return to their homes as soon as the business of this Legislature is finished.

There is another reason, however, why the suggestion that there is anything unfair about calling these bills at the present time is positively ridiculous. In the first place, this bill is fundamentally the same in every way as the bill which was introduced last year, except that it raises the minimum wage mentioned in the bill from 65 cents to 75 cents. I am sure that the difference of 10 cents does not in any way change the arguments that have been made or would be made now. In any event, the hon. members who have just spoken have kept themselves in trim with regard to this, because they have been discussing these bills continuously for the past year, and have been explaining what a completely reactionary government and Legislature this is, because we would not adopt this bill a year ago. In addition, they have seen fit to use a bit of publicity, as anybody who examines the Communist paper, the Tribune, can see if they go back over the files.

There is no question of surprise. They have been speaking about these bills now for a year or more. They did not like them put on at the end of the Session, and they do not like them put on now, when we have put them on the inside of the track. They could not be taken by surprise, because they have been talking about this so much, and condemning anyone who raises any question about the bill itself and are continually raising questions about our motives in dealing with these bills.

Regarding the suggestion that this should be referred to the standing committee on labour: there is a very good reason why this bill should not be referred to the standing committee on labour, and that is that this bill was carefully considered a year ago, there is no change in it, and there is nothing which needs to be referred to the standing committee on labour. It is a perfectly simple bill, and the question is whether the hon. members of this Legislature want to make it impossible for anyone to employ anyone unless they are prepared to pay them 75 cents an hour; as has been pointed out by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) this government has taken more progressive steps in the last four years to advance the interests of labour than any provincial government since Confederation. All these things to be done in the interests of labour can be done by the unions and organized labour under the legislation which is now on the statute books of this province. It is not our desire to draw away from organized labour and from trade unions the opportunity to do a job on behalf of those they represent. There is nothing here to refer to a committee. The question is a simple one. There needs to be no evidence heard on it. It can be decided by this Legislature immediately.

Mr. Speaker, as to the suggestion of a "crisis," and the tremulous tones of the hon. member who has just spoken (Mr. Salsberg) as he envisaged the danger of a "crisis." Mr. Speaker, that hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) wants a crisis more than anything else in the world—

MR. SALSBERG: That is untrue.

HON. MR. DREW: That is what he is working for—

MR. SALSBERG: That is untrue.

HON. MR. DREW: And what he and his party are working for, and striving for, is a crisis. It would please them more than anything else, if through their actions they could bring about the very crisis they appear to fear.

Regarding the statement of a "legal trick." We are here in this Legislature acting under the rules, and the best evidence of the freedom of this Legislature is the fact that the two Communist members have spoken with complete freedom, and without any restraint about their time, or the things they said, or the criticisms they made in regard to the bills which these Communists themselves have introduced.

It is just about time that this sham about their great concern for our democratic processes should be faced for what it really is. Let these men ask the relatives of Jan Masaryk, who died today, what freedom there is to discuss bills of this kind in Czechoslovakia at this hour; ask them to find out from those with whom they communicate in Czechoslovakia and the other Communist-dominated states how much freedom is apparent over there, or let the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) tell us the information he gained on his recent visit to the Communist-dominated states. Let him tell us quite frankly how much freedom is allowed to discuss things of this kind over there. They have complete freedom here, and I for one believe they should have that complete freedom. If any riding is sufficiently interested to send them here as members, then let them speak, but when they speak, let us recognize the motives behind what they say. There is no "legal trick" here. What has been done is in accordance with the rules and in accordance with what I said to the Legislature last week, that we would proceed to use the time of the Legislature to deal with the bills on the order paper, and that is what we are doing. For the reasons given so well by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) it is not the intention of the government to support this bill or refer it to any committee.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 18th Order.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE:
18th Order, second reading of Bill No. 55, An Act to amend The Public Schools Act. Mr. MacLeod.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I rise to move second reading of Bill No. 55, An Act to amend the Public Schools Act.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): This is a bill precisely the same as Bill 57 which was dealt with in the Legislature last year. The reasons put forward at that time were the same as today and the Government will not support this bill.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, the way we are jumping around with these bills leaves no doubt in my mind as to who was intended to be caught off guard. It is plain discrimination here because these bills are not being dealt with in the order in which they appear on the order paper. Beyond making that observation, I have nothing further to add on the method employed.

As for the bill itself, Mr. Speaker; it is a very simple and a very clear bill. It seeks to give the boards of education in the Province of Ontario authority to provide milk for children of school age. The desirability for providing milk for our school children was very ably argued before the Royal Commission on milk or by representatives of two of the opposition parties in this House and I might add was also advocated with great eloquence by the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) who is not in his seat this afternoon.

As I pointed out when this bill was before us last year, I can think of no more important step that could be taken in this Province than to make it possible for our children in Public Schools to receive half-pint of milk every day at the recess hour in order to build up their bodies and to enable them to resist disease.

The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts), in his submission to the commission of Mr. Justice Wells, pointed out that it is possible to provide a half-pint of milk for every school child in the Province of Ontario for the sum of $4,000,000 a year. That seems to me to be a very small investment to make in public health, particularly when we take into consideration the rather alarming figures given from time to time by the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) as to what it costs the citizens of this Province to maintain themselves in relative good health and what it costs the government of Ontario to subsidize ill-health by way of large contributions for hospital care and other medical services.

In the course of the remarks I made last year, I called attention to references in the report of Mr. Justice Wells on this point. I do not have the report before me at the moment so I cannot give his exact words, but I think no one will deny there was a rather strong suggestion to the effect that providing free milk for school children would be a very desirable reform to put on the statute books at this time.

I pointed out on a previous occasion that anything that we do by way of providing milk for school children should not be confined to what we call the needy children because I think to leave it on that basis would merely call attention to the fact that in our public schools there are privileged and underprivileged children.

My suggestion is that the right or democratic way to deal with this matter is to have blanket legislation which would enable school boards in our municipalities to provide free milk for all school children.

It is impossible in a bill coming from a private member to suggest how that should be financed, because a private member is not permitted under the rules of the House to introduce legislation which calls for an expenditure of public money. I, for my part, feel that once the school boards have the authority to do what the bill requires, or provides for, then I think it would be quite appropriate if the City of Toronto and other municipalities throughout this Province should make representation to the Government suggesting that the cost should be shared equally by the municipalities and by the Province. That would mean a $2,000,000 appropriation in the budget of the Province of Ontario, and I say that the Province of Ontario would be the gainer.

The reports that we receive each month from the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) indicate quite clearly that there has been a very sharp decline in the consumption of milk since the recent rise in price, and I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, and to hon. members of this House, that the drop in the consumption of milk is felt most by our school children. If we permit a situation to continue where our school children are deprived of this very necessary food, we merely contribute to a situation where the taxpayers of the Province of Ontario will have to make provision for taxes in order to subsidize the impairment of health which will result from keeping away from our school children this very necessary food.

My bill is in effect enabling legislation and one that does not call for expenditure of money at this juncture. All that is asked to do is to make it possible in law for any enlightened municipality to provide this service if it so desires. The Public Schools Act in the Province of Ontario, as it now stands, does not give them the authority to do that.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) in the course of his brief remarks last year, when a similar measure was before us, agreed with me up to this point, I think, that whatever may be done along these lines should be done for all school children, and I think that in expressing that view, he was measuring up to what one would expect from a progressive Conservative, that we ought not to do anything in the public schools which would call attention to the fact that there are privileged children in the northern portion of the City of Toronto, and there are underprivileged children in the southern portion of the City of Toronto, particularly in the ridings of Bellwoods, St. Andrew, St. Patrick and Dovercourt and other ridings in this city.

AN HON. MEMBER: High Park.

MR. MACLEOD: And High Park, of course. I believe that the Board of Education in the City of Toronto has passed a motion supporting a measure of this kind and I believe that if the Government were to agree to the legislation, the Board of Education in this enlightened, progressive city of Toronto would lose no time in finding ways and means of taking advantage of its provisions and setting an example which the other municipalities throughout the Province would emulate.

However, the die is cast, the word has been given that it is "no dice," but that does not rob the proposal or the legislation of its merits, and for my part I am very proud indeed to be the sponsor of a bill which I consider enlightened and to be in the best interests of those citizens of tomorrow on whom the future of Ontario depends.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, surely the Government members cannot possibly sit through the discussion of this bill without attempting even to justify their negative stand. It is unthinkable that men representing constituencies all over the Province should fail to see the merit and the need of legislation of this sort, and it is difficult to understand how they can vote against it. It is difficult to understand how any representative here can raise his voice against a bill which seeks to give boards of education the authority to distribute milk to children if they so desire.

I cannot understand it. It does not ask the Government to provide the money, it does not even attempt to make it obligatory on any municipality. When the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) sends out letters with a motto at the bottom "Drink Milk," certainly that does not apply only to those to whom he addresses those letters. That there is a decline in the consumption of milk is revealed every month by the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) in the statistics that his department provides. Certainly we have not reached the stage where legislation of this sort cannot be defended without inviting another attack on issues that have nothing to do with the issue before us.

This bill wishes to grant the authority to boards of education like Toronto and elsewhere to distribute milk free to children attending school. What is wrong with that? What is wrong with that? How can any hon. member go back to his constituents and say that he did not vote for this bill and justify it?

AN HON. MEMBER: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: You cannot laugh down the feeling in your own hearts, the feeling that this bill is right and that you should vote for it. It is a hollow laughter that emanates from any hon. member here who, instead of replying, tries to laugh it off. I want to appeal to all hon. members of this House to vote for this bill. I cannot imagine that such a bill should be defeated and I cannot understand the logic of the Government in taking the stand they take. I cannot for the life of me understand it. Whatever I may think of this Government, I give them some credit for ability to understand conditions, unless you explain it by an incurable Toryist approach to everything that is new. Perhaps it is just that Toryish feeling about something that is new. How else can you explain it—a bill to give the right to boards of education elected by the citizens of a municipality to give milk is voted against.

I hope that the opposition groups will on this question demand a recorded vote. We have not enough to demand a recorded vote, but I hope the opposition groups will help us to have a recorded vote on this bill, a bill to grant the boards of education the right to distribute milk free to children attending those schools. Let us know who votes against it and who votes for it.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the vote is taken on this, may I say simply for the purpose of the record that no hon. member in this Legislature, I am sure, is laughing at the idea of supplying milk; they are just laughing at the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg); that is all.

The fact is that the question of supplying milk is not an issue here. The question is simply one of how it is to be done, and the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) knows perfectly well the very effective service that is being performed in the City of Toronto at the present time by voluntary organizations in this field. He also knows perfectly well that insofar as any over-all application is concerned, there are many communities which at the present time are not ready for such distribution and which do not need it, and as far as any changes in the particular legislation that we have, we intend as we have said before to wait until we have the advantage of the report of the Royal Commission on Education in relation to which we will be able to draft our laws covering the whole field.

That is the position in regard to this bill. Nothing, of course, can stop the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) saying what he wishes to say outside, but I do wish to place it on the record that nothing that the Government has said at any time indicates any lack of appreciation of the need for milk. On the contrary, the best evidence of the interest of this Government is the fact that there has been by far the greatest increase in support of education and everything connected with education that has taken place in any province in Canada—and I say “any province in Canada”—and our budget for education alone today exceeds the total budgets for all purposes of most of the provinces.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to make a few brief remarks in connection with this. I am going to vote for the bill because of the principle involved, but I do not believe it is workable—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. ANDERSON: You may laugh if you wish. I do not believe it is workable to the extent that the mover of the bill may think, but that is no reason we should not support it. It is simply enabling legislation. I know there are many municipalities which are not in a financial position to put this into effect, even if they had the privilege of doing so. On the other hand, I think milk for children is a good thing, and it is so important that it should be a Federal Government measure. In this country where we have a very large agricultural economy, it would be in the interest of the farmers. In the past few years we have been rather fortunate—I will not use the word “Capitalism” as it may sound a little harsh to some of your ears—it has worked, but would be better if there was more artificial means of destroying wealth.

In the last few years we have had the common people able to get more of the consumer goods, more of the things they need to live on, even though the prices were high, more of them than many of them had when prices were low and goods were plentiful. I believe this is not something new. One of my hon. friends in the back spoke of this being new. It may be new to him, but it is certainly not new to all of us. With all the hardship Great Britain is going through, they are not permitting the people who have lots of money to buy the milk. The first call on milk over in England, if what I have heard is right, is to see the children get their share first, and if there is any left, the people with money, the adults, get the milk. But the children have first call.

I am going to support the bill in the hope that this government and the Dominion Government may see fit in days to come to provide milk for the children going to school, who need it.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 19th Order.

RIGHT TO VOTE AT MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 19th Order, second reading of Bill No. 56, An Act to extend the Right to Vote at Municipal Elections to the Classes of Persons that may vote at Elections to the Legislative Assembly, Mr. Salsberg.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 56, An Act to Extend the Right to Vote at Municipal Elections to the Classes of Persons that may vote at Elections to the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, this bill which I hope I will not have to mark, as I have the previous bills, with a "K," which stands for "Kill" is an important one and is long overdue. I would have been very happy if the action of the government would have made it unnecessary to have a private member's bill before the House on so fundamental a question. But the failure of the government to bring about that long overdue electoral reform made it necessary for a private member to introduce it, and the bill before the House seeks, therefore, to extend the municipal franchise to all citizens in the municipality who have the right to vote for the election of members to the Assembly.

This long overdue reform has been an issue discussed for some considerable time. It was discussed in municipal arenas; it was discussed in the press, and has been a basic tenet with every reform group and organization for a long while. In fact, in most areas of the world that reform is already achieved, and the right to vote in municipal elections is automatically granted to anyone who has the right to vote for the Legislative body. That is so in England; that is so in parts of Canada; it is not yet so in our province. It should be so in our province.

The very restrictions that stand in the way of the application of this democratic principle are hang-overs from the time when property rights determined everything. There was a time when you had to have property qualifications of a given measure before you could vote for any elected body. That has been overcome. But in the realm of municipal elections that ancient heritage still hangs over the heads of a large section of very intelligent voters, who, because of this reactionary hangover are denied the opportunity of voting to elect the municipal government in the municipalities in which they live.

You may still hear the argument that the municipal government deals with property taxation, and, therefore, only property owners should be allowed to select the government. That is the old stand-by argument for all those who oppose this progressive legislation. But, of course, it has no ground to stand on, no support within reason, because this Legislature and the Federal House certainly deal with taxation which affects everything, including property, and yet every citizen over a certain age has the right to elect representatives.

It is an undeniable fact that the action of this House can and does determine the tax rate in a municipality, even far more decisively than the action of a municipal council. The municipal council is a creation of this Legislature; its freedom of action is limited by the legislation adopted here; its actions are restricted by our votes here on matters of taxation, on hospitalization, on social services, all of which determine the municipal tax rate no less than the action of the aldermen and the Board of Control of the City of Toronto. If we would assume certain obligations, the municipalities could reduce their tax rates. If we do not, the property tax inevitably rises, as it does today in every municipality.

The argument, therefore, that the municipal governments deal with property taxes, and, therefore, only property owners or those who occupy self-contained dwellings shall have a right to vote, is, of course, not in accord with realities and with the relationships of the different levels of government today, as it affects municipal issues and municipal taxation.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, the hon. members of this House know—and if I repeat it, it is only because you did not vote for this bill last year; you may think you have heard this argument, and so you did, and you will hear it until legislation of this sort will be adopted—but as the hon. members of this House know the present restrictions make it possible for a person whose mental capacity is perhaps questioned, and yet who, because he has a lot of property in the city, will go around and vote a lot of times. It is not uncommon in a city like Toronto to have people taken around to vote in every ward. Of course, they are not supposed to vote for controllers or mayor, but they vote for aldermen in every ward, because they own property in every ward.

On the other hand, you can have a man who makes the laws for this province, in the sense that he prepares the laws, the brains and mind which really prepare the laws for us—disqualified because they live in a hotel or in a rooming house not far from the Parliament Buildings. That is a fact. We all know that.

You can have the child of parents who may be carrying on full financial responsibility for the house, including paying taxes, denied the right to vote because officially that child is not the owner of the house; the mother is.

You will have a professor of civic law denied the right to vote in a municipal election because he is not qualified under the present restrictions, yet you will have someone from out of town come in and vote at a municipal election, because he is on the roll; he is on the voters' list; he owns property, and he votes, and then goes back home. There is no justification for such restrictions to be continued. You cannot argue for it. No one dares really argue for the present restrictions; they are just dodging them, that is all they are doing.

In the private gatherings of small groups in certain clubs, this matter is discussed, I assure you. In certain drawing rooms the matter is discussed, but not in public. In certain clubs over whatever drink is consumed after a good meal, and men speak their minds freely and are not choosy of the words they use, they will say, "Certainly we must not allow the radicals to extend their influence in municipal government, which they would do if you extend the franchise." I do not know whether that would happen, but if it did, I think it would be a tremendous step forward in the realm of municipal government, but I have no guarantee that it would.

No one can defend the present restrictions. In a province such as ours, certainly there is no need for continuing these restrictions. The Government, to my knowledge, is not putting up a position against this proposal. Hon. members of the House on the Government side have never really voiced an opinion on this question. All we have before us is a negative position announced by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), and that is that, and the hon. members on the Government side are supposed to vote "No" on a proposal of this sort which every progressive person anywhere will recognize as basic, and no longer questioned anywhere else.

Well, the bill was defeated last year, and it is here again and I dare say to those who have concocted the procedure which has been followed here today to call bills such as ours to dispose of them in the belief that the disposition of them in this manner—tricky in my opinion, and I repeat it—will dispose of the issue. Well, it just won't dispose of the issue, because it is an important issue, and whether the bill is defeated today or not, the issue of basic reform of the municipal franchise, which is long overdue, is going to be kept in the public eye and will be discussed and will influence people, and will call upon people to take sides.

The bill itself is quite clear. It says—and I am reading:

"Notwithstanding the Municipal Act, every resident of a municipality who is entitled to vote at elections to the Assembly, shall be entitled to be entered on the voters' list to vote at municipal elections in the municipality."

And then, paragraph 2:

"Notwithstanding any other Act, the voters' list shall be prepared in the same manner as for an election to the Assembly."

If you think that the method of preparing a voters' list for the Assembly is a good one, you cannot vote against that proposal, in so far as it may apply to the municipal voters' lists. If you agree that municipal democracy should be extended and be brought up to the position to which it has been brought in Great Britain and elsewhere in the world, then you cannot vote against this bill.

I do want to use every possible argument I can muster to influence the vote of the members of the House on this question. Of course, if I had known that the bill was going to be called I would have brought materials expressing opinions of people of all political convictions on so fundamental a question, but being caught off guard and this bill being dragged up in the method that has been employed this afternoon I have to rely on presentation that is not as full nor as convincing I am sure as it would have been if proper time had been given, but I am not going to be rushed. I am not going to be rushed, if that was the scheme, on this or any other bill. I am not going to be rushed on a bill which deals with so basic a question as the extension of the municipal franchise to all those who are entitled to vote for the Assembly. I am not going to have this railroaded on the floor of the house without expressing whatever I feel about it. I think I am within my rights in so doing more so than were those who concocted a plot to get rid of certain bills today by "pulling" them without notifying the members they were going to be "pulled."

AN HON. MEMBER: You have not prepared a speech?

MR. SALSBERG: No, I have not prepared a speech. I am doing the best I can without a prepared speech. I think that this bill perhaps should be referred to some standing committee. I am trying to save this bill from the sword that has been drawn by the Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and all his supporters are ready to let it fall. I would like to see this bill presented to a standing committee and an opportunity given to Municipal Ratepayers Associations, and to Housewives Associations, to appear and discuss it. Well, the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) laughs when I mention "Housewives Associations." He certainly does not do that when he is in Dovercourt or he would not be where he is and feel as confident as he does.

MR. SPEAKER: May I ask the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) to confine himself to the motion.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I shall speak to the motion. I was merely speaking to an interjection that came from the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth). I say, yes, Housewives Associations, Consumers Leagues, trade unions and other political parties and youth organizations, every organization that wishes to appear and argue on so important an issue should be given the opportunity to do it. Is that wrong? No, that is right. That would be the correct procedure. I would even agree to ministerial associations.

AN HON. MEMBER: You do not include Mr. Stalin.

MR. SALSBERG: He is not a citizen of our province. I would include ministerial associations because very often the minister of a church is deprived of voting at a municipal election because he does not own property, while a member of his congregation, who almost does not know how to vote, has a vote. I would be pleased if this bill was considered on a non-partisan basis and for the Government to say: "Here is the issue, we don't have to divide on, let us refer it to the standing committee on municipal law." Why not refer this to the standing committee on municipal law and let mayors and elected representatives and other groups come and present their views? I think that an action of this sort would be very democratic. I think a refusal to refer this bill to the committee on municipal law is a display of fear of the reaction of elected and representative bodies to this bill. I am trying to present as full a view on a question of this sort as I am capable of under the circumstances and in the face of an attempt to railroad a bill like this without adequate discussion and without adequate coverage. I think on a question of this sort there should be a recorded vote. I think there should be. I think voters are entitled to know who is opposed and who is in favour of a bill of this sort; who favours the extension of the municipal franchise and who wants it restricted.

Now, as I see the clock, I would move the adjournment of the debate on this question, the hour being 6 o'clock.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I have no desire to delay or to limit the debate on this at all. It is entirely a question of the wish of the hon. members of the Legislature, contrary to the practice of that body of which the speaker (Mr. Salsberg) is a member. Here he is perfectly free to speak. I think it would be desirable to hear the remainder of what he has to say, not that I desire to limit his speech, but I oppose the motion to adjourn, and suggest that he continue with his speech.

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) moved the adjournment of the debate. Do you want to press the motion or do you want to carry on?

MR. SALSBERG: No, Mr. Speaker, in view of the position taken by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) I think it would be quite wrong for me to press this motion and I, therefore, do not press it, in view of the knowledge that all hon. members are anxious to go home. I am sure all arrangements were made to go home around 6 o'clock and I will wind up the remarks I wanted to make. I might have extended them if we had resumed the debate on a later day but in view of—

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I want to refer to a point I made. I want to make it quite clear. In opposing this motion I suggested no limit on the time, it is in the hands of the hon. members to determine whether they want to go on or not. I merely indicated I proposed to oppose it. I think every hon. member would like to hear the balance of his speech while it is being made and not hear it in two sections.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is entirely out of order in opposing—

MR. SPEAKER: I am capable of telling you when the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is out of order.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, despite what the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) said, I do know that the hon. members expected to adjourn the session at 6 o'clock, in fact, the hon. Prime Minister made it known yesterday and I do not wish to be responsible for the extension of the session longer than absolutely necessary. I therefore won't make the additional remarks I might have wished to make. I hope that all members will vote for this very progressive bill and make it the law of the province and that we might also find it possible to have a recorded vote with the help of other hon. members of other groups in this House.

HON. MR. DREW: I just want to make an observation before the vote is taken. This has nothing to do with the question of the extension of the franchise, it has to do with introducing An Act piecemeal without due consideration to its effect and without any attempt to embrace the whole Act of which it is a part. I cannot help expressing some interest, although I am not greatly concerned about the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) in regard to what he suggests or remarks outside the sphere of the debate. The whole sequence of his remarks is relating to many things outside the debate. I do not know with whom he has been drinking in the clubs to which he refers.

MR. SALSBERG: I wish to declare right now that unlike the hon. Prime Minister I am not a member of any club in which there is drinking at any time legally or illegally. I do not drink in clubs and I do not belong to clubs where the members drink.

HON. MR. DREW: By that statement he did not know anything about what he was talking and made his reckless statements without any right at all.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I do feel it would be very unfortunate if we became prisoners of the clock, simply because it is 6.15, to proceed to dispose of a bill. I think the bill merits consideration by other hon. members of this House who may want to speak on it and it is my desire to speak on the bill. I certainly do not want to inconvenience the hon. members of the House. I ask you to believe me when I say that. I think, having regard to the time, it should be made possible for others to speak if they so desire. There are representatives of city councils here, even the mayor of a very important city sitting in this section of the House may want to speak. I do not know whether he does or not, but I would ask your permission to wind up these proceedings by moving the adjournment of the debate now and let us resume at a later date.

I would like to move the adjournment of the debate and I would, with all deference, ask you to enlighten the House as to what the ruling is concerning the continuation of the sittings after the hour of 6 of the clock. My understanding is there has to be a unanimous consent of the House to continue past 6 o'clock.

HON. MR. DREW: I think we will save a great deal of time. I have no thought in the world of giving either of these hon. members even the pretended excuse of saying they were denied the right to speak. The time has passed and I simply say I object to the practice employed in the past by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) of breaking his speech in the middle so that he can come back and use up our time, without any advantage, on another occasion. Now that we are to have another address on this and there may be others who will want to debate it, I am quite prepared to concur in the discontinuance of the debate on this bill and I move the adjournment of the House.

MR. MACLEOD: I am moving the adjournment of the debate as I understand that is a recorded vote.

Motion approved.

HON. MR. DREW: I move the adjournment of the House.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): Would the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) indicate what we shall proceed with tomorrow?

HON. MR. DREW: As I indicated before, we will proceed with the Speech from the Throne tomorrow. The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) moved the adjournment and will continue tomorrow. I believe it would be advisable we sit tomorrow night and continue with the debate on the Speech from the Throne.

MR. McEWING: Will the bills not be taken up at all at the opening?

HON. MR. DREW: We will go right into the debate on the Speech from the Throne tomorrow.

Motion approved.

The House adjourned at 6.18 o'clock p.m.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I rise to seek your ruling on a difference of opinion that has arisen between the Clerk of the House and myself respecting a motion which I wished to have placed on the order paper.

The motion as I presented it in the usual manner to the Clerk of the House, read as follows:

"That this House is of the opinion that the old-age pensions in Ontario be forthwith increased to a minimum of fifty dollars per month, to all citizens who qualify, by reason of their age, for old-age pensions, and that the means now employed before granting the pensions to our aged citizens be abolished, and that the pensionable age be reduced at the earliest possible opportunity from 70 years as at present to 65 years for males, and 60 years for females."

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Clerk advised me it is contrary to the rules to have a motion like this on the order paper, because it implies an expenditure of money, which is the prerogative and the right only of Government. I do not question the fact that no private member has a right to introduce legislation calling for the expenditure of money.

The difference, however, Mr. Speaker, is in the argument I advanced, that a motion of this sort does not, even if carried, obligate the Government to an expenditure of money, and it could not, therefore, be called a measure for the expenditure of funds. It merely seeks to secure the sentiments of the House on an important matter.

Now, it could be argued that if a motion of this kind were carried, the Government would feel obligated to implement it with legislation to incorporate the sentiments expressed, but, Mr. Speaker, I maintain that would not necessarily follow. It is, therefore, not a measure which calls for the expenditure of money, but simply calls for an expression of the sentiments of the hon. members of this House on this matter. That was the position I advanced.

I want to assure you, Mr. Speaker, that I value the opinions of our Clerk, as I know we all do. I know we are guided by his volume, which serves as our guide, nevertheless, I felt that the matter should be brought before the House so that you, Mr. Speaker, could rule upon it. I have been advised that similar motions have appeared on the order papers here and in other legislative bodies. I cannot direct you, Mr. Speaker, to any particular examples, but I have been advised that was so, and I felt that your ruling on this matter would be of value, not only in regard to my motion, but to similar resolutions and motions which hon. members may care to bring before the House.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, as the Attorney-General representing the Government, and in that capacity, it would not be my thought that you be asked to rule on this matter on the spur of the moment, unless you felt so advised. I think, in your position as Speaker, you may take a matter under advisement and obtain the advice of the law officers of the Crown or any other advice you see fit to seek. I thought, Mr. Speaker, I might indicate to you that might be the course you would prefer to follow.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): May I say, Mr. Speaker, that my interpretation of this, for what it is worth, is that bills cannot be introduced by an hon. member which carry with them the suggesting of the spending of the provincial funds. That is clearly out of order, as is set out in the book of rules, and by usage down through the years.

It seems to me, however, when we come to the question of a resolution, it has a much wider application, and should be so considered. I have always understood that any resolution before the House, even if the resolution contained a suggestion for the spending of public money, if carried upon the floor of the House, does not carry with it the enactment of the substance matter of the resolution. In my opinion it is simply expressing the opinions of the hon. members on that particular policy.

When, as you will, Mr. Speaker, you take this under advisement, it seems to me we would be drawing the line pretty fine indeed if we were to say that no resolution could be introduced in the House which suggested the spending of public money, because I think you can find instance after instance, both in this Legislature and in the Dominion Parliament, where such resolutions were adopted and a vote taken on them.

We will all be interested in the conclusion to which you arrive, because that conclusion will strike at the very root of our rules, as they apply today in the Legislature.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, if the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will permit me to say so, the suggestion, which I made, Mr. Speaker, with all deference, is not, I hope, to be taken by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) as expressing an opinion one way or the other, on behalf of the Government.

Suffering the disability of being a lawyer, I was not prepared to rush in with a final opinion in the manner in which the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) did. I merely suggested to you, Mr. Speaker, that you might prefer to defer the matter until you had an opportunity of seeking considered advice.

MR. SPEAKER: With the consent of the House, I would prefer to have further advisement on this matter. I could give a decision now, but this is rather a delicate question, and I trust the hon. members will grant me the privilege of looking into it further, and I will give my ruling at a later date.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 11th Order.

DEBATE ON THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 11th Order. Resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the motion for the consideration of the speech of the hon. the Lieutenant-Governor at the opening of the session.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate I wish first to congratulate you on your continued good health which permits you to occupy your chair. With good health I know goes good nature and both are amply required sometimes to direct the affairs of the House, to keep us all in order and-so-forth, and I wish good health and continued good nature on your part, Mr. Speaker.

Also I wish to extend to the mover of the motion (Mr. Pryde) my heartiest congratulations on a well-delivered address. We all know that the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) is a newly-elected member, and to be called upon within a few hours of entering this chamber to move the motion in reply to the address was a great honour; but at the same time, Mr. Speaker, it was a great task and we all agree that the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) discharged that task with great honour to himself.

In addition to the subject matter of his address we were also pleased to hear it delivered with his charming Scottish accent.

There is one point in his address, however, with which I must disagree to a certain extent. He stated "there were only two classes of people in the world, those who were Scotch and those who wished they were Scotch." I must tell him there are a few of us in the House who have half Scottish blood or quarter Scottish blood and we are quite satisfied with that condition.

To the hon. member for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton) I also must extend my heartiest congratulations. To my mind he delivered one of the most intricate and well-prepared addresses that I have heard for a long time; also, he delivered his address with very little reference to notes. I watched him particularly, and to him goes my heartiest congratulations for the manner in which his address was delivered.

As stated by the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), that address will be of great benefit to us when we have to consider the question of hydro later on in the session. The placing on record of that address will help us at that time.

There was one point I noticed, however. He brought us down from the inception of hydro to 1943. In 1943 he told us the reserves of hydro were practically depleted. That, to my mind, pointed out that both the old parties—that is the Liberal and the Progressive-Conservative parties—must have known about the true situation of hydro at or before the 1943 election.

Mr. Speaker, I also wish to extend to the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) my congratulations on their very able addresses. Both of them are well known as able debaters and we saw here in the House an exhibition of their ability. Both the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) referred in their addresses to the Communist situation. It is only fitting that I should make a statement on our behalf. I do not think that I will dwell on it to any great extent, but I would like to present to the House the stand taken by our party, and in order to do that, I will read a statement issued by our party on January 21, 1948:

"Recent developments suggest that the Communists in Canada who, two short years ago, were urging support of the Liberal Party and denouncing the CCF, are now about to make still another change in their line, and offer to support the CCF.

This is a good time for the CCF to repeat its stand on Communism. The CCF never has had, and will not have in the future, any truck or trade with the Communists. It rejects their dictatorial philosophy and their dictatorial practises. The CCF will reject support from the Communist Party and will not collaborate with them or make any electoral arrangements of any sort with them.

The CCF does not believe in "red-baiting" or Communist "witch-hunts," or anti-Communist hysteria used by reactionaries the world over as a cloak for their own anti-labour policies. On the other hand, the CCF harbours no illusions about Communism, and proposes to defeat the threat of Communism in the only way in which it can be defeated, by offering a dynamic, democratic alternative to both Communism and capitalism, which can secure social justice for the people of the world."

Mr. Speaker, that is our stand on Communism.

Now, during the past two or three years I have noticed increased attention on the part of both the old parties to northern Ontario. I wonder why. Perhaps it is the fact that the north has been pretty faithful in sending down to the Legislature a fairly full quota of C.C.F. members. Prior to the 1943 election, neither of the old parties gave any attention to northern Ontario. Some of them even went so far as to advocate, as the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) indicated the other day, the tearing up of the T. & N.O. tracks beyond Cochrane. The hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) assured the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) he would produce that correspondence, which I am sure exists.

In addition to that, I remember seeing in the press some years ago a statement by the then leader of the Liberal Party concerning northern Ontario. Some representations had been made to him about the north and his answer was, "Give it back to the Indians." At that time I thought the remark was merely a joke, but, tied in with the attempt to tear up the tracks, perhaps he did intend to give it back to the Indians.

Now, as regards Progressive-Conservative activity in the north; if this continued activity brings with it improvements for the north, well and good.

Conservative ministers who have visited the north have promised many things and if they fulfill their promises, then we in the north are willing to give them credit, but at the same time we know where the north's interest lies and the north also understands who has defended its interests.

Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne is very conveniently divided into sections, and I must congratulate the Government in preparing it in that manner. It falls into divisions somewhat corresponding to the departments of government, and in speaking on this debate I intend to stick closely to those departments.

The division into those departments permits one to see just what the Speech does not contain.

The first division is "Immigration."

Mr. Speaker, immigration to us is a very important subject. We realize that Canada with its vast extent, Ontario with its great open spaces, needs immigrants if we can support them. I for one believe that immigration should be encouraged, but at the same time I think that the Government should be prepared to see that the immigrants brought into Canada at no time become a charge upon the public.

There are many opportunities in Canada for immigrants. Consider, for instance, the vast extent of northern Ontario; there we have large areas of farm land. I know we can secure in Great Britain alone plenty of farmers who would settle the vast areas of northern Ontario. I know the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) has already under consideration plans for the development of northern Ontario and I suggest to him that these immigrants which are brought in be encouraged to open up our northland by settlement on farm lands. If these immigrants are allowed to drift to the cities and compete in the labour market, it is only going to cause dissatisfaction and discontent. If we are going to bring in immigrants we have to have a properly-conceived plan in order to handle them.

Also some of the immigrants have been used in seasonal occupations. I think we should see to it that when these seasonal occupations have closed down, these men are taken care of and not allowed to drift from place to place all over Ontario and perhaps take the place of some of our own Canadians in industry. Many of these men could be used on very worth-while projects in northern Ontario. For instance, we have reforestation, ditching, road building and-so-forth. I only suggest these as creating a possibility for the use of these immigrants on these projects.

The next division of the Speech from the Throne is "Inflationary Trends." I just wish to read, first, a section from the Speech:

"During the year, prices have risen to inflationary levels. My Government has no choice but to recognize that responsibility for checking and controlling inflation rests with the Federal Government, with its jurisdiction over monetary policy, international trade, and the major sources of taxation, as well as its power to control the bulk of public expenditure."

Now, as against this quotation from the Speech from the Throne I wish to read point 19 of the now famous 22 points:

"Adequate supplies at reasonable prices of fuel, milk and other basic necessities will be assured by effective organization and administrative control. Representatives of labour, veteran organizations, and the consuming public will be appointed to all boards dealing with these matters."

As stated in the Speech from the Throne, the Government recognizes that this is a Federal Government job, but still in their 22 points of 1943, they included this point in the over-all picture.

Mr. Speaker, I now wish to refer to the mining communities of northern Ontario. I have looked through the Speech from the Throne with a great deal of interest and can find very little reference to what are great problems in northern Ontario, facing the great mining municipalities. There is one small clause, however, attached to the section headed, "Inflationary Trends," which is as follows:

"You will be asked to consider measures which will give assistance to the great communities which depend on gold mining."

I have on previous occasions, whilst speaking in the House, referred to these problems. Our mining municipalities have on many, many occasions paid visits to the different departments here expressing their desire for assistance for some measure of taxation which would relieve them of the great burden they bear.

I would like for a moment to point out to you just how these problems are aggravated by circumstances peculiar to the north. As you no doubt know, Mr. Speaker, the mines are not assessed in the same manner as other property. The municipality in which the land may be situated is not permitted to assess it like you do other real estate or other property. The assessment is made on profits only; that is, the net profits of the mines are assessed on a certain basis and the taxes are collected by the Federal and Provincial Governments. I am not going into the intricacies of how these taxes are collected; but I want to say that of the taxes collected approximately 88 per cent is used for Federal purposes only.

Now, let us examine the returns for those taxes. What do we receive from the Federal Government in our northern municipalities? Perhaps certain police protection and-so-forth; outside of that, the benefits received by the northern municipalities from the Federal Government are not apparent.

The Provincial Government receives a further 8 per cent. Compare 88 per cent with 8 per cent and you see just what the Provincial Government receives—a small amount. We receive from the Provincial Government, in return, provincial police protection and a certain amount of roads and-so-forth, road construction and education, but the great mining municipalities which have to provide health services for their people, police protection, water services, firemen, education and public utilities of all kinds, receive approximately the magnificent amount of 4 per cent of the total taxation.

Now, if you could place yourself in the north as a resident of a mining municipality, you would feel, as they do, that the time has come for a change when something must be done to assist them. They have come to the departments of Government here on many, many occasions. Last year there was an amendment put through by the Department of Municipal Affairs by which $150,000 was to be distributed amongst the municipalities. $150,000 may seem like a fairly large sum of money but the difficulty with that, Mr. Speaker, is this; those council members, reeves and councillors of the northern municipalities dislike coming to the Government with their hat in their hand begging each year for a hand-out. They are asking that the Government fix a definite assessment to give them a definite basis upon which to tax mines.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): May I just correct you? We have already put in assessors this year who made the proposition that we give them the same Assessment Act as in southern Ontario and they say, "No, we would prefer to have a five-year agreement on the same basis as we have had before."

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, I have conferred on many occasions with different municipal councils in the mining area and they insist that they want the right of taxation.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): They can have it. We offered it to them.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Why should they not pay taxes? Why should we go to the government for grants, etc.? We want the right to tax. I am pleased to hear the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) say we can have it, because I am sure they will appreciate that stand.

The next department mentioned in the Speech from the Throne is "Welfare." I have carefully searched the whole paragraph in regard to welfare and I can find no reference to new legislation. I would like to read to you sections of this division:

"During the past year, unemployment relief regulations have provided for increases in allowances due to the increased cost of living."

It is quite all right to make a reference to increased provision for the people on relief, but let us look into the amounts provided at the present time, Mr. Speaker. I have here the Ontario Gazette of February 21st, 1948, which I believe contains the latest regulations providing for relief costs. On page 263 we find the following:

"The relief schedule. Age of person."

That is the first column. Then the second column:

"Food other than milk."

Now, this is food only, I am not talking about fuel or shelter, I am talking about food.

"Single person $3.05 per week. Member of family 16 years or over, $2.41. Infant under one year, 57 cents. Child, one year to three years, both inclusive, $1.27. Child four to nine years, $1.84. Child ten to twelve years, both inclusive, $2.24. Girl thirteen to fifteen years, $2.24. Boy thirteen to fifteen years, $2.59."

The Government claims that it has increased the grants for relief. I think if you analyze those relief grants you will agree with me they can bear a whole lot more increasing.

Also the old-age pensions are to my mind, Mr. Speaker, very, very inadequate. To ask our aged people of the province to exist on somewhere between $30 and $40 is asking them to merely exist. They cannot live on that amount. The Government has made much of the increased allowance of $10, but it would be interesting to know in how many cases this increased allowance has been granted. There are a few cases where a small portion of it has been granted, but I have yet to hear in my area of any case where the full amount of the $10 additional grant has been made. During the 1947 Session I placed a question on the Order Paper asking for this information. I did not receive it. It has been placed on the Order Paper again.

Also under the heading of "Welfare" there is another section which I wish to read:

"Preliminary steps have also been taken to inaugurate a system of rehabilitation for handicapped persons."

Preliminary steps are to be commended, and we hope that the Government will carry them through to a satisfactory conclusion. It is a reform which has long been needed, and we hope the Government will spare no expense in this regard.

The next heading to which I wish to refer is "Health." Here again we find only talk about what has been done in the past, and no important changes or services are forecast for the future. This is one department in which we have a right to expect that the Government would display some concern and demonstrate its attitude by a clear-cut policy which should have been outlined in the Speech from the Throne.

I wish to quote the following from this section of the Speech:

"High costs have created special problems in the important field of public health. An increase in the cost of hospital supplies and wages has resulted in an operating deficit in three-quarters of all public hospitals, notwithstanding increased charges to private patients."

This indicates to my mind clearly that only the very wealthy are able to pay hospital charges. That is, only the wealthy people of the province can receive proper hospital care and attention. This situation clearly indicates that the time has come when we should inaugurate a province-wide hospital plan such as they have in the province of Saskatchewan.

Another reference is made under Department of Health to the examination of pregnant women and the provision made by the Department of Health for the payment of an examination. That is, pregnant women who are permitted to go and receive one examination free per year, the government paying the charge.

I have secured one of the application forms and I might say it is almost worth five dollars of the doctor's time just to fill it in. I am not going to read it, but I say again it is worth five dollars of the doctor's time to fill in this form. There is one thing missing from it. There is no indication here to the woman who is examined that the doctor is paid by the Government. I think there should be a clear indication somewhere to let the woman examined know that the doctor has been paid his fee and if it is the family doctor she will know he has received so much, and she will know that she is receiving credit for a payment made by the Government.

There is also reference made in this section of the Department of Health referring to examination by X-ray for tuberculosis in hospitals. I would strongly urge that all patients entering an hospital be examined for tuberculosis so that it will protect the nursing staff and also the patients. I feel that this would be a great step in assisting to keep the health of our people up to par.

The hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) in some of his many speeches has referred to the shortage of nurses. I am not blaming the Government for the shortage of nurses; it is a situation that has been building up over a great many years. The reason for the shortage of nurses is the fact that the nursing profession has never been given its proper place in society. We all know that the teaching profession and many of the other professions, which are in close touch with our people, are underpaid, and the nursing profession is one of those. I think also that the system of training has considerable to do with the present shortage of nurses. Why should a nurse be asked to scrub, sweep floors and do other menial tasks for the first five or six months after she enters the hospital to train? Let the nurse enter immediately upon some interesting phase of her own work immediately she is enrolled, and you will find that there will be a sufficient increase in applications for the nursing profession.

The next feature of the Speech from the Throne to which I wish to refer is "Education." This is one department where I can perhaps commend the government to a certain extent. I know that it is one department where an effort has been made to carry out the promises contained in the famous 22 points. The setting up of larger administration areas and the setting up of township school areas is to be commended. The day of the little red school house has gone forever in areas where we can, without too great a cost and too great an inconvenience, bring those children into modern up-to-date schools. I believe that it pays dividends to have the children educated in schools that are graded. It is a tremendous handicap for a teacher to have eight or nine classes and sufficient attention is not given to the children and anything to encourage the setting up of larger schools and larger school areas—township school areas, etc.—is well worth commending, and I commend the government on the steps they have taken.

In the section on "Education," the Speech from the Throne appears to continue the idea of doing a little boasting of past accomplishments. Reference is made to the amount spent in grants last year. "In 1947, the grants reached the level of $30,134,336"; that may seem a large amount, but let us remember that it is an investment in the future of our province. Education is one department where we cannot skimp, and I hope the Government will see fit to increase the grants in the future.

I know from my own experience the troubles encountered by some of the little school sections in northern Ontario. They are away back in backwoods settlements. In previous years they were not able to spend very much because their total assessment was very low. Now under the regulations, they are rather handicapped by the provision that there was a basic period fixed on which the grants were based. I know the Government has relaxed those regulations in a great number of northern schools, but I would ask the Government to take into account the little sections in northern Ontario where their assessment is low, to assist them to build new schools. Some of them are in a deplorable condition.

Next I want to say a few words about "vocational training" and I urge the Government to continue what it has started in connection with this type of training.

I think we must recognize the fact that the day has come when academic training is not satisfactory and is not the full answer in the educational field. I can tell you about facts that I have observed in northern Ontario. In my own locality I can remember years when 160 pupils were enrolled in Grade 9; if you went to Grade 13, which is the finishing grade in the high school, you would find 8 or 10 pupils graduating. Mr. Speaker, that is not a satisfactory situation. I do not know who can be blamed. It is not the department, as the department has supplied the facilities for education. It is not the staff of the schools, perhaps it is the nature of the education.

A lot of these youngsters start in and after a certain period in school they see some of their friends working in the mills and mines and-so-forth and they get a desire to get out and earn money. They leave school without completing the full five-year term which is a very, very unsatisfactory situation. I am sure that many of those children in after years will regret that step.

I think the answer is vocational schools. If those youngsters could be taken into some of our vocational schools and taught all the intricate workings of the industry nearest to their school it might be of some assistance. For instance, in Iroquois Falls, why not teach them paper making, show them how paper is made and-so-forth, and teach them the different trades that are required in paper making? In the gold-mining areas, teach them gold-mining. Let the vocational schools develop boys and girls who will work in their own communities and you will find that the attendance at schools will reach a very much higher percentage than it is at the present time in relation to entrants in Grade 9 and graduates in Grade 13.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY
(Minister of Agriculture) : Mr. Speaker, I am very much interested in what the

hon. member (Mr. Grummett) is saying, and I would like him to embellish it. Does he think they should go to vocational training in the morning and a factory in the afternoon, or stay in school all day?

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, I think if we could perhaps intersperse part-time work with their studies, it would help to interest the children. A straight period of four or five years in a vocational school might lead some of them to say: "Oh well, I am no longer interested," but if they could go into the factories, into the mines, or into the paper mill and do the practical work about which they are learning in their lessons, it would stimulate their interest.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Show them the practical application of it?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, show them the practical application of what they are learning.

I, for one, am very interested in the problem of education in northern Ontario and I think to a large extent vocational training is the answer. I have been greatly disturbed, I admit, in connection with high schools, in seeing 160 enter the first year and 8 or 10 taking their diplomas in the final year. It is unsatisfactory. And it is hard to put your finger on the solution. It may have been that the war years had some effect; the demand for labour and-so-forth may have drawn away some of the younger residents of our localities who might have otherwise remained pupils, but it is still continuing in the same percentage of wastage between entrance and graduation.

Three and a third million dollars was provided in the estimates last year, apparently, for vocational training. I hope that the Government sees fit to boost that many times in future years.

The student-aid programme is another measure to which I can give my heartiest support. We look forward to the day when free education will be given all children from the day they enter school until they graduate. Of course there has to be some limitation on those who continue, and those who qualify for it should, in my opinion, be given free education right through university.

The next division to which I come, Mr. Speaker, is "Housing." Again I want to read one of the 22 Points, that is Point 8:

"To create an Ontario Housing Commission for the purpose of wiping out slums, improving home conditions in city, town and country, and providing post-war employment on a large scale."

That is what is said in Point No. 8 of the 22 Points.

The Hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) made it abundantly clear when he was speaking on Tuesday, that that did not mean construction of houses, but that does not explain what the people of Ontario believed in 1943, nor what the press believed. I quite well remember seeing in the press, statements about the great housing programme that the Progressive-Conservatives would undertake. In addition, their own speakers, in going about the country, told the people that houses would be built. There is only one solution to that difficulty, Mr. Speaker; perhaps all political parties should call in their speakers and give them a very, very definite explanation of what their party's platform does not contain. Otherwise mistakes and errors are going to occur.

There is reference in the Speech from the Throne to "Legislation." I am looking forward with a great deal of interest to the presentation of this "Legislation." I hope it meets some of our expectations.

The next department is "Public Works." I must say again that the Speech from the Throne is very indefinite in connection with public works. I would like to suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) that perhaps the camp at Monteith now standing idle could be used for some more useful purpose. As you know, we have in northern Ontario a great number of miners, and amongst miners there is the prevalence of a very, very troublesome occupational disease — silicosis. Is it not possible to use part of the camp at Monteith for the treatment, care, and rehabilitation of silicotics? I know that some of our northern municipalities have advocated the establishment at Monteith of a hospital of that kind. I hope that the different departments concerned may look into that phase of the problem and see if the camp at Monteith could not be used for that purpose.

“Commissions”: Mr. Speaker, I wish to refer only very, very briefly to the matter of “Commissions.” The Forestry Commission’s and the Milk Commission’s Reports were very, very fine efforts and gave us a great deal of information. I hope that the legislation brought down by the Government will carry out to the fullest extent the recommendations contained in both of those reports. I do not intend to anticipate the legislation that may be brought down, or may be now on the order paper, but I would just like to remind hon. members present that the Milk Commission’s Report recommended measures urged in past years by our group. We were very, very satisfied to see these recommendations, in the Milk Commission’s Report.

The next section mentioned in the Speech from the Throne is “Agriculture.”

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Just be a little careful there.

MR. GRUMMETT: I am always easy on the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy). He is one man whom I hate to take any “digs” at, and I hope that anything I have to say will not annoy the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy).

HON. DANA H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): You have not annoyed anybody yet.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Why did you not enlarge on that recommendation for milk?

MR. GRUMMETT: I would like to say, however, that the Speech from the Throne does not give us any indication of legislation which the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) intends to bring down. There is not one word about future plans.

I would like to read an extract from the Rural Co-operator of February 24th:

“‘If the Cost of Production Branch which the Ontario Minister of Agriculture is promising farm people is to be of the greatest service to us, we must again very vigorously restate our demand that the Ontario Agricultural College be made independent of government and placed under a Board of Governors,’ R. W. Morrison, First Vice-President, Ontario Federation of Agriculture, told an annual meeting of the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers Association in Toronto on February 18th.

‘I say this because it seems obvious that the logical development of such an undertaking would be under the Department of Economics at the Ontario Agricultural College,’ Mr. Morrison said.

‘The Ontario Agricultural College can never hope to attract or hold the best qualified staff as long as the staff members are obliged to accept the status, the restrictions, and the uncertainties of the civil servant, nor can we ever be sure of the availability of such cost data, as it is controlled by the Government. The recognition and hence the desirable prestige of the College will always be doubtful as long as the policy and administration of this great institution remains subject to the whims of the Government of the Day.

‘Politics being what they are, we have no guarantee of always having a friendly or sympathetic Minister of Agriculture, certainly we have not the slightest assurance that even a genuinely friendly, sympathetic and co-operative Minister of Agriculture can hope to get his way with a non-sympathetic Cabinet.

‘For these reasons we must be realistic and press vigorously for having the Ontario Agricultural College placed under a Board of Governors as soon as possible.' Mr. Morrison's remarks followed a statement by C. D. Graham, Deputy-Minister of Agriculture, explaining the Minister's proposal to set up a Cost of Production Branch."

I want to refer for a moment or two to agriculture in northern Ontario. I have on different occasions in this House pointed out the great possibilities of northern Ontario. We have vast areas of the very best agricultural land in the north which you can find anywhere, and under proper development, it will support and sustain a much greater population than we have in Ontario today.

I would urge the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) to co-operate with the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) in the use of machinery pools. The people of northern Ontario have been asking whether they could secure bulldozers and other machinery for the clearing of land, the ditching of land and so forth. I understand that the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) intends to establish machinery pools, and if the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) would get together with the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett), those machinery pools which will be established in the north may be used for the development of agriculture to a much greater extent than at the present time.

The next department is that of "Mines." I am sorry the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) is not in his seat, as I am disappointed at there being no explanation whatsoever in the Speech from the Throne as to what the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) intends to do regarding our great mining industry. There are only two small paragraphs covering the whole question of mines.

The next is the department of "Travel and Publicity." Not one word about the future plans, except that two reception camps will be established.

In regard to hydro-electric power: I do not intend to spend as much time on hydro as the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) or the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). Their speeches threw a great deal of light on past operations of the Commission and the political influences at work under Liberal and Conservative Governments alike. They have confirmed our impression that hydro has been, and still is, being treated like a political football, rather than the great public service it should be.

I will not comment on the two major proposals of hydro expansion and frequency change-over. I would like to say, however, that the summary presented by the Government, while it contained certain information, does not, to my mind, go far enough. I think the reports of the experts engaged by the Government should be submitted to each and every one of the hon. members of the Legislature. The Government should bring in—

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, may I interject to say that the last report was received, if I remember correctly, about the 15th or 16th of February. The reports contain about 350 or 360 pages. They will be printed and distributed to the hon. members as soon as possible.

MR. GRUMMETT: I am pleased to hear the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) state we will have an opportunity of examining the complete reports.

I believe, also, Mr. Speaker, that this is a very important question to the people of Ontario and should not be treated lightly. I would suggest that a select committee of the Legislature be appointed. Let the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) present the reports as speedily as possible, and let a select committee be appointed without delay, and between now and the time the House prorogues we would have sufficient time to go into the question, and we would then know the full programme with which we will have to deal. This select committee could be composed of a small number of the hon. members, and they would be able to present a report to the House.

I also hope, Mr. Speaker, that the greater volume of expansion and change-over will not detract attention from the rural hydro consumers. I could tell you many, many instances where hydro has been extended to the small farming communities in my riding, and you cannot appreciate how these people feel when they have the power at their disposal. I hope that our rural areas in Ontario will rapidly be given the opportunity to avail themselves of the services of hydro-electric power.

The next department is that of "Planning and Development." Mr. Speaker, when this department was set up, I was one who commended the Government on setting up that department. At that time I visualized a department that would be all-powerful, in fact, the second department of Government, next only to that of the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew).

But, what do we find? That it is one of the very, very junior departments in the Government—a department which could be great and helpful, kept in a very, very junior position. In fact, if you wish to find the department, it almost takes a magnifying glass to find out just where the offices are located.

HON. DANA PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): That does not stop people from coming in.

MR. GRUMMETT: It takes a lot of time to find it, though.

HON. MR. PORTER: Too bad. Come in more often.

MR. GRUMMETT: Oh, I am on my way around.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. GRUMMETT: The next department I wish to deal with is that of "Highways."

HON. MR. PORTER: Is that all you have to say?

MR. GRUMMETT: That is all I could express here on that department.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh!

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): That is really too much.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. GRUMMETT: In regard to the Highways Department I am pleased to say, Mr. Speaker, that I can commend the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett). I wish he were in the House. We have gone to him on many occasions and placed before him the problems of the north in the matter of Highways—and they are many—and he has given us very, very good consideration. Last year the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) and myself interviewed him regarding the Swastika-Metachawan Highway. He promised us the road would be built within two years. Last year he constructed the greater portion of the road, and I believe the remainder will be completed this year.

I also wish to refer to the Timmins-Sudbury road. I am looking forward to the day when there will be a loop extending from Sudbury to Timmins, so that people can go from Sudbury to Timmins, and then take the other road back by way of Swastika and North Bay, that is, making a complete loop. In that way they will not have to travel over the same route in going to and coming from the northern portions of the province.

This road would also open up a very large area of tourist resorts, one of the very finest tourist areas in the world, which lies between Sudbury and Timmins.

In addition to this, the area contains valuable farming land and valuable mineral land. I am sure that with the opening up of this road it would add greatly to the wealth of Ontario.

I see the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) is now back in his seat, and I wish to say again that I appreciate what he has given to northern Ontario, in the way of roads.

It was unfortunate that in 1947, highway No. 11 went to pieces, and created quite a lot of dissatisfaction. I am not blaming the department. The road was well constructed in the first instance. It is due, I think, to the method of using the roads at the present time. In the winters we have become accustomed to insisting that our roads be ploughed. The snow ploughs come along and they plough all the snow off the roads, right down to the pavement, and the frost penetrates to a very great depth. Therefore, you can expect nothing else in the summer time, when the spring rains and thaws come, but that the roads will break up. I think we have to find some method of leaving a certain amount of snow on the surface, to protect it. As long as we snow-plough our roads down to the gravel or the pavement, just so long will those roads be destroyed year after year in northern Ontario. You do not have that problem in old Ontario. It is only where we have the extreme cold weather that our roads are so affected, and to that I attribute the very, very unsatisfactory condition of Highway No. 11 last year.

I hope with the experience of 1947, the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) will have his machinery and equipment in readiness in 1948, so that the roads can rapidly be put into good condition, because, otherwise, the same condition will prevail again this year as prevailed last year.

Also I wish to commend the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) on the assistance he has given the municipalities in road construction. I fully agree with his policy that organized municipalities should be first set up in all of the areas before an extensive road programme is undertaken. As pointed out by the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett), to construct a road through unorganized territory and leave it, is not the proper method. If a road is constructed, there should be some authority which can step in and take hold and maintain the road in the condition in which it is left by the Department, after having constructed the road.

There were quite a number of roads constructed in northern Ontario through the unorganized township areas, which today are valueless simply because there was no authority to take hold and maintain these roads from year to year. I hope that the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) will continue his support to the municipalities in northern Ontario in road construction.

H realizes the very great need, as I referred before, to the equipment pools which I would like to see used by both the department of Highways and the department of Agriculture.

There has been a suggestion that these pools would be set up this year. I hope the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) gets around to purchasing the necessary equipment. It will be of very great advantage to northern Ontario when these equipment pools are established in different areas. The farmers can secure the necessary machinery for ditching and clearing the land and the municipalities can secure machinery for work required on municipal roads.

The next division to which I come, Mr. Speaker, is "Labour." In this connection, I am going to leave the discussion of this subject to one of the hon. members of my group. I do not see why I should cover all subjects. The Government promised the best labour legislation in the world. The very best labour legislation in the world was to be put on the statute books of Ontario.

HON. C. DALEY (Minister of Labour): That is one promise we have fulfilled.

MR. GRUMMETT: By going to the Dominion Government to get it or by accepting the Dominion Government's substitute for what might be a good bill. If you have to go to a foreign jurisdiction, why does not the Government take the Saskatchewan labour code, which is a labour code satisfactory to all labour.

HON. D. H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): A foreign jurisdiction?

MR. GRUMMETT: Foreign to Ontario. A jurisdiction outside Ontario, if that wording is more appropriate to the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter).

"Lands and Forests;" here again I am not going to deal with this problem. I hope the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott) is not getting off his glasses because he is getting alarmed. I am going to leave dealing with this problem to another hon. member of our group.

HON. H. R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): You handle it yourself, Bill (Mr. Grummett).

MR. GRUMMETT: I will let you down easily, Harold (Mr. Scott).

"Dominion, Province and Municipalities:"

It is one of the interesting peculiarities of a democratic system of government that it is possible for His Majesty's representative in Toronto to regret the failure of the Dominion to co-operate in Dominion-Provincial relations, while at the same time His Majesty's representative in Ottawa was able to complain about the failure of Ontario to co-operate. As for our group, we are sick and tired of hearing the futile arguments indulged in by the two governments. We want to see some action to attack the problems of health, welfare and taxation in this country.

"Provincial-Municipal Committee:" We are very happy to see the proposal for a provincial-municipal conference—which was introduced in the House for the first time last year by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson), but was not pressed to a vote—has now been accepted by the Government in the form of a Provincial-Municipal Committee.

"Reform Institutions:" This is a new department and I am sure that it has a great future ahead of it. It is a department that can do much for the people of Ontario.

I had the good fortune, Mr. Speaker, along with about 25 hon. members of the House to visit Brampton on Tuesday last and I wish to commend the hon. Minister (Mr.

Dunbar) on what has been done at Brampton.

This is a new penal institution and the work being done there for young delinquents deserves our praise. I only hope that the same type of work is being carried on at all other penal institutions.

It was unfortunate that the incident happened at Burwash some time ago which really throws discredit on the department, but I am sure that learning from the errors that occurred at Burwash, the officials in charge of this department will build up in time a system of which we can be proud in Ontario.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Did you notice one part of the report where Professor Jaffray said the deputy and director were a credit to Ontario, and not only to Ontario but to all Canada?

MR. GRUMMETT: I did not have the opportunity of reading the report; I had to rely on what has been printed in the press, so I missed that part praising the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) and his deputy.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No, no, I did not say that. I said the deputy and the director.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): I will say it for you.

MR. GRUMMETT: I thought you said the minister and the deputy, I am sorry.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: When I get through a little later on, you will see whether the Department is very much discredited. Did you have an opportunity to read the press report in the Timmins paper with headlines across the page about the Monteith institution, printed on the 4th of the month which said it was a credit to Canada.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. Give the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) an opportunity to carry on without interruption.

MR. GRUMMETT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Members of our group can join with the Government in expressing appreciation to the Civil Service for their fine work. But I think we can also join with the Civil Service in a feeling of dismay that the Speech from the Throne did not indicate any increase in their pay for the work to meet the rising costs of living.

Mr. Speaker, I have covered the different departments as set out in the Speech from the Throne. I have taken a different angle from that which I or anyone else has taken in previous years. I believe the proper way to approach the Speech from the Throne, is to deal with what is in it and what is not in it. I do not agree that the Speech from the Throne should be used as an opportunity to ramble all over the world. Let us confine our remarks to Ontario. We are dealing with problems in Ontario and if we handle those efficiently, and give our full time to Ontario's problems, we will find we have enough to do.

I am sorry the Speech from the Throne was not more definite in many of the departments. Perhaps the Government may yet see fit to bring in some legislation, but I doubt it. I am looking forward with a great deal of interest for the legislation promised in connection with the different departments.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I believe I have occupied too much time of the Legislature, so I will conclude my remarks by moving, seconded by Mr. Anderson (Fort William), that the amendment to the motion for consideration of the speech of the hon. the Lieutenant-Governor now before this House, be further amended by adding thereto the following words:

"And this House regrets that the Government has put forward thoroughly inadequate proposals for labour legislation, vague and insubstantial proposals, and no plans at all to meet the pressing need for adequate health and welfare services;

And this House particularly regrets the failure of the Government to recognize the need for comprehensive planning and broad measures of social ownership in the economic life of the province with a view to maintaining full production and full employment."

Mr. Speaker, I was greatly handicapped today by having a very, very sore throat. I did not think I would be able to get through. I thank you for bearing with me in being so slow in delivering my address under the circumstances.

MR. A. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, I join in my congratulations to you, sir, which I am merely repeating as I stated at the last session,—on your succession to the high office of Speaker, and to the mover (Mr. Pryde) and the seconder (Mr. Hamilton) of the Speech from the Throne now before the House; the mover (Mr. Pryde) coming into this House for the first time was called upon to take on quite a duty within a matter of minutes or very shortly after he was received into the House, and he did a very commendable work.

As has been said of the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) he gave a very excellent address and did it in a manner which is worthy of emulation and I am going to try to emulate a little bit in that respect this afternoon. I might have to refer to my notes towards the latter part of my address. I want to compliment the leader of the third largest group in the House (Mr. Grummett) for his remarks this afternoon. It seemed to me that he strewed bouquets on almost every department in the Government; I could hardly believe my ears when I heard him move the amendment referred to. It seemed a thoroughly inadequate amendment to the Speech from the Throne, but I do in all sincerity say that we on this side of the House appreciate his remarks this afternoon.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I also wish to join in the tribute to the memory of the late Dr. Hobbs Taylor. There is perhaps something a little more personal in this tribute than that made by other hon. members, particularly because that very severe illness which he experienced in 1945 carried through to a great extent in the Toronto General Hospital in this city in the riding of St. Patrick. And I recall very vividly a visit I paid to him on the evening of election day in June, 1945, when he received there the first early returns of what turned out to be an exceedingly satisfactory victory for him despite the fact that throughout the whole campaign he had been lying almost at death's door in the hospital quite a considerable distance from his own riding.

There is also another I would like to pay tribute to in this House, a former member of the press gallery, the late Andrew McLaughlin, who represented for many years here in this House the United Church publication. He was not so well known during the last year or so as he was not as frequent a visitor in the gallery because of an illness which eventually brought about his death in Belleville a few weeks ago.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say just at the outset of my remarks this afternoon that what I propose to say may tend to make this, following yesterday as National Mining Day of Canada, something of a complete Northern Ontario afternoon. For the benefit of those hon. members who are in the House and interested, I would like to say that my address will take approximately forty-five minutes and that the first part of it I think will be gentle and I hope pleasant, the second part will be realistic, and it might even be turbulent, and it is my hope hon. members opposite, some of whom I see in the House at the moment, will see fit to remain in their seats because I will have something to say that will have a definite bearing on certain hon. members in this House.

Mr. Speaker, for many years the name "Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway" has been almost a by-word in the homes of people living in the north and throughout Canada as typifying a fine example of railway, run by the Provincial Government and extending into virgin territory opening up the great mining areas and serving also at the same time as a colonization line, the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway doing this without payment on the part of the people of the province of any large amount by way of running account. That name has been changed recently to the "Ontario Northland Railway" and it is difficult, perhaps, for the old name to disappear. I noticed not so long ago it appeared in one of the main offices of the railway in as large a centre as Kirkland Lake. So the name has been changed to Ontario Northland Railway. Speaking detachedly, I know there are some in Northern Ontario who feel that no government in Southern Ontario can speak in any other way but detachedly about the north. I do not advise the use in that way, but speaking from a detached standpoint I think that the name "Ontario Northland Railway" is important and that it typifies that great north land north of North Bay up to Moosonee and the great railway that gives service in that area. I had the good fortune a few weeks ago to proceed north in the coldest part of the winter to Cobalt to attend the funeral of a great personal friend, a veteran prospector who at the time of his death held the oldest extant miner's license in Ontario, known belovedly to many in the north as "Whispering Bill" Smith.

Awhile later I went to see, at the old corner drug store, which my friend the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) knows so well, and which I knew so well years ago, to see the old thermometer there registering, early in the morning, thirty-some-odd degrees below zero.

I actually drank in with avidity, in somewhat the same manner as certain hon. members—not in this House, are inclined on occasion to drink a real glass of whiskey, the keen, rare, cold winter air of the north. To me it is a dozen times more of a tonic than any of your southern United States winter resorts, but then I suppose I can say I am still young and vigorous, I am not in the same class as the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) who sends his constituents bouquets from Florida at Christmas time and they like them and they like him. But having lived in the north for some years, I say with knowledge and feeling to the young people of today: "look to the north".

The spirit of the north is great—it is not parochial or narrow or intolerant—you find very few animosities, racial, religious or class-wise, and in most of the small mining communities men and women of all the different degrees that exist in a community rub shoulders daily to the benefit of all. The northern people are a little more like westerners than we of southern Ontario. Kindliness is not a trait that they alone can claim but I could not help but notice on that trip when I was at the railway station at Cobalt waiting to go north and I was laden, probably more by bulk than by weight, with a lot of parcels and baggage, the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) came and assisted me with some of my impedimenta to get aboard the train. I regarded it as kindness but it is possible there was a desire behind it all to get me out of his bailiwick as quickly as possible.

We often hear terms derogatory of Toronto in other parts of Canada, in Ontario itself sometimes, and even by some of the new immigrants from England. When I was in Edmonton not so long ago I picked up a morning newspaper there and saw a heading which read: "The Toronto Party"—it said that the great Progressive-Conservative Party of this country was "A Toronto party". We all know what utter nonsense that sort of thing is, and certainly, whether it be in Vancouver, Edmonton or anywhere else in the country, politicians and newspapers run chiefly for political purposes, are unfair indeed when they descend to such a low method of assault as that. But in the north country in two different towns on a short visit I saw for example in one town this sign on a big store; "Toronto Clothing Store", and on another: "Toronto Superb Repair Shop".

Oh, no, the name "Toronto" and Toronto itself are not regarded unfairly in those great spaces and I would just like to suggest to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) and also to the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew) and the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Scott), and another hon. minister right here in front of me (Mr. Porter), that they should emulate the example set by the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow), who a short while ago brought into this city a large number of children from his riding. I would suggest to these hon. ministers that they load up from the ridings of friends opposite, Ontario Northland cars with children and bring them down here to the city of Toronto and let them see the sights and learn something about this great city, perhaps at Eastertime, at any rate, at some time other than during the short, glorious summertime of the north.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): I did that last year.

MR. ROBERTS: I am very glad to hear the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) say he did that, as well as the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) and I suggest to the other hon. ministers more and more of it.

I was quite interested to know the feeling in the north about the new Porcupine riding that has recently been established, giving to Ontario one more seat in the Dominion Parliament. I find there was a feeling there that was a very proper thing, that the not-so-large territorially but relatively large in population area composed of Timmins and surrounding areas, Schumacher and so on, should be given separate representation in the Dominion House. I would say Mr. Speaker, that while I would not prophesy who will win that riding, I am quite certain that the winner will be bilingual.

I wish now to mention certain parts of ridings represented by two at least of the hon. members opposite, and I am sure they will not mind if I do this for a few moments.

Cobalt is still and always has been, in recent years, the "Grand Old Man of the North". If you travel through there today you will find a large boulder of host rock with a plaque to the memory of the late Willett Millar, one time Deputy Minister of Mines in this province, and the cornerstone of the Cobalt Railway Station indicates that it was laid in 1909 by the late Sir James P. Whitney. These are landmarks of a great past.

Today Cobalt is having what you might call a "glandular operation" performed on it, a silver-cobalt gland—grafting operation, and the Department of Mines is spending a substantial amount of money with a geologist of considerable outstanding ability in charge in re-mapping and geologizing and working along technical lines in that area in the hope that what they will produce will get a number of people who are willing to gamble a bit to make another try here and there, in the hope that they will find more cobalt and silver in that area. I think the Government is to be commended for that work in that particular area. Yes, Cobalt, "The Old Man of the North," is ageing but is dying hard. They say old soldiers never die, and the stout mining camp dies hard.

Then you go on to Kirkland Lake where you see such great Canadian mines as Lake Shore, Wright Hargreaves, Macassa, Toburn, Sylvanite and Upper Canada, and then a little farther east in the Larder Lake area, Chesterville and Kerr Addison. There you have the larger counterpart of what Cobalt was thirty years ago and what some as yet undeveloped mining areas of Northern Ontario will be thirty years hence.

I walked out into the country on a cold Sunday morning along the road to Goodfish Lake, out of Kirkland Lake. As I walked along that lonely road I saw, first, after walking some distance, a Finnish-Canadian with skis and a big shovel. Later I passed on the lonely road an English-Canadian with snowshoes strapped on his back; I met two boys at play in front of their snow-capped and snow-banked cabin, and I stopped and chatted with them a few moments. I found one of them walked into Kirkland Lake a distance of two and a half miles every morning and back again at night after school in order to attend school there in order to save his family ten cents which they would have had to pay to have him transported, five cents each way by taxi, which would have picked him up about half a mile from his home. I liked the spirit of that youngster. It is the type of spirit, the pioneering spirit, that is still needed in this country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I noticed that the local municipal roads for winter driving were kept in a remarkably good state and I also noticed that the Department of Highways kept the main road in a very splendid state for winter driving, in fact, they actually cushioned the curves. I ran across one driver down Timigami way, who had at the rate of fifty miles an hour slid off the road at one of these curves and to his amazement and that of the others in his car found that his speed was absorbed, rather rapidly but nevertheless sufficiently to enable his car to come to a standstill without any damage to the car or the occupants, due to the soft snow which was banked there by the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) men up in that north country, so that you see now even in the winter-time the north can be traversed by road in a very satisfactory manner.

A Conservative government built the first trunk road into Northern Ontario, and I see no reason why, when it comes to building the last trunk road and the last main road in Northern Ontario, it should not be built by a Progressive-Conservative Government, following a line of road building by successive governments, by this party in the opening up of that great country.

There is a great northland to be developed in Northern Ontario, small in comparison with the North-West Territories which have been termed the last frontier of Canada, but large in comparison with mineral areas elsewhere. The question is, is it being developed rapidly enough? Nickel and copper at Sudbury are being advanced speedily but we find that the gold industry, both in Ontario and in Canada generally, is suffering from a situation which is unfortunate. A fixed price for gold has caused a great deal of difficulty. At the beginning of 1934 the price for gold was raised from $20. an ounce to $35. an ounce, and from 1933 through to 1939 there was a very rapid, progressive increase in production of gold in Canada of which about half the total came, and still does, from Ontario. Then when war came and the United States entered into the war, for a variety of causes, particularly the fact that labour and supplies for the moment were required in other and more important directions, we found that notwithstanding a 10 per cent. discount on the Canadian dollar, during that period, the gold production of Canada was brought, first to a standstill, and then to a decline until 1946, when it levelled off. There was a slight improvement in 1947, but again for various reasons, particularly the greatly-increased cost of production, the fixed price of gold and the loss of that 10 per cent. discount, we find that the production of gold in Canada and in Ontario today is approximately half what it was in 1938.

The gold industry and gold prospecting may therefore be said to be in the doldrums. Some half-way measures have been attempted to alleviate this situation, but I think that clearer thinking and clearer policy is necessary to bring that about. I believe that students of the question pretty well agree that the problem is, over-all, an international problem and I myself believe that in the interests of our world economy, a new price for gold will be justified, and I do hope that we will not wait, and that the nations of the world in whose custody the great resources of gold are held and who have the monetary and economic power in their hands will not wait until possibly a depression descends upon these nations and then try to save the situation not only by going out and raising the price of gold, but rather that those in charge will have the foresight to see that in these times, in the 40's and the 50's, things are different than in the 30's and that we should forestall those periods by following sensible courses before such an eventuality materializes. In that connection, I am one of those who believe that it is in the interests of the holder nations of the resources of gold to join in an arrangement for increased prices and in any such revaluation and redistribution of gold, this country naturally stands to gain very tremendously and with an increased production of that metal on the scale that could then be anticipated, much good would flow economically to our country and to our whole system.

Meanwhile, however, careful study of the situation should be carried on in Canada and in our own province. I realize that we are up against a very difficult situation here in the Province of Ontario because more than 90 per cent. of all the taxes and revenue collected from gold mines goes to the Dominion authorities and less than 10 per cent. is distributed to the provincial authorities and the municipalities. A new deal should be made and the sooner the better, whereby the redistribution of those percentages is made. From conversation with people both here and up north I think that a fifty-fifty split would be a great deal fairer than the present split of 90 per cent.—plus and 10 per cent.—less, and in that readjustment the municipalities of the north are certain to get their fair share of benefit.

In passing, I should mention that along the line of the Ontario Northland, approximately $700,000 is being paid by way of that one-mill subsidy to municipalities in the districts lying along it, and, of course, northern Ontario has gained perhaps more than any other area in the increases by way of grants to schools initiated by the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew) in implementation of one of his most famous pledges in his manifesto of 1943 and I believe that hon. members opposite should give credit to the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew) for that. I think that the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) in a somewhat begrudging way, indicated that this afternoon, and I say to all hon. members opposite: "give credit where credit is due"—if you cannot put it on any higher plane, "give the devil his due". Unquestionably there is credit due to this Government, and to the hon. Minister in charge of that department (Mr. Drew).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. ROBERTS: Now, Mr. Speaker, the Ontario Government appreciates the value of northern Ontario. I would just like to say this, and say it for the benefit of my own colleagues in the House as well, that we need better liaison in northern Ontario. For too long we have had coming down here heading delegations, heading representatives of municipalities, and-so-forth, people who are opposed to this government, and who are openly and continually, at home, saying and doing things in direct opposition to the government and what it stands for. The sooner we establish a liaison with the people in the north who are with us, the sooner we will make progress, not for the sake of this government, because it is a large government as it is, but for the benefit of northern Ontario.

There are a number of outstanding citizens in different walks of life in the North—and I say this without in any way disparaging the hon. representatives in this house from the north—whom I believe should come to the fore in the interests of that country, and I hope when the next election takes place in this province, there will be represented in this government, on this side of the house, two or three or more representatives of the Progressive-Conservative party coming from that part of northern Ontario along the Northland Transportation line.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. ROBERTS: Even if it means the disappearance of very excellent representatives opposite—individually and personally—and I am speaking of them in their personal capacities.

In that connection also may I say with all sincerity that it is my hope one or two or more if possible of those new representatives will be what we term our French-Canadian stock, and it is my hope that in the interest, again not of this government alone, but of those several hundreds of thousands of French-Canadians in the province of Ontario, they will see that there is representation in this government of worthy representatives of our fellow Canadians of that stock.

Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House need also an outstanding representative whose mother tongue is French. We have need for representation from such a large group, and we would welcome them, I know.

I would like, in that connection, Mr. Speaker, just to say a word or two about the use of the French language. Knowledge of the use of the French language by English-speaking Canadians will certainly not lessen the English in the love of their mother tongue, but can contribute considerably to Canadian culture. Whatever might have been the position on the North American continent today if different measures had been adopted 190 years ago, the fact is that, true to her policy of giving to all who came under her rule, freedom of the person, freedom of religion and freedom of language, Britannia so provided them, and today more than 25 per cent. of the population of Canada have French as their mother tongue, and in one very important, particularly large geographical area of Canada, over 80 per cent. of the population use that language daily. If there exists any important group in our population who would seek to abolish the use of French as an official language in Canada, then such a group must consider very seriously the accompanying consequence, namely, partitioning Canada, just as the United Nations is faced with and perplexed by the problem of a partitioned Palestine, with all the troubles and difficulties involved there. So I say in all sincerity, as a third-generation Canadian on both side of my family, I believe there is much to be gained by developing our common heritage with all the valuable and wonderful roots which we have in this country as a result of the stocks that go to make up our true Canadianism.

In that connection, the Ontario Government of today, and the Union Nationale Government of the Province of Quebec have done more than any two governments in this country to work toward that end. One example of that is the promotion of such an organization as the Visites Inter-Provinciales, whereby several hundred youths in their teens are exchanged, coming into this province from Quebec to learn and perfect English and learn the English customs; going from here into the Province of Quebec to learn French, and learn the French customs. If this is continued in increasing numbers, for a number of years, an understanding which is best for all of us will be attained.

Mr. Speaker, may I go one step further at this point, and say that I believe that the further advance for unity, real national unity, would be an allocation of part-time—perhaps during the evening, once or twice a week—radio time for instruction in English on the French networks, and for instruction in French on parts of the English networks. Then there would be an opportunity at regular intervals of studying these two languages through a common and easily-available medium, where study could be done extra-murally at home, in your own chairs, if you want to do it that way.

I advocate strongly that the time has come when we can advance our national unity by a step along this line.

So much for that part of my remarks today.

Mr. Speaker, I come now to a discussion of labour conditions, having in mind northern Ontario, but going somewhat farther afield and I come now to certain questions with respect to labour in the northern mining camps, and I regret that I find it necessary to refer to certain communistic activities, which are seeking to assert leadership there. Before being more specific, and going into more detail in relation to the situation in the north, I wish to direct some remarks to the subject of Communism. I assure the hon. members of this House that I had sincerely hoped that I would never find it necessary to stand up in this House and talk on this subject, but events have been proceeding of which even the most peace-loving of us can no longer fail to take notice.

And if you desire illustrations apart from what you read of the particular events, I see the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) is here, the hon. member for Wellington North (Mr. McEwing), and the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Martin), and I heard last night at the Prospectors' and Distributors' banquet, no less a person than Senator Malone, the isolationist Senator from the Mid-west, from Nevada, say in Toronto, in a part of the British Commonwealth, that he as one of the Senators speaking in his official capacity as a Senator of the United States, that he believed that it was high time that the Monroe Doctrine ran two ways, and that pledges be given to countries such as Italy, Greece and Turkey, so that any aggression in any of those countries would be met by force, with all the forces behind the United States, Great Britain, and the countries associated with them. When you hear an isolationist Senator say that, and when you hear him issue the call for the air forces of this continent to become so strong that within 48 hours of the commencement of hostilities, the enemy, whatever and wherever it may be, would find its air force grounded, and would smash the aggressors, never to allow them to rise again; when you hear talks like that I do not think you can possibly have any doubt as to the seriousness of this situation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, Communism differs from Fascism in that the latter believes explicitly in the inequality of man, and raises and asserts, often blatantly, the superiority of some and the inferiority of others. Communism, as narrowed down to the interpretation of the Marxian doctrine presented by Lenin after he came into power in Russia in 1917, means dictatorship by a small group. In theory, the exponents of Communism claimed that a dictatorship by a single group, which they termed "the workers" was necessary in a transitional period, out of which eventually—the theory was—a classless society of free individuals would emerge.

Whatever merits that theory might have, it has been completely discredited by the dictatorship of more than 30 years now, under which the people of Russia have been ruled.

Wherever Communism has been advanced in foreign lands, under Russian leadership, the Russian communistic regime and way of life has been immediately introduced, and in Czechoslovakia today the process is going on very rapidly, including the suppression in every sense of the word of all opposition groups and of a free press.

While Socialism, as advocated by the C.C.F. group, has many objectives theoretically the same as the theoretical or advertised objectives of the Communist party—as, for example, common ownership and operation of mills, mines, factories, railroads, banks, and so forth—there is a fundamental difference in that the Socialists put their faith in an evolutionary development, and in the democratic processes of obtaining these ends, by success at the polls, and introduction into free parliaments of the legislation necessary for the transfer. Communists advocate revolution as the means, and "revolution" means cold, stark murder, and I hope that everybody in this House realizes the difference. It means stark, cold murder of one's fellow citizens.

A book was published in 1936 by Earl Browder, then general secretary of the Communist party in the United States of America, entitled What is Communism. A copy of this book came into my hands with a number of the pages missing. Browder, it will be recalled, ran as a candidate for the President of the United States in the 1936 election, as a candidate of the Communist party.

As I say, this book came into my hands incomplete. There are no copies available in our libraries, but I came upon this partially-complete copy. I do not know whether the two hon. members of this House (Mr. MacLeod and Mr. Salsberg) have copies of this or not, but I am going to make reference to this book.

Some of the missing pages include chapter 14, entitled "Force and Violence." When you hear some of the contents of this book, your imaginations may give you some idea of what probably was contained in chapter 14—"Force and Violence."

I think it is well to develop somewhat the intent at arguing from a base, to justify even such a terrible force as that of revolution, and to do that in a brief manner I want to refer to what is said here in this book—and I will quote from it to a great extent.

Taking as his base, the statement allegedly made by Abraham Lincoln, in which that great President of the United States, after emphasizing that the people owned the country with its institutions, he is supposed to have gone on to say—and theoretically perhaps they have the power—that the people have the power and the right constitutionally to amend the constitution, or by revolution as a right, to dismember or overthrow it. That is the basis upon which the Communist people approached—and again I am not referring to the hon. members individually. Browder has, the Communist party has, given a devilish distortion to what was in the mind of Abraham Lincoln when he made any statement which might give rise to that thought, even for so much as a second.

Now, with that before you as the basis, I want to read a few extracts from this book "What is Communism" by Earl Browder, at that time general secretary of the Communist party in the United States, a book published in a year when he was running as the Presidential candidate of the Communist party in the United States, and he was a man of "big business." Oh, we hear a lot about "big business" from the opposite side. But, speaking about

"big business" I will tell you that the Progressive - Conservative Party is a very small business, perhaps the smallest business in the country, as compared with the Communist party. I make this statement from the evidence given before the Committee on Unamerican Activities in the United States, evidence given by people called there, including Browder, to the effect that on an average $20 per year per person of the Communist party was contributed for the purpose of that party. $20 per year. Is there any other party in this country can get more than 50 cents a year from any of their members? $20 a year—

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): How much did E. P. Taylor give the Tory party?

MR. ROBERTS: I have not the slightest idea. You might tell us what he gave to the Communist party.

MR. WILLIAM DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): What did the Russians give the Communist party?

MR. ROBERTS: The evidence went on to show that in those two years Browder had placed in his personal bank account some one million, three hundred and some-thousand dollars, upon which he had never paid any income tax, had never made an income tax return, nothing was paid by way of taxes on that money by the Communist party of New York, and the evidence adduced before that committee leads to the inference that that money had come from foreign sources.

MR. MacLEOD: Mr. Speaker, may I suggest to the hon. member (Mr. Roberts) that when he is quoting these things, he give us the source. After all, it is rather important.

MR. ROBERTS: I have given the authority.

The authority is the evidence before the Committee on Unamerican Activities in Washington.

MR. MacLEOD: Where? What page? What document?

MR. ROBERTS: You can look it up as well as I did. I did. Now, you look it up. This is "big business", I assure you. This man was the secretary, and it was estimated by that committee that the income of the Communist Party in the U.S. ran as high as $10,000,000 a year in revenue, most of that coming from foreign sources. Yet they talk about the hon. members over here as representing "big business". Let us get down to some of the truths about this situation, as it exists today.

May I now turn to page 15 of this book which I have mentioned. Here is what Browder says.

MR. MacLEOD: Give us the title of the book.

MR. ROBERTS: Yes. I will give it again. What is Communism. I thought the hon. Member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) might have a copy of this. Perhaps he was not close enough to the inner circle to get one.

MR. MacLEOD: I never read it.

MR. ROBERTS: This book says, at page 15:

"The majority of the American people are not this year ready for this revolution, towards which the full Communist programme leads. But the American people must and will always retain the freedom to choose that road when they are ready."

Are the hon. Members of St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) and Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod)—changing the word "American" to "Canadian"—subscribing to that view? I hope when they stand up later they will either denounce the view or tell us definitely that they do stand for it.

Then, at page 21 we find the following:

"This is the heart of the American tradition. Without this revolutionary kernel, the whole history of the origin of our country becomes only the strutting of marionettes and stuffed shirts, the spread-eagle oratory of the fourth of July under imperialism."

And again:

"The revolutionary tradition is the heart of Americanism."

And again:

"We Communists claim the revolutionary traditions of Americanism. We are the only ones who consciously continue those traditions and apply them to the problems of today."

Then, at pages 22 and 23, we find the following:

"Americanism, in this revolutionary sense, means stand in the fore-front of human progress. It means never to submit to the forces of decay and death.

"Americanism, as we understand it, means to appropriate for our country all the best achievements of the human mind in all lands. Just as the men who wrote the Declaration of Independence had been nurtured upon the French encyclopedics, and the British classical political economists, so the men who will write our modern Declaration of Independence, of a dying system must feed themselves upon the teachings of Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin, the modern representatives of human progress."

Then, at page 23:

"This is how we love our country, with the same burning love which Lenin bore for Russia, his native land. Like Lenin, we will fight to free our land from the blood-sucking reactionaries, placed in the hands of the masses, bring it into the international brotherhood of a world union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and realize the prophetic lines of Walt Whitman:

'We have adhered too long to petty limits; the time has come to enfold the world.'

I would like to know whether the hon. Labour-Progressive members opposite—the two whom I have mentioned—subscribe to that doctrine.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): To Whitman?

MR. ROBERTS: To the doctrine, "The time has come now to enfold the world".

MR. SALSBERG: That was Whitman's quotation?

MR. ROBERTS: Quoted and adopted by Browder for the purpose of forming part of his text.

MR. SALSBERG: I wanted to be sure whether the hon. member (Mr. Roberts) was asking us to declare ourselves on a line from Whitman.

MR. ROBERTS: He ended his statement with the words of Whitman:

"We have adhered too long to petty limits; the time has come to enfold the world."

Now, Mr. Speaker, at page 31, a remark was attributed to Mr. Stalin, in 1929, when there was, as you will remember, serious unrest in America. He said—and I am quoting from page 31, Stalin speaking:

"I think the moment is not far off when a revolutionary crisis will develop in America."

And I have no doubt that he is thinking and hoping the same thing at this very moment.

Then, at page 98 of this book, Browder says, after saying the Communists would support a united-front government, with certain qualifications:

"But we will always declare that such a government—i.e. a united-front government—will not be able to introduce Socialism, which can only be done through a real Revolutionary Government, a Soviet Government of workers and other toilers."

Then, at page 108—and this will be the last of my quotations from this book, although there are other equally enlightening ones—in this case the quotation refers to the people who are not within that close class of “workers and toilers”, that small group—and it is a very small group—as everybody knows; not in the wide sense, but it must be there as a dictatorship in order to ensure at some time in the future, in their millenium, this classless society. But what will they do with these other people they draw into this movement? Here is what they say, at page 108:

“Such persons who know not where they go have no value or significance, beyond the moment, for the revolutionary movement. But those individuals who come to the revolutionary movement with the understanding of the historic necessity for abolishing Capitalism, who are ready to subordinate themselves to, and identify themselves with the only completely revolutionary class in society, are able to make important and lasting contributions to the cause of Socialism, in fact, scientific Socialism was founded by two such people, Karl Marx and Frederick Engels.”

Now, Mr. Speaker, as recently as 1945 the Communists in the United States have re-affirmed the line of strict class war ideology as their means towards their objectives. How extreme this view has become can be gauged by the fact that a man who has written as Browder has himself written, was expelled from the Communist party in 1946, and what do you think he was expelled for? What do you think? For gross violation of party discipline, for developing factional activities, and for betraying the principles of Marxism and Leninism, and deserting to the side of class enemy, the American monopoly, Capitalism.

There was a man who wrote this book, and who did all these things, thrown out by these people because he was not extreme enough, because he was too soft.

Now, labour conditions in northern Ontario today, along the line of the Ontario Northland Railway, are reasonably satisfactory, though naturally there is always room for improvement in a progressive industry.

With the gold industry in the position that it is at the moment, it is most desirable to have good and peaceful management and labour relationship. I believe that at this time a great many of the miners who have so much at stake in the localities in which they live, with their homes and their families and their belongings and their friends, desire to continue working in the gold mines. They realize some of the difficulties the industry is undergoing and yet, at this most inappropriate time, harbingers of this Communism we have been reviewing are doing their utmost to undermine and unsettle the industry in the very riding and under the very nose of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). He knows, as I know, that at least two men, whose past activities have definitely identified them with the Communist Movement in the United States, have been going about the camps of Kirkland Lake and Timmins, and endeavouring to inflame the miners against their employers.

I respect very much unions and their general work, and I do not believe Canadian workers in the gold camps want to be led around by the noses at this time by known Communists, and particularly by international Communists. I would like to know at this time whether the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) will stand up in this House and disassociate himself and his party in that riding from any connection whatsoever with Reid Robinson, and Harlow Wildman?

I ask that question of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). I will deal with the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) in just a moment.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Do you want me to police my riding? What are you talking about?

AN HON. MEMBER: Are you for or against it?

MR. ROBERTS: I will repeat my question. I would like to know whether the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) is prepared to stand up in this House and disassociate himself and his party in that riding from any connection whatsoever with Reid Robinson and Harlow Wildman? If the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) wants me to develop these two a little more, and then come back to the question, I will do so.

MR. GRUMMETT: I never met either of the two gentlemen you mentioned; I know nothing about them other than I have heard about them as union organizers. I am quite prepared to leave the matter of dealing with these two gentlemen to the workmen I know in northern Ontario. I am sure they can deal effectively with them, if they are as you say they are.

MR. ROBERTS: I am glad to hear the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) say that. I will deal with these two men in just a moment, but I would like at this point to refer to an hon. member who sat in the seat now occupied by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin), no less a person than Mr. C. H. Millard, who has cleaned his skirts of them, and I would think when a man does that, who is as high in industrial circles as Mr. Millard, and as important as he is in the C.C.F. disassociates himself from these two men, that the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), would do so.

Having asked that question of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) I now intend to direct a question to the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin), but I think perhaps it might be fairer—although I think he knows these gentlemen—for me to deal with certain information and documentary evidence I have here with regard to those people, before I actually come to the questions.

I am now referring to an article in the Globe and Mail of March 5th, 1948. Reid Robinson is mentioned in that article under the heading "Mine Union Organizer seen first to be hit by ban on Red aliens". Also his picture appears in this paper. And then we find this:

"The chief of mine-mill in Canada is Reid Robinson, who broke several months ago with the C.I.O. when he was international president of the parent organization. Later he became eastern vice-president and was transferred to Kirkland Lake to take charge of organization work in Canada. In the United States he was considered one of the top-ranking Reds in the C.I.O. before President Philip Murray swung the axe that stripped him of his power and resulted in the Canadian appointment."

Then, a little further down in the article is a reference to Harlow Wildman, and it says:

"Harlow Wildman, United States citizen, who was imported to Timmins to become a mine-mill organizer, has been notified to leave Canada immediately because his permit has been revoked. Wildman was reported from Timmins to be in Toronto, attending a conference called to discuss the government measure. Other union officers, however, disclaimed knowledge of such a meeting."

Then I find in the paper the day before yesterday, March 9th, that Robinson, in some manner or other got back into Canada, although he was in the United States at the time this Order was issued, but is now in this country again, and is in Kirkland Lake at the present time.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have in my hand a report to the President Philip Murray, of the Congress of Industrial Organization, by a committee appointed to investigate a breach within the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, which is dated the 16th of May, 1947.

Mr. Speaker, I want to develop this, but I see it is now 6 o'clock. It will take perhaps 15 minutes to complete what I have to say, and I would not like to break into my talk. Perhaps you might wish to adjourn the debate until later.

It being 6 o'clock, the House took recess.

The House resumed.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, may I just correct an omission which I made at the beginning of my remarks this afternoon when paying tribute to the memory of two well-known figures who have departed this life and who were associated with this assembly. I would like to pay my personal tribute also to the late Kenneth Craig who was in the press gallery of this House for some time before he went on to duties at Ottawa. His memory is fresh with all of us and I know that every hon. member here will join with me in that tribute.

Now, Mr. Speaker, at adjournment this evening I was about to deal with a phase in the sequence of the argument I am presenting to show very clearly, I think, certain definite facts concerning the Communist movement and Communist activities in northern Ontario mining camps. I was about to refer to the report to President Philip Murray, of the Congress of Industrial Organization, of a committee appointed to investigate a breach within the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. This report is dated the 16th and 17th of May, 1947. What I should say, rather, is that the information contained in this pamphlet shows that in a contest at a biennial convention of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, held in September, 1946, one ticket for President and Vice-President was made up of Reid Robinson and his running mate Morris E. Travis, while the other was James Leary and Ralph Rasmussen. Canvassing committee, that is what we would really term the scrutineers, after taking some weeks to complete the count, by a majority report, declared Robinson elected President, with Travis Vice-President. Charles Moyer, was elected Secretary-Treasurer without opposition. The minority report of the committee of canvassers however, declared the other slate elected, charging irregularities, forgeries and improper practices. A good deal of trouble developed and some local unions withdrew. Charges and counter-charges were levelled and at the height of the confusion, Robinson and Moyer resigned. This meant that Robinson's assistant, Travis, became President. Here is what the investigating committee say in its report to President Murray about Robinson:

"These actions on the part of President Robinson in resigning and allowing Morris Travis to become President of the International Union and in continuing to lead the fight against those who had withdrawn, has added fuel to the flames and certainly has not led to the return of the withdrawing group to the International Union and has resulted in further confusion and chaos among the membership."

The Secretary - Treasurer, Moyer, testified before the Investigating Committee that he had resigned because he had refused to join in the attack on the Congress of Industrial Organization and could not continue as an officer of an organization whose officers had requested him to issue untrue statements and join in unprincipled attacks and—and I am quoting again:

"that the loyalty of the present officers of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers is not to the members of the Union but to an outside group having no connection with the trade union movement; in every dealing, they acted under the guidance and instruction of the Communist Party."

That is the testimony of Moyer, the Secretary-Treasurer, and where could we go for better first-hand information?

The Committee heard much testimony and was furnished with copies of letters which proved beyond question—using the words of the report "beyond question of doubt"—that

Morris Travis was continually dealing with representatives of the Communist Party in shaping the policy of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. The report reproduces two letters from the then organizer for the Communist Party to, in one case, Travis, and in the other case, Henry Huff, Executive Secretary, Northwest District, Communist Party. These letters are dated the 13th of May, 1946. The first letter is from Phil Wilks, organizer for the Communist Party—and I am sorry to say Mr. Wilks was himself killed in a mine accident after this report was issued—he writes to Henry Huff, and I am quoting now from that letter:

“Dear Comrade: This is in reply to your letter of May 9th regarding Harlow Wildman.”

He, as you will recall is one of the men now operating in northern Ontario. I continue the quotation:

“Harlow has been transferred to California for an indefinite period.”

Mark you now, I am reading from a letter of an organizer of the Communist Party to his Executive Secretary. It goes on:

“This question was discussed prior to his transfer. The situation in District Seven was such that it seemed correct that someone should be sent to California. After lengthy discussion, it was agreed that Harlow was the logical person to go. . . . Travis has been directed to work as assistant to Reid.”

“Travis has been directed to work as assistant to Reid”—this is a communist letter I am reading, written within the Party—

“And myself just returned from a conference in Chicago. This conference was composed of our people within the Mine-Mill. . . .”

He is using that word to mean the International Union

“ . . . and held prior to the Board meeting. . . .”

the board meeting of the Union—

“ . . . which is now in session.”

Let me repeat that:

“This conference was composed of our people within the Mine-Mill and held prior to the Board meeting, which is now in session.”

The letter concludes by giving the addresses of Wildman and Travis.

Now I want to refer to the other letter, the one to Travis from the organizer of the Communist Party. It reads in part as follows:

“We stopped at Butte on our way back from Chicago and it would seem to me that it will be necessary to have a functionary in Butte for two or three months in order to clear up the situation. Since it would take some time to accomplish this, it is my opinion that you could do a lot of organizing the good people prior to nominations and election.”

Now, hon. members, listen to this sentence:

“If something is done along these lines and done immediately, you can be sure Butte will remain disorganized for another year.”

“You can be sure Butte will remain disorganized for another year”—that is in the letter in this report and I believe yesterday the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) called out that a statement by the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) was untrue when he said that what was wanted by the party of which the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is a member was chaos and disorder and crises.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I repeat it again, Mr. Speaker, that such charges are untrue, regardless of what the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) may be reading from or whatever its source, I do not know.

MR. ROBERTS: If you were paying attention you would know what the source was. The letter I was reading is part of a report to Philip Murray, President of the Congress of Industrial Organization, and I repeat the sentence again:

"If something is done along these lines and done immediately, you can be sure Butte will remain disorganized. . . ."

Not "organized", but "disorganized".

Those last few words certainly indicate the real intent of a lot of the Communist activities and it is not sufficient for any hon. member of a party of that sort, whatever he may think personally, to cloak that sort of thing by giving forth words of support for worthy objectives and I draw to the attention of the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) this evidence in particular because at the last session he was inclined to be a little bit indulgent—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. ROBERTS: —indulgent, but with that background I think we should all have care.

The report towards the end has this to say—and I quote again:

"The Committee is firmly convinced that Morris Travis and other international officers of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers have allowed the influence of the Communist Party to interfere with the internal affairs of the International Union."

The Committee then recommends that steps be taken to remove Mr. Travis from office, to try and heal the breach which occurred within the Union.

Men, definitely connected with the Communist Party such as Robinson and Wildman, have been operating in Canada—it was suggested by Senator Taft a short time ago, that the Taft-Hartley Labour Bill in the United States, was driving Communist organizers out of the United States into foreign countries, particularly into Canada—and these two men have actually been operating in northern Ontario in the area covered by District 8, of which the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) is the Director in the setup of International Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union organization. I believe he received his appointment from Reid Robinson. As a director he is in charge of organizational activity. Did he personally, or directly, or indirectly arrange for or facilitate the movement of Reid Robinson or Wildman into Canada, and has he worked with them here in Canada and is he aware of their Communistic activities? I hope not.

I say to this House in all seriousness that in view of the seriousness of the condition which I have just outlined, the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) owes an explanation to this House and if he is not himself connected with the Communist movement within the organization, which I sincerely hope he is not, he should certainly make his position very clear in that regard to this House, and I ask for a clear and concise statement from the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) on these points.

In that connection, I would like to refer to one or two press reports—I realize that press reports are not necessarily accurate, and possibly the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) will have something to say by way of correction, or otherwise, but I want to refer to certain press reports.

A few days ago, when this question appeared as to the advisability of the deporting of these known Communists, the following appeared in the Toronto Daily Star, of March 6, 1948. The heading is "Frenzied Try to Bust Union, Miner Says of Alien Ban." I read now from the report:

"R. H. Carlin, Canadian Director of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.), charged today that gold mine operators influenced the Dominion Government in its decision to ban alien Communists from Canada.

"Mr. Carlin, who is also C.C.F. member of the Ontario Legislature for Sudbury riding, said that the mine operators, "in a last frenzied attempt to smash the miners' union, have gone to the Government for assistance."

Then there appears in the Timmins press of Monday, March 8, the following:

"R. H. Carlin, Canadian Director of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C.I.O.), charged today that gold mine operators influenced the Dominion Government in its decision to ban alien Communists from Canada.

"Mr. Carlin, who is also C.C.F. member of the Ontario Legislature for Sudbury riding, said that the mine operators "in a last frenzied attempt to smash the miners' union, have gone to the Government for assistance."

"Reports in labour circles indicate that four organizers on Mr. Carlin's staff are among those who would be affected by the order."

"One of them is Reid Robinson, International Vice-President of the Union, who came here from the United States to serve as an organizer in Canada."

This brings us right up to the minute, because in tonight's edition of the Toronto Daily Star, under the heading "Labour Congress Asks Union Withdraw Five Imported Organizers", it refers to the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) in the following manner:

"Robert H. Carlin, International Board Member of the Union, asked that no action be taken to affect the stay in Canada of these five men, but the executive council rejected Mr. Carlin's request."

The "five men" referred to are Mr. Robinson, Mr. Wildman, and three others.

In the light of that, I ask this question, and I say in all seriousness the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) owes this House an explanation. He is here in one capacity as an organizer for the union, and in another capacity—a wider and greater capacity—as a representative of a riding, as an hon. member of this Legislature, and I say, Mr. Speaker, that on the floor of this House it is his duty, as an hon. member to state his position clearly, and to answer unequivocally the questions which I have put to him.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have taken up more time than I should, but I feel this is a subject which should be developed thoroughly, when one attempts to develop it at all.

Good employer - employee relations are important at this time in the gold mining industry. My purpose in discussing in some detail the facts which I have brought to the attention of the House today, is an effort to promote this relationship.

I just want to refer to one other newspaper report, and that is a report on the editorial page in the Sudbury Star, of Tuesday, March 2, 1948, headed "Extremists Inviting Show-down", and after outlining their rates of pay, bonuses amounting to $3.84 per week granted in February to each miner, and other details which I will not read to the House, I will draw the attention of the House to the conclusion of this editorial in the Sudbury Star, which I think is a paper which speaks, or attempts to speak, for the public and no particular group. It says:

"Anyone familiar with the problems of the gold mines will admit that the recent cost-of-living bonus granted to the miners goes just about as far as the companies can go and still remain in operation. The industry already has suffered great hardships, but it will be further hampered, and in many cases halted entirely, if the miners' leaders persist in their attempt to force their extreme demands."

I draw that to the attention of the hon. members, in addition to what I have already said.

Now, Mr. Speaker, before I take my seat I want to emphasize again that I believe in the progressive work which well-run trade unions can do and are doing to model society properly on twentieth century lines.

There is no doubt in the mind of all progressive thinkers that twentieth century free enterprise should be a very different thing from nineteenth century free enterprise, and I would not wish to leave the slightest impression of any doubt in my mind about that. The system which many of us believe to be the best and the most democratic system for the good of all people must constantly progress, and in that orderly progress, trade unionism plays an important and an essential part, and they will play a far more important part, if they rid themselves, as quickly as possible, not only of the international Communists, but all Communists of all kinds and sorts, internally as well as externally.

Let me conclude, as I began, Mr. Speaker, in speaking of the Ontario northland. How many of us who know that country and love it so well, recall the picture that I saw just a few weeks ago, a log cabin in the snow, banked on all sides by deep snow, pure, white, sparkling in the sunshine, with what might be termed a thatched roof of snow, and with smoke ascending from its chimney vertically toward heaven indicating a low temperature existing.

Such a picture typifies the climate, the area and the people, the rugged, healthy people of the north, their abode, their life—the lure of Ontario northland.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. AURELE CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Speaker, at the outset of my remarks may I extend my congratulations to you upon the splendid discharge of your duties since your appointment.

I also take great pleasure in congratulating the mover and seconder of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne for the splendid speeches they have delivered.

I wish also to congratulate the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) for the noble sentiments he has voiced toward the French element in this province and in Canada generally. We acknowledge his good-will policy graciously and with many thanks. May we expect that he will continue to disseminate such good gospel at all times so that his views and sentiments may permeate the minds of all his colleagues and bring about national unity by way of facts and deeds in the very near future.

I believe I would be remiss in my duties, Mr. Speaker, if I were not to associate myself with the previous speakers in voicing my deep regrets at the early passing in life of Dr. Taylor, former member of this Legislature for Huron County. He was possessed of a genuine sympathetic, affable personality, and his kindness extended to all brother citizens with whom he came in contact. This Legislature has lost a devoted servant whose memory shall live for long years to come in the minds of all those who had the opportunity of knowing him well. The electors of Huron County have chosen as his successor, Mr. Pryde, whom we all welcome in our midst. Of course there would have been greater rejoicing on this side of the House if fate had decreed the election of the Liberal candidate, but, after the event, we gratefully bow and accept the decision of the people of Huron County. May I extend my congratulations to the leaders of the Government for retaining this seat and now I also avail myself of this opportunity to voice my congratulations upon the campaigners for the Liberal Party, who succeeded in increasing their popular vote by over 34 per cent. compared with an increase of less than eight per cent. by their opponents as measured by 1945 election results, in this same constituency.

Mr. Speaker, I enjoyed reading in the Speech from the Throne that the income and expenditures of individuals, of municipalities and of the province have never been greater. If such is the case, would it not be feasible to increase the allowances to the needy people, such as the children, the cripples, the widows and the old age pensioners? If these are years of abundance, is it not the proper time to alleviate the fate of these poor souls, by bringing about a little more joy and sunshine into their lives? I abhor and deprecate those paltry, miserable and shameful allowances which at the moment merely serve to keep body and soul together. Of all these deserving causes, I am more than partial to the old age pensioners who are the very backbone of our province, the people who have made Ontario the glorious province it is today. For the most part, they are composed of people who have been very valuable members of the community in which they live. In their declining years, when confronted with misfortune, sickness, misery and a gradual recession of their physical and mental faculties the younger generations which they have raised, educated and established in life in this magnificent province, while acting through their governments, have not seen fit to express their gratitude to a higher level than a thirty-dollar a month pension and sometimes in extremely needy cases up to a monthly allowance of $40 a month.

Having regard to the prevailing high costs of living and the abundance of income and expenditures in all spheres of activities, as revealed by the Speech from the Throne, I believe that such treatment as $30 a month to destitute old parents is a blemish, a blot and an indictment of ingratitude cast upon the whole population of Ontario. It is a shocking and disgraceful state of affairs, which demands immediate correction. May I add that it is my unshakable opinion that the least that should be done, at the moment, should be to reverse the trend of the regulations by making the exception the general rule and by granting $40 a month to pensioners, subject to whatever adjustment may be warranted by specific cases. I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, that such a proposal would meet with any worth-while objections from the general public at large.

I would like now to discuss some features on Education.

The Speech from the Throne reminds us that Education is regarded by the Government as its highest responsibility. It proceeds on later to assert that the steadily rising cost of education cannot be ignored. I do not know if the author of this speech had the City of Ottawa in his mind when he made such statements, but I may assure the Government that the members of the Ottawa Separate School Board have held such contentions for year after year. I presume, however, that it would be premature to infer that now they may see eye to eye on all matters, from all angles, and that the end of our tribulations and maladjustment is in sight.

I know that this question has been debated many a time in this Legislature, and that it is one of the subject matters before the Royal Commission on Education. I do not propose to make any long tedious and prolonged exposé of this question, at this juncture, but for the benefit of the members of this House and others, who may use the Hansard for future reference, I would like to read into the record, a clear, concise and graphic statement, which illustrates only too well the plight and conditions of the Separate School Supporters of Ottawa at the moment.

Under the caption "Ottawa's School Population and Salaries Paid to Teachers," the editor of the Ottawa Journal, a Conservative paper by allegiance, which cannot be taxed of bias on this matter, has this much to say in its editorial of May 23rd, 1947:

"Ottawa's School Population and Salaries paid to Teachers.

"Ottawa's separate school teachers, shockingly underpaid, have been taking their case to the people through parish meetings at which the teachers explain their plight and invite public discussion. This direct approach to the problem has had some result; the Separate School Board has announced increases, effective April 1st, of $10 per month for all lay teachers and $5.00 for all religious teachers, the trustees declaring that no more could be done within this year's budget.

"These Increases are far from providing a solution to the problem—some of the trustees are quoted as speaking frankly about the possibility of the separate schools having to close. They will be accepted by the teachers, however, as evidence of good faith, even if many of them have to supplement their incomes by other work.

"A few figures show very graphically the relative position of the teaching staffs in Ottawa's two elementary-school systems. Last year the Separate School Board spent on instruction $349,753 and increases just announced will add $19,000 to the bill for 1947. Last year the Public School Board spent on instruction $668,000 and increases granted for 1947 bring this year's cost to an estimated $730,000. In other words the Public Schools spent for instruction approximately $2.00 for each $1.00 spent by the separate schools for that purpose.

"In this connection the figures of attendance may be of interest. Last year the Public Schools had 7,294 pupils enrolled in regular classes, and an average attendance of 6,673 or 91.5 per cent. In addition there was an average kindergarten registration of 1,289 and an average attendance of 1,047, for a percentage of 81.2. The totals are an average registration of 8,583 and attendance of 7,720. The separate schools last year reported an average registration of 10,181 and an average attendance of 9,459 or 94.3 per cent. Separate schools have no kindergarten—if all the children of Ottawa were to come under the public school system we should have to expect, in addition to the present enrolment of the separate schools, an increase of some 1,500 in the kindergarten population.

"Nobody suggests that the public school teachers are overpaid. Thus, the obvious conclusion is that the separate school teachers, who are required to have the same qualifications, are getting salaries clearly below a decent living standard.

"In a broad way, as we have said before, this problem is not one solely for supporters of the separate schools, it is a great civic question and all of us should be interested in the discovery of a permanent solution. If, as has been suggested, as at least a possibility, the separate schools are out of business and 10,000 additional children turn up at public schools for enrolment some fine morning, we shall know it is the problem of us all."

I do not wish to lavish any personal comments on this editorial; it speaks for itself, and I can only concur with the view frequently expressed in the press and elsewhere by the late Mr. H. P. Hill, former chairman of the Collegiate Board of Ottawa, to the effect that the Public School supporters had no greater friends in the city than the Separate Schools supporters, and that should they at any time cease to operate their schools, the Public School supporters would feel such a financial pinch that they in turn would beg them to resume their operation at all reasonable costs. May I add, however, that the Separate School supporters in Ottawa are in urgent need of additional provincial school grants.

Before leaving this topic of education, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that I concur, endorse and partake in the recommendation of Mr. Justice D. C. Wells, in his report on the Ontario Royal Commission on milk, that consideration be given to supplying milk to school children in primary and secondary schools, through public assistance, at cost, or in cases of necessity free of charge; and that in considering the same, attention be paid to the provision of the National scheme in Great Britain. I would even go a step further and recommend that consideration be given as to the feasibility of the schools providing one complete meal daily, for every child, as suggested by the National Committee for School Health Research. In this connection may I read an editorial which appeared in the Ottawa Citizen of April, 1947, entitled "Nutrition in Schools."

Of all the points at which the fields of health and education overlap, one of the most discussed is nutrition, and specially the proposal that schools provide a complete meal daily for every child. Physical health is the basis of vigorous mental activity, the argument runs, and the best guarantee of physical health is at least one well cooked, well-balanced meal a day. Furthermore the child should have such a meal before or during his school day: since in most households nowadays he is not sure of getting it before supper-time, he should be given it at school.

How far this proposal has gained support in Canada can be judged from some of the tables contained in a report of the National Committee for School Health Research, just published. This committee is engaged in a five-year study of the health of school children right across Canada, and its report is the first of a series it will publish for the guidance of school and health authorities in all the provinces.

In Ontario, for example, it appears that complete lunches are already provided in 13.2 per cent. of the secondary schools, but only 0.8 per cent. of the elementary schools. A hot dish or beverage of some sort is given in 14.1 per cent. of the secondary schools, and as many as 26.8 per cent. of the elementary schools, mostly the rural ones. Milk only is used in 3.6 per cent. of the secondary schools and 10.6 per cent. of the elementary schools, and vitamins are administered in 7.7 per cent. and 5.5 per cent. respectively.

Recommended by the committee is, first, that school lunch programmes be organized in all schools to provide at least one nutritious dish, with the provision of a complete meal being the ultimate objective; second, that milk be given all children not getting enough at home; and third, that provincial governments study the nutrition experiments of the Canadian Red Cross. These experiments are being conducted presently in Toronto, where 600 school children have been divided into two groups, one of which is receiving a complete meal at school each noon.

Comparative tests of the two groups are to be carried on for two years, at the end of which time the advocates of school lunches hope their argument will be conclusively vindicated.

Now turning to housing, I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that we learned with great satisfaction that the Government will bring in measures to greatly increase the construction of low cost accommodations in this province. We do not know the exact nature of these measures but I believe the members of the House might be interested in becoming familiar with a building scheme which is attracting wide spread attention and commendation through the whole length and breadth of our sister province of Quebec.

It concerns the building of housing units on a co-operative basis in the Village of Ste. Marguerite near Three Rivers City. It appears that the parish priest of the locality became very much concerned with the plight and distress of some of his parishioners with large families living in unsuitable and inadequate housing accommodations. He conceived the idea of convincing ten master mechanics of proven ability and integrity of the feasibility, through courageous methods and with no savings of their own, to build their own homes by the sweat of their brows and of the possibility of enjoying the ownership thereof during their lifetime and thereafter to devise some worth while assets to their families.

The plan was sheer simplicity and as expected was carried out with great success as originally planned.

A parcel of land 100 feet by 50 feet was carved out of farm land or purchased from the municipality at a cost of $10.00 each. Every dwelling house is separated from the adjoining one by a laneway 20 feet wide. The dwellings are built as duplexes and each housing unit consists of three bedrooms, a drawing room, a dining room, a kitchen and a bathroom. Of course, the bungalow or cottage type would have been preferred, but after due consideration given to the costs of materials, specialized labour, taxes and insurance premiums, it was deemed inadvisable to saddle the prospective owner with carrying charges in the neighbourhood of $40.00 a month. It was therefore resolved to build duplexes so that the rentals of one unit at $25.00 a month would serve to amortize the principal on a mortgage while the owner charging himself with a $25.00 rental would use such amount for the payment of the interest charges on the mortgage in addition to the payment of municipal taxes and the insurance premiums. Both rentals, that of the owner and of the tenant, are paid in and deposited with the local Credit Union Society, the manager of which has already undertaken to pay out of same, the local taxes, the fire insurance premium, the life insurance premiums in favour of the new owner, and the balance is applied in reduction of the mortgage indebtedness which is usually paid up within twenty years or sooner by way of pre-payment.

It may be of interest to know how this plan is being worked out in practice. In day time a few selected paid key men are preparing the work to be completed in the evening by the co-operative members. After their day's work these gentlemen proceed with their assigned duties and so on from day-to-day until the dwelling houses are completely built.

Each applicant, upon becoming a member of the co-operative association, undertakes to make no claim for wages and to give his part-time labour free of charge, until the whole series of houses are fully completed. Each one becomes exclusively responsible for personal debts and liabilities incurred towards the erection of his own dwelling house. However, while the work is progressing, no member is permitted to sell his equity in his dwelling house for any consideration. If, through unforeseen events, anyone should become unable to carry out his undertaking, the other members of the co-operative society reserve unto themselves the right to purchase same at cost price. Once the ten dwelling houses are completed, the respective owners may dispose of their assets for such price and under such conditions as they may deem just and proper. Builders, contractors, financial agents and members of the legal profession may be inquisitive about the financial structure of such a venture and more particularly in the cases of prospective owners who have no savings of their own. It is very simple. An applicant, in order to become a member of the society, must purchase ten shares at a dollar each. Furthermore, to substantiate his good faith, he must deposit each week with the local Credit Union Society whatever savings he may possibly set aside. Then, recourse is had to the good services of the local Credit Union Society.

At the outset a loan of $500.00 is advanced on the security of a promissory note made by each individual member and endorsed by the other members. These sums are advanced as credit notes only, and the combined total assets of the ten members are in the sum of $5,000.00 for preliminary work. The excavation is then proceeded with, together with the laying of the foundation and the erection of the frame of the dwelling houses. Once the roof is completed, a mortgage loan is arranged through the good offices of the local Credit Union Society for $5,000.00 on each dwelling house and the loan for $500.00 on the security of a promissory note is paid off immediately. The balance of $4,500.00 is used in the form of a credit note to complete the housing accommodation. The co-operative society operates through a financial agent who makes all the purchases of material such as lumber, cement, nails, sheet rock, etc., and renders his account at a weekly meeting. No member is authorized to withdraw any sum of money from the Credit Union Society except through the medium of the financial agent.

This building scheme has already passed the stage of trial. Since its inception the members of the Building Co-operative of Ste. Marguerite have already built 30 houses and 10 more are on the way to completion. Furthermore, 50 other dwelling houses have been built under the supervision and advice of the members of the co-operative. I believe that this building scheme has great merits and that it would be well worth while for the proper authorities of this province to investigate it thoroughly.

Before leaving this topic of housing, I would like to say a few words with reference to the direct relationship which exists between the rate of municipal taxes and the low costs of housing accommodation for tenants. Without any further delay, I wish to congratulate the Government on its proposal to establish a Joint Provincial-Municipal Committee to review the plight of the municipalities under prevailing conditions and circumstances and to recommend such adjustments of responsibilities and revenues as it may think desirable.

As I understand it the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves are asking specifically that the Provincial Government assume the whole costs of social services (which presumably would include the Children's Aid Society) and give the municipalities a greater share of the revenue from gasoline taxes and motor vehicle licences. In support of this contention it is being argued very effectively that real estate, which is the main source of municipal revenue, should be taxed only for public services which are of direct benefit to it.

In recent years, the tendency of civic services has been to expand in scope and with higher wages and salaries being the rule, the tax rate has been consistently on the up-grade.

Looking at the figures for the City of Ottawa, for instance, it is no surprise to find that the tax revenues were $20.69 per capita in 1917 and are now $42.37 per capita in 1947, despite the increase of population by more than 60,000. The prospect for 1948 is not any too bright and the expectations are that the cost of running the city will be on the increase again. We enjoy a variety and quality of services previously unknown, but when the tax day comes around we have no doubt as to who is going to foot the bill. There is a fallacious impression that the landlords are paying the taxes. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The landlord is simply acting as a collection agency, and in the long run the tenants are really paying for the increase in civic taxes, and more. When there is a rise in municipal tax rate there is a tendency on the part of the landlord to raise the rentals of his tenants, and the greatest sufferers are the heads of large families in the low income brackets. In fact we are penalizing and overburdening with taxation a prime necessity of life.

Provincial Governments have far broader sources of income, and were they to assume the full costs of social services in no way connected with real estate property, they could tax all the people and remove a glaring violation of equity by exacting from the poorer class of our population the obligation of footing the lion's share of these bills by way of excessive rentals.

I understand that in our Capital City of Ottawa we have hundreds of housing accommodations classified as hovels, unfit for human habitation. They have been set down for demolition by the Department of Welfare as soon as there is an easing in the present housing crisis. I must confess that I am at a loss to figure out what will happen to their tenants if we cannot supply them with low cost rental accommodations. Recently an Ottawa newspaper was pointing out that there are families living in tin shacks on a garbage dump in Nepean and wondering where they should go if evicted. These appalling cases suggest only too well the urgent need of low cost rental accommodation in the Ottawa locality, and elsewhere in the province. Reduction in the municipal tax field is a move in the right direction for low cost rental housing accommodations.

Before bringing my lengthy remarks to a close, I would like, Mr. Speaker, to say a few words on the paramount issue of the day. The tragedy of Czechoslovakia must have awakened in everyone of us a sense of real danger and menace to our ways of life. A cold and treacherous war is now being waged in the minds and the hearts of the masses of people. The crusaders of the new doctrine are working incessantly from within and without. They are using very shrewd diplomacy, methods nearing perfection and a singleness of purpose which aims at world domination by force. They are carrying on a class warfare which respects no barriers and no frontiers.

It would, indeed, be a calamity and the greatest tragedy of our time, if three centuries of colonization, sweat, tears and blood should be swept away by the thoughtlessness of governments and of the leaders of big business, and of high finance. Undue exploitation and the inhuman practices of the past must be eradicated and human values must take preference over material gain. What matters most of all is the spiritual significance of man in this world.

We are certainly nearing the crossroads of our future destiny as a nation and the next few months may be a challenge to the ingenuity of statesmanship. The state worshippers are on the march at all times, giving no truce and asking no truce for themselves.

Their line of advance is through the destitutes and the workers in the low-income brackets who are still waiting for a better standard of living and for the promised social security programme from the cradle to the grave. If, through a sense of despair, frustration and hopelessness we should lose the confidence of the masses of people, it will spell the end of our regime.

However, in spite of defections, I still retain an unshakeable confidence in the powers of democracy to accept all new challenges, to weather all new ordeals, and to emerge victorious in her aims for freedom and liberty provided every citizen accepts his or her full share of responsibility in the political, social and economic fields. Quoting Mr. Gladstone Murray, I would say "the keystone of freedom is personal responsibility." Positive measures are essential. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is the privilege of preserving the dignity and independence of personality at the price of discharging the duties of citizenship.

On behalf of the French element in this province may I assure this House that we shall always remain the captains of our own minds, the pilots of our own hearts and that we shall never truck or trade our personality and our liberties for the mirage of the unknown or of Utopia. We have given our allegiance to Canada, to our Province of Ontario, to our municipalities and to our people. Our hearts and souls shall never belong to Moscow. In bringing my remarks to a conclusion, may I say that eternal vigilance is still the price of liberty and that governments and leaders in society can only command and hold the respect and admiration of their people in the measure in which they may dispense the principles of Christian charity and social justice in their doings.

MR. J. A. PRINGLE (Addington): Mr. Speaker, in rising to make some contribution tonight, I do so with a feeling that I follow all those hon. gentlemen who have really "big stuff" to offer in this debate on the Speech from the Throne.

My talk tonight will not be of a very serious nature. I feel, as a member who has been here for five sessions, and only saying a few words occasionally on the bills, that I have wasted very little of your time, hon. Sir, or the time of this House, and I feel, coming from one of the finest counties, I think, in the Province of Ontario, one that compares favourably with the best, that I should in their interests say something in this Legislature.

First of all, I do want, Mr. Speaker, to offer my congratulations to those hon. members who gave two such excellent speeches in moving and seconding the reply to the Speech from the Throne. I think their remarks contain a lot of food for thought. They were well delivered and something for us to remember.

I also want to congratulate the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde), although he is not in his seat tonight. He won a very important election just a very short time ago, an election, one that we down in Central Eastern Ontario were very anxious about and very glad that he should come out so victoriously because I well remember the late Dr. Hobbs Taylor, of whom I came to be quite a good friend in the short time that I knew him in this House, and I am sure I express the sentiments of every hon. member in this House when I say that this province—I may be merely repeating what others have said—has lost a good friend in every particular. I hope and I am sure that the hon. member (Mr. Pryde) who has come to us, who so eloquently moved the reply to the Speech from the Throne will in some measure take his place.

Now, Mr. Speaker, you have been listening to a lot of serious talk, you have been hearing about all these Communists, about all the great things we are going to do or have not done for the Province of Ontario. What I am going to talk about tonight is something about my own riding in the counties of Frontenac and Addington in my first public effort. I think probably that should be enough.

As you hon. gentlemen who had the opportunity of coming down to our county last fall to the great International Ploughing Match know about where the county of Frontenac is situated.

My riding is called the riding of Addington, just why it is, I am not so sure. For Federal purposes it is called Frontenac-Addington, for provincial purposes it is called Addington. But, however, it comprises the county of Frontenac and all but one township of the county of Addington, and those of you who came down to that International Ploughing Match probably saw something of our situation there.

We have probably one of the most diversified counties that there is in the Province of Ontario. We have a mixed farming population there. There is no county with a better mixed farming area than we have south of No. 7 Highway. We reach down to Lake Ontario along the Rideau, close to Gananoque and of course surrounding that fine industrial and educational centre, the old limestone city of Kingston.

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

MR. PRINGLE: We are unique in one sense because in the two counties which I have the privilege at the moment to represent, we have not one village or one town that has over 1,200 population, so you see my problems are purely rural. They are farmers, they are lumbermen, they are cattle-raisers, they are trappers, and we do a great deal toward encouraging tourists and those people who bring the American dollar into this country. It is a few of these things that I want to talk about tonight.

In the county of Frontenac we have a thousand lakes, we have three fine, big rivers, the Mississippi, the Matchewan and the Salmon Rivers, and there is no more favourite spot in this province than the northern part of Addington and the northern part of Frontenac for those who like to spend a holiday fishing, hunting and enjoying themselves along that line. American people come across the Peace Bridge and Ivy Lea and they have only to go along No. 2 Highway a short distance until they are in my riding.

They come, from Belleville, past the Royal Military College, where we trained many fine men who made great contributions not only in this war but also in the former one. From there, they follow No. 15 Highway, No. 38 Highway and No. 41 Highway far into that rugged north country which borders on Renfrew. Sometimes when I am asked here in this House where is the riding of Addington, I say: "Along the Bay of Quinte and Lake Ontario and extending north to the county of Renfrew." My idea in trying to impress upon you people that Frontenac is a very integral part of this Province of Ontario—after all, while it happened to be in the City of Kingston, which is in the county of Frontenac, where the first parliament in Upper Canada was established, and we also take great pride in saying that we gave this country its first Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. PRINGLE: It is not only farming that we do, it is not only trapping, it is not only the tourist trade, but we also have a little mining in the county. We have something that I know no one else has, even in your fine north country in northern Ontario, that is, a mica mine, a pure-white amber mica mine in my riding in the township of Bedford, one that furnished the mica that was used in all the sparkplugs in the American Air Force during the last war. It has the greatest heat resistance, and I am told by a very good engineer that it is the only one in Canada, so at least we have something that no one else has.

We are very proud of our county, very proud of the efforts the people of that county have made. They are made up of United Empire Loyalist stock, people who have always taken their place under every condition and every circumstance, and I think we can always depend upon them to do that.

That is all I want to say about my county.

I would like to say something about what this Government has done for the county of Frontenac and for the county of Addington and in doing that I cannot see how I can do any differently than the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) who has led the opposition in this House and the hon. member who leads the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett). They find nothing else to do except to offer praise to the Drew Government. The only criticism I heard either one of those hon. members offer was something they picked out of some Co-operator paper, or some little paper that they have. Outside of that there was nothing they could really criticize in the Drew Government and therefore you cannot blame me if I mention a few things that this Government has done for the county of Frontenac, for the county of Addington and for this province as a whole.

When I was elected in 1943 and came here in 1944, the hon. Mr. Dunbar, who was then Minister of Game and Fisheries—I think I am correct—he told me that year that the expenditure on game and fisheries was something in the neighbourhood of $600,000. The revenue from that department was, if I remember right, around $900,000. I think the hon. Mr. Scott who is Minister of Land's and Forests today has made the statement that we are spending in this Province of Ontario $2,400,000 in endeavouring to extend the facilities for tourists in this country, and in protecting the game and fish. That is quite an increase in revenue and it is quite an increase in expenditure.

I want to say that in my county we are building a new White Lake Fish Hatchery, for which the Department of Lands and Forests cannot claim all the credit because the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) has built some very fine buildings, some houses and some garages and storage places for these fish, and it is going to be a great feeder for all these lakes from which we derive our revenue and this province derives a great deal of revenue, too.

I do not think that there is any place in this province where people can have better recreation because, after all, we collected, as far as I can gather from the game overseers, very close to $200,000 from angling licences, hunting licences and trapping licences and so on. That does not take into account the many hundreds of people who pass over the Peace Bridge and buy their licences there, so you see we are doing our part for the whole province.

We have been favoured a great deal by the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett). Probably in my memory there has been no one who ever occupied that very important position who has administered it better than has the hon. George Doucett.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. PRINGLE: He has very impartially distributed money that has been voted to him where he thought it would do the most good to the most people, and we have now a good highway, No. 7, which is completely paved, and highway No. 38 which I hope is going to be paved, and which I urge him very strongly to do, and highway No. 41, which leads into that north country and now, of course, we are looking for the leading-in roads, those feeder roads. The great job I have on hand now is to get a few, and I want to say frankly that I was used very generously when we had two of these developing roads under construction. These are very necessary, of course, Mr. Speaker, for the very fact that when No. 41 highway was opened up from No. 7 on into the Renfrews, it opened up a wide area and it might surprise some hon. members to know that, at least according to Mr. Johnston, the manager of the Sawyer Stole Company, whose head office is just north of Kaladar, 30,000,000 board feet of timber had come down No. 41 highway out of the northern part of the counties of Frontenac and Addington this year. I think, hon. Sir, that is something which deserves consideration not only from the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) but from the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Scott). After all, that timber is not inexhaustible. Sitting in front of me tonight is a gentleman who was always one of the most congenial ministers of Lands and Forests and a man who would really sit down and talk matters over with you and we were getting along very well along certain lines, including this pine-patents affair, when he suddenly decided that he did not want to be Minister of Lands and Forests any more. We do have today in the hon. Mr. Scott a very understanding man, a man who has the whole situation at heart.

I want to say that for many years there has been in my opinion the wrong system of cutting timber in that north country. As I said a moment ago, it is not inexhaustible. It may go on for a good many years, but I think a more rigid inspection should be made of the size of the trees that are cut. While they say that it is twelve inches on the stump, I think that our department should insist that they are twelve inches on the stump when they are cut and not take it for granted that there are a few twelve inchers and many hundreds cut much less than that. It probably will not do you and me much good, but we have a young generation coming along who would like to have some timber left for their use and their benefit.

I have just mentioned some generalities. I did not mean to get off the way I did. As a matter of fact, I would much rather listen to other people speak than speak myself. I cannot help but remember that British prime minister, about whom you all know, who told a certain green member that it was much better for him to let people wonder why he didn't speak than to wonder why he did, and it gives me a sort of feeling that the thing to do is let the people speak who can.

There is only one other point I want to mention and that is this: I well remember about six or seven years ago when my predecessor was sitting here in this House, the hon. W. D. Black. I happened to be his guest one afternoon. I had a seat in the gallery and I heard an hon. gentleman make a speech. Parts of it I have always remembered. He spoke so well that he made me a little bit sorry that one time I voted against him. That hon. gentleman is the Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) of this province today, and on that afternoon he was urging the Government of the day to accept a larger share of school taxes in this province to bring in something that would give the boys and girls, who are the future of our province a little better opportunity for an education. I am not going into the details of what was said against that argument. He came into office in two or three years, in 1943, and even with a minority government, he lost no time in putting into effect that which will stand to his everlasting credit, because you know as well as I do if we do not take care of the boys and girls, we have thrown away the greatest asset that this country ever had or ever will have.

I have never been so proud in my life as I was when I saw a nice bus starting away from our little village with twenty-three pupils in it bound for a high school that was built during the term of office of this Government in the town of Fleming, and to know that there were not over two in that bus who had ever gone beyond public school. Today they are going along and everyone of those children will graduate with junior matriculation or senior matriculation, and probably, if they are lucky, will get to university to be fitted for whatever walk of life they choose. That has all been made possible, I cannot help but think, by the legislation that was brought in by this Government, and I can say, hon. Sir, that no Government in my memory has ever fulfilled its pre-election promises so completely and in so short a time as has the Drew Government.

Mr. Speaker, as I told you a few moments ago, I have not a town in my riding with over 1,200 population. My experience in making speeches is in little school houses, and that has been very meagre.

But I can tell you this, that this by-election is a reflection of what might happen when we have a general election again. There are rumours of it, mostly emanating from those who sit opposite to us. I am not concerned much with those, but I can say this much, that when it does come, there will be one member of this house who will be very proud to go back to his constituency and discuss with them the record of this Government and ask them for their endorsement. And I believe, knowing these people as I do, I know what their answer will be.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, since the regular Speaker is not in the chair, may I address my opening remarks to you, and to express again, as I have on previous occasions, our very wholesome respect and affection for you, as an hon. member of this house. You are, in point of years, the dean of the house, and I have often felt how wonderful a thing it is that a man in his 78th year should be able to attend so closely to his duties, and to take such a keen personal interest in his fellow members of the Assembly. I hope, sir, that having reached your 78th year, it will be your good fortune to reach your 88th year, and your 98th year, and beyond that if at all possible. I recall one outstanding Liberal who lived to be over 100, and if a Liberal can do it, I do not see why a Tory should not be able to do likewise.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I should like to join with those who have preceded me in extending my congratulations to the mover of the address. I had occasion to say something about him on opening day, and having listened to his maiden speech, all I can say to him is that like the rich young ruler, he only lacks one thing, and that is sound, political judgment; otherwise he would not be a member of the Tory party. To carry through the ordeal of having to go up and down the length and breadth of the grand old county of Huron, carrying the twisted cross of Tory reaction, and yet be able to come and take his seat in the Legislature is no small achievement. I feel sure that the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde), is going to become the personal friend of all of us, and that, despite the tensions that may exist in this Legislature from time to time, it will be possible for the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) and the rest of us to sit down from time to time and agree on the things that are lovely and of good report. I can even do that with the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

I should like to comment very warmly the seconder of the motion, the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton), but unfortunately he is not in his seat tonight. We have come to respect him as very modest, a very self-effacing and courteous member.

Now, I observed in my opening remarks last year that the time was not far distant when the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) would very shortly be taking his departure from this side of the House, and that he would cross the "great divide" and take his place over in the "land of make believe."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: And the prediction has come true. There he sits. He has only one more hurdle to cross before he will be a full-fledged member in that line of mediocrity which makes up the government benches.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: I predict, Mr. Speaker, before very long the present two-ply minister, the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions and the hon.

Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) will be cut down to one-ply, and the hon. member from Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) will assume the portfolio of Minister of Reform Institutions.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Will you feel sorry for me when I am demoted?

MR. MACLEOD: No. I think we will say we are glad to see you go, but we are sorry to lose you.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I do not know that you should go that far.

MR. MACLEOD: I appear to have shown unerring judgment, Mr. Speaker, in singling out the reactionary Tories in this Legislature and designating them for promotion. I began with the then hon. member for St. Davids (Mr. Michener). I made the observation that he was not going to be over on this side of the house very long, that with his fine, splendid appearance, and all the attributes of a Cabinet minister he would soon receive the call, and within a few months he got the nod, and he sits in the second row.

Now, looking over the remnants—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: —I am wondering who next will be called to the bar. I am going to take a flyer at it anyway. I, therefore, predict, in the manner of Mr. Drew Pearson, that before very long—before the election in July—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: That the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Creighton) is going to get the nod. He looks to me like a prospect for advancement. He stands high in the favour of his leader, and the County of Ontario, being a county in which the labour vote is a big factor, it might be that this Government would try to redeem some of its lost esteem in the ranks of labour by calling the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Creighton) and putting him in the centre row.

I have heard it rumoured that the present hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is about to be made the Chairman of The Workmen's Compensation Board. I have heard that said, and if that should happen, then I think the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Creighton) might be called to the succession.

I am giving you all the encouragement I can. It is not in my hands, but up to now, all the suggestions that I have made with respect to improving the cabinet have been accepted by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), within a very short season.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: We have had something in common, anyway; we are able to spot these real, rock-ribbed Tories, and have them take their places around the council table of this Government. Of course, I am aware of the fact that the hon. member (Mr. Acres) who has, in the Government ranks, sat in this House longer than anyone else, is still waiting patiently on the mourners' bench.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. member for Peel (Mr. Kennedy), full of years, full of Tory bitterness, still continues to occupy his seat, but we hope that the day is not far distant when the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Acres) will receive his just reward for services rendered.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: Now, I listened with great interest to the speech of the hon. leader of the official opposition (Mr. Oliver), and I am frank to say that I did not think he was up to his usual good form. As I followed him, I got the impression that the speech was shot through with a sort of "excuse-me-for-living" attitude. He tried to jump on the band wagon with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) by agreeing with his outburst against Communists, and having made that valiant effort, when the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) got up, he pushed him off the wagon entirely, and said that as far as this subject was concerned, he was the master, and no one was going to try and imitate him.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: As for the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), who always leaves his seat when I get up to speak, for some reason or other—I don't know why; I am always inspired by his presence; I always sit listening to him, but he never listens to me—when he got up to speak the other day, he certainly took advantage of the introduction of the bill by the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Scott) about removing the protection of birds, and what he did to those "Liberal birds" in this Legislature was really something. He did not leave them with a feather to fly.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: And no matter what disadvantages there may be in being a member of the Labour Progressive party, I am frank to say I was very glad I was not a member of the Liberal party at the end of that performance. And a lot of the things which he said were quite true.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: I wondered, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was speaking, whether he had forgotten that the Liberals had been in power for eight years in this province; I wondered if he had forgotten the year 1937, when the slogan was "Keep the C.I.O. out of Ontario" and you will remember how "Mitch" (Hon. Mr. Hepburn) translated those letters to mean "Communists In Ontario." Well, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) went down the line with it; the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) went down the line with it, and the then leader of the Tory party in this Legislature took it hook, line and sinker, and tried to share the honour of keeping the C.I.O. out. Well, the C.I.O. is still here, and here in a big way, and to stay, in spite of the efforts made to keep them out of the province, and in spite of the inspired movements against trade unionism.

Mr. Speaker, I am glad to see you are back in your seat. I was going to say some nice things about you when I started, but I will say them now. I congratulate you on the second anniversary of your ascendancy to the Speaker's Throne, and I want to say that your policy of patience and firmness is bearing good fruit, at least it seems to agree with your health, and I think the atmosphere of the Legislature has been very wholesome and very calm and peaceful since you took over your duties.

We hope you will remain as long as the present government survives. Perhaps after the election, when the present government is no more, we may be inclined to reward your services by asking you to serve under a different government.

Now, as I was about to say, I had intended to make a speech without covering too wide a territory. I did not intend to do what Walt Whitman suggested, and "encompass the world." I was going to deliberately follow that policy, out of consideration for the hon. member for Cochrane North (Mr. Habel). He does not like speakers to discuss the world. He says we live in the Province of Ontario, and should stick to the Province of Ontario. I think that is sound. Ontario is a very big place; there are four million people here; there are many problems here, and it should be possible for us to confine ourselves to the things that are close at hand, and not try to cover the whole universe.

But unfortunately the whole universe has been traversed. We have heard about Poland, and Finland, and Roumania, Italy, France and almost every country but "Lower Slobovia." Therefore, I will have a few words to say on some of the things which have already been said, not with any thought in mind of convincing those of you who do not share my opinions, but rather for the purpose of stimulating thought.

There is not much thinking done on the other side of the House. We had a demonstration of that this afternoon, when the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) stood up in his place and forewarned the House that his speech was going to take up 45 minutes. It was going to be broken up into certain parts, one part reserved especially for us, and he expressed the hope that we remain in our seats and "take it." Well, Mr. Speaker, I thought we were going to hear something new and fresh, and I was willing to forego the temptation to go out for a smoke or a cup of tea in order to hear what he had to say. I sat here through, not 45 minutes, but an hour and a half. What did I hear? A re-hash of a lot of newspaper clippings that were undoubtedly handed to the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) by some of the mining barons up in the north country who are disturbed by the fact that the Mine, Mill and Smelter Union is carrying on an organizational campaign in northern Ontario, determined to win better wages for the workers in those mines.

The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) has, on other occasions, discussed a wide range of subjects, but he has stayed away from the old, moth-eaten "Red bogey" stuff. I think the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) has been trying for the last four and one-half years to blast his way into the Cabinet but finally decided he had better try another tack.

MR. ROBERTS: May I interrupt the speaker for a moment, to ask a question?

MR. MACLEOD: I will not relinquish the floor. He has cast longing eyes at the second portfolio of Provincial Treasurer. He has never forgotten that one of the 22 points promised to appoint a Minister of Mines, who knew something about the mining business. Well, four and one-half years have passed—

MR. ROBERTS: May I say, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) is "all wet."—

MR. SPEAKER: It is entirely up to the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) who has the floor.

MR. MACLEOD: I would rather not be interrupted. After four and one-half years we still have in the Department of Mines a man who does not know the difference between a shaft and a shovel.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Oh, I have learned a lot.

MR. MACLEOD: I do not wonder that the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) is getting a little restless. He knows if you are going to "make" mediocrity row, you have to get on the line and put the "Red bogey" first, and all that he was doing today was reading, reading, reading, giving us a list of quotations to prove a case that did not exist, I do not know what kind of people he thinks we are. You can prove anything by quoting this and quoting that, and taking things out of their context. I could prove here, by the adoption of that method, that everybody should go out of here and jump into Toronto Bay. I will prove it. "Judas went out and committed suicide. Go thou and do likewise; whatever thou doest, do quickly."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: And it might not be a bad idea.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: I think as far as the government is concerned, it would really clear the air.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Are you speaking of the Masaryk suicide?

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I am quite surprised in the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener). He usually holds his temper.

HON. MR. MICHENER: I heard a reference to "suicide," but I did not quite hear who was to suicide. I was asking if it was Masaryk to whom the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) was referring.

MR. MACLEOD: In his best Westminster tradition the hon. Minister (Mr. Michener) has behaved himself without any rude interruptions, and I am surprised that he has been so offended by the suggestion that he should carry out a perfectly legitimate scriptural edict.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Go ahead and say something.

MR. MACLEOD: Now, Mr. Speaker, in the course of the remarks made by the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) he said that "revolution is stark, cold murder." That would about fit the type-face of the Toronto Telegram "Revolution is stark, cold murder."

Now, the subject of "revolution" is a very big subject, and I would ask the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) if he remembers that there was a revolution in the country to the south of us in 1776—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I will not listen to any more of this.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, George (Mr. Dunbar) you are getting along, you know.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I am, with Sir John A. MacDonald, and Oliver Mowat, becoming sick at my stomach.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) has a good, big one, anyway.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: The stomachs on that side of the house have been getting bigger and bigger for the last four and one-half years. If they keep on, they will soon achieve "navel parity," in the front-line benches.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) said that "revolution was stark, cold murder." I must say that if there had not been revolutions down through the history of men, the hon. member (Mr. Roberts) probably would not be sitting in his place today.

There was a revolution in the United States in 1776. Was it a good thing or a bad thing? If you had been there in 1776, you would probably have taken to your scrapers—

MR. WILLIAM DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): Mr. Speaker, it was not 1776.

MR. MACLEOD: Wait a minute. I am coming to you shortly.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: That was a great advance, and since the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) has intervened in this debate, I want to tell the house that I had occasion in the past few hours to find out how keen a student of history the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) is. I talked to him in the corridor this afternoon, and I said, to him, quite seriously, "Bill, do you favour this move on foot in Europe today, to put the 'Good King Wenceslas' back on the throne," and he said, "Of course I think it is a good thing." He was "right on the beam."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: But there have been a lot of things written about "revolutions," and I will quote now from a speech in the House of Representatives at Washington, at the time of the Mexican war, 100 years ago—100 years ago:

"Any portion of such people that can, may revolutionize, and make their own of so much of the territory as they inhabit. More than this, a majority of any portion of such people may revolutionize, putting down a minority, intermingled with or near about them, who may oppose this movement. Such minority was precisely the case of the Tories of our own revolution. It is a quality of revolution not to go by old lines and old laws, but to break up both, and make new ones."

The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) has quoted things tonight which were attributed to Lincoln, which Lincoln never said. In 1861, Lincoln said—

MR. ROBERTS: May I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: I do not think the point of order is well taken. The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MACLEOD) has the floor.

MR. MACLEOD: This says:

"This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, or their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow it."

Those lines are very well known. They are incorporated in that moving song Ballad "For Americans" which is frequently sung at the conventions of the Democratic Party in the United States. The right of revolution is clearly recognized even in the Declaration of Independence. I do not know whether my hon. friend from St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) ever read that. Maybe he would consider that subversive today.

MR. ROBERTS: You cannot joke yourself out of this. It is too serious to try and joke yourself out of it.

MR. MACLEOD: I am not listening, so you might just as well keep quiet.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we are living in an era of great changes, social changes, political changes, and such changes, of course, are not new in history. These changes of economic system have been taking place over a long period of years, and on every occasion when people decide to throw over the old, and move forward to the new, the forces of reaction always get into a state of mental hysteria.

I want to call your attention now to something that can be read at greater length by the hon. members of this House. I would commend this to the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener). I am sure that, as a University graduate, he has read the great classics, and must have come across what I am about to read now.

In a certain European country some years back there was a great upheaval; the old order was tossed aside, and a new order came into being. A great man of that period, speaking of that country which had embraced a system different to the one in his own, had this to say—now listen:

"It is 'Cannibal Castle'; it is 'the republic of assassins'; it is 'a hell'; its government is composed of 'the dirtiest, lowest, most fraudulent, most knavish, of chicaners'; its National Assembly are 'miscreants'; its people are 'an allied army of Amazonian and male cannibals'; they are 'a nation of murderers'; they are 'the basest of mankind'; they are 'murderous atheists'; 'they are a gang of robbers'; they are 'the prostitute outcasts of mankind'; they are 'a desperate gang of plunderers, murderers, tyrants and atheists.'"

What a pity the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is not here.

"To make the slightest concessions to such a country in order to preserve peace, is offering victims 'on the altars of blasphemed regicide'; even to enter into negotiations is 'exposing our lazar sores at the door of every proud servitor of the republic, where the court-dogs will not deign to lick them.'"

And then he continues:

"When our ambassador was actually in Paris, he 'had the honour of passing his mornings in respectful attendance at the office of a regicide pettifogger'; and we were taunted with having sent a 'peer of the realm to the scum of the earth.' That country has no longer a place in Europe; it is expunged from the map; its very name should be forgotten.' Why, then, need men travel in it? Why need our children learn its language? And why are we to endanger the morals of our ambassadors? Who can hardly fail to return from such a land with their principles corrupted, and with a wish to conspire against their own country.'"

And then he finishes by saying:

"The age of chivalry is dead. The glory of Europe is extinguished forever."

Of course, that was not said of the Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Drew); it was said by a very brilliant man, by a great English statesman. I am sure the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) will recall, those are the words of the great Edmund Burke. Not only did he say what I have just read about the great Republic of France—your mother—not only did he say that, but he said a great deal more. What I have read is from the "History of Civilization in England" by Thomas Henry Buckle, a very great historian. His grandson taught me, so I have always read his history with great interest. Thomas Henry Buckle, commenting on what I have just read to you, says this:

"From the beginning of the French Revolution, he, Burke, insisted upon the right, and indeed upon the necessity, of compelling France to change her principles; and, at a later period, he blamed the allied sovereigns for not dictating to a great people the government they ought to adopt. Such was the havoc circumstances had made in his well-ordered intellect, that to this one principle he sacrificed every consideration of justice, of mercy, and of expediency. As if war, even in its mildest form, were not sufficiently hateful, he sought to give to it that character of a crusade which increasing knowledge had long since banished; and loudly proclaiming that the contest was religious, rather than temporal, he revived old prejudices in order to cause fresh crimes. He also declared that the war should be carried on for revenge as well as for defence, and that we must never lay down our arms until we had utterly destroyed the men by whom the Revolution was brought about. And, as if these things were not enough, he insisted that this, the most awful of all wars, being begun, was not to be hurried over; although it was to be carried on for revenge as well as for religion, and the resources of civilized men were to be quickened by the ferocious passions of crusaders, still it was not to be soon ended; it was to be durable; it must have permanence; it must, says Burke, in the spirit of a burning hatred be protracted in a long war: 'I speak it emphatically, and with a desire that it should be marked, in a long war.'"

And that, of course was characterized by Thomas Henry Buckle as "perhaps the most horrible lines ever penned by an English politician."

Continuing, Buckle says:

"It was to be a war to force a great people to change their government. It was to be a war carried on for the purpose of punishment. It was also to be a religious war. Finally, it was to be a long war. Was there ever any other man who wished to afflict the human race with such extensive searching, and protracted calamities? Such cruel, such reckless, and yet such deliberate opinions, if they issued from a sane mind, would immortalize even the most obscure statesman, because they could load his name with imperishable infamy. For where can we find, even among the most ignorant or most sanguinary politicians, sentiments like these? Yet they proceed from one who, a very few years before, was the most eminent political philosopher England ever possessed. To us . . ." says Buckle, "It is only given to mourn over so noble a wreck. More than this no one should do. We may contemplate with reverence the mighty ruin; but the mysteries of its decay let no man presume to invade, unless, to use the language of the greatest of our masters, he can tell how to minister to a deceased mind, plus the sorrows which are rooted in the memory, and raze out the troubles that are rooted in the brain."

Well, of course, that commentary on the French Revolution could be matched with others made following the American Revolution, and, of course, it could be matched by the sort of stuff that you read in the Tory press in this country back in 1837, at the time of the Upper Canada Rebellion.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) said the other day when we do things we should do them in a dignified way. Well, it was not very dignified to administer the kind of treatment that was administered to William Lyon Mackenzie or to Lount and Matthews, down near my place where they were hung. The Upper Canada Rebellion was not very dignified. It was forced upon the people in order to establish in this land of ours representative government in our country, and I suggest, therefore to hon. members that in this age of hysteria, in these days when the public press descends to an all-time low, falsifies the facts, say anything in order to inflame passions, like some of the commentators I have heard, they must try to keep their balance. I heard a man called Jack Dennett on the radio a week or ten days ago reporting on events in Czechoslovakia. He told of a demonstration of students which was supposed to go up to the presidential castle and several were wounded on their way to the castle, which I visited in 1939, when Jan Masaryk was receiving very little support from people like the Premier of Ontario (Mr. Drew). Jack Dennett said as they were marching up the hill they were shot down like cattle. That, of course, is a deliberate lie. That never appeared in any despatch that came from Czechoslovakia. It was written in the newsroom of CFRB in order to inflame the passions of the people who listen to the 11:00 o'clock news.

The hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Frost) asked me if I had in mind the suicide of Jan Masaryk. Well, let me say to my hon. friend, I knew Jan Masaryk.

HON. MR. FROST (Provincial Secretary): Did not they drive him to suicide?

MR. MACLEOD: I will not answer anything . . .

HON. MR. FROST: I know that. And I know in Bulgaria your party got in and the first thing they did was to shoot the leader of the opposition. Now, if you got in, would you do the same thing here?

Mr. Speaker, may I say—

MR. MACLEOD: That certainly was not a point of order or a point of privilege.

HON. MR. FROST: Another thing I would like to ask my hon. friend is this—

MR. SPEAKER: May I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost)—

HON. MR. FROST: I would like to ask him (Mr. MacLeod) this; my friend referred to the French Revolution, would you like to bring that to Ontario?

MR. SPEAKER: I will ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) to keep his seat.

HON. MR. FROST: Would you like to bring the horrors of the French Revolution to Ontario?

MR. SPEAKER: Please respect the Chair.

HON. MR. FROST: Is that what you want?

MR. MACLEOD: I am really surprised that a member from such a peaceable riding—

HON. MR. FROST: I am surprised when you try to bring the horrors of the French Revolution to Canada.

MR. MACLEOD: I was not talking about the French Revolution.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, you were.

MR. MACLEOD: I was reading from the history written by the great historian Thomas Henry Buckle, "The History of the Civilization in England," at some length. People like you want to blacken the character of a great people. If you read that quotation in Hansard tomorrow you will find that was a savage attack on a great nation, a great people, who decided they wanted to establish a republic. No one who is a normal, rational human being will ever attempt to justify the excesses. I do not. I loathe it but I say it is more important that mankind should go forward than it is that a dying, decadent order should survive after it has outlived its usefulness. I started to say before I was so rudely interrupted by you—

HON. MR. FROST: You addressed your remarks to me.

MR. MACLEOD: You started it by saying—

HON. MR. FROST: I did not say anything.

MR. MACLEOD: That is very much in character, you never did say anything.

I started to say I knew Jan Masaryk personally. I was in his country at the time of the Munich crisis when the Prime Minister of the province was telling us the aims of the Nazi Party were perfectly clear, that they were not based on the hatred of any people but simply racial pride expressing itself in terms of the future. He wrote that article in Maclean's Magazine.

I was in Czechoslovakia at the time it was betrayed by Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Daladier. I was asked by the director of the Jan Masaryk Foundation to take some messages to Jan Masaryk and the Czech legation in London. The Czechs knew in October, 1938, it was only a matter of months before the Nazis would march in. I had a long talk with him on that occasion and I know something of the opinions he held of the British, American and Canadian Tories who put their stamp of approval on the destruction of the Czech Republic. I talked with Jan Masaryk briefly at the United Nations Assembly only a few months ago, and I mourn his death, a very tragic end by a great fighter for freedom. I am sure that Jan Masaryk would be very much surprised indeed, if he could come back to life and read the tributes of those who only a few weeks ago were subjecting him to ridicule as a man who had betrayed his country.

Now, another matter that has been mentioned here several times by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is gallant little Finland.

I want to say a few words about that because the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) in referring "to gallant little Finland" called our attention to the fact that nine years ago in this Legislature a proposal was made, believe it or not, by my predecessor, Mr. Roebuck, that the Ontario Legislature should appropriate a million dollars to equip an army to go to Finland to fight. The spiritual leader of that movement was that forgotten man of the Tory Party, Senator Arthur Meighen. He was leading the troops, that is to say the industrial troops, and the former member for St. Patrick—I was just asking whether the former member from St. Patrick was still living. Sometimes people pass away and we do not hear about it—I do not want to speak disrespectfully of a former member, but nine years ago Col. Fraser Hunter gathered together the tattered remnants of "Hunter's Hussars" which had been sent down to Oshawa to break the auto strike.

They were trained in the basement of this building in which we are sitting, to go to Finland. Mind you, our country was at war with Germany at that time; the United States was not in the war, Britain was alone faced with the situation that Hitler might strike at any moment. However, they got a bunch of people together, Mr. Meighen called a meeting at Massey Hall and this is what he said, now listen:

"In my judgment there is not an industrialist or business unit in this country which has not got everything to lose if the tide turns definitely against us in the Russ-Finnish war."

MR. G. CHAPLIN (Waterloo South): What date is that?

MR. MACLEOD: This is from a favourite newspaper of yours, the Toronto Evening Telegram of March 11th, 1940. I am quoting from a report of a meeting in Massey Hall. You will remember at that time the Russ-Finnish war had just about come to an end but they were busy and, Mr. Meighen was saying the industrialists and business men had everything to lose if the war turned against them.

On the very day that peace negotiations opened between the Russians and the Finns, the chairman of the committee sent this telegram to the president of Finland:

"Ontario friends sending two thousand more men immediately to help Finland fight. The Finnish Aid Committee."

Two thousand men, at a time when Canada was having difficulty building up her own army to fight against her declared enemy as Britain was standing alone, Mr. Meighen wired Finland. I say that was a deliberate lie. There were not 2,000 men, being trained because you cannot train 2,000 men in the basement of this building. Then, in the same speech he says:

"The fighting now is open fighting, where one man on skis may be worth a dozen in tanks."

I did not know there were any ski-runs in the basement of this building, but apparently there were, and Mr. Hunter and Mr. Meighen were training these men.

I might add the industrialists and "big shots" come across and they gave some money, but the war ended and they called the little army together, a couple of hundred men or several hundred men, to meet at Exhibition Park to be demobilized. Mr. Meighen said, "There is no war to which you can go, in Finland now." And he continued, "Therefore, the only thing for us to do is to honour your name." Then what did he say? He directed them to go to the paymaster's office, after saying, "All we can do is honour your name," they were to go to the paymaster to receive in return for their offer to sacrifice their lives—what? They received $10.00 apiece from this great benefactor of freedom, but that is not all. After giving these men $10.00 apiece, Mr. Meighen also stated any contributions received by his committee would be returned to the original donors who were: C. O. Knowles of the Telegram, $10,000; Osler, Hoskin & Harcourt, $1,000; Davis Leather Company, $1,000; Nickle and Nickle—I do not know whether that is International Nickel—$1,000; Sir Thomas White, $100; Senator Meighen, $300. This is what they put up for the cause of freedom. The boys who were going to be sent over with the prospect of being annihilated in the northern wastes of Finland, received $10.00 for that, but the "big shots" got it all back on a silver platter and undoubtedly went to the stock-brokers' office and invested it in their favourite stock.

Mr. Meighen and Col. Fraser Hunter had no interest whatever in the Finnish people. What they were interested in at that time was to switch the war. They did not like the idea of fighting Hitler, they thought it would be a good idea to switch over and carry on an undeclared war.

MR. A. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick): You did not like the idea of fighting Hitler then, either.

MR. MACLEOD: Of course, Mr. Meighen was very gloomy and naturally it was a great disappointment to him.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I just want to make this point, that all the bilge and nonsense that we have listened to on the subject of Communism is as old as old can be. Even Louis Joseph Papineau—whose memory I am sure is revered by the three French-Canadian hon. members, but not revered by any Tories—in his day, was accused of being a Russian agent, and there was a book written in 1840 called, "Three Years' Residence in Canada," by T. R. Preston in which Preston says:

"A strict alliance exists between the rebel Papineau and the Russian Government. Papineau was gone to Paris for the express purpose of negotiating more conveniently with the Russian Government; and arrangements have been made to admit of his being conveyed from thence, in a quiet way, to St. Petersburg to confer personally with the Emperor."

There you are—in 1840.

Of course, William Lyon Mackenzie was also accused of being a foreign agent and-so-forth. This is old stuff and will certainly be rejected by anyone with an ounce of intelligence. The Tories in the Province of Ontario and throughout the Dominion of Canada look at Europe with great distress. They are greatly disturbed about ex-King Michael who is no longer on the Rumanian throne, and great concern is expressed by Tory spokesmen and Tory newspapers over the fact he is having difficulty getting a marriage licence to consummate his marriage with that member of the fine democratic old family of Bourbon-Parma, great speculation whether he will be able to make the grade. I think those people who bemoan the passing of the old order would be perfectly happy if King Boris were back on the Bulgarian throne, if King Carol were back on the Rumanian throne and Admiral Horthy were back on the Hungarian throne and Colonel Beck were back in the saddle in Poland. That would be their idea of freedom, but the people of those countries have entirely different ideas. They have decided to get rid of those people and to deal in a most stringent fashion with anybody who tries to restore the old order.

Those people suffered in the course of the war. Those countries were ravaged by Hitler and they have not forgotten when Hitler marched into this country he was welcomed by members of The Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade and reactionary parties as their liberators.

That is something that must not be forgotten. I sympathize with you, I know you do not like it. I know you would like everything to return to the status quo, at least to where it was before the war, but that will never happen. Life presses forward, and there is no use getting wrought up about it, no use suggesting that we should do now what Burke suggested the British people should do in 1794—send an army over there and try to restore the old order. It will not work out, it will fail and all we will be doing will be exposing our own country to the danger of the very thing against which the free people of the world had to wage war for six years.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I come to the Speech from the Throne.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: This is really an amazing document. I cannot believe that anyone really sat down and wrote that document or considers it a literary effort. It bears all the marks of a paste-pot symphony. I get the impression that the old propaganda firm of Hogarth and Cassidy, which functions here at Queen's Park, was instructed to gather an anthology of all the platitudes uttered by the hon. Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Drew) last year, and organize it into a Speech from the Throne, and that is what we have got.

I want to say a few words about it, and I am going to follow the method used by my hon. friend from Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) this afternoon: I will deal with it in order.

First of all, hydro. The reference to hydro does not tell us very much, and as I listened to the hydro references in the Speech, there was one thing that occurred to me and that is, why during the past few weeks or few months this province has heard absolutely nothing from the lips of the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies), who is the Minister without Portfolio and the Vice-Chairman of the Hydro Commission.

Now in 1943, when the Quebec agreements were being discussed in this Legislature, the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) was as animated as a Disney cartoon. He was bobbing up all over the place and he was very strongly opposed to those agreements and he used the same kind of language that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) employed when he was denouncing family allowances—"bad legislation," "badly drawn," "unnecessary," et cetera, et cetera, et cetera—a very talkative minister. But in the last few weeks when the shortage of power has affected the people of the Province of Ontario, the hon. Minister in charge of hydro (Mr. Challies) has been as silent as the sphinx. And when it came to making a public statement, who did we have to listen to for half an hour? None other than George the Third himself—not George the First or George the Second, but George the Third. He made the pronouncements. And did he deal in any satisfactory way with the power shortage in the Province of Ontario? Of course not. What he did is what Tories always do: he changed the subject completely and talked about the change in frequency. And he presented the case for frequency standardization as if it were an emanation from his own mind. One would get the impression that he had suddenly discovered the great value of this change-over. I say that frequency standardization is something that emanated from engineering experts and should have been presented to the people by technical experts and not be made the occasion of a political speech.

The hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) said that the name "Drew" will go down in history side by side with that of Sir Adam Beck. I noticed that the hon. Minister responsible for hydro (Mr. Challies) sort of raised his eyebrows as if to say to himself: "what about me? I am the man who has really made this contribution to the development of hydro. What about me? Is my name not going to be associated with Mr. Beck?" But no, it is "Mr. Drew" who is going to be honoured by posterity.

Well, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) said in the House this year that a former president of hydro did not know the difference between an ohm and an onion, I believe that was it—an ohm and an onion. I suggest that as far as the technical study of frequency standardization is concerned, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) would not know the difference between a cycle and a cyclone.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: But he will know the difference after the next election because he is going to be hit by a cyclone.

AN HON. MEMBER: The hammer and cycle?

MR. MACLEOD: And then he will come to the end of his cycle.

AN HON. MEMBER: You are not bragging?

MR. MACLEOD: He will know the difference when the people have a chance to speak.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say that in my opinion the announced change in frequency is not going to solve the power shortage in the Province of Ontario. People have been subjected to great inconvenience during a period of weeks; hundreds of thousands of dollars in production were lost; workers lost tens of thousands of dollars in wages as a result of the bungling policy of the Ontario Hydro Commission. Many people were faced with a possibility of even losing their lives when the power was cut off.

I noticed a statement in the paper the other day by the Tory member of the Toronto Hydro Commission, which suggested that the responsibility belonged elsewhere. Mr. Bert Merson, a good dyed-in-the-wool Tory said: "It looks to me as if the cat is now out of the bag, and certainly Mr. Ashworth was not to blame." Then he went on to point out that instructions came to the Toronto Hydro Commission from the Ontario Hydro Commission in which they were specifically told not to announce this power cut. Mr. Ashworth carried out to the letter the instructions he received from the Ontario Hydro Commission.

I have this suggestion to make to the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas

(Mr. Challies), that this $200,000,000. programme which is outlined in the document put on our desks a few days ago should not be proceeded with too rapidly. I say that it may still be possible, under the public investment programme put forward by the Dominion Government in August, 1945, to convince the Federal authority that this change-over is in the national interest and that a portion of the cost should be borne by the Federal Government. I do not see any reason why the Dominion treasury should not assume responsibility for 40 per cent. of this change-over cost. When it is carried through and completed, it is going to constitute a tremendous asset to the national economy of Canada, and I see no reason why the reserves of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission should be used up in carrying through this programme with the full cost borne by the consumers in the Province of Ontario, when in very large measure the nation as a whole is going to benefit from that change. I think it would be much better if the 40 per cent. of the $200,000,000, that you would save as a result of an agreement with Ottawa should be used to reduce the cost of power to the consumers and I make that suggestion very seriously. I do not see any reason in the world why among all the things that are listed as legitimate public-investment projects, the sort of programme proposed in this report should not be included.

Now I want to say a word or two about housing. We had a statement from the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) the other day in reply to some things that were said by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was invited to read what was actually said in the 22 Points. Well, let us all read it in unison. You have a copy there. What is No. 8?

"To create an Ontario Housing Commission for the purpose of wiping out slums, improving home conditions in city, town and country, and providing post-war employment on a large scale."

Now, most of us were taught the simple English language, and I say that any normal human being would get the impression that this Government was going to set up an Ontario Housing Commission for the purpose of wiping out slums and improving home conditions, et-cetera, et-cetera, et-cetera.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) said the other day that it was never the intention of this Government to go into the manufacturing business. That is what he said. Well, I say to you that this Government has been in the manufacturing business up to its neck for the past four and one-half years. Doing what? Manufacturing excuses for their failure to do anything about housing. So they are in the manufacturing business already.

Then the statement made by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) contradicted by the hon. Minister of Planning and Development, who told us in the House last year that in 1944 this Government had done the following—and I am quoting what the hon. Mr. Porter said:

"As early as the autumn of 1944, this Government did make a proposal to the Dominion Government with reference to the building of houses. We actually proposed at that time—whether or not it was a responsibility for us to do so—but in order to bring about the building of the sort of houses that were apparently needed and would be needed in the post-war years, this Government proposed to the Federal Government that we would pay 50 per cent. of the cost under Part II of The National Housing Act, in cases where the municipalities were in a position and willing to put up the balance."

Does that not suggest that the Government was going to do something about housing in 1944—paying 50 per cent. of the cost?

But since then all the hon. Minister of Planning and Development has done is to write a letter to Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, after Mr. Howe had announced that the Federal Government was prepared to build four thousand homes in the City of Toronto if this Government would service those homes.

A conference was called at the City Hall in Toronto a few weeks ago, to which all the provincial members from Toronto were invited, and we met with municipal, provincial and federal authorities to discuss the possibility of taking advantage of this offer of four thousand homes. Was the hon Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) there? Oh, no. He sent a little man down with no authority, with the statement that the Minister was thinking about it. We have not the slightest idea of what the Government is going to do about housing. During four and one-half years, when tens of thousands of citizens in this province—a very large number of them veterans—have been faced with the acute and difficult problem of finding a place to live, the members of this Government have sat on their collective posteriors and done absolutely nothing—nothing. But we are now told in the speech from the Throne that they are going to do something. Well, we will see what it is. Personally, I am not very optimistic. I think it is likely to follow the pattern of what that great Democrat, Maurice Duplessis, is doing in the Province of Quebec, which is simply a matter of passing trivial legislation, which means absolutely nothing, and will not put any roofs over the heads of very many people.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words about the old-age pensions. The speech from the Throne refers to the fact that this Government has increased old-age pensions up to $40.00 on the basis of need.

I think we should analyze this proposition a bit. I say that it is possible to make a case to prove that, as a result of the legislation passed in the Federal House last spring, this Government is actually saving money on old-age pensions—actually saving money. I noticed that in the speech from the Throne the administration is very careful not to give us any statistics whatever as to the number of people who have qualified for that $10.00 increase. Maybe we will get it from the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) later on.

Under the old scheme, this Government was paying $9.25 towards the $28.00 pension, whereas today it is paying only $7.50 towards the $30.00 pension, and they have imposed what can only be described as a “double means test.” We have the means test for those who qualify for the $30.00, and we have the “double means test” for those people who are going to get the other $10.00. I am of the opinion that when the figures are added up, it will be shown that the total savings, of $1.75 per old-age pensioner as a result of the new legislation, is just about equal to the amount this Government is paying to old-age pensioners on the basis of this “double means test.”

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): You are wrong, as usual.

MR. MACLEOD: Good, I hope I am.

HON. MR. CHALLIES (Minister Without Portfolio): You always are.

MR. MACLEOD: I always like to make you happy.

Mr. Speaker, even if I am wrong, and even if they had spent every cent of the savings of $1.75 per old-age pensioner, that simply means that everything remains as it was. You would not have increased in any way the amount you are paying to the old-age pensioners in this province. I do hope we will get some statistics from the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) on this, so that we will be able to examine these extravagant claims which are made by the Government from time to time.

Before I pass on to labour legislation, I would like to ask the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Michener) what is being done to implement his promise that the civil servants of this province would receive a cost-of-living bonus? There was a statement in the public press last October that a cost-of-living bonus was going to be paid to the civil servants, a very under-paid service in Canada.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): The highest paid in Canada. Did you know that?

MR. MACLEOD: There is nothing in the speech from the Throne—

MR. J. R. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Lower than in the City of Toronto.

HON. MR. FROST: Only in some categories.

MR. MACLEOD: I would like to know what they are going to do about it.

Now, on the question of labour legislation: this Government has found it very difficult to get together with Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King on taxation for social security and so on. The hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) has been able to crawl into bed with Hon. Humphrey Mitchell without a blush.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: Humphrey Mitchell is one of the most mediocre men in the public life of Canada. He brought down legislation which was not dealt with at the last Session of the House. We do not know what kind of legislation he is going to bring before this House, yet the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) takes to the air-waves and says "Whatever Humphrey—Mr. Mitchell—does is good enough for us, and we will make applicable to all industry in the Province of Ontario the code that will be dealt with at the current session of Parliament."

While I am on the subject of labour, having regard to the gratuitous advice the hon. members of this Government are always giving to the leaders of the trade union movement in Canada, as the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) would say, I think the time has come to let the supporters of this Government know exactly what the trade union movement in the Province of Ontario thinks of this Government, and I will give you now a resolution passed at the last session of the Provincial Federation of Trades and Labour Congress of Canada which represents about 200,000 organized workers in this province. This is what they say:

"WHEREAS: The Drew government has consistently ignored the Legislative programme of the Ontario Provincial Federation, Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, and WHEREAS: The Drew government not only failed to act on any of our proposals, but that both the Government and its supporters in the Legislature, actually fought against and defeated all legislative matters introduced and discussed which corresponded to the wishes of organized labour and embodied in our programme."

HON. MR. FROST: That is all pure nonsense. It is written by the C.C.F. and Labour-Progressive propagandists, and is pure nonsense.

MR. MACLEOD: Perhaps I had better finish reading the resolution.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, let us hear it.

MR. MACLEOD: I may assuage your feelings.

AN HON. MEMBER: You are not representing labour, are you?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: I think a drop of your blood would cure cancer. Now, let me go on:

"WHEREAS: The Liberal Party in the Ontario Legislature and at Ottawa, have shown no greater consideration of Labour's demands and needs, therefore; BE IT RESOLVED: That this convention expresses its lack of confidence in the two old-line parties which, while ignoring Labour's needs, have consistently followed the dictates of Big Business, and this convention calls upon all affiliates and members of the Federation to unite at the polls at the forthcoming election to ensure the defeat of all members of the Ontario Legislature who voted against those measures advocated by this Federation and that we support only those candidates who have proven by their actions to be worthy of Labour's confidence."

MR. ROBERTS: May I ask the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) a question?

MR. MACLEOD: The resolution I have just read was carried unanimously.

MR. ROBERTS: Is the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) so dictatorial that he will not stop to permit a question? That is dictatorship, right in this House.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: If there were any Tories or any Liberals there, they just did not have the courage—

HON. MR. FROST: Of course they were not there.

MR. MACLEOD: —to stand up and defend the Government.

When that convention met, the delegates—200 of them—had the benefit of the advice of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) of this province, who says you must not have anything but good Tories as your officers, get rid of the "Reds"—and, of course, everything is "Red" that is not "Purple" to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), but the more he rants and raves, the more consistently the unions stick to their officers.

In that convention, it may be of interest to you to know that a very prominent member of the Labour-Progressive party was elected vice-president.

AN HON. MEMBER: How many were defeated?

MR. MACLEOD: And a man whom I think was a Conservative, or at least sympathetic to the Tory party, was made president, and they elected a Liberal as secretary-treasurer, and they elected two C.C.F.-ers to the executive.

MR. ROBERTS: What did they say about your party?

MR. MACLEOD: Just what I have told you.

HON. MR. FROST: Read the resolution about the Communists.

MR. MACLEOD: Strangely enough, there was not a single resolution introduced by anybody, including the Tories, calling for any condemnation of our party—not a single line; not a single speech made by anyone to indicate that the trade-union movement would place us in the same category as the parties who have run the government of this country for the last eighty years, with such tragic results.

MR. ROBERTS: May I ask a question, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: You may ask the question, but if the hon. member speaking (Mr. MacLeod) will not accept it, he need not answer it.

MR. ROBERTS: I am asking your permission, if he will yield for a minute. Is he going to take the attitude that he will not yield anything at all? That is the type of thing you would expect from a Communist organization.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, nobody interrupted the hon. member (Mr. Roberts). I understand the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) aspires to become the "Great Commoner" of this Legislature.

MR. ROBERTS: You did not ask a question when I was speaking, when I did not yield and answer.

MR. MACLEOD: No, I did not ask a question. I was not paying the slightest attention to what you were saying.

MR. ROBERTS: It seems to have been drawing a red herring—

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I may say that when an hon. member has the floor, he can only be interrupted on a point of order. That is something for which I must apologize to the hon.

member for St. Patrick (Mr. Robert), for refusing earlier to accept his point of order.

MR. ROBERTS: He apparently does not want to yield to anybody for anything. Oh, well, let him go on.

MR. MACLEOD: It has always been my practice not to interrupt a speaker. We sit in the back row, and we take all the slings and arrows that come our way. We do not interrupt anybody. Why should I permit the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) to interrupt me?

Now, I want to say a few words on the question of the Dominion-Provincial relations. We will probably have an opportunity to deal with this at a later date in the debates.

It has been some years since representatives of the Provincial Governments met at Ottawa with the Dominion authorities when the Dominion-Provincial relationships were in a state of crisis. Now they have reached an impasse, and I suggest that now the people of this province and the people of Canada are caught between the upper and the nether stones of political expediency. The Dominion Government at Ottawa is playing politics of the cheapest sort.

I say that when the social security programme was put forward in August, 1945, it was put forward with the full knowledge that the governments of Ontario and Quebec would oppose it. And I say that the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. King) is perfectly satisfied with the fact that the government of Ontario and the government of Quebec are not prepared to sign a tax agreement with the Federal Government, because the absence of such an agreement gives them the opportunity of going to the country in a federal election on the "phoney" issue of the Dominion-Provincial relations. There is a division of labour, in a dialectical sense. The hon. Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Drew) and the hon. Prime Minister of Quebec (Mr. Duplessis) are two of the best allies Rt. Hon. Mr. King has, because as long as they are in office, he does not have to do anything about it. He simply tells the people, "Mr. Drew, and Mr. Duplessis are opposed to it, and our hands are tied."

I say that some way must be found to break the log jam, to get the provinces of Canada together, with or without the sanction of the Federal government, and that is why I put a resolution on the Order Paper suggesting that the government of Ontario give evidence of its good faith by using the prestige of the great Province of Ontario to convene an inter-provincial conference, to see what can be done to force people like Rt. Hon. Mr. King and his colleagues to take action.

I noticed Hon. Mr. Claxton was speaking in Porcupine the other night, and this is what that great advocate of social security, and-so-forth, had to say:

"Advocating lower taxes, higher exemptions, more expenditures at the same time as increased old-age pensions and a complete system of health insurance, plays the Communist game, because it creates appetites that cannot be met."

That is what hon. Mr. Claxton said. If you talk about old-age pensions and social security, and-so-on, you are "playing the Communist game." Well, they must have been "playing the Communist" game in 1945 when they put forward that programme, and now they say the only thing that stands in the way of carrying it out are the governments of Ontario and Quebec.

Now, a word about health: I was very much disappointed that there was nothing in the Speech from the Throne that anything was going to be done to implement the promise made by the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) a year and a half ago to the effect that we were going to have compulsory chest X-rays of all patients entering a public hospital. I would like to refer here to an article written by G. C. Brink, M.D., Director of the Division of Tuberculosis Prevention, as contained in the 22nd Annual Report of the Department of Health.

Dr. Brink says:

"Our records show that tuberculosis infection is still a hazard among hospital personnel. In 1946, 43 nurses developed tuberculosis, a larger number than in any year since 1936, when such records were first compiled. It is hoped that tuberculosis among hospital and sanatorium employees will be classified as a compensable disease in 1947.

"Legislation which provides compensation for those contracting tuberculosis in the course of their duties is both progressive and just, but does not in itself lessen the danger of infection to hospital employees. This can only be done by the screening of all patients entering hospitals by photofluorography, or ordinary X-ray methods, and applying necessary precautions when it is discovered that a patient has pulmonary tuberculosis.

"This procedure, now utilized in many hospitals in the United States, reduces the danger to personnel by uncovering many previously unknown cases of active pulmonary tuberculosis. Statistics show that the incidence of active tuberculosis is higher among hospital patients than in the population as a whole."

That is the end of the quotation.

The hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) told an audience in this province, a year and a half ago that legislation would be brought down at the following Session to make it compulsory for all hospitals to give chest X-rays of all patients entering those institutions. Yet, after all this time has passed, we get a report from the expert on tuberculosis to the effect that 43 nurses in the Province of Ontario have contracted tuberculosis because of the failure to take the necessary steps to protect them.

The excuse has been given that these fluoroscopes or X-ray machines are not available. Let me ask this question;

if they are available to examine the immigrants who are being brought here under the immigration policy of this government, if we give chest X-rays to the people who came here from England—as we should do—why is it not possible to give the same protection to those Ontario girls who are willing to give their lives to the nursing profession? There is no reason in the world why the government cannot bring in legislation, at least making it compulsory for a hospital, which have the machines, to take such X-rays, and then provide whatever is necessary to give additional grants to those hospitals which are not in a financial position to purchase the machines.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am going to finish, and my last words are these.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: I am quite sure that the things that have been said up to now about us will be repeated every day from now until the time we adjourn. Before the Orders of the Day are called, something will come up that will be the occasion for another outburst, and we will hear about the Communists, and how we should protect the fine, clean youths of Canada, and so on, and so forth.

I say that this sort of thing will carry very little conviction with the people of the Province of Ontario, because no Tory government stands in a very strong moral position, as far as the youth of this province and this country is concerned. You can search the records of our history as a nation, and you will not find anything to equal the callousness of the Tory government which was in power in Ottawa, in 1935, with the late Lord Bennett at the helm. That was the time when the youth of Canada, the sons of the very men who fought to make the world safe for democracy in 1914-1918, were thrown by the thousands into the mountain passes of British Columbia, and the hinterland of other provinces as well; compelled to live in tar-papered shacks, and paid the magnificent sum of 20 cents a day. These were the very youths who, a few years later, were going to be given the control stick of a bombing machine that cost $250,000 to build. I do not know of any better commentary on Toryism, whether it is in the provincial or national set-up, than the words which were uttered in the House of Commons at Ottawa in September, 1939, and I would like to put them on record. This comes from the lips of the then leader of the Tory party. Listen to this:

"While we have gone through a series of crises, and now have this terrible catastrophe of war brought upon us by Hitler, it is some satisfaction, at least, to know that the ill wind that brought us the war, brings us a couple of favours; first, there will be a better price for wheat, and secondly, it will probably cure the unemployment problem, which we were apparently unable to cure in peacetime."

That is the end of the quotation. That is the voice of Toryism, and that is the reason why the people of Canada will never elect a Tory government to office—never again. I think if there was even the remotest chance of such a catastrophe overtaking this country, one of the best ways to make certain that it would not happen in Canada, would be for the present leader of the Progressive-Conservative Party in Ontario (Mr. Drew) to become the national leader of the Progressive-Conservative Party. That would indeed seal its doom.

Mr. Speaker, I say, as I sit down, that the charges which have been made that I and my colleague (Mr. Salsberg), and those who agree with us, are bent upon doing injury to this country, that we are working to bring about a crisis in Canada, and that we want to see men and women in the bread lines, is a deliberate lie, because it happens to be our point of view that a defeated and beaten people are not the kind of material by which society can go forward. That kind of stuff will produce Fascism in Canada, as sure as anything.

I notice that these wild outbursts against us are never accompanied by any denunciation of men like Adrien Arcand in the Province of Quebec, who is the chief lieutenant of Maurice Duplessis, and who is financed by Maurice Duplessis to put out his vile, scurrilous attacks on Jewish people. A man who was in league with Hitler prior to the war, who, in the words of Minister of Justice Lapointe, was guilty of treason to Canada. He is at large and carrying on his dirty work down there, but the Hon. Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Drew) has never suggested at any time that such an individual would never be welcome in the Province of Ontario. You can go on yelling and screaming until you are blue in the face but you will not alter my opinions of what I think is right. I am as much a son of Canada as the Hon. Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Drew). My people have contributed as much to the development and growth of Canada as anybody that was ever connected with him.

HON. MR. DREW: You are a disgrace to the country in which you were born.

MR. MACLEOD: That, coming from you, is a compliment. I am willing to have my record compared with yours at any time. You are one of the authors of the Appeasement Policy. You are the man who came back from Germany in 1938 and said that the aims of the Nazi Party are perfectly clear, simply racial pride expressing itself in terms of the future. Is not that what you said? Did you attempt. . . .

HON. MR. DREW: Oh, get on with your address and do not ask any questions.

MR. MACLEOD: You are doing a lot of talking these days about Hong Kong, but I ask you this question; did you object when the Government of Canada was shipping lead, zinc, aluminum and scrap iron to Japan in 1935 and 1936?

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. Mac-Leod) that he is out of order. He has no right to ask any hon. member in the House. . . .

MR. MACLEOD: I suggest to you when the Prime Minister of the Province of Ontario (Mr. Drew) says to a member of this House that he is a disgrace to the country in which he was born, then I think it is your duty, Mr. Speaker, to call that member to order and I would ask you now to have that member withdrawn because that is an insult to me as a member of this House. Let us have a ruling.

HON. MR. DREW: He said it was a compliment, and I think that is a good test of the truth of his statements. If you insist on letting your words stand on Hansard, you should not request a withdrawal.

MR. MACLEOD: You have, on more than one occasion, expressed your contempt of me. I heard you make a remark to the French-Canadian people at a gathering of 200 pressmen in this city in 1944 that could not be repeated in this House.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of beginning a debate across the floor of this House. This is simply the fantastic imagination of the hon. member. He is simply repeating hearsay of what was said by someone else.

MR. MACLEOD: I repeat what I said, I was present at that gathering and every French-Canadian member of this House is aware of what was said and I hope they take very good care to see that the French-Canadian people of northern Ontario and other parts of the Province of Ontario, are made aware of the feeling that he expressed for these people on that occasion. I ask no quarter from the hon. Prime Minister of this province (Mr. Drew). I feel certain that the day will come when the people of Ontario will express judgment on his record and that, before many years have passed, the Tory Party in the Province of Ontario will be nothing more than a wart on the posterior of time.

HON. MR. DREW: Before moving the adjournment of the House, I have no intention of reviewing the speech which has been made, but I do want to clear up one point. To any honest member of this Legislature it is not necessary for me to take issue with the fact, that at the opening of the War the Party to which this member belongs was made illegal and it is a pity it was ever made legal again.

MR. J. P. JOHNSTONE (Bruce): I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion approved.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): May I ask the Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) what we will proceed with?

HON. MR. DREW: We will not proceed with the debate tomorrow, we will proceed with the bills.

MR. OLIVER: Will there be public bills tomorrow?

HON. MR. DREW: That will all depend on the Order Paper.

MR. OLIVER: Government Bills will come first?

HON. MR. DREW: Yes.

Motion approved: House adjourned at 11.17 p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: The Honourable J. DE C. HEPBURN

FRIDAY, MARCH 12, 1948.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

The following petition was read and received:

"Of the Corporation of the Hamilton St. Andrew's Benevolent Society, praying that an Act may pass authorizing the sale of certain lands in the City of Hamilton, being Town Lot No. 3 on the east side of Hughson Street, the proceeds therefrom to be held in trust by the Trustees of the Corporation for the purpose of purchasing other lands for the erection of a Hall or meeting place in which to carry on the work of the Society."

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting reports by Committees.

Motions.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) proposed a certain motion and appealed to you for a ruling as to whether or not it was in order. It was a resolution expressing the opinion of this House that forthwith the public expenditure for old-age pensions should be increased, and in addition to increasing the expenditure, in effect, that, further substantial public expenditures should be incurred by deleting the means test, and also, although not specified "forthwith," expressed the view that there should also be the lowering of the eligible ages.

At the time of appealing to you for a ruling that such a motion was in order, the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) was accorded by you the privilege of giving to you and this house his reasons for believing that his resolution was in order.

On that occasion, the hon. leader of the opposition (Mr. Oliver) availed himself of the opportunity—without reflection, it is true, but, nevertheless, availed himself of the opportunity to state to this House why, in his opinion, the proposed resolution was in order.

On that occasion I made the suggestion to you, Mr. Speaker, that you might consider, in view of the importance of the matter, taking the question of whether the resolution was in order or out of order, under advisement. Under those circumstances, before you proceed with your ruling, I would request the opportunity of placing before you, as Attorney-General, the views of the Government as to why such a resolution is not in order.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a mere, narrow, legal question as to whether a certain matter is in order or is not in order; it strikes to the very root of what is known as our "Constitutional system of responsible government."

Responsible government, in this sense, merely means that the government of the province is carried on by the Ministers of the Crown in matters involving the expenditure of money, and advising His Majesty's representative. And as a result of that advice, proper resolutions involving expenditures of public funds are initiated in that way, for practical purposes, by the Government.

There are some very practical reasons why that is so. In advising His Majesty's representative, his advisers—the Ministers of the Crown collectively—are not concerned solely whether it is a laudable matter to spend public funds for one particular purpose. It is their obligation to consider the expenditure of public funds in the aggregate in relation to the whole of the responsibility of government in the province.

They have a corresponding responsibility when they recommend the expenditure of public funds, and that corresponding responsibility is the responsibility of recommending those tax measures which will make available those public funds for expenditure.

Here we have a case of a private member putting forward a motion involving the expenditure of a huge sum of public money. Today I am unable to estimate how much, but I am told that, quite aside from abolishing the means test or lowering the age, if this resolution were to be considered by this Legislature, without relation to other public responsibility it would involve an expenditure of between $18,000,000 and $20,000,000.

The fact of the matter is that His Majesty's advisers, who happen to be the Government of the day, have the very definite responsibility of putting forward all resolutions involving such expenditures with the corresponding responsibility of taxing for them, on the broad basis that hon. members of the Government hold office and are in the position of advising His Majesty's representative while they retain the confidence and support of the Legislature. It, therefore, follows that if such a resolution is in order and if it were by any chance adopted by the Legislature, it would become an expression of such Legislature without the benefit of the careful and responsible advice to proceed, forthwith to spend that amount of money.

The resolution, therefore, falls into the category of attempting to do by resolution, if it does anything effective at all, which is properly done only by the introduction of the proper supporting legislation and the supporting money resolution. It, therefore, becomes, to put it bluntly, Mr. Speaker, an abuse of the process of this Legislative Assembly and can only be regarded as an effort to embarrass the present Government in its efforts to carry on government in the Province of Ontario.

I want to make quite clear that very salutary rule, Mr. Speaker, in no sense embarrasses or restricts hon. members of this Assembly from putting forward their views in relation to the advice that His Majesty's advisers give from time to time on the expenditure of public funds.

I would like to remind the hon. members of this Legislature that there is the fullest and freest opportunity afforded for expressing any views that an hon. member holds on a subject properly within the rules of this House. Those views may be freely expressed as the views of an individual hon. member on, at least, the following occasions within the rules; on the debate that is at present proceeding, on the Speech from the Throne; there is also an opportunity during the budget debate; and as this is a matter which is under the administration of our department of Public Welfare, there is a further occasion for the expression of views when the estimates of that particular department are under consideration in this Legislature.

It is true that in relation to any of those matters, an hon. member may not put forward a formal resolution to authorize or compel expenditure, but he can express his views on the sagacity, or the wisdom of His Majesty's advisers, the Government, in relation to what they have done or have failed to do, in the opinion of the hon. member, relating to public expenditures.

I wish to draw to the attention of the House the fact that there appears to be very few recent precedents on this question. It was decided, and decided quite effectively, a very considerable number of years ago. The nature of the practice sought to be introduced here was then explored and examined in relation to our responsible type of government, and was determined to be wholly improper. For the benefit of hon. members of the Legislature who may not have looked the matter up in our own rule book, without reference to the other authorities on the matter, I would like to give these references:

"On the 11th of March, 1874, the following motion was placed before the House, 'that in the opinion of this House it is expedient that provision be made by which municipalities entitled to payments under the Municipal Loan Fund Act of 1874 shall be permitted to extend their appropriations in accordance with the wishes of the ratepayers—'"

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell) mind giving me the page?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is on page 156.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Was that resolution proposed, Mr. Minister?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Yes. The reference the hon. Speaker made was to Sir Erskine May's well-known work, and without reading all that was said, we find this:

"Sir Erskine May says that such resolutions have been allowed—" that was in the past, prior to the time of these decisions—

"but he proceeds to add that 'they are objectionable, and being an evasion of a wholesome rule, are discouraged as much as possible.' Mr. Todd says that 'Abstract resolutions in regard to particular branches of taxation have been submitted to the House by private members but they have been uniformly resisted as being inexpedient and impolitic'. These abstract resolutions are, in fact, growing more and more into disfavour in England, as tending to embarrass the executive, etc. The language of the 54th section of the British North America Act seems also to be more stringent than the rule in England. 'It shall not be lawful for the House to adopt or pass any vote, resolution, address or bill for the appropriation of any part of the public revenue, or of any tax or impost to any purpose that has not been first recommended'— and it means by that "recommended by the Crown"—

"But whatever might have been my own opinion"— said the hon. Speaker—

"—upon this subject, I consider myself bound by a precedent which I find in the Journals of this House. An abstract resolution was proposed affecting the revenue from timber. The Attorney-General, Macdonald, objected that it could not be entertained without the recommendation of His Excellency. A long discussion followed, in which the propriety of permitting abstract resolutions was fully discussed. The Speaker ruled against the resolution, and upon an appeal to the House, his ruling was sustained."

That was a ruling of this Legislature, Mr. Speaker, made by the hon. Speaker, sustained by the House, and deemed to have been in effect ever since.

I have another reference here which relates to as long ago as the 11th of December, 1874, and I am now reading from page 160:

"The House considered the fourth resolution for Committee of Supply, respecting Hospitals and Charities, when it was moved—"

This is in relation to a recommendation properly before the House; this addition was moved by a private member.

"This House, while concurring in the resolution—" that is, in the proper recommendation, "—desires to express the opinion that so long as the policy of granting provincial aid to charitable institutions, of the character of those mentioned in the schedules to the Charity Act of 1874 continues, justice demands that such aid should not be confined to the institutions mentioned in the said schedules, but that it should be extended to other institutions of the like character and usefulness, which have come into existence since the passing of the Act."

There the hon. Speaker decided:

"That this motion seeks to commit the House to a future expenditure of public money. There are in the Journals numerous instances of abstract resolutions of this sort, but the current of modern decision has been against them. May says that such resolutions have grown into disfavour, and should be discouraged. I feel bound to follow my decision of last Session upon this subject, following a decision confirmed by this House upon appeal in 1869 as to the Crown Timber dues. The effect of these decisions is practically to put an end to abstract resolutions of that character, and I therefore feel bound to rule this motion out of order."

I think, Mr. Speaker, that one more example might suffice. I am now reading from page 164:

"On 27th February, 1877, on resumption of debate on resolutions respecting Railway Aid, it was moved in amendment of motion to agree that the following be added thereto: 'This house regrets that the Government has not recommended for the consideration of the people's representatives the expediency of granting further aid to the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway, in respect of the portion of the line between Weston and Orangeville, which portion has not heretofore received Government aid.' The Speaker said that this was an abstract resolution—" again the same expression occurring through all of this—

of the right of private members to move abstract resolutions of a certain character seems to have been decided in a case reported in this House, 1868-9, when a motion that it was expedient to attract immigration into this province by granting certain privileges as to cutting and disposing of timber was ruled out of order, not only by the Speaker, but, on appeal, by the House."

Now, I hope that you, Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of the House, will be indulgent, as I have taken a considerable amount of the House's time in relation to this current matter. It is one of substantial importance. It deals with a field that was thought to be well decided many years ago. It is not a narrow, legalistic ruling, but depends on the very practical considerations that I have put forth in relation to it. I felt it very desirable under those circumstances, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Government, in my position of Attorney-General, that I should put before the House in some considerable detail the reasons why I advance to you the view that you should rule the motion in question out of order.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER
(Prescott): Mr. Speaker—

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) that the matter is not debatable.

MR. BELANGER: As your decision, Mr. Speaker, will not be debatable, may I be allowed to take advantage of the precedent set by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to speak very briefly on this question? The question is very important as a matter of the application of the rule. I, as an old member—this is my twentieth session in this House—have always been very interested in the rules and the interpretation of what the rules imply, and I find that this rule is deeply rooted, not only in the rules of the British Parliament but very deeply rooted in the English Constitution, for which I have much admiration, and I would be the last man to say anything that would impair this constitution upon which all of our responsible Government is framed.

I may say further, Mr. Speaker, this is a question of procedure in this House. It is not in any way a party question. It should not be made a party question. There should be no partisanship at all in considering it. I commend the hon. minister (Mr. Blackwell) for having brought to this subject such extensive study, and the exposé he has just made of the matter before the House is pertinent, if it results in hon. members opposite giving closer attention to the rules of procedure in a Legislative Assembly in a British Commonwealth. In the past, the rules have been dealt with in a very loose way for the sake of partisanship advantage in this House by members on the Government side of the House.

I agree, I may say immediately, with every single statement just made by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) except with one thing, when he states the direct object—the purpose—of the hon. member of this House who brought in this resolution was to embarrass the Government. I do not like to impugn motives when I cannot read a man's mind. He said a few words regarding the purpose of the motion being an attempt to "put one over" the Government.

I agree entirely with the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that these theoretical resolutions, however framed, must be discouraged, because, no matter what would be said—for instance, by Beauchune's "Parliamentary Rules" as applying to the House of Commons—I think it is quite right we should discourage that, as it is so difficult to know which resolution should be allowed to pass and which should not, on many matters of the kind. It would be unwise, I believe, to extend the interpretation of the rule to approve these theoretical resolutions. I, therefore, have no hesitation in saying to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that I am fully in accord with his exposé and his conclusions.

MR. SALSBERG: Before you give the ruling, may I present an authoritative opinion?

MR. SPEAKER: I will give my ruling. I have formed my own opinion.

MR. SALSBERG: All I want to add, sir, is to put before you . . .

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has asked for my ruling.

The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) submitted to me a resolution in respect to old-age pensions and then asked me if I would give a ruling. The hon. members of the House were kind enough to let me consider my ruling and I promised to bring it to them and I will now give my ruling on this particular resolution.

I have now considered the matter in the light of the relevant statutes, rules and former Speakers' rulings, particularly Rule No. 112.

It seems to me to be clear that the proposed resolution seeks to commit this House to a further expenditure of public money without the consent of the Crown.

The Journals of this House contain numerous examples of abstract resolutions of this sort and the current of the decisions is against them.

I feel bound by rulings of previous Speakers of this House and I, therefore, rule that the proposed resolution of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is out of order.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Scott, that leave be given to introduce a Bill intituled An Act to amend The Municipal Act, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

THE OTTAWA LADIES' COLLEGE

MR. WILLIAM DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Acres, I move, seconded by Mr. Hall, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled an Act respecting The Ottawa Ladies' College, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the following:

"1. Report of the Secretary and Registrar of the Province of Ontario with respect to the administration of The Extra Provincial Corporations Act for the calendar year ending December 31, 1947.

"Report of the Secretary and Registrar of the Province of Ontario with respect to the administration of The Companies Act and The Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1947."

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion approved.

House in committee; Mr. Reynolds in the chair.

HON. MR. DREW (Prime Minister): 26th Order.

THE REAL ESTATE AND BUSINESS BROKERS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 26th Order; House in Committee on Bill No. 60, An Act to amend The Real Estate and Business Brokers Act, 1946, Mr. Blackwell.

On Section 1.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Chairman, in connection with this bill, I would like to say a few words.

Perhaps it is not referable directly to this, but may have some connection. As the hon. members of this House know, the practice is whenever a real-estate agent negotiates a transaction connected with real estate or property, there is a deposit usually made—which may be five hundred dollars or a thousand dollars. Sometimes the agreement is entered into but not carried to its completion, due to frustration of the event. I understand that the real-estate agents put forth the proposition that in such a case they are entitled to their full commission, and I think it is argued along that line. I am wondering if there should not be a clause added whereby the respective rights of the real-estate agent and the owner should be set out very clearly so that there should be no dispute in case an agreement entered into is not carried out to its completion and the equity as between the owner and real-estate agent should be defined.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, I notice that the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) in his suggestion appreciated that it did not specifically refer to the section before the House in Committee. Nevertheless, I wish to assure him if he wishes to offer a suggestion for the improvement of the legislation, I feel it should not be treated on the narrow view of the section, and I am prepared to comment on his proposals.

The law on the question is quite clear that when a commission is earned by an agent, the agent is entitled to it. The law is equally clear, no matter how much an agent may do, unless the trade is actually effected by rights being established for its completion, then he is entitled to nothing.

Now, there may be some variance of views as to whether or not there should be a schedule for part performance, etc., or work done. If that is to be done, it could be done by agreement.

In the absence of that, the courts will pay no attention to anything that is done unless in fact the deal is made.

There is no difficulty about it. If the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) means that we should transfer the findings as to whether or not the task in respect to which the commission is earned has been performed, that should be determined departmentally rather than before the courts. I am not suggesting the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) is making that suggestion, but if that is what it amounts to, I would be opposed to accepting it.

In view of the fact that the law is clear, I see no reason why it should be incorporated into the statutes, as a statutory provision. If we did, on the same principle, we might add the whole body of law to all the several acts of the Legislature, and increase the volume of the revised statutes to much more than its present four large volumes.

For these reasons, which I felt I should advance comprehensively, I see no occasion to add to the bill, in the manner which the hon. member suggests.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

Bill No. 60 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 27th order.

PUBLIC HOSPITALS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 27th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 61, An Act to amend the Public Hospitals Act, Mr. Kelley.

On section 1.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I raised a point when the bill was up for second reading, to the effect that the bill as at present drawn, restricts the amount which a municipality will be permitted to pay for the funeral expenses of an indigent person, to a maximum of $40. I argued that was unnecessary, and that the figure is certainly inadequate for many municipalities, where the costs may be higher, and it would be an unfair and totally uncalled-for thing to do, to insist on the inclusion of those limitations which will compel municipalities to provide a pauper funeral for an indigent person. It will mean in the larger municipalities, where funeral costs are higher, that in some instances an indigent person will have to be sort of spirited away from a hospital after he dies, and that no car will be available for the family.

I expressed the hope that the government would see fit to amend it, but in the absence of such an amendment, I wish to move, Mr. Chairman, that:

"Section one, of Bill 61, be amended by deleting the word 'to' and the figures '40', and substituting instead the words 'in accordance with the decision of the local municipal government.'"

If you cannot read that, I will come down and read it for you.

THE CHAIRMAN: No, you stay up there.

MR. SALSBERG: That is the first time I have ever been told to "stay up."

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): That was seconded by whom?

THE CHAIRMAN: There is no seconder.

MR. SALSBERG: My colleague is out of the house—

HON. MR. DREW: It is either seconded or it is not.

MR. SALSBERG: I would ask some hon. member to second it, so that we may discuss it.

HON. MR. DREW: Call the section; there is no seconder.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

Bill No. 61 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 28th Order.

SANATORIA FOR CONSUMPTIVES ACT, 1947

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 28th Order, House in Committee on Bill 62, An Act to amend the Sanatoria for Consumptives Act, 1947, Mr. Kelley.

On section 1.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I am sorry I have no seconder, therefore, I will not move an amendment, but I do feel that a remark should be made against this section, and I am rising to make it. I cannot understand the logic or reasoning of the government in refusing to make this minor amendment. I am sorry they have taken this attitude, and I am sorry I cannot have a seconder.

While this may not affect a large number, it certainly does affect certain of the poorest population.

We should not tie the hands of the municipalities in this regard, and I felt I should register an objection against this section, since I cannot move an amendment.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, regarding the statement; I would remind the house that in view of the fact that the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) failed to find a seconder by reason of the fact of the limited number of Communists in this house—

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, don't be so silly.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: —and no hon. member of the Legislature appears willing to accept it, the entire house, except himself and his Communist colleague are opposed to this amendment.

MR. SALSBERG: I wish to register another objection, Mr. Chairman, and that is to the juvenile actions of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). My motion is before you, and is seconded by Mr. MacLeod.

THE CHAIRMAN: No, it is not.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes it is. The bill is before you.

THE CHAIRMAN: We are dealing with Bill No. 62.

MR. SALSBERG: I can amend it now.

On section 1.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I move the amendment that is before you. All I have to do is to change the letter.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Do not be nervous now. You are going to get it in.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) if there are instances when the $30 minimum was in force, of any municipalities paying beyond the $30 for this service?

HON. RUSSELL T. KELLEY (Minister of Health): Would the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) please state his question again.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, my question was when the old $30 minimum was in vogue, were there instances in which municipalities paid beyond the $30?

HON. MR. KELLEY: Not of which we have knowledge. We have no report of request from any municipality to increase this amount at all. When the funeral directors were in, this matter was brought up, and on the basis of that conference, we raised it to $40.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) may not have reports, but I feel that the charges for burials are not reasonable in the province. I know in the part of the country I represent there is no burial you could get for $30.

MR. OLIVER: What do you do?

MR. ANDERSON: We just pay them. We may have broken the law, but we pay more than $30. I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelley) if this bill goes through the way it is, would it be illegal to pay more than $40? We may have been breaking the law. I feel sure it would be difficult to get a burial for $40 in Fort William at the present time.

HON. MR. KELLEY: My answer to the question put by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was that we had received no requests from any municipalities. I am not a lawyer, and I will express no opinion on the legality of your actions.

MR. ANDERSON: Mr. Chairman, I am not a lawyer either. There are two of us who are not lawyers. I feel that I should have the opportunity while I am here of getting an opinion, if the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) would care to enlighten me. The question is this; if this passes the way it is, then would we in our municipality be breaking the law by paying over the $40?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) is, of course, concerned with this in a dual capacity. He wants to know what the bill means while it is going through the Legislature, and he asks me, as Attorney-General, to express a view upon it. I should predicate anything I say on the fact that despite any view I may express here, as to what it means, if it should come before the courts, the judges will say what they think it means. In that respect, I would advise the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) to consult the city solicitor of his municipality as soon as he gets back.

My view is it permits a flexible amount between $30 and $40, and that the municipality has no authority, unless they can find it in some section of the Municipal Act, to pay more than $40.

MR. ANDERSON: That being the case, Mr. Chairman, if the hon. member who wanted a seconder (Mr. Salsberg) is still looking for one, I will second his amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: He has a seconder.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I might say one further thing, because it may be in the discussion which has ensued, there has been aroused some genuine concern on the part of the hon. members of the House.

There are two parties primarily concerned with the expense account. The indigent is not concerned with the expense, because, whatever the amount is, he has nothing with which to pay, so, as far as the question of payment is concerned, the municipality has to put up the money, on the one side, and the undertakers of the province—or, as they sometimes prefer to be known, the "Funeral Directors"—are also concerned.

They made representations to the Department of Health for an increase, and they expressed themselves as being well satisfied to carry on this public service to the community for the amount that is in this bill.

That being so, even if the mayor of Fort William (Mr. Anderson) wishes to pay more in his locality, I am quite sure that the undertaker should be encouraged to keep this particular service at a minimum cost. It is something that is done wholly at the expense of the municipal taxpayers.

We, as a provincial government, have some doubt that we should either impose or encourage unnecessarily large expenditures, which are now being looked after to the reasonable satisfaction of the people who do the work, and for that reason we think the section is all right.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I want to correct an impression which may be gathered from the hon. Attorney-General's (Mr. Blackwell) remarks to the House. It is not correct, in my opinion, that the undertakers' association or the municipalities are satisfied with the present rates. I have stated here—and I repeat—that I recall distinctly this matter being dealt with for weeks by the welfare committee of the City of Toronto, when I was a member of that committee, because the rates did not permit—so argued the association—even a car for the family of a deceased of that category. I have had cases where money had to be found, perhaps through private contributions, to provide a car for a family to attend the funeral of the head of that family, because he was poor. That was not uncommon in the days of the depression.

I may add that I spoke to a gentleman today who knows this profession very thoroughly, and who only recently withdrew from it. He is known to all hon. members of this House. He assured me that you cannot get what you might call a “funeral”—and, of course, there is a “burial” and a “funeral”, as he explained—all you can get is a box, in which just to spirit away the dead. That is not a funeral. Certainly the poorest section of the population, when afflicted in a case of this sort, should not be denied a car in which to travel at the funeral. I just wanted to clear up that impression. It certainly is a very simple thing, and we could afford to leave it to the municipal government to decide the rates, as they see fit.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to unduly prolong this discussion, or labour this point, but I feel with the additional contribution to the discussion by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) I should make this very definite statement.

The Government in dealing with any matter which concerns the municipal level of government, of course, cannot possibly entertain the views or opinions expressed by individuals, as members of the municipal corporations. The proper voice of the municipality is its council. I assure the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that I appreciate the fact that he once was a member of the city council of the City of Toronto, and if he states in this Legislature that he advocated certain things as a member of that council, I do not wish to dispute that at all.

But the fact is that while he was there he did not advocate these measures in council sufficiently to bestir them to a point where, as a corporate body, they were prepared to come here and express their corporate mind.

As a government we cannot deal with individual matters, or individuals expressing views on this or any other point. We can only accept the views which have reached the level of council, and which by council have been transmitted to us.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I move, seconded by Mr. MacLeod, that Section 1 of Bill No. 62 be amended by deleting the word “to” and the figures “40 dollars,” and substitute instead the words “in accordance with the decision of the municipal government.”

Motion negatived.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

ACT TO FACILITATE THE ENFORCEMENT OF MAINTENANCE ORDERS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 29th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 64, An Act to Facilitate the Enforcement of Maintenance Orders. Mr. Blackwell.

On section 1:

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, might I ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), if in order for this bill to become operative, it will be necessary for other jurisdictions to pass corresponding legislation? Is that correct?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): That is correct, Mr. Chairman.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

On section 3:

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a supplementary question of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell)? Is there any indication that the other provinces are going to adopt similar legislation?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I am very glad that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) asked that question. Possibly I should refresh the minds of the hon. members of this House as to just where this bill is to operate. This Act was put forward in parliament in Britain in the hope that it might become a uniform statute and as such, in relation to Canada, it has been enacted in the four western provinces and therefore, its reciprocal provisions are now in effect between Britain and each of these four provinces. With this enactment here, we become one more area, which will bring that group up to six.

I have to say to the House, I believe that we enlarged the provisions of our bill somewhat in that we contemplated as far as we were concerned, the states outside the British Commonwealth by the enactment of similar legislation could also come within its reciprocal provisions.

Sections 3 to 11 inclusive approved.

JUDICATURE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 31st Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 66, An Act to amend the Judicature Act. Mr. Blackwell.

On Section 1:

MR. AURELE CHARTRAND (Ottawa, East): Mr. Chairman, I would like to make some comment on the proposed amendment to this bill. Very frankly, I must say that having looked very carefully into the bill, I think that it should either be withdrawn or be amended considerably.

There is very substantial objection to the amendment proposed. As we are now on Section 1, I will deal with that section, but there are also objectionable features in the other sections.

I believe that such amendment will only make for confusion.

If we read the section it says:

"No such sittings shall begin on any day before nine o'clock in the forenoon, nor, except for special reasons, shall it extend beyond seven o'clock in the afternoon, and there shall be an intermission of at least half an hour at or near noon."

You will note that the proposed amendment does not necessarily, mandatorily, say "any time;" it merely leaves the door open as far as the setting of time is concerned and from a practical standpoint, in my mind, it is going to be very trying not only upon judges and lawyers but upon the litigants as well. They after all are the parties who should be particularly considered. The proposed amendment leaves us in the position that no one knows the time that the sittings shall commence. We know only that the sittings cannot commence earlier than 9 o'clock. It may commence at 1 o'clock—the old time.

The proposed amendment, to my mind, is not helpful to judges, counsel or litigants. As a sitting usually commences on a Monday, it may not be known to counsel or litigants or to summonsed witnesses whether the court will open at 9 o'clock or at 1 o'clock. It would be left to the discretion of the presiding judge.

Another objectionable feature to it is that many lawyers and judges reside in a certain town and motor down to the adjoining counties on the Monday morning in order to attend court. If this proposed amendment should go through, then I suggest that if the judge presiding over the court intends to open the court at 9 o'clock, he would have to arrive in the county town on Sunday night and counsel would have to do likewise.

I would like to point out that the purpose of the amendment as set out in the explanatory note is to save time. I do not think that there is any lost time on a Monday morning when there is no actual sitting of the court. Perhaps interviews are requested from the presiding judge either to obtain adjournments of cases, to consult as to the advisability of bringing about a settlement, or else in gathering the witnesses and reviewing the evidence to be given.

If a court should open at 9 o'clock, we would probably lose all the advantage which we have at the present time. Furthermore, litigants may be prejudiced in the sense that witnesses who may have been subpoenaed to appear at a given place call at the courthouse, find out that nobody is present and that there is no sitting of the court in the morning; they may gather the impression they are not required and return home, with the result that such amendment would cause great confusion.

To my mind we would be farther advanced by leaving the Judicature Act as it was before and to omit subsection 1.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, I find it just a little bit embarrassing to express to the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) the thought that I feel compelled to, because it is quite obvious to me that he has done a lot of commendably hard work examining the effect, in his opinion, of this section, but I do want to direct his mind to this, that I think he is under a misconception as to how the department works in putting forward an amendment of this description. It does not originate in the fertile minds of the officials of the department or in the mind of the Attorney-General himself; almost invariably it is the result of the close association that exists between the department and those who carry on the administration of justice.

I do not want to discourage the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) or anyone else from reviewing the sections carefully, but if the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) had come to me and expressed his doubts about this, I would have been glad to tell him that this amendment has been made on the express request of the judges, by letters, and that full consideration has been given to the practical effect on the conduct of the courts. This section was in effect in the horse-and-buggy days but today there is a substantial waste of time both on the part of judges and busy counsel in places where they go overnight by train and where they are ready to proceed and could just as easily as not arrange for the parties and witnesses, but under this section with no flexibility they are compelled to sit and wait there until one o'clock.

I want to say to the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand), that I think what he said represents a conscientious examination of the section and the expression of his best opinion in relation to it and I do wish in the case of these legal bills, which arise in the way I described, that hon. members would be good enough to come to me and I will be very glad to give them a full explanation.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): It is much better that the House get the explanation.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I am very glad to have it mentioned in the House too.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Chairman, may we ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to let that bill stand for just a short while?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Why?

MR. BELANGER: Just exactly as you say, in order to get the full explanation—outside of the House if it is necessary.

I am very much in accord with what has been said by my hon. friend from Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand). I am not concerned so much about the judge as I am about the litigants and witnesses. In many cases—I can cite them—the litigants and the witnesses would have to arrive on a Sunday night in order to be sure to be there for 9 o'clock in the morning for opening of court, if some judge takes it upon himself, for his own convenience, to take advantage of the Act and open the court at 9 o'clock.

I think the opening of the court on Monday at 1 o'clock is the part of wisdom and that it has really proven itself in the past. There would be sure to be less delay, I think, in opening the court, without this amendment, and leaving things as they are at the present time. A judge away from home would save just half a day. I am not very much concerned about that so far as the judge is concerned and I can very well see that this has been asked by judges for their own convenience, but there is a whole lot of ordinary persons who are concerned, more concerned than the judge himself, as a matter of fact. The judge is concerned only when the case is put before him, but there are litigants on both sides, there are witnesses on both sides, sometimes they amount to as many as 12 or 15, and their convenience is to be looked to more than the convenience of the judge.

If the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) would let this stand, it would pass very quickly when it came back again, and perhaps, we could give information to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) which would have the effect of persuading him to drop the bill.

MR. J. ANACLET HABEL (Cochrane, North): Mr. Speaker, on that section I must say in all fairness that I can understand the viewpoint of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). He is trying to comply with requests from the judges, as the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) has so well said, but does he realize exactly the situation in which he is placing witnesses, and litigants as well, in districts such as those we represent up north?

For instance, the judge might very well arrive on a Sunday night at Cochrane, and Cochrane is the judicial town for Timmins and Iroquois Falls and the surrounding area, and it means that maybe hundreds of people will have to leave home on Sunday morning, spend Sunday at Cochrane and the night as well in order to be present at the opening of court on Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

As the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) and also the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand) have so well explained, it is a matter of being fair with the greater number, not so much with one or two who might not like to be away from home half a day more than they have to be.

In all fairness I think the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) will bear me out in that it would certainly create a situation quite embarrassing to many people up north if the judge were to arrive on the Sunday night, for instance, and the court were to open on Monday morning at 9 o'clock; it would certainly create a situation that would not be very funny for anyone up there.

After all, in Cochrane the train coming in from Hearst arrives at 10:45 in the morning, the one coming from Timmins arrives at 9:30 in the morning so one o'clock in the afternoon is the proper time for the court to open. I, for one, feel it would be well to reconsider that section before going any further with the bill.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, it is with reluctance that I would have any hesitation in holding a section out for further consideration, but there were two objections raised in the first place to this section by the hon. member from Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand).

The first one was the inconvenience that some counsel and witnesses might be put to if they had to be there at 9 o'clock on Monday morning for the opening of court.

The other one was the fact that the section lacked certainty because it failed to say the court shall open Monday morning at that hour. I feel the House should appreciate it is after deliberation that the section is put in the form in which it is, to accommodate itself with the actual practice. That is, when a judge is to go to the place in question he knows before he goes whether it is an area in which the transportation facilities and-so-on lend themselves to people being available for the opening of court on Monday morning. He also knows whether that would create certain difficulties, and that is the very reason the section is not made mandatory for an opening hour on Monday, because it is entirely out of the question in some parts of the province, under certain conditions, that the court should open at that hour on Monday morning. But, as I say, the judge indicates in advance when he will sit; that is arranged through the registrar who notifies counsel and counsel notify the witnesses and then it is arranged to open when it is expedient and that will not result in a half day's wastage in some places for every person concerned, because there are many places where they have to reach town the night before in order to be there for the next day and it is worded in this flexible way, on the basis of departmental examination. I am fully satisfied this section as drafted now will be worked through the judges to the better advantage not only of the judges but the profession and also the parties and the witnesses.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I might say to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that in my opinion, my legal friends on this side have made to him, what I think should be considered by him, a very reasonable request.

There has risen in the minds of hon. members of this side some doubt as to the wisdom of passing this particular legislation by the Government. Certainly this Legislature or this Government would not say they are infallible, it might be wrong. It is always subject to correction and what harm can come from the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) agreeing to lay this over for a few days until the first of the week? It is hard for any one to say.

We have ample bills on the order paper to go ahead with and it does seem regarding this bill and this particular amendment that there is room for an honest difference of opinion and with that difference of opinion remaining it would be, it seems to me, in the interests of good legislation for the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to let the bill stand over for the present.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I did not intend to become involved in this debate but I agree with the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and his colleagues who have spoken that there is nothing here which will guarantee that the judge knows the circumstances in the area to which he is going. He may not be fully acquainted with the train schedules.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: We cannot print the railway schedules in the bill.

MR. GRUMMETT: You are going to give the opportunity to the judge to send notice to the registrar that the court is opening at 9 o'clock, if he wants the court to open at that time. The court has to open no matter what inconvenience it may cause to those who may be attending court at that time. I think the hon. Attorney-General (Mr.

Blackwell) should heed the request of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and lay the bill over for at least two or three days for further consideration.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: It has been there for two or three days for consideration now.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Chairman, as I intimated before, I have some objections to raise on Section 2.

In the first place, I think the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) will agree with me that it is against the best opinion to have any local Masters practising law at the same time in his private practice and the objection that I have is, firstly, that no local Master should be entitled to be local Master and practise law at the same time.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Would the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) just repeat what he is advocating there? Do I understand you are saying no local Master should be entitled to practise law at the same time?

MR. CHARTRAND: Yes.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is what the section says.

MR. CHARTRAND: It says, "Unless his appointment otherwise provides."

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: All that is deleted is the penalty. It is perfectly ridiculous to assess a penalty of $400 against a person who has a crown appointment. The thing to do, if he offends against the section, is to revoke the appointment. The $400 has been removed because there has never been an occasion on which it has been used.

MR. CHARTRAND: Nevertheless, I think some kind of penalty should remain; otherwise, any local Master who desires to practise law at the same time without being authorized so to do, could do so without impunity. That is what I object to.

Now, on Section 90:

"Where in any county the office of local Master is vacant or the local Master is absent or ill, any judge of any county court in the county court district may act pro tempore as the local Master."

May I point out to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that the provision of the Act is permissive, not mandatory and if a judge does not want to act then we are at a loss for a local Master.

The second objection; if a local Master desires to return to the practise of law and his request is not granted, we have no local Master that is absent or ill, he simply will not discharge his duty. He asks to be relieved and if the permission is not granted then there is no local Master acting. I believe that section should be drafted so as to make it compulsory for a judge to act as local Master if the office becomes vacant or the local Master is absent or ill.

Secondly, there should also be included a section whereby if the local Master should demand to be relieved of his duties it should be granted and another local Master appointed immediately.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, I will take the objections raised by the hon. member from Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand) in detail.

First, the question raised by the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) as to the propriety of a local Master having the right to practise law. I think the section also refers to acting as a notary while being local Master.

I think every hon. member of this House will agree that in judicial and some other positions in relation to the administration of justice it is highly desirable that a person who occupies such a position should not practise law. That same principle applies with equal force to the magistrates of the province. If it were possible in all places covering the area of the province with sparse population in many areas, to have a practical system of magistrates, whereby no magistrate could practice law part-time, I think that principle would be a great hardship. I have not the exact number, but I think in some thirty places, where the traffic will stand it, in the province there are full-time magistrates who are prohibited from practising law, but in many areas of the province it is impossible, as a practical matter, to arrive at that ideal situation.

The same situation applies to the local Master. You could not find a person enough work to do to justify a salary that will support him, so there has to be a compromise. Under those circumstances I do say to the House where it is possible to do so—and that has been advanced over the last few years in the matter of all those offices, not only the magistrates; we have often extended it to Crown attorneys—they should be full-time appointments, without practising law on the side.

I feel under those circumstances and with that submission the House will probably be prepared to leave that as a progressive administration measure.

That is really the only way with which this can be dealt. I really do not feel, after due consideration, that the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand) is going to press me to put mandatory provisions in the section, in relation to the judges.

In the first place, I doubt if the province can compel a judge, appointed by the Dominion, to accept any appointment the judge does not wish to accept. After all, they are appointed in relation to the administration of justice as judges. They do undertake other duties, and the province pays them something for performing those other duties.

In my brief experience in the department, which is now beginning to approach the fifth year, I have yet to meet with a single instance where a request was made to a judge to take on a special duty, where the judge has refused to do so. I think the hon. member (Mr.

Chartrand) will appreciate that while constitutionally I could put it in, practically, there is no necessity for its inclusion, and I suggest that the hon. members acquiesce in the section.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Chairman, I have only one word to say about this. May I ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) if it would not be better to draft this Section 90 differently? I can see the force of the objection of the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand). You have here "any judge in any county court in the county court district"; would it not be better to have some authority asking a special judge to act, say, of the Attorney-General?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: It works very well as it is.

MR. BELANGER: I mean to ask one judge in the county court district to act? Otherwise you are in this position; consider the case of the local Master, who may be ill or absent, then the Act says that any county court judge in that district may act. How are you going to determine which judge? Supposing a judge is requested by the legal officers, or the legal fraternity to act in the absence of the Master, so that the business of the Master's office may go on, and he refuses. Then they have to look for another. Would it not be better to have some authority like the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) send a request to a specific county court judge of the county court district, asking him if he will act. That is only a suggestion.

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 66 reported.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): 32nd Order.

GENERAL SESSIONS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 32nd Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 67, An Act to amend the General Sessions Act, Mr. Blackwell.

On Section 1.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): I would like to ask a question of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). Would the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) tell us why permission must come from the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, instead of leaving the matter to the senior judges of the respective counties? I wish to assure the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that I am favourable in principle to this bill.

However, I feel possibly the senior judge of a county would be the proper person to decide if sittings should be postponed, say, for 15 days, or state what the special circumstances are which cause the postponement. I feel that leaving it to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may entail much more delay than if the discretion was left to the senior judge of the county.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, there are two bills before the Legislature, involving courts. The following bill, as the hon. members will notice, contains a similar provision. The Supreme Court Assizes also enters the picture.

This amendment, and the corresponding one in the other bill, are at the request of both the municipalities and the judges. Frequently, there are not accommodations, nor court room facilities, or facilities for the parties and witnesses. The judges who have been concerned in some of these county court districts have themselves supported this recommendation, that this should be done by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

As the hon. members know, the time is already established as to commencing the sittings, and it really concerns the times of sittings of the Assizes. When the Supreme Court Assizes sit in some particular place, to prevent them coming into collision with the county courts, the county court officials know ahead of time so that they can fix the dates for their sittings in relation to the Supreme Court Assizes. It really presents no difficulty.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell)?

From whom would the request come to the Lieutenant-Governor, to have the change made? Would it be from the municipality, or the municipal officers, or from whom?

Surely you would not have a man in your department looking over the province to see whether the Supreme Court sittings and the county court sittings would clash. I am really asking this as a matter of curiosity; just seeking information.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Chairman, may I say in that respect, we have no particular desire to impose on any one person in any one area the responsibility for instituting these matters. We deal with them in a very informal manner, and it works out quite satisfactorily for the people concerned. If we find the Assizes are to be at such-and-such a place on such-and-such a date, we notify the proper officers in the municipality. We see no reason why we should not leave this as it is. If accommodations are not available, we raise the question with them, or they raise the question with us, and if it is the consensus of opinion that something should be done, we fix a time for the court sufficiently in advance for the parties and the counsel to make their plans accordingly.

I hope we will be allowed to go on in this informal way, which does give satisfaction to both the municipal bodies and the others affected.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: The Honourable J. DE C. HEPBURN

MONDAY, MARCH 15, 1948

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before proceeding with the Orders of the Day, I would ask your permission to introduce to the Legislative Assembly Miss Barbara Ann Scott, and her mother.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Miss Barbara Ann Scott, accompanied by her mother, was received in the Chamber.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, through you I wish to formally introduce to this Legislature—although it is only formally that an introduction can be called for—a very distinguished young Canadian and a citizen of this province, who has brought great honour not only upon herself, but upon all of us who share her pride in the country in which she lives.

I wish to join with our welcome to her, our very cordial welcome to her mother, and to express our admiration for all that her thoughtful guidance and care has meant to her daughter.

I think it is only natural that those of us who here represent every part of Ontario in the combined membership of this Legislature, should feel a great deal of pride that you are from the Province of Ontario. To that extent, you are very truly our own representative in the field of clean sport in which you have taken such a very distinguished part. But in expressing our pleasure that you are from this province, I would want to join with that the thought that we in no way would seek to claim any exclusive privilege in relation to the place where you live, but we would like to join with everyone in this whole country in expressing our pride that you are a very fine Canadian, of whom all of us can be very proud.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: I think, perhaps the thing that has endeared Miss Scott to everyone in this country, and particularly to the youth, to whom she is such a brilliant example, has been that together with the world acclaim she has received, she has at all times continued to be the sweet, wholesome young girl, of whom any parents would be proud, and I should think that the manner in which she has accepted the plaudits which have been extended to her, is, in itself, almost as great a source of pride as the outstanding achievement she has attained in the field of sport.

I cannot imagine there was ever a time when the question of healthy, clean competition, based upon long training, and devotion to her ideals, was more important to all our people than it is today. Whatever the field of activity may be, the kind of achievement which you, Miss Scott, have carried out through long and arduous hours of study and practice, stand as an example to all our people.

I happen to know, as do many of the rest of the hon. members, that, particularly amongst the younger girls of this province, there is no doubt that you are going to have plenty of competition in the future, no matter how great your skill may be, and like a lot of other fathers here I can speak with some knowledge of the fact that as a result of all that has happened, many of the rooms of the young girls are not only filled with your photographs, and news clippings, but they are doing their utmost to emulate you to the best of their ability, sometimes with a fairly extensive record of bruises obtained in the process.

In all seriousness, however, this in itself is simply one of those rather personal bits of evidence of what it means to have an example of this kind, and so long as we have people like you, Miss Scott, who rose to the top of world competition in the way you have, and at the same time retain with that achievement the balance, the modesty and the graciousness which you have retained, we need be very little concerned about the fibre of our people, or the future of our country.

I just want to say one word about a member of her family, who is not here. I had the privilege of being a very close friend for some time of Miss Scott's father and in addition to the wonderful part her mother has played in the things that have been done during these past few years, I know that her father's courage and fortitude have been great examples to her all her life. He was a great soldier, a very gallant Canadian, distinguished on the field of battle and equally distinguished in the years of peace afterwards, in the important posts he occupied in the service of this country, and in the military work he carried on, and his death a few years ago deprived him of the great pleasure and pride he would have felt in his daughter's achievements at this time.

Perhaps it had something to do with that recollection, that prompted us to combine with the flowers we have given you, Miss Scott, something that is in a way symbolic of your own family background. The flowers which have been presented to you and to your mother are on behalf of all the hon. members of the Legislature, simply as a very small indication of our great admiration for you. In the bouquet which has been given to you, is a sprig of white heather, which left Scotland the night before last, and as everyone of Scotch descent knows, the white heather is an unerring token of good luck, and together with the very warm and kindly sentiments which we convey to you from every side of this Legislature, I want to express the hope, which I know is the hope of everyone here that the white heather may carry with it all that a true Scotsman believes it does, and that during the years ahead it may give you all good luck, together with the good fortune which you have already had, and which will carry forward the very great traditions which you have established.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, on an occasion of this kind, I find that I can agree quite easily with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) in the sentiments that he has expressed this afternoon. We of the official opposition in this Legislature do welcome Miss Scott and her mother amongst us for another brief period.

It is not so long ago that we were honoured by Miss Scott's presence on the floor of the Legislature, and at that time, even though the world's championship was months and months away, there were many of us, perhaps all of us, who felt that Miss Scott had what was necessary to bring home to Canada the top in skating honours.

We bring to Miss Scott this afternoon our welcome, and that welcome is unrestrained. There are no strings attached to it. There are no strings attached to that welcome, Miss Scott, for the very obvious reason that you have lived up, in a very admirable way, to the great things that go to make an idol in any nation. One of these has been your tremendous and your great ability in your chosen field of sport. Arduously and constantly and consistently you have practised until you have been able to capture what you set for yourself in that particular realm; and it seems to me that along with that reason for our welcoming you, goes this other very great reason, that amidst it all, amidst the tumult and the shouting, amidst all the gaiety and amidst all the fanfare, you have been able to retain that Canadian outlook and that Canadian objective that we all want—to be ambassadors for Canada in all parts of the world. That, it seems to me, has been a very great feat on your part.

The traits of character that you possess, those traits that have enabled you to do what you have done for Canada—are very prominent and we all recognize them, and we welcome you because of your ability in the field of sports and because throughout it all you have maintained what we always want to feel is the “Canadian outlook.” You have been an ambassador for Canada in the foreign countries, you have helped to “sell” Canada where Canada needed selling, and we do welcome you, Miss Scott and Mrs. Scott, to this assemblage this afternoon, and we trust that in the days that lie ahead your honours will grow even more, and that Canada will in the future as in the past be the recipient of gain because of your ability and prowess.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Speaker, I find myself in the position today of being able to agree wholeheartedly with both the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). I am pleased, representing our group, to extend our congratulations to Miss Scott.

Miss Scott has trained for a considerable portion of her training in the McIntyre Arena, which is situated in my riding, and I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that the people of the Porcupine district are looking forward to Miss Scott's return. They have not forgotten her trip there last year and they are eager to see her again, and I can assure her that should she again visit Porcupine in the near future, she will receive the warm-hearted welcome of the north.

Her achievement, Mr. Speaker, is an inspiration to all youth, and while we can produce in Canada and in Ontario young girls with fortitude, with the ambition to go ahead and succeed as Miss Scott has done, then we need not fear for the future of Canada or the future of Ontario.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MISS BARBARA ANN SCOTT: Mr. Speaker, Premier Drew, hon. members:

I feel very honoured to have been invited here today to meet members of the Legislature of my native province. Thank you very much for these lovely flowers and for the Scottish white heather, which I am sure will bring me luck.

Thank you, Mr. Drew, for your cables of congratulation; I cannot tell you how much it helped during competitions to know that the people of Ontario were thinking about me. I was very proud to be representing Canada in Europe this winter.

I have visited many countries in the last few months, but I say to you all most sincerely that none of them can compare with our wonderful Canada. It is home.

Thank you.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

VITAL STATISTICS ACT

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Scott, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled The Vital Statistics Act, 1948, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

ACT TO SET ASIDE THE LAING MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT TRUST DEED

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Dent, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to Set Aside the Laing Marriage Settlement Trust Deed, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I rise to seek your ruling on a matter of no little importance to the procedure of the House, and more particularly to a matter that occurred here in the House during the sitting of Friday afternoon.

During that sitting, while the House was in Committee of the Whole, I introduced a motion, or rather an amendment to a bill; the mimeographed copy of Hansard, page D-2, reports the proceedings as follows:

"HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): That was seconded by whom?"

THE CHAIRMAN: There is no seconder.

MR. SALSBERG: My colleague is out of the House—

HON. MR. DREW: It is either seconded or it is not.

MR. SALSBERG: I would ask some hon. member to second it, so that we may discuss it.

HON. MR. DREW: Call the section; there is no seconder."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I had a feeling that the rules of the House do not require that a seconder be obtained to an amendment when the House is in Committee of the Whole and that was the reason I sent the amendment down without a seconder. However, when so important an hon. member of this Legislature as the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) fired a question at me and asked who was seconding the amendment, and the hon. Chairman of the Committee of the Whole repeated that there was no seconder, I, for a moment, lost confidence that my recollection was correct and therefore, unable to find a seconder, had the amendment disqualified.

I wish to bring to your attention, however, Mr. Speaker, that in the "Parliamentary Procedure, Ontario," by the Clerk of the House, on page 126 we find section 96, which reads as follows, and I quote:

"The Standing Orders of the House shall be observed in Committee of the Whole House so far as may be applicable, except the Standing Orders as to the seconding of motions and limiting the number of times of speaking."

That, Mr. Speaker, would clearly indicate that no seconder was required, or is required, when the House is in Committee of the Whole and an hon.

member moves an' amendment. However, in view of the demand made by the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that your ruling would be valuable insofar as it would re-establish the time-honoured custom and procedure of this House, and not permit the establishment of a new precedent which would further restrict the rights of hon. members of this House.

Obviously the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) either forgot or did not know the rule, and I ask you, therefore, to rule whether the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) was acting in accordance with the rule when he insisted on a seconder, or whether he was wrong.

MR. SPEAKER: To the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg), might I say that as I understood him, he asked me to make a ruling on a rule which is very specific in its undertaking. There is definitely no necessity to have a seconder to an amendment, particularly when the House is in Committee of the Whole.

The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) also said something about the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) saying that there must be a seconder. I believe the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) will find that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) did not say that there should be a seconder, he said that the motion was either seconded or was not, one or the other. It was not seconded, but the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) could have gone on.

MR. SALSBERG: Except that it was ruled out.

MR. SPEAKER: It was not ruled out, was it?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, the hon. Chairman ruled it out.

MR. SPEAKER: I do not think there is any necessity for a ruling on it since the rule is very specific.

MR. SALSBERG: I think your ruling is quite satisfactory, Mr. Speaker.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 39th Order.

COMMISSIONERS FOR TAKING AFFIDAVITS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 39th Order. Second reading Bill No. 72, An Act to amend The Commissioners for taking Affidavits Act. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 72, An Act to amend The Commissioners for Taking Affidavits Act.

I might, Mr. Speaker, give a few words of explanation on second reading of this bill, as there is at least one important addition to the principle of taking affidavits.

Under the first section of the bill, as hon. members will see by the explanatory notes, barristers and municipal treasurers are added to those who are automatically commissioners, and the members of municipal councils who appear here are placed in this bill now for the purpose of taking affidavits, instead of being ex officio justices of the peace. I feel that I should state to the House the reasons for that.

As a matter of practice now, the appointment of justices of the peace is limited under the amendment made to the Act, to persons who are appointed, not for the purpose of taking affidavits, but to assist in the administration of justice by the taking of informations and complaints. Since that amendment was passed, it has been the practice of the department in making appointments to avoid the type of appointment where there might be some conflict of duty and interest with the duties of partially determining whether an information or complaint should be accepted. That is the reason why these municipal officials now will come under this Act and be appointed commissioners for taking affidavits ex officio, rather than being ex officio justices of the peace.

The other important provision of the bill is the addition bringing within the terms of the section those engaged in the business of real estate agents and insurance agents and as licensed by the Department of Insurance, eligible for appointment on application. Throughout the province there are many estimable people engaged in that business who are subject to the licensing system of the province, who are conveniently located for the purpose of assisting the public in the taking of affidavits. The practice of the department on the basis of departmental nomination has been not to make such a distinction among individual members of that whole group, on the basis that by that appointment one person in that occupation would be given a competitive advantage over another.

This is simply a device that where there is a business premises where it had been proposed to use the appointment to engage in the business of conveyancing and they are licensed by the department, they can apply and receive an automatic commissionership as long as they are eligible for their licence.

Those, Mr. Speaker, are the principles of the bill, and with that explanation, I move second reading of Bill No. 72, An Act to amend The Commissioners for taking Affidavits Act.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY
(Minister of Agriculture): 52nd Order.

CHANGE OF NAME ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 52nd Order Second Reading of Bill No. 86, the Change of Name Act, 1948. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, in rising to move second reading of Bill No. 86, The Change of Name Act, 1948, I propose to leave the explanation to the explanatory note. This is a type of bill that is best considered in committee. I am going to suggest if there are any of its principles or its provisions that require consideration it can best be given there.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY:
(Minister of Agriculture): 53rd Order.

PUBLIC VEHICLE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 53rd Order. Second reading Bill No. 87, An Act to amend the Public Vehicle Act. Mr. Doucett.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT
(Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, this Bill, No. 87, makes two slight changes. One of them defines a "taxi-cab." It was never understood that a taxi would operate under Public Vehicles Act and this change will not permit it to do so. The other change is to comply with a change in The Municipal Act of last year, which permitted the municipality to pass a by-law to permit the licensing of buses in rural municipalities. Municipalities may pass a by-law to regulate, taking on and discharging passengers in their municipalities.

I move second reading of Bill No. 87.

MR. JOSEPH B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, at the meeting in the City Hall this morning between the Members of Council and the Toronto members of the Legislature, the question of this bill was raised and some member of the Board of Control of the City of Toronto asked whether the bill could not be amended to safeguard the municipality's right to determine the routes that incoming buses should take within the limits of the municipality. Some of them seem to fear that the bill as at present gives them so much freedom within the limits of a municipality that they can take any route on any street. I merely transmit to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) that this bill affected all members of the City Council and to express their desire for an amendment to the bill that will safeguard the rights of the municipalities in that regard.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Of course, this bill does not mention that. The municipalities have that right now. That does not need an amendment; it is already in the Act.

MR. SALSBERG: Evidently they do not know it.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: It is Section 2 of Chapter 287.

Motion approved. Second reading of the bill.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 54th Order.

THE SURVEYS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 54th Order. Second reading of Bill No. 88, An Act to Amend the Surveys Act. Mr. Scott.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Speaker, these are very simple amendments, which have been requested by The Ontario Land Surveyors.

Under the Act as it is at present the survey monuments described in (a) and (b) project. The surveyors feel, with this projection, they are more easily disturbed than if left flush with the ground and they have requested this amendment to the bill. The last paragraph covers where it is not possible to erect, and it is really self-explanatory.

I move second reading of Bill No. 88, An Act to Amend the Surveys Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 55th Order.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The bill has not been printed.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the permission of the House to allow second reading of this bill, even if it is not printed, so that it will go to the Committee on Municipal Law. When it is decided by the Committee of Municipal Law, it will come back here and be brought forward in the Committee of the Whole House. It is in order that we may get ahead with our committee work, that is all.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 55th Order. Second reading of Bill No. 90, An Act to Amend the Municipal Act.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Speaker, with the permission of the House, I move seconding of Bill No. 90.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 46th Order.

THE MENTAL HOSPITALS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 46th Order. Second reading Bill No. 80, An Act to Amend the Mental Hospitals Act. Mr. Kelley.

HON. WILLIAM A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): In the absence of Hon. Mr. Kelley, I move second reading of Bill No. 80. This bill is simply a re-draft of Sections to permit the Department of Health to enter into agreements with the Federal Department concerned.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 45th Order.

THE TOURIST CAMP REGULATION ACT, 1946

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 45th Order. Second reading Bill No. 79, An Act to Amend The Tourist Camp Regulations Act, 1946. Mr. Welsh.

HON. G. ARTHUR WELSH (Minister of Travel and Publicity): I move second reading of Bill No. 79, An Act to Amend The Tourist Camp Regulation Act, 1946.

I might say that this bill is complementary to the one introduced by the Attorney General (Mr. Blackwell) a few days ago.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): 44th Order.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE ACT, 1947

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 44th Order. Second reading Bill No. 78, An Act to Amend The Public Service Act, 1947. Mr. Michener.

HON. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of Bill No. 78, which I now do, I think all I can say, apart from a detailed explanation of the new sections, is this is amending the Public Service Act, which was passed at the last Session.

Like all new drafts or revisions of Statutes, in the course of the application of the Act, there have been some corrections which became necessary and this bill is to make those corrections. They are mainly in that category.

The first section deals with the deputy minister's authority to suspend a civil servant. The section did read "in the absence of the Minister a Deputy Minister may suspend," but that is rather a too narrow limitation on the authority of the deputy, and those words are now changed so that it now reads "with the consent." That is a minor change.

The next is to enable employees who have not been contributors by reason of the age that they entered the service, but who have been appointed permanently to the service, to prepay contributions for the years of their service when they were not contributing, and relate their service back to their first employment for the purpose of superannuation.

The next is Section 3 and is rather similar. There the new Act of last year fixed the retiring age at 65 instead of 70. It was appreciated that would upset the plans of a good many of the senior civil servants who were looking forward to working to the age of 70 and had made their plans on that ground and would expect their superannuation to relate to service up to 70 years, so the Act of last year was drawn so as not to disturb those people in their expectation, and the line was drawn between those 55 years of age and over, now in the Service and those under that age. Actually the line should have been drawn at 50.

Then the fourth section relates to the period of service and salary on which the superannuation is computed. In the Act now—and it always has been under the Ontario Public Service Act—the average salary of the three last years has been taken for computing superannuation. This change suggested is to take the three highest years. It is not a great change because, in most cases, the three last years are the highest years.

Then the next, Section 5, deals with gaolers, and brings a new class into the pension benefits.

Section 6 deals with magistrates, and Section 7 the teaching profession. That is a rather complicated problem, and the section as passed in the bill of last year, while it created general satisfaction amongst the teachers, was found to be erratic in the way it applied in some cases, and an attempt is being made to improve that section.

Mr. Speaker, I would like the opportunity of saying more when the bill is in committee, rather than at the present time. I had a conference with the teachers, and I expect it will be necessary to suggest some minor changes in the proposed amendments.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of the bill.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 42nd Order.

BOARDS OF EDUCATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The 42nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 75, An Act to Amend the Boards of Education Act. Mr. Drew.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 75, An Act to Amend the Boards of Education Act.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if we could have an explanation of this bill from the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew).

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Act is to permit a high school district, which includes two or more municipalities to have a municipal board of education, if the council of the municipality so decides. Formerly such a high school district could only have a high school board, which has certain limitations.

It also permits a high school in unorganized territory to have a board of education, inasmuch as such high school districts are subject to the same limitation that it was only under a board.

The bill also fixes the first meeting of the year of a board of education as the second Wednesday in January. Formerly it was the first Wednesday in February. It has been found that the first Wednesday in February was too late for the budgeting requirements of the municipalities, having regard to the necessity for checking their various details.

It also extends to the duties of a board of education of a high school district, composed of two or more municipalities.

That is the total effect of the bill, and is only one of the refinements which have become necessary in the extension of these districts, and the confirmation of the earlier single units.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 43rd Order.

HIGH SCHOOLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 43rd Order, second reading of Bill No. 76, An Act to Amend the High Schools Act. Mr. Drew.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 76, An Act to Amend the High Schools Act.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if my hon. friend

(Mr. Drew) would give a brief explanation. I think it would be better, if he would.

HON. MR. DREW: I will be very pleased to do that in each case, without waiting for comment.

This Act, in section 1 does two things; first it offers a distinction between the county pupils and the resident pupils, which is consistent with the bill amending the Continuation Schools Act, and the Vocational Education Act.

Secondly, it makes it clear that pupils residing on the lands exempt from taxation—that is, Crown land—are neither county pupils nor resident pupils.

I feel sure all the hon. members are now aware there are a number of problems arising in these numerous areas throughout the province, in regard to Crown lands in various forms, namely Crown lands under this development which has taken place under special provisions by the Dominion Government. This makes the situation quite clear, and provides for a method of assessing and collecting taxes for school purposes in a municipality within the district.

Section 2 permits the board of a high school district, comprising more than one municipality, to select a name approved by the Minister of Education for that high school board. Formerly it had to be named after the municipality in which the school was situated.

Section 3 enables a ratepayer residing within five miles of the boundaries of a high school district to qualify for membership on the high school board of the district. That is consistent with the qualifications for election to the municipal councils.

Section 4 provides for the formation of a high school board in high school districts in unorganized territory and collecting the tax for such districts.

Section 5; there is no change in the intent of the section. It is simply one necessitated by last year's legislation, and was dealt with by us at that time.

Section 6 fixes the time for the first meeting of the boards as the second Wednesday in January, instead of the first Wednesday in February, and for the same reason mentioned previously.

Section 7 makes it clear that a high school board has authority to purchase vehicles for the transportation of pupils. That is something about which perhaps no difficulty might arise, but to avoid any possibility of any question, the power is clearly given to the municipalities to purchase vehicles, so that they can operate their own services in that respect, if they so desire.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 49th Order.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The 49th Order; second reading of Bill No. 83, An Act to Amend the Department of Education Act. Mr. Drew.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 83, An Act to Amend the Department of Education Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I thought the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) was going to give an explanation.

HON. MR. DREW: There are really four provisions covered by this Act.

Section 1 enables the Minister to make regulations regarding the school attendance, and payment of the costs of education for pupils residing on Crown land. It relates to the same problem I have already mentioned.

Subsection 2 of section 1 enables a Minister to make detailed regulations consistent with the general regulations authorized in the previous section. This is simply a clarification, so that there may be no question about the authority of the Minister to make regulations dealing with the problems arising in these areas.

Subsection 3 of section 1 enables a Minister to make regulations for adult education, recreation, camping, and a departmental athletic programme to be financed by the athletic and physical education funds, under the Athletic Control Act. This follows the course which was adopted last year of creating a separate fund in connection with charges made under the Athletic Control Act, and this provides simply for the appropriate authority to allocate that money in accordance with the intentions then expressed, and for various activities which are, themselves, related to health, physical fitness and adult education.

Section 2 authorizes the establishment of a provincial athletic training camp. That really is no change, but is merely a change of name, having regard to the change in the name of the Act. It authorizes the Department to deal with the camps, which were previously known as the "Ontario Athletic Commission Camps." There is no change in the administration of the Act.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew)?

Would section 1 deal with the problem of education costs in the new areas where government housing projects were gone ahead with, and where we are now faced with the problem of the cost of education in those housing areas?

Mr. Speaker, may I add that if that section should deal with this very complicated problem, I, for one, would think this bill should perhaps be laid over to give hon. members an opportunity of studying it more fully than was possible up to this time.

HON. MR. DREW: I have no intention of agreeing to laying the bill over. This is second reading. The bill will be before us in committee, and there will be ample opportunity for any comments then. The problem may be complicated, but the bill is not. It enables the Minister to cover a situation not covered by the previous procedure.

MR. SALSBERG: Does that deal with areas such as those we have in the township here, where Federal Government housing projects were gone ahead with? Will this legislation cover such areas?

HON. MR. DREW: This deals with areas comprised of land not assessed for taxation in the ordinary way, and it covers those areas where there is no provision for taxation under the ordinary taxing methods.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Such as Wartime Housing projects?

HON. MR. DREW: That is correct.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) if there has been any discussion with any department at Ottawa with respect to the educational costs for those people on Federal lands.

HON. MR. DREW: Yes.

MR. NIXON: Are they making any contribution?

HON. MR. DREW: In some cases they are, and in some cases they are not. It is a very difficult situation, and without enlarging upon either the contents or the name of the Act at the moment, may I say that there will be within the next few days a bill introduced here dealing with this very problem. It is a very difficult problem indeed.

As I think the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) will recall, there was a good deal of discussion arose about the difficulty at Malton, where in addition to a large aircraft plant, there was a whole community in itself which grew up around the plant, and the local municipal authority had neither the taxing power nor the facilities with which to deal with it. We were able, in that case, to make special arrangements with the department.

Mr. Speaker, I would prefer at the moment not to enlarge upon the discussion as to the adequacy or otherwise, because it will be possible in connection with this bill which will be introduced this week to discuss it. There are a number of cases where great difficulties have been presented, Ajax is one of them, and there are other areas throughout the province where it has been impossible for the municipalities or this government to reach any satisfactory solution.

Quite apart from any difficulty that might be encountered in the negotiating with the department at Ottawa, there is the difficulty of there being no provision in the existing Act, because such a situation never arose until during the war period. Now that the war is over, there is naturally not such a great readiness on the part of the Dominion Government to deal with some of these as at the time they were actually war projects. I am not raising this, in this particular case, in any sense of special criticism. It is quite natural that there should be less willingness, or shall we say "less appreciation" of the need for dealing with this.

The bill before you, as far as this section is concerned, simply empowers the Minister to make such arrangements as are necessary for charging the amounts required for education, where no other arrangements are made, and this will depend upon certain matters which will later be placed before you. There may be several different arrangements arrived at. There is no difficulty about the Dominion Government agreeing to place these projects under the ordinary rating of the municipality itself; they can do that, although they have not done it in many cases. They can contribute a fixed sum, or leave the whole matter to be determined by the department.

This simply gives the necessary authority to the department to fix the appropriate charges in the event the agreement contemplates that method of dealing with it.

Mr. Speaker, I am glad to add these remarks, because it is a very important subject, and one that effects many of the ridings represented in this Legislature. This subject will be more fully discussed when the other bill I mentioned is introduced this week, and also there will be another opportunity to deal with this important matter when we are in committee of the whole house.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 50th Order.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 50th Order, second reading of Bill No. 84, An Act to Amend the Public Schools Act, Mr. Drew.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 84, An Act to Amend the Public Schools Act.

Section 1 of this Act again is clarifying some of these problems which have arisen. This section clarifies the Public School Boards authority to enlarge its administrative or office buildings. This has resulted from the fact that the Toronto city solicitor has questioned the right of the Board of Education in Toronto to enlarge the present administrative building.

There are a number of other surprising difficulties of this kind arising, and this section has to do with clarifying them, so that no doubt can exist.

Subsection 2 of section 1 permits a public school board to purchase vehicles to transport pupils to the public, high, continuation or vocational schools. It is similar to the one I mentioned a few moments ago.

Section 2 enables a Minister to establish and maintain a public school on lands held by the Crown or on any lands which are exempt from taxation for school purposes and to designate any portion of such land as a rural school section.

There is one instance which would be very well known in the London area, of the Westminster Hospital, and the community which has grown up in that area. That is one of the samples of Crown lands where this special problem arises.

Section 3 provides for the payment of fees on behalf of pupils residing on Crown land or other land exempt from taxation for school purposes and attending a school in a school section outside of such land. That is, you have the ordinary case where the school is erected within the boundary of the Crown land and you have in a great many cases the situation where the pupils living on that Crown land, not subject to ordinary taxation, attend school outside of that area. This is simply a provision by which fees can be charged on behalf of the pupils who attend those schools.

Section 4, sub-section 1 extends the right of public school boards to transport pupils to a public school as well as to continuation, high or vocational schools. This power is often needed by boards in township or school areas. That again is simply to leave no doubt of their authority to commit the rate-payers in that area to the expenses involved in that connection.

Sub-section 2 of section 4 simply clarifies a public school board's authority to purchase a vehicle to transport pupils to school, again the same provision as I mentioned before.

That is the whole effect of the bill.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Have boards not been exercising that authority?

HON. MR. DREW: They have, but again some question has been raised, and I think perhaps with some reason, as to the adequacy of existing provisions to enable the boards to charge that amount. Actually the expenses incurred in making those arrangements have been approved by the Department of Education, and grants have been paid in relation to them, but we are not sufficiently certain that the powers are wide enough, that we do not have these clarified so that neither the boards nor the Department of Education may run into any unnecessary litigation as a result of the absence of a specific provision.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 51st Order.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 51st Order, second reading of Bill No. 85, An Act to Amend The Vocational Education Act. Mr. Drew.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 85, An Act to Amend the Vocational Education Act, and again, after you have read the motion, I will give the explanation.

This bill is one which produces some fairly important results, but it is really only a matter of clarification of the rights of the boards and the functions of certain boards.

Section 1 of this Act clarifies the definition of a board which may conduct vocational education. If you will examine section 1 carefully, and you will be able to do that very fully in Committee of the Whole House, you will find that all it does is to leave no doubt as to what boards may conduct vocational education and in that way commit the ratepayers to the higher expenditures involved for that education.

Section 2 clarifies the definition of county pupil and resident pupil, and makes these definitions uniform for all secondary schools. As you will have noticed, from different bills that I have mentioned, we have been clarifying these definitions because of certain doubts that have arisen as to the clarity of the definition that now exists.

Section 3 broadens the entrance requirements and the courses of study for the vocational schools.

Section 4 clarifies the authority to levy rates for vocational school costs in the continuation and high school districts, again merely a clarification for the purpose of avoiding any unnecessary argument or discussion about the rights and powers of the boards.

Section 5 enables the Minister to make regulations to establish and conduct technical institutes, which are now developing extremely well in certain parts of the Province. Again, this is a case of the necessity of making sure that there will be no doubt as to the authority to conduct these courses which are under way. One of the schools affected by that is the one in Haileybury which has done such exceptionally good work in giving fairly advanced training to mining engineers and others interested in training in connection with mines.

That is the full effect of the Act

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I feel that a word should be said about the rather dangerous implication involved in this and in some of the previous bills that just went through second reading.

It would have been perhaps far better if the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) had introduced the bill that he spoke of, and that he promised to have before the House sometime this week, prior to dealing with these bills. As one member of the House, Mr. Speaker, who has not had an opportunity of really studying these bills, I get a feeling that we are laying the groundwork for extra costs to be placed upon parents and children who live with them in wartime housing areas and in similar public housing areas undertaken, without knowing exactly where we are going.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) undoubtedly knows. He has an idea what the legislation will be like. I do not know whether other hon. members here have any idea—I have not. I have an uneasy feeling when these bills come up. In each case you have additions or amendments, as is the case in Bill No. 85, which read as follows:

“but shall not include pupils residing with their parents or guardians on land which is exempt from taxation for school purposes, who and whose parents or guardians are not assessed for, and do not pay, taxes for school purposes in a municipality in the county.”

Now, it would require a comparison of this amendment with the bill as it now stands. I doubt whether many hon. members have had an opportunity of comparing them. In the meantime, a bill goes through and provisions are made that definitely establish a differentiation and that lays the basis for what I fear may be the placing of additional and burdensome taxes of a new sort on parents of children in those wartime housing areas.

Now, we may have a chance of comparing the amendments with the original Act prior to third reading, but I do feel, Mr. Speaker, that these comments at least should be made when we are dealing with so important a matter, and in the manner we are dealing with it, and to express regret that the major bill dealing with the problem that we all are conscious of was not introduced prior to the introduction of these bills.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of engaging in a debate on this, because quite frankly, I do not feel that this is directed toward any useful object.

I did explain to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), knowing that he was really interested in this, and to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), that there is a bill being introduced later this week. It was quite unnecessary even for me to mention that because every hon. member knows exactly what the bill provides. I was simply assisting them by indicating that there would be a further bill dealing with the problem that arises. This bill stands by itself. I do not ask that it be considered in any other way. I was merely giving the information to those who I know are interested in this.

This clears the way for appropriate negotiations with the authorities who have direct responsibility for these Crown lands, and that is essential in order to deal with this situation. There is no provision here other than simply giving the authority to deal with this subject by the appropriate allocation of cost of education in areas where the ordinary methods do not apply, and with the power to do that in this province, it is then possible to proceed with the very sort of negotiation that the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) indicated. Without such authority, the matter is left in the air, and I must say that as far as this is concerned, it stands by itself, and it is a very necessary provision for us to deal with this situation. It is not a case of our imposing onerous responsibilities upon anyone, but simply a case of providing a mechanism whereby people who obtain benefits from schools take care of the cost of that, as every other citizen of the province does.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 40th Order.

CONTINUATION SCHOOLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 40th Order, second reading of Bill No. 73, An Act to Amend The Continuation Schools Act. Mr. Drew.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 73, An Act to Amend the Continuation Schools Act.

Before the motion is carried, I would like to explain the effect of this bill.

Section 1 achieves two results. First of all, it offers definitions of "county pupils" and "resident pupils," which are consistent with the bills amending the Public Schools Act and the Vocational Education Act, which I have already discussed.

Second, it provides for the exclusion of pupils residing on land which is exempt from taxation for school purposes where they and their parents or guardians are not assessed for, and do not pay school taxes within the meaning of the Act. It is exactly the same provision to clarify the whole situation.

Section 2 clarifies the membership of the board of arbitration which disposes of the assets of a dissolved continuation school.

Section 3 brings the Continuation Schools Act into line with the High Schools Act as regards the charging of fees for pupils attending from other secondary school districts. The latter is a provision such as indicated before, which is called for so that there can be no doubt about the right of the board to make the appropriate assessments for educational costs in that case.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 41st Order.

TEACHERS' AND INSPECTORS' SUPERANNUATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 41st Order, second reading of Bill No. 74, An Act to Amend The Teachers' and Inspectors' Superannuation Act, 1946. Mr. Drew.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 74, An Act to Amend The Teachers' and Inspectors' Superannuation Act, 1946. Before the motion is carried, I would like to explain the effect of this bill.

This bill is for the purpose of clarifying the relationship of the superannuation fund to two particular groups of teachers, the teachers in the University of Toronto Schools, and the teachers of vocational subjects who serve as temporary teachers.

The provision is made necessary to avoid any confusion as to the obligation of the fund in these particular cases. Hon. members will find that the explanatory notes are very thorough and give the full effect of the section. They can be read in detail, and the effect of the sections examined when we are in Committee of the Whole.

If any further explanations are required, I will be glad to give them, but the whole purpose of the bill, Mr. Speaker, is to avoid any confusion as to the obligation of this fund in the case of teachers who are already dealt with under another provision.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 23rd Order.

RIGHT TO VOTE AT MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 23rd Order, resuming the Adjourned Debate on the motion for second reading of Bill No. 56, an Act to extend the right to vote at Municipal Elections to the classes of persons that may vote at elections to the Legislative Assembly. Mr. Salsberg.

MR. A. A. McLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I moved the adjournment of the debate on this bill several days ago largely for the reason that I felt something had to be done to halt what I considered was wrong procedure in dealing with the bills that were called that day. I attempted, as best I could, to point out that the procedure followed was absolutely out of order under the rules of the House, but could get no support for that view. I would at this time, Mr. Speaker, call your attention to rule No. 31 which reads as follows:

"All the items standing on the Orders of the Day shall be taken up according to the precedence assigned to each on the Order Book, the right being reserved to the administration of taking up Government orders in such rotation as they see fit on the days on which Government bills are precedent."

That is the end of the quotation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if you will refer back to the Order paper you will see that this and other bills which preceded it were not taken in the order in which they were on the Order paper. Had that been the case, we should have been dealing with Bill No. 38 standing in the name of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). I do feel, Mr. Speaker, that if we are going to proceed in an orderly fashion that the rules of the House should be followed. Unless that is done we are going to have a state of affairs that will not expedite the conduct and business of the Legislature.

Furthermore, I would call your attention to Rule No. 32(b) which clearly suggests that when a particular bill is called and the hon. member in whose name the bill stands may not be ready to proceed, such an Order can stand over and must be allowed to retain its precedence on the Order paper.

I am raising this matter now because I feel it is in the best interests of all hon. members of the House to know whether these rules under which Governments have conducted business in this Legislature over a period of many years are to stand or are to be swept aside as was done by the Leader of the Government (Mr. Drew) a few days ago.

We are, on occasion, like all hon. members of the House, called to order for violating a rule and, of course, when such violations are called to our attention by the Speaker we are obliged to bring ourselves into line. We are only too happy to receive the instruction of the Chair on such occasions.

Now, Mr. Speaker, while I moved the adjournment of the debate the other day, I have since read over in Hansard what was said in support of this bill by my colleague the hon. member for St. Andrews (Mr. Salsberg), I find that the subject matter has been covered very fully, that all the arguments have been very forcefully put forward by him, I have no desire to delay the House this afternoon by repeating any part of what he had to say.

I feel, however, that the provisions in the bill are sufficiently important to the people of the province. It is my very sincere hope that the bill will not be disposed of by a voice vote but that there will be a recorded vote on the bill.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker, may I just say a word or two in connection with this bill? I feel that this is a rather important bill and there is not the same means for property restrictions for elections as there was one day. The bulk of the costs of local improvements was charged to the individual property owners on a frontage basis where today in many places the situation has changed, still the bulk of the costs of local improvements is paid for by the city as a whole, what they call the city-general. That is one reason I think it is not as important to have these restrictions as it was in by-gone days.

The other reason is this; if you care to check on the number of people who are on the voters' lists in the municipality and are entitled to vote, you will find that the number who do vote is very low and I think probably one of the reasons for that is the fact that many people are getting on in life before they acquire sufficient property to entitle them to vote. I think we are agreed anything we can do to encourage the young people of this province and this country to take an interest in their local city government, we should do it, and I believe this is a step in this direction. Therefore, I am going to support the bill.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): I would like to call to the attention of the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson), when you mention the change in the Municipal Act whereby the greater portion of the local improvement costs will be paid by the municipality at large—even if it is paid by the municipality at large—it is paid—how? By the rate payers, by the property owners. It is not by a roomer or any person like that or any person who is occupying a room, it does not mean every person in a city is taxed for improvements, still the property owner has to pay. When you say people reach a certain age and they have not been entitled to vote, you understand the Municipal Act better than that. You know tenants are voting, it is not only property owners. Tenants occupying property assessed for $400, the privilege up to $400. That is not a large amount. They have a vote the same as a property owner. Therefore, it is not confined to property owners alone.

MR. ANDERSON: I suppose I should have mentioned this and gone into more detail. I assumed we all knew and I am quite aware of what the minister has told me. Let me state you a simple case. We will assume, for the purpose of argument, one of the professors teaching in one of our universities here in Toronto is rooming in a house with an assessed value of less than $400; as the Act stands now he would not be entitled to a vote. If, on the other hand, someone who might just have arrived here and was working as a labourer and bought a lot with an assessed value of $400 and paid a down-payment of $50 and had the deed transferred to his name, he would be entitled to vote. I think it is very unfair.

I realize other people are entitled to their opinion but I think when we see as low as 25 and 30 per cent. of the people in a municipality at election time going to vote, then I think anything we can do to encourage more people to take a definite interest in democracy we should do it.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You are wrong in that again; pardon me for correcting you. When you mention a man entitled to vote just because he purchased a lot assessed for $400, it does not have to be assessed for $400, it might only be assessed for $100, but he owned the lot. Therefore, he would be entitled to vote as a property owner, so that would not make any difference in the change you are making now. It does not matter about the value of the property, it is only the value of property occupied by a tenant that is taken into consideration whether the tenant has a vote.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): I want to clear up one point mentioned by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson).

As far as this is concerned, I think there is one feature of this discussion which should be borne in mind; perhaps undue emphasis has been placed upon the thought that this is for the purpose of avoiding any limitation as to the ownership of property. The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) has made it clear that is not the limitation that is really under consideration here.

There is one consideration that should be borne in mind and which has not been mentioned. As far as elections to this Legislature are concerned, it is obviously desirable that everyone who resides in the province shall by some method have an opportunity of voting somewhere in one of the 90 ridings, but it may well be that in determining that, very little consideration needs to be given to the attachment of the individual to any particular municipality.

On the other hand, municipal elections are for the purpose of choosing municipal authorities who will deal with the affairs of the municipality and there is every reason why there should be certain provisions that do assure that those who vote are identified in some way with that particular municipality. And that is the principle behind this where the details in fact carry it fully into effect.

In so far as any change of this kind is concerned the Government is not opposing this or any other statutory provision on the basis of limiting the power to vote. I could not be more vigorous in my support than I am of the principle put forward by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson); I would like to see everybody take an interest in public affairs and have a right to vote because the more who take an interest and the more who have the right to vote, the more there is a chance of keeping down the menace of Communism.

ELECTION ACT

CLERK OF THE SESSION: 33rd Order, Second Reading Bill No. 57, An Act to Amend The Election Act. Mr. MacLeod.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I must, at this juncture, ask for your ruling on the procedure adopted by the Hon. Leader of the Government (Mr. Drew). A few minutes ago I called attention to Rule No. 31, which states specifically that bills should be dealt with in the order of their appearing on the Order Paper. That right was violated the other day.

Nevertheless we proceeded. Rule number 32 states clearly that it is the privilege of a member when a bill is called, to ask to have it stand over. In the event of it standing over, it shall retain its precedence on the Order Paper.

Now, I am not ready to proceed with the discussion of this bill. I say, in calling it, the Hon. Leader of the Government (Mr. Drew) is out of order under the Rules of the House, and I would ask for a ruling from you.

MR. SPEAKER: Might I say to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) in respect to Rule 31, which reads;

"While it is true that Rule No. 31 in the present Rule Book provides that Orders of the Day shall be taken up in accordance with the order of precedence set out in the Order Paper, it has been the practice of this Assembly for many years to allow the Leader of the House the privilege of indicating what Orders will be considered at any particular stage of the proceedings.

"This practice has met with the general approval of the members for so many years that it may be said to have become a custom and is the accepted method of dealing with the Orders of the Day.

"It must be remembered that the procedure of this Assembly is governed not only by the Rules but by precedents established by the practices of the House in the past.

"In my opinion the present practice of the House in this connection has been so well established for so many years that it has acquired the authority of a rule which I must recognize."

MR. MACLEOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, when hon. members take their seats in this House they are handed only one book of instructions, and that is the book of instructions which I have in my hand, "Parliamentary Procedure, Ontario," by Alex C. Lewis.

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) that if he does not agree with my opinion, he is at perfect liberty to appeal to the House. That is my ruling.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: He has spoken once.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am in no position to challenge your ruling with any hope of success, but I say to you, sir, it is grossly unfair to the hon. members of this House who take the trouble to study the rules, only to find that some years back something has been changed.

MR. SPEAKER: It is a very easy matter for any hon. member of the House to apply a rule for himself. My ruling is we should follow the general procedure and the precedents established for so many years. That is my ruling.

MR. MACLEOD: May I then, Mr. Speaker, make a request? You have given your ruling on Rule 31. May I suggest that under Rule 32 (b) a provision is made enabling an hon. member of this House to ask that a bill stand over until we are prepared to discuss it.

MR. SPEAKER: After consulting the Clerk of the House on the matter, I would say that under Section 32 (b) an hon. member is within his rights, in requesting to have a bill stand over.

MR. MACLEOD: Then I would like to make the request of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) that he allow this bill to stand over.

HON. MR. DREW: I cannot hear a word.

MR. MACLEOD: Because you cannot hear, or because you do not want to.

MR. DREW: No, I cannot hear. I do not want to, but in this case I really cannot hear you.

MR. MACLEOD: I am instructed by Mr. Speaker that I am quite within my rights, under rule 32 (b) to now request that this bill be allowed to stand over.

HON. MR. DREW: No one could possibly disagree with the ruling of Mr. Speaker. You have requested, but the government will not agree.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, may I ask for your opinion? If, in view of the opinion you expressed, an hon. member, in whose name a bill stands, requests that it be laid over, is it not within your authority to rule that such a bill stand over.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, since this is being pursued, I think it is time I made one or two observations in relation to these comments—

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

MR. SPEAKER: What is the point of order raised by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg)?

MR. SALSBERG: I asked a question of Mr. Speaker, and before he had the opportunity of answering the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is taking the floor. I would suggest that Mr. Speaker be given an opportunity to answer the question.

MR. SPEAKER: I cannot answer it at the moment, but if I may be permitted, I will put it over until tomorrow.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest before you answer, that it is quite appropriate that you should hear from the head of the Government as to what the view expressed is, and the course we propose to follow in regard to the suggestion made.

After all, this is still Toronto and not Prague, and here we hear both sides of a case, and expect a ruling from Mr. Speaker.

In this particular case we have had a ruling from Mr. Speaker. Further questions are being raised which have the effect of challenging the ruling, but are, in fact, put in the form of questions.

To revert to what is being raised in this case, I would remind the hon. members of this Legislature that at Westminster, in Ottawa, and for some years in this Legislature, bills have been called and the business brought forward in such a way as to expedite the business of the Legislative body, and to use the time of the hon. members properly, when the hon. members are gathered here to do business.

The fact is that one of the reasons we have been able to conduct business-like sessions of this Legislature for some years is that it has become a clearly-established practice, and has been regarded both wise from a business point of view, and certainly creating no possible hardship of any kind on any hon. member, if other business has been dealt with. The orders being called in that way, brings in the most orderly manner before the Legislature the subjects that remain for discussion.

There is no hesitation in expressing exactly why the orders are being called in the way they now are. We are dealing with bills that are exactly the same, in principle as bills which were put forward last year, and which were dealt with by this Legislature.

A series of bills have been introduced by two of the opposition groups and it would appear to represent the legislative programme of those groups, in the form of suggested statutory provisions. As to the wisdom of adopting this method of introducing bills, I have no intention of commenting at the moment. There are very divergent points of view, and the propriety or wisdom of that method is something for the hon. members themselves to decide.

We have here a group of bills which attempt to make piece-meal changes in existing legislation, for which the Government must assume administrative responsibility, and it seems to be the most orderly and reasonable course to present those bills which were put forward by the Communist hon. members and deal with them, and then deal with the other bills on the order paper.

It is the intention of the Government to carry that practice forward, as indicated before, and if any of the hon. members question the wisdom of that course, which is within the ruling made by Mr. Speaker, then, of course, it is open to them to challenge the ruling of Mr. Speaker, by way of a motion.

As far as these bills are concerned; there can be no suggestion of any hardship, because these bills were discussed last year, and are being discussed again at the present time, and the hon. members are undoubtedly ready now and have been ready at all times since the session began, to deal with them.

I hope the hon. members recognize we can very much better use our time when we are gathered here for the purpose of doing the business of the province, if we deal with the bills on the order paper, and after we have completed the ordinary business, to introduce other bills in a manner which will best obtain a clear indication of the view of the hon. members of the Legislature, and their interpretation of the matters before them.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker—

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): This order has been called.

MR. SPEAKER: I think I called the order.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, you will recall that when I put a question to you, you said you were not prepared on the spur of the moment to answer the question as to whether my request to have the bill stand over was something which you could rule upon, and you said you might give us your ruling tomorrow.

I ask that this bill be allowed to stand over, and I would ask, under your ruling, and under the rule which I quoted to you, if I am obliged to proceed at this time.

I understood you to say that on the advice of the Clerk you thought I was quite in order in making the request, and that the rules themselves permitted a bill to stand over until another sitting.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, that was not what you said at all. I want to make it quite definite that Mr. Speaker made no such ruling. Mr. Speaker made a ruling that it was proper for the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) to make his request to have the bill held over, and he went no further. It is a typical example of the distortion of everything that is said here by the hon. member who has just spoken (Mr. MacLeod).

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I followed that with a question to you, sir.

MR. SPEAKER: I think the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is out of order.

MR. SALSBERG: The record—

MR. SPEAKER: I may say that as far as I am concerned, I am trying to do my best as the Speaker, but I am no encyclopaedia.

MR. SALSBERG: The record will show what my question was, and what your answer was. You may want to think it over.

MR. SPEAKER: Mr. MacLeod (Bellwoods) moved—

MR. MACLEOD: I did not move anything.

MR. SPEAKER: I may say that I think the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) is trying to be, perhaps, a little bit clever in this matter. We will give him a chance to move it now.

MR. MACLEOD: Please accept my assurance, Mr. Speaker, that I am not trying to be clever. When the order was called, I rose in my place and asked you for an opinion or ruling, and the discussion which has gone on since has been on the request I made. I did not have an opportunity of moving second reading of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I think enough has been said already to indicate that the Government, for its own reasons, is determined to subject us to the maximum of embarrassment, and wants us to deal with these bills in rapid order, knowing that discussion on them will be confined perhaps chiefly to my colleague and myself.

But, in order that Mr. Speaker, who as he said a moment ago is not an encyclopaedia, will not be subjected to pressure by being asked to rule on the spur of the moment, and that no further embarrassment shall be caused to Mr. Speaker, I will move second reading of Bill No. 57, An Act to Amend the Elections Act.

I would suggest that inasmuch as the report of a committee on the rules of the House which was brought in last session has been pigeon-holed, most of us are in complete ignorance as to the rules under which we are proceeding, and I would suggest that something be done as quickly as possible to furnish the hon. members of the House with some supplementary material, which will be a guide to them in the future. There are precedents which have been established over the years, and I think it would be in order to let us have some mimeographed sheets with citations from the rule book, which would serve as our guide. We spent a lot of taxpayers' money setting up a select committee—

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

I think on this question of the rules, an hon. member has the right—the right, mind you—not only to request his bill to stand, but to have that request granted. Apparently that rule has been washed out completely, and I do not like to go back and try to rinse it again, in a lot of old water.

Now, the hon. member who has the floor (Mr. MacLeod) has moved second reading of his bill. Let him proceed on that. That is what we want.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, I thank my hon. friend for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) for the verbal spanking, and I shall now proceed to discuss the bill.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: He can always do those things in a very gentlemanly way, and one can never take exception to what he says.

The bill, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has pointed out, is a measure which was before us last year in substantially the same form. It is a bill upon which there has been a great deal of public discussion. The amendment contained in the bill was the subject of discussion in a select committee of the House, appointed, I believe, in 1944, to revise the Election Act, and it did a rather important piece of work, in bringing the Election Act up-to-date. But the House has never had the opportunity of dealing with it finally, so we are operating in the province today under an Act which many people seem to think is quite obsolete.

Without attempting to amend the Act extensively, my bill merely seeks to extend the franchise by lowering the voting-qualification age from 21 years to 18 years.

Now, on other occasions, the arguments in favour of these amendments have been put forward, not only by myself, but by the then Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Jolliffe), I believe, back in 1944, and on occasion by hon. members of the group in front of me.

I have always argued that any person who is on call to defend the country in time of war, who is considered mature enough to use the intricate weapons of war, and who is considered mature enough to do highly-skilled war work, in war factories, in time of war, is, by the same token, sufficiently mature to have his or her say in determining who shall represent them in this Assembly, or in any other governing body.

As I have said before, and I will repeat it, that I cast my first vote when I was 15 years of age. I did not have another vote for a very long period of years. Perhaps one of the reasons why I, in the judgment of some hon. members, have gone astray in my life, is because when I cast my first vote, I voted for a Tory, for the Union-Government candidate, against old D. D. Mackenzie, who became the House Leader of the Liberal Party following the death of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

It should be pointed out that the Election Act of the Province of Ontario has been amended so as to permit service men, or women, who had the vote when they were less than 21 years of age, to continue to exercise their right to vote in any election which might follow their demobilization from the army.

I feel that we should go beyond that. I think that the time has come when we should get away from the idea that young people, 18 years of age, should be looked upon as persons who should be responsible to the community. I think, having regard to the maturity of modern youth, that we should give them an opportunity to become responsible for the community.

I could not help but feel when I was out at Brampton the other day with the other hon. members of this House, talking with some of those young lads, the 140 of them who unfortunately are committed to that institution, that perhaps they would not have committed those crimes for which they are serving time if they had the feeling on having attained the age of 18 years they had reached the age of maturity, and at that point assumed responsibility for the communities in which they lived, that they had a responsibility to society and, that being the case, had to accept responsibility for the community in which they lived.

A great deal has been said since we first met here about the fact that fewer and fewer people are voting in municipal elections and in provincial and Dominion elections. I do not know what the all-time high was, but I should imagine that for many years not much more than 50 per cent. of potential voters in the country as a whole have gone to the polls. There was an increase in the vote in the Province of Ontario in the last provincial election, but I think all of us will agree that much needs to be done to bring a larger number of people out to exercise their franchise, and I repeat again that in my judgment it would have a very salutary effect on the young people of this country of ours if, on the attainment of their 18th birthday, they felt that they were full-fledged citizens with the right to discharge all the obligations of citizenship.

We greeted today a young lady, a young Canadian girl who has certainly proven in the last couple of years, when she has been on the world stage, that she is very, very mature in her outlook. I cannot see why anyone should want to deprive Barbara Ann Scott, who is typical, I think, of the youth of Canada, of the right to cast a vote in the election that may take place in the Province of Ontario or in the Dominion of Canada before the end of 1948. She is not yet 21 years of age, she is only 19, and she of course would not have the right to vote under the Act as it stands today.

I do not know why there is such strong opposition to this proposed amendment. I know that it did come before the House, in the spring of 1945, and it was clearly indicated that a large majority of hon. members of this House would have voted for it. The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) will recall that. He was leading the Government at the moment, and, realizing the way the wind was blowing, he very tactfully and skilfully—if you want to use those terms—took the bill away from us, and the place thereof saw it no more.

But on that occasion it was quite clear from what was said by the then Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Joliffe) and the spokesman for the Liberal Party who, if I am not mistaken, was the present Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), there was a majority for the amendment and had it been put to a vote, it would have passed and it would be the law of the Province of Ontario today. But here we are with a situation where the Government has only been able to garner to itself 44 per cent. of the votes in the Province of Ontario, and it is prepared to thwart what was on that occasion the clearly expressed will of the vast majority of hon. members in this House, who at that time spoke for a much larger percentage of the people of Ontario than does the present Government.

I cannot help but feel that one of the reasons why the Government has on three occasions refused to support this amendment is because they do not have any confidence that the young people of 18 years of age would vote for the Tory Party. They are afraid that the young people of the nation regard Toryism as a relic of the past and something that ought not to be entrusted with government.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): You should hear some of our young organizations and then you would know what was going on.

MR. MACLEOD: I do not know—we do not have any of them in this House.

AN HON. MEMBER: I do not know about that.

MR. MACLEOD: We do not have many young Tories in this House.

AN HON. MEMBER: What have you got over there?

MR. MACLEOD: All the young people in the House are over on this side.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: If you added up the total age of all the 66 Tories in this House—

AN HON. MEMBER: And divide it by 66.

MR. MACLEOD: —it would really look like the serial number on a box-car.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: You have no confidence in the young people. I have no doubt myself that a proportion of them would vote for the Tories and I am sure that a lot of young people up in Eglinton riding, children of the good, rock-ribbed Tories up there, would go to the polls and vote for the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). I do not know why, but I think they would, and I have no doubt that the young people 18 years of age in the good old town of Lindsay would vote for the handsome Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost). And again I cannot understand why. And so on in all these constituencies.

But the Government evidently fears that it will not get enough; it will not get a sufficiently large slice of that vote; that a small slice of it will go to the Liberal Party and a bigger slice of it will go to the C.C.F., and some of it of course, is inevitably bound to come to us. I think that if you are really serious when you claim to be enlightened people with faith in the young people of Canada, you should be willing to trust them with a ballot. You are willing to trust them with the control stick of an expensive bombing machine or with a rifle or with some intricate instrument on a battleship, or with some precision instrument in a war plant of some kind or other. It just does not make sense. It does not make sense that you were willing to give to the young person 18 years of age the enormous responsibility of manning a battle station, where a high degree of intelligence is called for, but you are not prepared to give them the right to decide whether the present hon. member for Eglinton (Mr. Blackwell) shall have the right to sit in the Ontario Legislature.

As far as the issue that has to be decided this year or next year in the Province of Ontario is concerned, I do not think that it requires the intelligence of an 18-year-old citizen to decide that.

As I said last year, I think that you could lower the age to 15, and get a very sound and valid opinion as to the unfitness of the present Government to preside over the destinies of this province, but I am not suggesting that we go that far. I say that on the basis of experience, it has been shown that the young people of this country who are 18 years of age and over have proven themselves in the most critical period through which the nation has ever passed that they are ready to assume responsibility, and that they are equipped mentally to meet the obligations of citizenship, however severe the test may be, and I would ask you, at least on this occasion, to abandon your obscurantist outlook—

AN HON. MEMBER: "Obscurantist?"

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, it is a good word which perfectly describes what we have on the other side of the House and part of this side of the House, obscurantism of the first order. Abandon that, and try at least on one occasion to show the people of this province that you have faith in the future and you are willing to trust the youth of the nation to make those great decisions on which the future of the nation depends.

I move second reading of the bill.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Chairman, before putting it to a vote, I will not delay the House any length of time but I want to make clear my position on this bill.

I am inclined to have a great deal of sympathy with the principle of the bill, but there is more to it than appears on the surface. It is a very small bill, it contains a very few words to change a matter that has existed in this country and in other countries for a long, long, long time. The question not having been studied at sufficient length, the pros and cons not having been put before us on a matter of such importance with sufficient thought, I am not inclined, especially at my age, to make such a radical change in the constitution of the province. I say "the constitution" advisedly. 21 years has been set for centuries past as the age where civic rights in toto are granted to a citizen. There is not only the question of votes, there is the question of holding property, there is the question of contracting obligations. You have that 21-year limit set practically in every page of our statutes, in every statute of our constitution, of our legislative machinery, so that there must be brought the whole question as to what rights should be granted to the youth of this country, say from 18, because at 18 we asked them to make the supreme sacrifice for their country. Shall we give them only the right to vote, or would it not be important to give them the right to deal with property, the right to make contractual obligations and so on?

It is a wide, wide question, and I am not ready to saddle future generations who have their own lives to live, with the obligation to be acting under this new set-up, this new law, this new limitation. I, for one, am not ready by my vote here, without more ado, without more thought, without more discussion, without more study, to vote in favour of it. The question is wider, and greater than appears at first sight. Therefore, I rise simply not to give my own views or my own arguments about it, pro or con, but simply to state that I am not ready at this time to change the whole constitution of this country as to the limitation in age of the rights of citizenship.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I will defer what I have to say to the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) if he wishes to speak now.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker, I intend to make my remarks very short. I think the ground has been fairly well covered, and this is not the first time this has been debated here.

Previous speakers have mentioned the fact that at the age of 18 we—I was going to say "we permit" our sons to go to war, but it is not altogether that, we draft them if necessary into the service.

However, I think there is something else that has not been mentioned and which is very important and that is, we recognize that at the age of 18, young people are sufficiently matured to enter into a contract of marriage and assume all the responsibility that entails.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER: But it is a noviate.

MR. ANDERSON: The point I would like to draw to your attention, Mr. Speaker, and that of hon. members of this House, is that there has been a lot said, particularly at election time in the heat of an election, as to what different political parties will do if they succeed in being elected. In the only province in this country that has a C.C.F. Government, in the Province of Saskatchewan, they have enacted legislation similar to this bill today. The legislation that is now in effect in the Province of Saskatchewan and has been in effect since the spring of 1945, under a C.C.F. Government, permits 18-year-olds to vote in a provincial election, and because it is part of our programme, because we believe in it, because I think it is justice and would extend the franchise to a group of people that have been denied that right and would encourage our young people to take a greater interest in our democratic government, I am going to support the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I am supporting this bill on the ground that it contains a principle which has been enunciated by the C.C.F. for some considerable time. I am not supporting it with any consideration from where it comes. The bill, no matter who introduced it in the House, would receive my support because of this principle.

I would like to disagree with the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger). He says he is not prepared to accept this small amendment, because it does not take into consideration the over-all picture. May I remind the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) that we have never had any change in the laws, except by whittling down the old status quo. We have to change a little now, and a little at a later time. That is how progress is achieved. Giving the vote to those of 18 years of age is one step; the other steps can be achieved later on.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I had no intention on this occasion, when this bill came up for discussion, of making any extensive remarks. I would, however, like to repeat the observation I made about it last year in relation to what was put forward by the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod).

He referred the hon. members of the Legislature to the statute prior to the election in 1945, and indicated what the support was in this Legislature for the principle of the bill.

All I can say, Mr. Speaker, is that I am not extremely impressed by that, because the great majority of the hon. members who were in favour of that principle, demonstrated in the ensuing election that they did not have the confidence of their constituents, they then represented, and most of them lost their seats.

I would like to say on behalf of the Government that we on this side of the House are extremely gratified at the progress in the thinking of the official opposition, as indicated by the remarks of the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger). Last year they were not in favour of the bill—

MR. BELANGER: I spoke only for myself.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The others may speak for themselves, if they wish.

As I indicated, Mr. Speaker, last year the official opposition was in favour of the bill. Now, at least one hon. member of the official opposition has been impressed since, and no doubt was at that time, by the argument that was advanced on behalf of the Government as to why it was opposed to the principle of the bill.

But what does make me a trifle despondent is that after the evident progress which has taken place in the thinking of the official opposition, after a year has elapsed, they want more time to make up its mind; it is unprepared to declare themselves in favour of the principle, and is not quite prepared to come to the conclusion that it is unsound.

When this bill comes up, as it undoubtedly will, next year, the opposition will, I hope, have reached a conclusion with finality.

Mr. Speaker, the bill is not acceptable to the Government, and it will be opposed by it.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, there is just one difference between the opposition and the Government, as related to the remarks of my hon. friend who has just taken his seat (Mr. Blackwell), and that is, there is room for variation in thinking and expression on this side of the House, but it has never been shown that there is such room on the other side of the House.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Oh yes, absolutely.

MR. OLIVER: That would be something I would like to see. I would like to have it reproduced here, so we could have a good look at it.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, in regard to this legislation, that I have always held the opinion that it would be the fair and just thing for the Legislature to give the franchise to those of 18 years of age.

I will not go over the arguments which have been advanced in favour of this particular Act. I am only going to say that as far as I am personally concerned, I think, with the majority of the other opposition, that they are still in favour of this legislation.

I value very highly the opinion of my hon. friend from Prescott (Mr. Belanger), that this matter should be given some consideration and while this is a small amendment, consideration should be given to it, if we are going to make proper progress. It should be considered in relation to other necessary amendments to the election laws. There is no doubt about that. But when one's principles are at stake, and are called into question, there is no leeway allowed; you are either in favour of the bill as it stands, or against the bill. I have no hesitation at all in saying that my vote will go in support of Bill No. 57.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I am very glad to follow the last speaker (Mr. Oliver), but more particularly the speaker before him (Mr. Blackwell), who, as is quite often the case with him, oversteps a little, and gets into an overconfident mood, and sometimes gets what he is not looking for. I am sorry, because otherwise he is a very fine fellow.

I am glad the official opposition has not abandoned its position, and that it stands for what is very sound position, namely, in favour of legislation that will extend the franchise to those of 18 years and over.

Now, apropos of the certainty of the Government spokesman against this measure; I want to say that their confidence and certainty seems to increase year by year. When this matter was before the House in 1945, they did not at all oppose it—not publicly. They may have wished it were never an issue, that it had never been brought up, but they never spoke against it—not in the House. As a matter of fact, they behaved in a manner which led people to believe that they were not against it.

Of course, that was the period of the rising wave of democracy in the province, when the Tories were in the minority in the House, when the C.C.F., Liberals and our humble persons, constituted the majority of the hon. members, and it was under such circumstances that the Tory spokesmen did not wish to be regarded as being against this bill. So they just kept quiet.

Now, as time goes on, they become more "cocky" and certain they were right all along.

The Conservative Party leadership had a few alarming experiences thrown their way. At a convention of the Young Conservatives in this province, they appeared to be very critical of this Government's lack of a housing policy.

You remember that? They voted against it—Mr. Speaker, I should correct myself; they adopted a motion contrary to the advice of members of the Government benches, and they were critical of the Government.

Well, if the young people will do that—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That could not happen in the Communist Party.

MR. SALSBERG: —if that could happen in their own tents, what will happen when they go to the ballot boxes? There are many sincere young men, amongst the Young Conservatives. I had an example, which I think I should relate for the benefit of the hon. members opposite.

Last year, after speaking in this House in favour of some social legislation, I was stopped by a young fellow as I was leaving the building, who came up to me and congratulated me on the very fine address and the excellent proposals I had made. I thanked him, of course, as we all would, and modestly acknowledged that it was not the worst speech delivered that afternoon or evening.

Then the young man volunteered this to me. He said, and said in all solemnity—"I am certain the Government will support those measures." Well, I looked at this very well-meaning, innocent, inexperienced young man, and I said, "Young fellow, I am not so sure; in fact, I have my doubts." I was very careful not to disillusion him. He said, "I am certain you are wrong; I am a member of the Young Conservative Association, and the Ministers of the Government speak to us about these very things."

Then, of course, I showed him more consideration than I would have shown anyone else. I knew that disillusionment was in store for him, and why should I bring it to this young man. I said, "I hope you are right; I hope I am wrong, but I am afraid that time will prove that I am right, and that you are wrong, and the Government will not support those measures, regardless of what the Ministers say when they address your meetings."

Alas, I was proven to be right; he was proven to be wrong, and the Tory Government voted against all those measures, and I am sure this young man is more disillusioned than ever, but wiser now about the character of Tory administration.

I do not know where the young man is now, but I am confident that he is on his way to a better berth than he ever found in the Young Conservative Association.

I think these experiences of the Government shocked them so that they are afraid to adopt a measure of this sort, a measure which would place political responsibility upon the young people, who would be asked to assume their responsibilities; a measure which would give the young people the needed stimulus to interest themselves in political questions, and to participate in the political life of the province, and to assume their proper place in the life of the province and the communities.

I am sorry the Government is afraid of the young people; I am sorry to hear that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) does not trust the young people of this province. I hope we will have a recorded vote, so that the record will be clear as to who is for and who is against. We never know; that young man may be here. I hope he is. Let him have the printed record, to know what is taking place.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) who has just spoken was not in the House a few years ago, when a gentleman by the name of Glass, representing one of the Toronto ridings, made a motion similar to this, and he could not receive a seconder. His desk-mate said, "I will second the motion, just to have it come before the House," and he seconded the motion on the understanding that he was not going to vote for it. The only vote on Mr. Glass' motion was his own.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): It shows progress, anyway.

MR. SALSBERG: Definite progress.

Second reading negatived on division.

AYES: 14.

NAYS: 51.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 34th Order.

MUNICIPAL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 34th Order, second reading of Bill No. 58, An Act to Amend the Municipal Act, Mr. Salsberg.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, this bill will require some explanation, and as the mover of the bill, I would like an opportunity for some discussion. I am quite prepared to move, in view of the hour of the clock, that the debate be adjourned for the moment, until we come back to it again, if that is satisfactory to you, sir, and the Government.

HON. MR. DREW: I will not oppose the motion. It is nearly 6 o'clock and I just wanted the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) in this case to really know what was coming up the next time, so he will know what is going on.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALSBERG: In moving the adjournment of the debate—

MR. BELANGER (Prescott): I rise to a point of order. There is no motion before the House, and therefore, no debate.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW: (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 6.02 o'clock p.m.

HON. CHARLES H. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Dunbar, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, in introducing this bill, in view of the fact that a goodly number of telegrams have been received concerning it, and which bill complements Bill No. 81, I feel I should make a brief statement on it at this time.

The telegram sent by the Retail Gasoline and Automotive Service Association division of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, reads as follows:

"Bill No. 81, dealing with hours and wages in gasoline service station, if passed in present form will seriously affect living conditions of 30,000 workers in this industry (stop) respectfully suggest this bill be referred to standing committee and representatives of industry be granted opportunity to present views (stop) your support in having bill referred to committee earnestly requested."

Mr. Speaker, as I pointed out on the introduction of Bill No. 81, which complements this bill, in bringing about the decision on the part of the Government to adopt this method of handling this very difficult situation, I had numerous conferences with various people: the retail merchants, the Retail Gasoline and Automotive Service Association, the Garage Operators Association, delegations representing the public, delegations representing the Good Roads Association, the Automotive Association, and numerous others.

As I said at that time, I do not think that any measure has given us—particularly myself and my department under whose jurisdiction this matter comes—as much trouble or as much concern as this particular bill. In view of the fact that the telegram requests that these people be heard, I think I can say without fear of contradiction that all people interested in this subject have been heard, not once, but on numerous occasions.

I think also there is a misunderstanding by these people, who have sent these telegrams, because this one says, “Dealing with hours and wages.”

Mr. Speaker, if hon. members will recall Bill No. 81, which will be processed at a later date, every care was taken to protect all phases of the Act, so that the benefits which have accrued to this industry in regard to wages and working conditions will not be lost, but simply that the right to adopt or regulate hours of sale shall be placed back under the authority of the various municipalities.

I think it can be safely said that not only myself, as Minister of Labour, but every hon. member of this Legislature is anxious for improvements in the conditions in this industry—and there have been many, under the Industrial Standards Act. Conditions have been improved; minimum wages have been established, and, to repeat, may I say that we are protecting all phases of the question, and it is the policy of the government to return the right and the authority back to the municipalities which, for many, many years, have had that authority.

The bill which is being introduced today, An Amendment to the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act, is one under which the closing hours will now be affected, and simply gives the municipal government greater power and control of hours, so that they can establish any hours they deem advisable in their own municipalities.

Mr. Speaker, I felt I should make that statement on the introduction of this bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, is it proper to address a question to the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) after his explanation?

MR. SPEAKER: If the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) cares to answer.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) why he cannot agree to submitting this bill to a committee to give a further opportunity for all interested parties to present their case in public.

MR. SPEAKER: That is not a question; I am sorry.

MR. SALSBERG: There was a question mark at the end, but you did not see it.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Nobody else saw it either.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We found it has not been wide enough for some people coming up, so we are widening it to give more space.

duce a bill intituled The Cheese and Hog Subsidy Act, 1948, and that same be now read a first time.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) if there is any difference between this and the former one?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Very slight.

POWER COMMISSION ACT

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Moved by myself, Mr. Speaker, seconded by Mr. Challies, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend The Power Commission Act, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, I think it would be well if I indicated something of the nature of this bill, because in many ways it will be the most important bill coming before the Legislature. The bill is not long, nor do its contents indicate the full scope of the field which it covers. It is legislation required to carry out the decision reached by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, which has been approved by this Government, and which, as I indicated in an earlier published statement, and was indicated in the Speech from the Throne, would be placed before this Legislature for approval.

This bill provides amendments to the existing Power Commission Act, which will be required to carry out the various details of the frequency change-over, and the related activities resulting from that decision.

I make this explanation now, so that the hon. members will be fully aware of the effect of this bill, the reason for the amendments introduced, and the principles involved.

I think it would be well at this point to mention one or two specific provisions made by the amending sections, and to very briefly comment upon them, so that no misunderstanding may occur between now and the time that this bill is dealt with more fully on second reading.

One of the amendments is an amendment which is necessary to permit the Commission to bear the expense of changing the electric appliances of domestic, rural domestic, and commercial consumers, and also such portion of the expense of changing the equipment of industrial consumers as may be decided upon by the Commission, under the particular proposals set forth. The Act as it now stands does not authorize the Commission to make those expenditures from its funds.

Also, in order to carry out this work and to make the changes which are necessary to the equipment and installation of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, it is necessary that there be an amendment which will authorize the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to use its revenues, and its accumulated funds for the purpose of making these necessary changes.

As the hon. members of the Legislature know, it will be necessary for the local Commissions or Boards to make certain changes in their own equipment and installation, and again it is necessary to give to those local Boards or Commissions, as they may be called, the legal authority to apply their own funds to this purpose.

So that there may be an orderly handling of the financial transactions involved, there is an amendment which will set up a frequency standardization reserve account, and there is a further amendment which will permit the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to transfer from its reserve monies necessary for the purpose of this frequency standardization reserve account.

Also, there is the necessity of providing for the alteration of contracts and the supplying of 60-cycle power to consumers who have been supplied with 25-cycle power. These are the major provisions. There are, of course, other provisions which are incidental to these major provisions and which are required for the purpose of making it possible to carry out the whole proposal which has been placed before the Legislature.

Although it has been already covered in a public statement I think it would be well for the hon. members to bear in mind, in examining the effect of this Act, which makes the amendments to which I have referred in the Act that we already have, to bear in mind that the proposals put forward provide for the full expense of the change-over of all domestic equipment, such as refrigerators, washing machines, etc., at the expense of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

It is also proposed that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario bear the full expense of the change-over of all rural equipment.

It is also proposed that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario bear the full expense of the change-over of all commercial equipment of all kinds.

The only remaining type of equipment not covered by what I have mentioned is the industrial equipment. All change-over of industrial equipment up to a cost of $250.00 to each industrial consumer will be paid by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. It is only those larger industries which have electrical equipment machinery which will cost more than $250.00 to change-over that will pay any part of the cost of frequency conversion. In those cases the recommendation of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, approved by the Government, and put forward in relation to this bill, is that the industrial consumers, whose equipment will cost more than $250.00 to change over, shall be called upon to pay one-third of the cost of changing the equipment. That proposal is based upon the fact that a very careful examination of all industrial equipment shows that the average value and life of industrial equipment will be increased by more than 36 per cent. on the average throughout the whole province by changing it from 25 to 60 cycle. Therefore this charge is simply made in relation to that part of the actual capital value which has been increased by the frequency change-over itself. It will merely be a payment by those larger industries of the amount by which their equipment will actually be increased in value on the company's books.

As I pointed out before, it would not be possible for the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario to make these very large expenditures for this frequency change-over—amounting to an expenditure for this purpose alone of considerably more than $100,000,000, unless there was the approval of the Government and of this Legislature, and in considering this bill you are, in fact, considering the principles and details I have mentioned.

Also, I would point out the fact that in the provision for the payment by the municipal commissions, and boards, the amendment is simply for the purpose of permitting those commissions and boards to use their own funds for the purpose of changing their own equipment. It may seem almost unnecessary to comment on this point, were it not for the fact that amongst the many surprisingly inaccurate statements which have occurred in regard to these proposals, it has been suggested that the Government intends to introduce legislation which will take from these local commissions or boards some of their accumulated reserves for the purpose of meeting the cost of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission in carrying out this work. May I say most emphatically—and I hope that this will remove any doubts on this score, or answer those who have made the statements and are not really in doubt—there is no provision contemplated and there is nothing in this amending Act which will give to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario any authority to draw from the reserves of the local Commissions or boards any money for the purpose of carrying out the duties of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission under the proposals that have been put forward. The only effect of this Act, in so far as it relates to these local commissions or boards, is to give them adequate power to use their funds for these new activities, which was not contemplated in the Act as originally drafted or as amended to the present.

I do not intend to go into the many details of the proposals which have been put forward. Those proposals will be reviewed in exact detail when this bill comes before the Legislature for second reading.

I have taken this occasion to indicate the statutory effect of the amendments and the broader purpose which this bill serves so that all the hon. members may be aware of the full importance of this bill and may be prepared to discuss it when it comes up for second reading with a knowledge of the importance which it actually has.

MR. WILLIAM J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I wonder if I may address a question to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew)? Will we have an opportunity of examining the reports of the experts before the bill comes up for second reading?

HON. MR. DREW: The hon. member (Mr. Grummett) already has a very comprehensive summary of the report and I feel perfectly sure that any of the reports can be made available at any time for examination. I would remind the hon. members that a summary prepared by the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario was placed on the desk of every member. If any further information is required, I feel sure the original report can be examined. As the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) will realize that there are a very limited number of the larger reports presented by the experts in each field. I can simply amplify what I have already said by saying I know that the engineers' report will be made available for examination upon a basis that will be suitable to the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) if he will confer with the member of the Government, who is one of the Hydro Commission.

MR. HOWARD J. SALE (York South): I move, seconded by Mr. J. P. Johnstone (Bruce) that leave be given to introduce a Bill intituled An Act respecting the Village of Forest Hill, and that same be now read the first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the Bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 23rd Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 23rd Order. Resuming the Adjourned Debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion for the consideration of the Speech of the Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor at the opening of the Session.

MR. JOHN P. JOHNSTONE (Bruce): Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of the Legislature, this is the first time I have spoken in this Legislature and I feel, before I proceed with my remarks, that I would like to speak for a moment about a man we will all greatly miss in this session of the Legislature. I am referring to my very dear friend, Dr. Hobbs Taylor, who represented Huron, a riding very close to my own. I had the great privilege of knowing "Doc" Taylor, as he was affectionately known to all of us in his neighbourhood, for many years and I would like to say that he was held in the highest respect and admiration by all who knew him. They never came better than Dr. Taylor and not only the people of Huron, but the entire province, will miss him greatly. I would like at this time to extend to Mrs. Taylor and his daughter my very deepest sympathy and I know I am also speaking for the people of my riding when I say that we will all miss him in a very personal way, as he visited my locality frequently with me and endeared himself to everyone he met.

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to tell you how pleased I was when the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) was introduced to this House on opening day last Wednesday. I want to take this occasion to wish him the very best of luck and I am sure he will give the people of Huron the same type of splendid service and representation that made Dr. Taylor so respected and admired by all the people of Huron. It is a great pleasure to me to welcome the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) to this House and to my own neighbourhood.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words regarding my riding. Probably a few hon. members in this House would say it in a different way, but being a man of few words, I possibly will not make it as nice and as flowery as some, nevertheless, I am going to get it off my chest.

When I come down to the Legislature and sit around and listen to the speeches—particularly when I listen to the speeches of the hon. members for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) and St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg)—sometimes I wonder just what I am doing here, if I am wasting my time here, I could be more valuable at home. The hon. members talk for hours and when they are through, I sometimes wonder just what it is all about.

I am speaking, Mr. Speaker, as a farmer. I am not a polished speaker, I am speaking to you straight out just as I feel. That is the way my people would like me to do, I would not want them to think for a minute that I could not come down here and say what I think.

The riding I represent is known to you all as Bruce County, bounded by Grey North, Grey South and by Huron County. It is a very large riding, approximately 125 miles in length, which means considerable driving, in order to cover the area and we have approximately 300 miles of shoreline. Another thing I would like to tell you, Mr. Speaker, if you will allow me to say it, in speaking at various meetings at home, some of the men there who stand when they are speaking, they say, "Keep your hands in your pockets," but I am an auctioneer and I cannot keep them there. I cannot help it, you will have to take me as I am.

With all the wonderful shoreline we have, we have wonderful opportunities for the advancement of the tourist industry, and one of the major features in that respect is the magnificent Blue Water Highway. I suppose it is natural for every hon. member—I would like everybody to listen to this little remark of mine, probably they will not feel very pleased about it, nevertheless it is straight from the shoulder—to feel that his riding is the best in the province. I will not say that about Bruce County, Mr. Speaker, but I will say that my riding takes second place to none.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. JOHNSTONE: That is the way we should all feel about our ridings and the people we represent. At the present time a new highway is being built from Tobermory South—that is the top of the Bruce Peninsula—which will make it very convenient to visit Bruce County and provide a connecting link with the ferry for Manitoulin, and also to the people to the north, and the people of my riding are very happy that this Government has seen fit to build a new road there, to open up that new territory and make it a better connecting link for tourists to drive through. We would like them to stay, but we are not selfish, we let them go up there to Manitoulin, as the hon. member for Algoma-Manitoulin (Mr. Fullerton) will tell you.

I must give the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) a certain amount of credit. He deserves a lot of credit in undertaking this programme which will mean so much to Western Ontario and to Bruce, and to the people in that vicinity. I do not mind patting the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) a little bit on the back; I do not mind patting them a little lower down sometimes, because I get some of that patting myself. I would like to see them give me a little more, at least I am coming down anyway to say that our people would like a little more in the line of roads, if it is at all possible.

When I was listening to a speech the other day, I did not think it was this warm in the House. The hon. member for Addington (Mr. Pringle) said the other day that he had a little of that mica which is heat resistant; I wish I had a little of it here, I would be very glad of it right now.

This Government deserves great credit for the grants it has given toward the education of our children. I think this is one of the most important things a Government can do, for the wealth of the future lies in the children of today. My people are tremendously pleased that this Government has recognized the vital importance of education, and has expressed that belief in a practical way.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. JOHNSTONE: You must excuse my humorous way, I am built that way, and I have to be natural, I cannot do anything about it. When I am sincere, I am sincere. But I sometimes find that the easiest way to go through life is with a smile on your face. That is how I was elected. After all, Mr. Speaker, we have to get a smile out of this. My wife is not here watching me, but she believes all she reads in the paper.

My hon. friend, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), happened to be over—we invited him over—to our fair. He was speaking there, and a right able speaker he is, too. The boys like him. Sometimes we battle, but that is all the harm we do—we do not do any harm to each other, we do it fair and clean.

He came over one day and said: "J. P., I often wonder how you get elected." I was talking away at the time. He said a few more things that I would not mention here. After awhile I got up and spoke to all the people at the fair. I have a habit of making a speech welcoming people, the bachelors especially, to Bruce County and telling them about the good-looking young girls we have, and afterwards the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) said: "I see how you get elected"; because I talked to the women, you see.

I would like to say a few words, Mr. Speaker, in regard to hospitals. This is what our Government has done for us in Bruce County: at first, we had two hospitals, we had the lowest number of beds per number of people, I think, of almost any county in Ontario. Now, we have, under the new Drew set-up of $1,000 per bed and so much for the bassinets—or whatever you call them—for the kiddies anyway—; that came to $24,000 for the brand new hospital at Southampton which is operating and doing a good job. We are proud of it and the people say they are tremendously pleased. You should see the letters I get about it. That was opened in June last year.

That is why I get so many letters. All the letters say: "Convey our thanks to Mrs. Johnstone." Mrs. Johnstone was there and introduced hon. Mr. Kelley, or maybe I would not have been elected myself.

We have another hospital under construction in Chesley, rather, it is under extensive repairs and remodelling, it was a very fine old country home. It will also have 24 beds, or whatever the requirements call for. We have already a grant of so much and as advancement is shown they get their grant, that will be $24,000 to the town of Chesley for their hospital which is another thing our Government has done.

There is another hospital going up in Wiarton, to be started this summer.

This is all a result of the splendid programme of the Department of Health, and when you consider that up to the time the Southampton hospital was opened we had only two hospitals and now we have five, three of them already in operation and another will be by summer, we can look after our population. I think our population is going to agree, too.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. JOHNSTONE: Mr. Speaker, a few words in regard to reforestation. We have a wonderful county in regard to reforestation. Various counties stand out along certain lines to which they are specially adapted, but we have an area in our county which is suitable for reforestation purposes, between 12,000 and 15,000 acres of it under a reforestation plan, and we are steadily adding to it each year by setting aside half a mill each year—half a mill and no fooling. We think we have one of the largest areas set aside for reforestation in the province. This is a little "plug" for our County Council. I like them all; they are good boys; our County Council should be commended for their far-seeing action in this regard, and we know Bruce County will benefit greatly in the years ahead as a result of this effort.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. JOHNSTONE: Having, as I said, approximately 300 miles of shoreline on Lake Huron and Georgian Bay, commercial fishing plays an important part in my riding. As it means a great deal to the county, I am glad to know the Department of Game and Fisheries is making a special effort to constantly check the fish in certain areas and to promote better fishing, although I am sorry to say that in the lake in the last few years commercial fishing has dropped down somewhat in certain areas. Some are not bad, some could be worse and some better, but under the Department of Game and Fisheries great experiments are going on with small-mouth bass, they are endeavouring to do what they can, and you will find a difference in the fishing before long.

This brings us to the subject of tourists, Mr. Speaker. With many miles of shoreline, miles of rugged, rocky formation, and when I say "rugged," I mean rugged, I am not fooling.

HON. HAROLD R. SCOTT (Minister of Lands and Forests): And how!

MR. JOHNSTONE: Formations on the Georgian Bay side are unexcelled anywhere in any other part of Ontario. It is only natural we should attract thousands of tourists in the summer. We do have a lot of tourists come through there, we have room for a lot of further developments, and I hope to see tourists visiting our county a little more often. I would like to see the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) up there. He was very busy last summer. They tell me it was unavoidable, that he could not be up, but I know he will be up next summer endeavouring to do all he can for us. We also have various tourist associations who are endeavouring to do the best they can to promote the tourist industry in Bruce County. Our county offers excellent hunting facilities during the hunting season and we have quite a number of hunters from southern-Ontario points, the United States and so on.

I wish you could all take the time to make a trip along our Blue Water Highway and see the wonderful beaches we have. I doubt if you will ever see more magnificent beaches than you will see around the Blue Water Highway. I will mention no special town, you will see them any time as long as your eyes are open. I have seen people come a long way to see the sunsets on Lake Huron. Perhaps they do not appeal to me so much as to a stranger who sees them only once in awhile, but I think they are nice, too. You hear remarks: "what a wonderful sunset", people come purposely to sit on verandahs and watch the sunsets.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to come to the line I follow. I am a farmer, Mr. Speaker, and proud of it, the same as you are proud of what you are and anybody else, as we all should be.

Just a word about agriculture in Bruce County.

Bruce County is noted for the wonderful beef it produces. According to statistics, it rates as having the highest cattle value of any county in Ontario, exceeding over $11,000,000. Although Bruce County has not been considered a dairy county—I will give you the good with the bad, I will not delete any of it—its farms and farmers have, for many years, produced more butterfat than any other county in the province, producing in round figures over 6,000,000 pounds of this precious commodity in 1947. Bruce County comes fifth in hog production, producing over 120,000 hogs in 1947, where the percentage of Grade "A" hogs is well over 40 per cent. Although less well known for its sheep and lamb, we stand fifth in their production. In regard to poultry, Bruce County stands ninth in that field.

In 1947 Bruce County produced twice as much flax as any other—I had better look this up and make sure, I do not want to be checked up, Mr. Speaker—twice as much flax as any other county with the exception of Rainy River District.

I am afraid I will have to check with Hansard on all these little words, I do not know whether he will get them or not.

Our production of flax amounted to roughly 315,000 bushels, and we expect to double the acreage this year. We also export and ship a vast amount of turnips, over a million bushels, between 500 and 1,000 cars last year from the southern area of Bruce County.

Our county is already into an extensive campaign of vaccination of calves, and in my opinion, I think this would be a good thing if it became general throughout the province.

I would like to say a word now, about something else, Mr. Speaker. Not last—and not least either—I want to remind hon. members that in our county we have a commercial sale, we have a Winter and Commercial Fair which is held three days a year in Walkerton, and there are a few points I would like to bring out and that I am proud of:

This fair lasted three days this past fall and thousands and thousands attended. Wait till I mention a few of the things. On the day of our commercial sale there were over a hundred Baby-Beef-Calf Club entries—boys and girls with their little calves—not "little" calves, they were real calves. They were mighty good, and I only wish the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) could have seen those hundreds of kiddies standing up there with their white-faced calves; that is doing something for agriculture, and no fooling. Those calves commanded a good price. There were over 250 head of cattle that were sold; we shipped 21 carloads of prize cattle. I have it written down here, but I will get away from it anyway. We shipped 21 carloads at premium prices, a straight trainload coming out of that little town.

And then the boys say: "where do you live J.P.?" Come up and see us sometime, we will show you where we live.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) knows where I live, he comes up and I welcome him and I know he will welcome me to his place. In fact, I have to pay him a personal visit. A fellow told me a certain thing the other day and I want to go over and see him.

I would like to give everybody an invitation—perhaps it is a little premature and maybe not in the right place, but it don't make any difference, you are going to get it anyway—when I come down here I like to stand up and say what I think in my own way, as long as I do not break the rules too far. I will admit I come mighty close, and maybe I have broken some. I would like to say this, as president of this Winter Fair I would like to extend a visit—a whole-hearted welcome to everyone, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and everyone, those people in the gallery and the press to come up to our fair next fall. We will show you a nice, tidy little fair. Come and see it and you will go away and say you have learned something.

Now, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend, the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod). You know he spoke the other night and I was sitting here with beads of perspiration, waiting for him to conclude but he raved on and on until a quarter after eleven and I could not get talking. Boy, was I mad when I left. It is a good job he did, because when I went back home I found a little piece that I want to quote out of the Chesley paper. Its editor was unbiased; this man will tell you what he thinks. He has cut my whiskers many times. Here is the piece I would like to read and I will quote it, commending the new government. I am reading this out of the paper from Thursday, last week, March 11th.

This is how it starts, I am going to quote it:

"Did you (and we are now speaking to the people of Chesley) ever say, 'Why is it that the Government never does anything for us?' And did you ever realize that by giving $24,000 to the Chesley and District Memorial Hospital, the Government is doing something for us? This is not a plug for George Drew or J. P. Johnstone or anyone else."

This is what he writes, wait until I read:

"It is a statement of fact. The Government does things for a lot of towns, new wharfs for those at the lake side, new post offices and so forth."

That covers Federal and Provincial in that little bit.

"Chesley has received little of this gravy but now we are getting some of it and the fact should be recognized. Indeed, the Government has become a big milch cow as far as Chesley and all other towns are concerned. We get a municipal subsidy of a mill, about $850 a year. At the Board of Education meeting last Friday night it was said that Government grants of almost $25,000—"

Did you hear that my friends? Just a small town, too.

"—$25,000 are expected for the Chesley High School this year plus about $9,000 for the Public School. The Hospital might expect a yearly maintenance grant of at least $1,500. Add this all together and it will be seen that the Government does something for us. Then, put the $24,000 capital grant for the hospital with the other items and we realize that Queen's Park may be collecting a heck of a lot of taxes from us, but we are getting some of it back."

I could read another one on there, too, but as I have probably spoken long enough I do not want to go on record as speaking too long. I would like to read this other little part, Mr. Speaker; I see other men who have been here for years reading their's, so I can read it. This is another thing and I quote:

"This matter of building a hospital and getting $24,000 which would not otherwise come to the town is brought to mind by the following paragraph in the Arthur Enterprise."

This is what it says:

"Hon. Russell T. Kelley, Minister of Health, visited the town of Chesley recently and brought with him a cheque for $6,000 as the first quarter of the Government grant of $24,000 to the new Chesley Hospital. Had he known the Chesley Hospital was so far advanced he would have brought a cheque for $12,000."

I might just say I would appreciate that other $6,000, but we are still sure of getting it: when they say it goes, it goes.

"When the hospital is completed the enterprise of Chesley folk will have brought to their town a sizeable amount of cash from the provincial treasury of the province that they would otherwise never have seen.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that just goes to show you what grants you can get from the various departments of the Drew Government as long as you are going ahead on an educational programme and building up a better country. They do not like doing all of it; the great trouble is a lot of these towns do not take advantage of it, and put up a little cash of their own. The Government likes to see the people at home taking an interest and putting something in and say, "This is our hospital, and no fooling."

Now, Mr. Speaker, in conclusion—I have a lot more I would like to say, but I will have a chance later on, probably—I want to congratulate the Government on the Speech from the Throne and to say I am more than pleased with the excellent programme outlined in it. I am proud and privileged to take part in this programme and I will do all I can to carry it out and thus assure the welfare and advancement of all the people of my county. Thank you.

MR. F. O. ROBINSON (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I cannot hope to make my remarks as amusing to the House as the previous speaker (Mr. Johnstone), but I will make them as amusing as possible.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): They may be.

MR. ROBINSON: Yes, they might be.

I would like to open my remarks, Mr. Speaker, by congratulating you on filling your office with dignity and still maintaining a jovial atmosphere in the House under difficult conditions at times. I think you are doing a good job.

I would like also at the time to associate myself with the previous speaker (Mr. Johnstone) in congratulating the mover and seconder of the motion to adopt the Speech from the Throne. The hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) had a double-barrelled assignment, of moving the motion and delivering his maiden speech; he did a very nice job. The hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) delivered a speech containing much detail and many figures. He succeeded in moulding a difficult subject into an interesting speech; he too deserves a pat on the back.

I would like at this time, Mr. Speaker, to direct the attention of this House to the north-west section of our province. I am a native of that part of the province, born and raised in the City of Port Arthur.

I only wish that every hon. member of this House could pay a visit to that section of the province. I am sure he would come back with two outstanding impressions. First, he will be impressed with the extent of the forests, the rugged beauty of the surroundings, the wonderful opportunities for developing a playground for sportsmen and holiday-seekers whether native or tourist. If he stays long enough to really have a look at things, he will be impressed with the remarkable possibilities for power development. He will see that nature has provided excellent harbour sites along the north shore of Lake Superior.

His outstanding impression will be the tremendous need for development. He will ask himself: why are there not more roads into this virgin territory? why haven't they more paved highways? He will see what the lake shore highway would mean to the whole province, as a tourist attraction second to none on the continent; to say nothing of its value as a lead to further development.

I fully realize, Mr. Speaker, that this lake shore highway is a big project. I realize that there are developments and farm roads in need of more immediate attention. I have always favoured the idea of a plan for this highway, spread over a period of years, under which so much new road would be built and so much of the gravel road hard surfaced each year.

If our visitor drives out into the country he will find many miles of farm roads badly in need of repair. If he inquires about this he will be told that with many miles of roads, coupled with sparse farm population, the farmers need more help than they receive under present arrangements. He will realize the dire need for a broad plan to meet and finance this problem. He will find towns still without a road to give them access to the outside world. Nakima is an outstanding example of this, and there are others.

Our visitor will be surprised at the large number of small school buildings scattered about the country in bad need of improvement. He will find himself saying: why do they not build larger, more modern schools and transport the children to and from school in modern vehicles? He will find his thoughts shared by the people he is visiting. He will find a vast area greatly in need of good roads, and there is greater need than ever for more financial assistance to meet this unusual problem.

He will find there is a very apparent need for some plan of government assistance to the people who live in the rural areas and have children attending secondary schools in the urban areas. Again there is need for greater financial assistance. If he makes inquiries about higher education, he will find that the present government have recently opened a technical institute in Port Arthur, in temporary quarters. He will find the people appreciative of this fact and he will find that the City of Port Arthur has deeded to the Ontario Government a beautiful site to accommodate the permanent structure when it is built.

If your visitor talks with the local hon. member, Mr. Robinson, together with other people active in public life, he will learn of their efforts to obtain a university for northwestern Ontario. His first impression may be that this project is too ambitious or perhaps premature. This is a natural impression, because of the scattered nature of the population.

He will be surprised to learn that within a radius of three hundred miles of the City of Port Arthur are living well over 100,000 people, and this figure is constantly increasing. He will learn that a student living in Kenora must travel over a thousand miles to reach an Ontario university. A student living in Port Arthur must likewise travel around nine hundred miles.

He will find Port Arthur recognized as an ideal location for a university, situated as it is right in the heart of the north-west. He will see the logic in the suggestion that the technical institute might well be incorporated into the university. The further possibility of incorporation of a normal school into the same plan is worthy of study.

The problem of sending our children to university has been aggravated by the increase in fees to those attending the University of Toronto; this has had the effect of wiping out the saving gained through government subsidization of their travelling costs.

The visitor will then realize why the request for a university is supported by municipal bodies, both rural and urban, by trades and labour councils, by chambers of commerce, by the women's organizations; in fact by all progressive minded people, which includes the great majority of the people of that great section of our province.

In his drive through the rural areas he will be struck with the need for hydro power. He will be surprised to find good sized villages, standing in the shadow of the transmission lines, which are without hydro power.

There is need here for a very definite plan. People have the right to know what to expect in regard to rural hydro expansion. There should be established some financial plan in keeping with the characteristics of the great north-west.

He will also see the need for a plan to give telephone service to many rural areas which are now isolated in a manner almost unbelievable in this day and age. Pass Lake and Macdiarmid are two outstanding examples.

I would urge the Government to make a study of this question of telephone service, to try to make arrangements with railroads and others concerned to give more adequate service.

If our welcome visitor gets into conversation with the man on the street about hydro matters, the Aguasabon development will be sure to crop up.

This is a plant costing over eight million dollars and developing some fifty-three thousand horsepower. This plant is under construction on the Aguasabon River near Terrace Bay.

This plant is to be tied into the Nipigon System with a seventy mile power line, costing one and a half million dollars. The primary object of this plant is to supply power to the new pulp mill of the Kimberly Clarke Company now under construction at Terrace.

The announcement made over two years ago of the intention to build this plant, instead of going ahead with the Pine Portage development on the Nipigon River, gave rise to much speculation, and to lengthy and unfruitful efforts by myself to get a clear-cut answer as to why this was done.

The people feared that the interests of the pulp company were being served at their expense. The artificial lake and river improvements which go with this hydro development certainly create ideal conditions for the pulp company.

Almost two years later the news came out of a decision to go ahead with the Pine Portage development on the Nipigon. It would appear that this is the plant which will best serve the people, and which should have been given priority in January 1946, and could now be two years on the road toward completion.

I have many letters and newspaper clippings on this interesting question; but I will not weary the House with them today. I will read only a portion of an editorial appearing in the Port Arthur News Chronicle, of December 4, 1946; the editorial closes with these words:

"It would seem appropriate for Port Arthur and other municipalities of the district to get a little more hard boiled in this matter with a demand that the hydro state the case fully, clearly and plainly. It is nothing more than the due of those who may have to pay. Soon the bills may be coming in and the City should at least be given the chance to get ready to meet them."

Perhaps there is a logical answer to all of this; if so, I would urge that a clear-cut statement be issued on this plant and how its cost is to be levied, and why it was given priority over the Pine Portage development.

Surely we can assume that the present Government discussed the details of the power question with the interests promoting the pulp mill.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to turn for a few moments to the question of our forests, and our forest policy.

Of all the resources we possess, our forests are unique in their service to man. Before the trees are cut they serve us well, by their very presence they create unsurpassed beauty and fertility. Without them all would be desolation and waste. Our standing trees prevent soil erosion, they control run-off and prevent floods; they provide home and breeding grounds for wild life; they serve as a year-round playground for native and tourist. In these and in numerous other ways our standing trees are of service to man.

After we cut the tree—it brings countless benefits to us; in fact so many that it would take too much time to outline them here. In pioneer days the forest provided the settler with his log cabin, its furniture, the fuel with which to cook his food and keep him warm, and in many other ways provided for his needs. Time marched on—great sawmills were built and towns grew up around them. The whine of the saws and the glow of the burners were familiar to all. These mills played an important part in the development of Canada—their history is a story of romance, hardship and courage.

Then came the pulp and paper industries. They made an indelible mark on the pattern of society. Yes, there is quite a story behind that sheet of newsprint which brings the world to your door. Countless thousands of the best of our trees go to satisfy man's thirst for news. Moving along to the next stage, we find our versatile friend the tree unfolding new wonders in an unbelieving array of products, numerous types of paper, rayons, plastics, chemicals and a host of other things. Who knows what further surprises lie just around the corner?

Remarkable is it not, that a tree can give us so great a return. But the greatest blessing of all has still to be mentioned. The tree will supply us with all of these things in perpetuity if we give it a chance.

Resources such as minerals, coal, oil, and others are wasting assets; the supply is exhaustible; once used they cannot be replaced. In contrast to this, our forests will serve us over and over again from a given area, if we give them the care and attention they so rightfully deserve. Sad to say, there is already in Ontario overwhelming evidence that we have failed to do this in the past.

Down through the years, public-spirited citizens have cried out in warning of the day when the end of our accessible forest stands would be in sight. The seemingly limitless extent of our forests, coupled with a desire to extract the greatest possible profits, succeeded in nullifying and retarding efforts of reform. This situation has been the subject of committees and commissions over a long period of years.

The most recent report of this nature is one by Major General G. Howard Kennedy—the result of a Royal Commission appointed in April, 1946, by the present Ontario Government. After a tour of our forested areas, after hearing reams of evidence, Commissioner Kennedy tabled his report last October. It is a very courageous report, describing in vigorous language the shortcomings of the past and the dangers of the future. Commissioner Kennedy and his co-workers deserve great praise for the thorough straightforward report they laboured long hours to produce.

I prepared and presented a Brief to this Royal Commission at the request of the C.C.F., Ontario Section. I was honoured by having my Brief accepted as party policy. I shall refer to it from now on as the C.C.F. Brief.

I only wish time would permit me to compare the C.C.F. Brief, point by point, with the Royal Commission Report. They are in agreement to a remarkable degree—not only in describing the shortcomings—but in devising a plan for the future. It is only in designing the machinery to administer the plan that we disagree.

Both Royal Commission Report and C.C.F. Brief condemn the incredible waste of unsound practices—of useful tops of trees and other sound timber left in the woods to rot. Both point out that under today's system sawlogs are used as pulp wood and pulp wood as sawlogs, with squabbles over other types. Both point to our failure to appreciate and utilize our so-called inferior species of tree with the resultant over-cutting of spruce. Both urge the immediate salvaging of budworm damaged timber. Both emphasize the impossibility of efficiency and co-ordination under the present system, where groups of operators, interested in some single-purpose operation, are intent on carrying out their individual programme with the greatest possible profit. Both agree that our present system results in duplication of effort and services; duplication of drives and sorting. In short, in general inefficiency.

Both call for immediate review of export policy with a view to conserving our forests, and in an effort to encourage establishment of processing plants on Canadian soil.

The present Government announced a plan last October which would reduce the export of spruce, balsam and jack-pine pulpwood cut on Ontario Crown lands to 200,000 cords, within 5 years, and end such export within 10 years. My reaction to this announcement is best summed up by reading my statement to the press at that time:

"The shipment of hundreds of thousands of cords of raw pulpwood to the United States each year, from Ontario Crown lands, naturally caused Canadians to ask the question, 'Why not stop this export and finish the product on Canadian soil, thus expanding our industry and giving employment to thousands of our workmen?' The announcement by Premier Drew of the reduction of export is a resounding answer to this demand.

"Definitely it can be said that the finishing of these products right here in our province is the desire of all progressive citizens, and every move toward the accomplishment of this result will be welcome indeed.

"Having finished the product on Canadian soil we must look to United States for our market. I feel certain that while the Premier did not say so, there must have been consultation with the Dominion authorities and with our American customers on this proposed change of policy, and their reaction obtained in the light of the new conditions. The question naturally arises, would these American interests come to Canada and build mills, will they seek new sources of raw wood, or a combination of these alternatives?

"All of these angles must have received careful attention and consultation between interested parties before the announced policy was formulated. If this is the case and a course has been charted to the satisfaction of both producer and consumer, we have made progress along the road of industrial expansion for Ontario."

I have always felt, and have stated publicly many times, that we should not too long await the whim of the industrial interests to build plants in Ontario. If they do not show an inclination to do so, I would urge the Ontario Government to build the processing and finishing mills. If it pays these private interests to come into Ontario and spend millions on plants and sites, then it would pay the people of Ontario even better, if it is done as a part of an over-all forest policy.

Getting back, now, to the Kennedy Report. The Royal Commission and C.C.F. agree that in order to eliminate waste and inefficiency, there must be pooling of effort and services. We agree that this must be done by cancellation of licenses, agreements, etc.—we further agree that under this arrangement domestic mills must be guaranteed an adequate supply of suitable wood in perpetuity. Here—after this long trail of almost complete agreement between the C.C.F. Brief and the Royal Commission Report, our ways part.

The Royal Commission Report recommends that the province be divided into twelve areas. It further recommends the formation of twelve Forest Operating Companies, one in each area. The Board of Directors of each company would consist of six men (seven if the Government were represented), these men would be appointed from the industries using the wood on the areas concerned; the heaviest user over the previous 5 years having 2 directors and the others 1. The right to purchase wood from the operating companies would depend on holding shares in the company, the quantity allowed would be in keeping with the number of shares held.

The Royal Commission Report also recommends the establishment of an advisory committee to the Minister of Lands and Forests. It is recommended that the scheme be given a 10-year trial. The advantages would come from elimination of duplication through pooling of effort, and through the cutting and utilization of all species and types of timber, channelling it to its proper destination. The Royal Commission Report estimates a possible immediate, annual saving of up to $6,000,000 to the forest operators, if the plan is adopted. The long-term benefits of the plan would, of course, be much greater, and would result in improvement rather than deterioration of forest resources.

Turning now to consider the C.C.F. proposals, we find it calls for the setting up of a Forest Resources Commission, similar to the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission. This Commission would administer and manage our forests. The Brief recommends that the Forest Resources Commission should repossess existing concessions on a steadily expanding scale, guaranteeing to supply domestic mills throughout their life.

The C.C.F. Brief contends that our forests are inseparably associated with such things as—the development of Hydro power—the welfare and improvement of our parks—the tourist trade—fish and game—protection against flood and erosion; improvement of lakes and streams, etc. These things already are largely the responsibility of the provincial government, costing millions of dollars each year. Under the C.C.F. proposals all of these features would become definite parts of an over-all integrated plan which, would by its very nature be far superior to any arrangement which leaves exploitation of our forests in private hands.

We of the C.C.F. feel that the plan we put forward is sound forest policy. Planning to make the forests serve their real owners—the people. For instance, under the C.C.F. plan, the $6,000,000 which the Royal Commission Report cites as a possible immediate saving to the forest operators, would, instead, find its way directly into the pocket of the people.

The Royal Commission vigorously condemned past practices. It refers to the distrust and lack of co-operation shown by the operators. It accuses the operators of being guilty of incredible waste; of overcutting, and so on. It states that there is need to protect the forest operators against their own folly.

In the light of this evidence, we of the C.C.F. feel it is inconsistent and unwise to again grant control to these same interests through the medium of Forest Operating Companies. It simply doesn't make sense.

Mr. Speaker, I have taken considerable time in an effort to lay the case for my constituency before the House.

We will be delighted to have any or all of the members of this House pay us a visit. I am sure they will agree that it is a great country. I am sure they will agree that it is deserving of more, yes, much more in the way of financial aid for development. We may differ in our ideas as to how this could best be done; but I know we will agree that it must be done.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to close my address with some remarks of a more general nature.

I am going to try to leave some food for thought with the members. I feel it is important in this fast moving world of ours that we fully appraise each issue as it comes before us; that we measure it against the yardstick of history and experience. We must guard against the danger of being carried away by prejudice, or side-tracked by partisan loyalty.

Never before was it so important that we distinguish between the various philosophies.

I have nothing but contempt for the tactics of the Communists. I have equal contempt for some of the spokesmen for big business who deliberately mislead the people into thinking that Communism, Socialism and Fascism are one and the same, and seek to frighten and confuse the people by tactics of this kind.

Defining Socialism and Communism, Encyclopedia Britannica sums it up like this:

"The orthodox Socialists who seek to use the existing institutions of state and parliament as agents of gradual socialization are regarded by Communists as the worst enemies of the workers, and denounce with a vigour far exceeding that which is meted out to the defenders of capitalist society."

We in this group entertain no illusions. We realize the full venomous attack and caustic criticism of the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) will be directed against this group, when it suits their purpose.

Turning now to the question of freedom. We hear a great deal about freedom today. It is important that we do not fall into the trap of confusing freedom with privilege. Freedom is, or should be, the basic right of all people. Privilege, on the other hand, is conditional on many things, and is often abused to where it usurps freedom.

So often today we hear captains of industry and finance talking to the people about the priceless freedom they enjoy, as if it were some gift they gave to the people. The truth is that we have these things because the great mass of the people wanted them. Wanted them badly enough to struggle to obtain them.

The people learned by bitter experience that they had to organize together in order to gain freedom. There was bitter opposition. The milestones of progress did not come easily. They did not come as a recognized right.

Only by pressure of public opinion did we abolish the divine right of kings to over-rule parliaments; by similar public pressure men, and at a later date, women, won the right to vote.

Only after bloodshed and strife did the people win the right to organize into trade unions. I am a member of the International Association of Machinists. The early history of that now highly-respected union is a sordid tale of vigorous opposition by the manufacturers, with vivid scenes of oppression, which are well within the memory of old-timers still living today.

These freedoms are recognized today, defended as basic rights and lauded by the same interests who fought so vigorously against them in the past.

It is well for us to remember these things today; well for us to remember the history behind them. It is important that we place the credit for them where it belongs. Important that we remember that the pattern of life is something we create, not something we find, or have given to us.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, history records the efforts of the privileged few to maintain the system of landlord and serf which was so advantageous to those who owned the land. But the relentless logic of events moved on; the battle of the people for real freedom and democracy will not be denied. It runs like a red thread through the pattern of the past.

No nation has played a more important or more praiseworthy part in the battle for freedom and in the shaping of democracy than have the British people. Many of the freedoms we enjoy today sprang from their efforts and their desire for fair play.

They have not changed. They are still in the forefront of the march of progress, struggling with the terrible obstacles left by the war, fearlessly battling the forces of both left and right. The British people representative of all that democracy stands for, are, at this very moment blazing the trail of democracy and progress.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, before I refer to any of the items from the Speech from the Throne, I would like to throw out a little suggestion. I was very pleased to read of the wonderful reception given by the citizens of Toronto to Barbara Ann Scott, and also by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and the Government of this province. I was not here to enjoy that, but being a sportsman myself and having seen in sports many winners, and giving some recognition to those having brought honour to our community, I would suggest at this time that, owing to the fact that Barbara Ann Scott has expressed a desire to seek further education, that the Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) of this province, being Minister of Education, the hon. members of this Legislature ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) if he will not consider presenting Barbara Ann Scott with a free scholarship. I think it would be a fine gesture on the part of this Government. That is my suggestion.

Now, I heard and read the Speech from the Throne, and while it looked very colourful I doubt the sincerity of the Government on many items that were referred to. We have also heard the various members speak on the Speech from the Throne. Some were commendable remarks and others were very critical. One of the hon. members suggested that our bills are being rammed through, and another one of them suggested that some bulldozers be sent up north—I think it was the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). Well, according to the way the bills were run through the press, I suggest we should send a few Cabinet Ministers up to the north country and they will take care of it and save the expense of the machinery.

Now, we also read and heard in the Speech from the Throne, that income and expenditures were never greater in the history of the province. Let me tell you, I agree with that statement, but our income is starting to dwindle. The working men today are being laid off in industry.

I think we have one of the most thriving communities in the Dominion of Canada, but the cold fact remains that there are approximately 260 men drawing unemployment insurance at the present time. We have no unemployment at the moment so far as female workers are concerned, because past history proves that the manufacturers always prefer engaging ladies in industry in preference to the men because they can hire them and engage them at a lower wage.

We all have our various things we sponsor in public life. My main interest has been in the poor people. Those are the people who need the help. There are too many men in public life today, and have been in the past, who spurn the poor worker. You can recall hon. members who spoke last year and years previous along the same line. I said I was interested in these little people—the scrub-women and civil servants and poor men in industry who have been kept down. When I questioned the low wages paid to the civil servants and the scrub-women, I was told by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), that we have gone through the salary list and everybody got an increase. I took that with a grain of salt. After I left the Chamber, I began to question some scrub-women and all of them told me they had not received an increase. I do not think that is right, and they still have not got an increase coming, according to my information. The last time I questioned the Hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), I referred to the Ontario Hospitals where they were paying $972 a year—that was my information and it was not contradicted on the floor or off the floor. The Hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), told me and the hon. members of this House that it was $1,100 and something. I pointed out at that time that that was a ridiculous wage and the Government said: "We gave the returned men the preference, and we are going to see they get good wages." Well, $1,100 and some cents for a married man today is no wage.

In spite of the fact that our expenditures are increasing and our income is decreasing, to make things worse the Drew Government brought in this immigration scheme, and brought in some 7,000 persons. When the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) first came out with this scheme, he said: "We are bringing in 7,000 men for the farmers." Well, I doubt if there are 1,000 of these 7,000 who are on the farms today. I do not think the Englishman even wants to work on a farm. He is not built to work on a farm. I know in our county I do not know of any Englishman working on a farm today. He is not just built for this type of work. I am not discrediting them, but that is not the type of men we need on the farm or who want to work on the farm. The Drew Government knows that, but then, they thought they were placating the farmer. When the first group arrived what happened? We see the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) shaking hands with them. Then the story—"Industry in Hamilton takes so many men." I doubt if many of these men are seeking to get on the farm. They did not want a farm job in the first place. And, secondly, are not cut out for it. I mentioned in the first speech I made this year that when we go into immigration it should stop in the hands of the Federal Government where it belongs. The Prime Minister of this province saw fit to bring in these people. That was his scheme. Probably thought 7,000 men coming from the British Empire would mean 7,000 more votes in the next election. I would not go so far as to say that, but the fact still remains before we get into an elaborate immigration scheme we should make sure every man and youth who need employment should have steady employment. The day will come when we will probably be sorry, and with the present crisis today I am going to tell you we should move slowly in all these matters because we have quite a bit of unemployment in the country today. Strikes are threatening, war is at our very back-door and here we are, spending millions and millions of dollars. I have nothing against spending money at times when conditions warrant it, especially in the northern country. I want to see the north country developed. I go up there fishing two or three times a year, and I enjoy it. I say before we spend these millions of dollars, with the crisis we are confronted with at the moment, let us hold back for the time being. You know how the tourist trade went down in the last war. And we may be confronted with that same thing in a very few months' time.

Now, getting to old-age pensions. They boast in the Speech from the Throne they have done a wonderful thing. Last year the Drew Government and the Conservatives in the Federal Government criticized the King Government for not increasing old-age pensions. They decided not to take any action here, they wanted to see what the King Government would do. What have they done? They tell us they will give a bit of an increase, an increase of a few dollars, pay $25 today and shoot it up to $30, and then they go on to say in some cases of need pay $40. This is very misleading. Old-age pensioners have called me and they cannot understand why they do not get $40 when they read in the press the Government has raised it to $40 a month. We have pointed out just what the actual Act is. I doubt whether there are any people in my constituency getting $40 a month. I have not heard of any. Maybe they have, but to get that $40 they really have to prove a case. In fact I have a case now where the husband is 72 years of age and his wife has endeavored to get the old age pension for her husband who is in ill health, and she has enough initiative to go out and do housework, but due to the fact her husband cannot get an old-age pension, she came to my office recently and gave me her history and I called up the Secretary of the Pension Board in the City of Kitchener and I said I wondered why this man and woman were being penalized.

I did question her story. "Why didn't you have your husband admitted to the House of Refuge?" I said. She said, "I was out there and the manager told me we are entitled to the old-age pension." Those are the gruelling things these old pioneers have to go through in a province like we have here while the Government is saying how kind it is to the poor people, and still it tolerates a thing like that.

I told the secretary: "I am very much interested in the case." She has contacted the department in Toronto. So far I have not seen the reply, but I know that our secretary in our community is one of the most kind-hearted secretaries in old-age pension offices anywhere in the Province of Ontario. She has gone a long way out of her road to help people, but her hands are tied. She cannot make a decision.

Now again I come to the point where I have pleaded, not only here on several occasions, but in my own community as mayor and member of the House of Refuge board. The first year I was here in Parliament, I mentioned it and I was told that there was money put in the budget and they were going to build extensions and new institutions to segregate the feeble-minded from the others in these Houses of Refuge, but there has not been anything done as yet. This is the third year, and again I say if any of you hon. members, or any other citizen, should find himself at the door of poverty, his health gone but his full faculties remaining, and has to go to the town for protection and a livelihood and then is sent to the House of Refuge and made to spend his declining years with insane people, I say that is a terribly cruel thing on the part of any Government. I plead and hope that this condition will be rectified as soon as possible.

They told me when I first made reference to this: "There is money in the estimates, but building supplies are not available." My goodness, they build hotels and stores and everything else but these institutions and houses. There is material for everything else, so there is something lacking and I say that this Government is not sincere in some of these things.

Now, mothers' allowances; they tell us there is an increase in these allowances. Analyze it very carefully, and you will find there is not much increase if any. Again, I have a case under mothers' allowances, which does not belong to me, it belongs to the hon. member for Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin). The lady in question lives in Hambourg, a pathetic case. I would say it is nothing short of a crime to carry on your department and allow cases of this kind.

Here is a woman who meets a man—that is her story—and not knowing that he had ever been married and since he had some means—whether they went through a marriage ceremony or not I cannot prove, but she says so—and they set up housekeeping and they had four children born to themselves. The man died and then it was discovered that he was married and the first wife stepped in and took the entire estate, and this poor woman was left with four little children, she could not go on relief and could not get mothers' allowance. They would not grant it to her. She writes to me and asks for an appointment. I said: "I will be only too glad to see you", because they tell me I am the ladies' man. However, I told her to go down and see the member for Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin), that it was outside my riding. She said, "I have been down there and cannot get any action." I said: "Come down, lady, I will be glad to talk the thing over."

This happened just recently. I am sorry the hon. member for Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin) is not here, he cannot deny it, I have the letter in my office with his signature on it, although I think he did his best. I am not saying anything to disparage the hon. member for Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin).

She came down and told me the story. She said: "Here is the letter I received from Mr. Chaplin." I told her to write again, and if he replied I would like to see the reply. She brought the reply to me and it said something like this:

"Dear Madam:

"I have taken up the case with the department at Toronto, and due to the circumstances, we cannot do anything for you. Kindly—" and so on. I just referred to that case. Why should those poor children have to be penalized? If the mother did wrong—I do not think she did, but I cannot prove it—but suppose she did, what about the poor children? Are you going to let them starve? I say the department should rectify these things. It is not a hardship on the department, they have millions of dollars to spend in other ways, but now a poor widow and her children are kicked around, and I do not like it.

Now, we come to housing. We criticized this Government for not doing anything in regard to housing. It was one of the hon. Prime Minister's (Mr. Drew) and the Government's proposals, a plank in the platform—and I suppose that is the only plank they claim they can produce, they could not build a house because they could not get the planks, I suppose that is their alibi—but when we criticized the Government for not fulfilling their promises and building houses, going into the housing scheme, I found also this—I have said it before on the floor and as Mayor of the City of Kitchener—throughout the whole war period when the public was demanding housing, the Communist party was trying to tear me apart for not advocating a large, elaborate housing scheme. I said: "I, for one, will not tolerate the municipality going into housing because we do not want to find ourselves in the real estate business." And I say that, as far as the Government is concerned. It was a strong plank in the hon. Prime Minister's (Mr. Drew) platform; it was housing for every returned soldier, and they have failed to provide even a nail towards veterans' homes or any others. Those are cold facts.

When we brought this thing up, the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) said right from his seat, that we were not going to go into the housing business, it would interfere with private business, and it would retard building very seriously because private contractors would not go ahead if the Government went ahead. That is in Hansard, look it up for yourself. I never say anything I cannot back up, and I have had seventeen years of experience in public life, and I am not going to say anything that is not true,—

(Minister of Agriculture): What page?

MR. MEINZINGER: —in this chamber or any other chamber. I beg your pardon?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: What page, please?

MR. MEINZINGER: I do not read from pages, but those are the facts.

Now the Government refers to housing in the Speech from the Throne. They have now discovered something. Is there an election pending, or what? After the election, I suppose materials will be as scarce as ever if the Government should happen to be elected. That is only a clear case of deception. We need houses, the Government should build them according to their election promises.

There is material available. I have received letters myself just last week from lumber companies. There is a surplus of lumber today, there is a surplus of bricks, and a lot of other building material. I, myself, could prove it to you. I have told you before that in the worst time in the history of Canada, I took it upon myself and built five small working-men homes without a dime. I was determined I would not go on relief as thousands of my friends did, and I was a working man in industry and I never received a dollar's worth of relief. I built five homes and I got through. I worked till two and three o'clock in the morning. My record stands in the City of Kitchener. When the Government would not take hold of the housing programme, I did it myself; I and another man started on ten homes and I can say truthfully today, that five are completed and five families are living in them. They say: "No material"? If an humble citizen like myself can start a little programme, aside from my other line of business, surely to goodness the Government could get something done for these people. I say there is another weakness in the building programme today. The Federal Government, along with their contractors, say when a young man comes along and says, "How much is it going to cost me to build a home over here?" We will say, for round figures, $5,000. Another returned man says, "What will you charge to build a house over here?" And they say $5,000. If they can build one in that corner and one there and they both cost $5,000, then when they get a plan for one hundred houses in a certain section, why can't they build homes for $4,000 for the returned man? Why don't they give some of the profits to the returned man?

But no, the contractor is the man who is getting his pockets filled at the expense of the returned man. And let me tell you, if my words don't come true, 65 per cent. to 70 per cent. of the men who have been forced to buy a home to get a roof over his head are going to lose their homes unless the Provincial and the Federal Governments enforce a strict law whereby the mortgage companies cannot take them. We must have a moratorium as we had many years ago. That is the only thing to stop these people from losing their homes. Again I say the Drew Government was very insincere and deceived the public when they promised a housing scheme.

Then, speaking about tourists; I like fishing and hunting and I do quite a bit of it. I say the northern country is a great country but let us not forget the little fellows in our small towns who have not a car to go north. Why not fix a few roads for them and fill the streams for the boys so they can do some hunting and fishing around home?

We have one of the finest fishing clubs in Ontario; we have a membership of some 1,100, if my memory serves me correctly, and we are being asked, "Where are all these fish going?" We understand they are not going into our local streams and, as a member of Parliament, I am not in a position to answer them. While on that point, I would suggest at least every hon. member of Parliament in each riding should be informed where the fish are going and into what streams, and I can assure you every hon. member of this House will not be poachers, we will be in the same spot as a game warden.

I would like to know where they are going. When a man says they must be going into a private stream, I do not know, I am dumb-founded, I cannot answer him. I think every hon. member should be informed of these things so he can inform these people.

The hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is smiling. I like to see him smile because he and I have always been good friends. I know his background and he knows mine. He would do a good deal more for the labouring classes if his hands were not tied. He never said that to me, but I know it. We hear in the Government what the "big boy" claims to do in the Speech from the Throne; they are prepared to adopt the Federal labour code. The first time I spoke here the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) had spoken along these lines and he said, "We are going to appoint a committee and are going to take the matter up with the Federal Government and we are going to have the best labour legislation, not only in the Dominion of Canada and the United States, but in the world." When that was mentioned the other day, the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) said we have the best in the world. I do not know that we have. We have some pretty nice legislation, but there is plenty of room for improvement. It was not the Drew Government which brought in the best legislation. It made a contribution by putting the bill through, but it is organized labour that brought it about. If there had not been organized labour we would not have half the concessions we have today for the working classes.

I do not have to stand here or on the street corner and fight for labour. I have fought through the hardest school any man could fight through. I was never a beggar. The only time I was, was when I was an infant and had no control over myself. I never asked the Government for a dollar. I am still fighting for the under dog, but the men in big business—in my own business of real estate and general insurance, excuse me for advertising—do not need it, but the little fellow needs it. It was due to the crushing weights brought on these people that they organized and it was through organization that pressure was brought on the Government and legislation brought about.

Now, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) never carried that promise out when he said we should have a committee appointed and take up the matter with the Federal Government and bring about this legislation. We have not had any. I was appointed on the committee from our side of the House but we never had a meeting. Surely to goodness the Lord did not put all the brains into the Conservatives' heads. If he did, I know why there are so few hairs on that side.

We think we can make a little contribution. When you bring a bill in on the other side of the house and we want to bring in an amendment, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) stands up and says, "We have gone all through this, and this is what we are putting through," and it is thumbs down, and so we have to take it. But probably some day the tables will turn and some of the boys will be over there smiling at you fellows and turning down you fellows. That is not good business. I do not care whether he is a Communist, C.C.F., Liberal, or Conservative, or Independent, or whatever he might be, I think they should discuss matters intelligently.

I am not a man who stands up and tells a man he is a criminal and a disgrace to the country he was born in. I do not like that. We are elected by the people and every man I think should be respected as well as the other. We are only trying to do a job for the people who sent us down here to do it.

Now, getting to reform institutions; the Speech from the Throne says there will be improved conditions through systematic training of officers and guards, and the very next day we find he gets a report; no one could find it on Monday. The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) said he did not receive it and later on we find out he had it for a month. Then he said he was sick.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Mr. Speaker, I am going to ask that the hon. member (Mr. Meinzinger) withdraw that statement that I had that report for a month.

MR. MEINZINGER: I will not withdraw it.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: On a point of order—

MR. MEINZINGER: I am not withdrawing anything. I read the papers and I heard the information given here.

MR. SPEAKER: I think the hon. member (Mr. Meinzinger) should withdraw the statement; he is making an insinuation.

MR. MEINZINGER: I am not insinuating, I am repeating what I heard here and read in the papers. If there is any apology, let the press apologize, I do not apologize.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): I think we must insist that it be withdrawn.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The report was tabled on the date of it, March 8th, by the man who wrote the report, not my date.

MR. MEINZINGER: I am not withdrawing anything, I am just giving what I read and what I heard here in the House.

MR. SPEAKER: Might I tell the hon. member (Mr. Meinzinger) when the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) rose and asked you to withdraw it you should withdraw it. You must accept his statement that he did not have it for a month.

MR. MEINZINGER: If he says he did not say that, then I will withdraw it. Does that make you feel happy? Won't you smile? I will carry on. Then he gets the report. After reading the Speech from the Throne, says that these men will be trained. When I brought up the question last year about a prisoner in Guelph who received a beating along with twelve others, the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) says, "You want this young man's name dragged through the corridor." Instead of contributing to the welfare of the youth he drags his name through this Chamber so everybody in the Province of Ontario knows this criminal who escaped from jail. So he tells us they have to have discipline and tells us they are training the guards. I said if the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) will appoint someone to go around these institutions unknown to the guards he will get a picture that will open his eyes. That is in Hansard. I said instead of telephoning or sending a telegram that "George will be there on Thursday morning," pay a surprise visit.

The other day I did not go on the trip. I would have liked to have gone, but other business pressed too hard and I could not go. I heard some fine comments but the fact still remains while I think the Government is doing a wonderful job at segregating these boys, it should have been done thirty years ago.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I was not here thirty years ago.

MR. MEINZINGER: No, but the governments in the past should have started the movement you have started. I like to be fair when it warrants it. I do not care where the chips fall, I endeavour to speak my mind in public life, I always have and always will, in spite of any objection from anyone else.

So we get this report. I urged at that time to make these investigations through an unknown man but no, "we have a good staff." Then we find this report the next day, drunken guards, fire-arms used carelessly, too much discipline; it gives you an idea what the public has gone through. But once a year when the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) goes up there he sends a telegram saying, "I will be there on Monday morning," when everything is polished and ice cream on the table, I would suggest he carry out the investigation as I suggested last year and he will get a lot more information in other institutions in the Province of Ontario. It is quite true some of those criticizing public institutions are on the right track. However, I say you are doing a good job in this segregation programme.

We hear a lot about commission reports, we have three and there are quite a few more investigating. The Drew Government has appointed so many commissions I think it would be quite in order to appoint to appoint another commission to investigate all commissions to find out how much is being paid to others. Then it would be doing a job.

Then we read also in the Speech from the Throne that the Provincial Government and the Federal Government are as far apart as they were a year ago. I think that is bad business. The Federal Government has at times offered concessions to the Drew Government but the Drew Government says, "It is all or nothing," and we suffer to the extent of some $30,000,000 and all this time it is good legislation that is so necessary to bring about peace and harmony and better comforts to the masses of the suffering, and I say that the sooner the hon. Prime Minister of the Province of Ontario (Mr. Drew) gets "off his high horse" in endeavouring to dictate to the Federal Government, and is willing to take a half loaf rather than none at all, the better it will be for the taxpayers and citizens of Ontario.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) also says that before the Federal Government appointed a department to deal with the development of resources, they should consult the Province of Ontario and other provinces, because he claims it is over-lapping. Well, my goodness, what is more over-lapping than some of the things which have been done by the Drew Government?

Ontario House is over-lapping. They justify that now, I suppose, by saying that all the recruits they are bringing over under this immigration scheme walked through Ontario House. I believe that is just what they did, walked in the front door, and out the back, and grab the plane. So they justify the huge expenditure by saying that they have to register before they take the ship.

There are scores of things this Government has done which cause over-lapping. The immigration scheme is over-lapping, and all of a sudden, the hon. Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Drew) says "I will do this," or "I will do that," in spite of what anybody wishes.

AN HON. MEMBER: And he showed them how to do it, Joe (Mr. Meinzinger).

MR. MEINZINGER: Do you think he did?

AN HON. MEMBER: They paid their own way.

MR. MEINZINGER: With whose money? Who got the commission? What is the Drew Government getting out of it? Are the manufacturers contributing towards it? O.K. There is a long story there, Mr. Speaker. The hon. members can laugh if they wish; I might add a great deal to this particular question, if I could have a few more questions asked of me.

The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) is one of the hon. Ministers I want to congratulate at this moment for having brought about this Ontario Provincial Police radio system. That is a thing I advocated many years ago when I was mayor of Kitchener, and I was very successful in having it brought in our department. At that time some of the critics said, "Oh, maybe some time the Ontario Government will put through a scheme to cover the entire province," and I said, "That is fine; in the meantime let us install ours, and we will prove the results." The result in our municipality was that crime went down about 40 per cent., and I believe when the provincial scheme is operating fully there will be a great deal of benefit derived from it.

I also want to congratulate the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) for having taken upon himself, to agree, as I read in the press this morning, and in speaking with the deputy chief in our community yesterday, that the Government is going to open up a training school in the City of Kitchener, and our deputy chief will be in charge of it. That is a good thing.

There have been too many governments who hired men from the shoulders down. I like to hire them from the shoulders up, like the hon. George Dunbar.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MEINZINGER: Now, Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of the Legislature, in conclusion I want to say that there have been some very bitter remarks passed across the floor in regard to the Communists. I heard a broadcast, and also read in the press, and was very much surprised that there was a red flag raised in the front of the Parliament Buildings. I think that is a sad state of affairs. But let me say this, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) can stand here as long as he likes, and get on his feet as often as he likes,—and I can do the same, as can all you hon. members—and damn these two Communist members, but that will not cure the cause. I say, instead of passing such bitter remarks as the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) did the other day—and I did not like that; I do not care what other hon. members think about it, I did not like it—I do not think it is going to cure it.

I happened to sit at a table in the members' dining room the other day, with my leader (Mr. Oliver), two other hon. members from my side of the House, and the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod), and I said to him, "It is too bad, with the brains and ability you have, that you are not in one of the old parties, instead of with the Communist Party. There is a lot of good talent going to waste."

Mr. Speaker, I say in all sincerity that this man is no disgrace to his country. I think his country is proud of him. They should be. The only thing I can say by way of condemnation is that he is following the wrong track, and I do think that the hon. members of this Legislature should be big enough to admit it, and I can say to the Government that he "mopped the floor" with the whole Government the other night; he is too smart for you, and if you were smart, you would not criticize him when he is on his feet. You can do all the condemning and criticizing you want to, and you will not cure it. I say this, that unless you get together with the Federal Government, and frame the necessary legislation, which is the crying evil today we will be crushed again like we were back in the 30s, when I was in the unemployed ranks myself, and then if you do that, and pass the necessary legislation, you will not have to fear Communism.

This is a great, rich country, strong in resources, and we will not tolerate Communism. I can mention to you thousands of men who have been friends of mine since I left the cradle who, in the 30s, when their children and their wives were starving, and who when they got sick could not get a doctor to come into their homes because they could not afford to pay him—I say, with all sincerity, that one of my closest relatives is buried in the City of Toronto, because he could not get a doctor, and they were on relief at the time. You know that in the early days of relief, you could not get doctors. The doctors were all "too busy." Finally the Government came out and said "We will pay 25 cents a head," or something like that, and there was a little increase, and we gradually got some attention. But in the interim people died, because they could not get medical help.

I do not fear Communism; I never did. I will say this in all sincerity to the two hon. members, who already know it, that I do not have to cater to them, and never did, and never will, because I hate their policies and they know my record. But I am not condemning them, as they are hon. members elected by the public the same as we are, and they are smart men. They are courteous. I have always found them both to be gentlemen when I have been in this House, and again I say, pass the proper legislation that will do the job, and we will not have to fear Communism. But when you get the people hungry, that is simply playing into the hands of the Communists. I know thousands of men, who, back in the 30s, when they were hungry, followed the Communist agitators, and they came into the City of Kitchener. But today, these men have work, they have money and can pay their bills, and they would not think of Communism. There is the answer. I stand up here and say that if Russia ever takes this country, George Drew (Hon. Mr. Drew) will be the first man who will go into the United States, and I will be the second, going into Kitchener.

I have sat in the council chamber as mayor and alderman, I have stood in the union halls, and in the market building, and I have fought Communism consistently. I could not get the backing of my council; they were scared because there were perhaps a thousand men outside. They were not all Communists, but they were hungry, and the Communists were leading them. I stood there fearlessly, and I recall one meeting when Rev. Smith, Fred Collins, Minster, and some of the others were speaking, and I spoke, and it was one of the most bitter struggles I ever had with the Communist Party, and it looked as if it were going to end up in a serious riot, but I stood my ground, and my concluding remarks were that I would sooner settle by the ballot than by the sword. I have no fear of Communism. Those men who followed the Communists in the 30s are back in good jobs again, and back in the good graces of their fellow men; they can pay their bills, and can look you squarely in the eye, and they can support their families; they have homes, and they have a few dollars left in their pockets, but as long as the Government does not pass legislation to bring these conditions about permanently, then you can fear Communism.

In the meantime, I plead with you not to condemn and condemn and condemn, waste hours of our time condemning the Communist Party, and yet do not put through the legislation that will overcome it.

SOME HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

MR. HOWARD SALE (York South): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak on this debate on the Speech from the Throne, I take great pleasure and pride in joining with those who have spoken before me in congratulating most sincerely the mover of the motion (Mr. Pryde), who made his maiden speech in moving the adoption, and spoke extraordinarily well, and was well received, and very much appreciated in all quarters of the House.

There have been flattering remarks passed about him, about the friendships he will form in the time following. I think he is forming those friendships even faster than perhaps was thought. I, for one, am very, very proud to count amongst my associates and close friends, the new hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde).

I am very pleased, Mr. Speaker, also to extend my congratulations to the seconder (Mr. Hamilton) in putting on the record of this Legislature some very useful and very important facts, very well presented.

Now, Mr. Speaker, to carry on from there; in the discussion, I have been very interested in hearing what has come forth from the opposition benches. Mr. Speaker, quite frankly I sympathize with them; they do have an extraordinarily hard time finding anything to criticize. Therefore, the majority of the addresses rather than being criticism, almost have a tenor of a bit of a pat on the back for the government, and what it has done. There is a difficult problem, because it is extremely hard to find sound, substantial criticism of the policies which have been enacted. Of course, from some quarters, we get deliberate and malicious, useless criticism. Good, constructive criticism, with practical suggestions as alternatives, are all too scarce.

It is rather unfortunate there is not a stronger opposition. I was rather interested in trying to follow the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger), and I am sorry he has left the House. He is one of the few hon. members who has a riding somewhat akin to mine. I do not have the rural problems which a majority of the hon. members of this House do; my problems are entirely urban, concerning practically all of my constituency, and, therefore, they are isolated into a very small sector in regard to the legislation brought forward by the Government.

As I believe I have said in this House before, my riding is small in area, but one of the largest ridings in population. There are in excess of 100,000 people in my riding, people whom I am very proud to represent. They are predominantly old, British stock, and I was thinking, when the last speaker (Mr. Meinzinger) was speaking, that I am extraordinarily and extremely proud to say that my riding had the highest percentage per capita of enlistments in the whole of Canada, in both world wars I and II.

That is a fine riding to represent, and it gives a good indication of the type of people I do represent in this House. They do not come any better. My riding is a very cosmopolitan riding and while the majority are urban dwellers, they are representative of all walks of life, from the very well-to-do, to the most unfortunate. They have had difficult times, and they have come through them smiling. Their problems are my paramount problems.

And in that connection I would like to just deal briefly with a few points raised by the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger). He started off in his usual sensational and alarmist attitude, and made some what I consider very irresponsible remarks.

He spoke of old-age pensions. That is a very definite problem in my riding, and before elaborating upon this, I think perhaps it would be wise if there were a few remarks from the Government side of the House as to the attitude and what vestige of criticism there is from the opposition benches, because there is not enough constructive criticism. It is difficult for any government which does not receive good criticism to know where they might be wrong.

I agree most completely with the Government legislation in all its aspects, but there are certain things where I think perhaps we are not doing as much as we might. Just how to increase the efforts presents a very difficult problem. In respect to old-age pensions; of course, that is a joint problem, federally and provincially. The hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger) raised that point, and then he cites a problem which is not basically that of the province, but he is in some measure criticizing his local board. I think in a very large measure the responsibility lands back on his own shoulders, if his own local board is not functioning as it should.

We have local boards in our ridings and we know their functions and their activities. I am very fortunate in having what I consider an extraordinarily fine local board. York County has done some exceptional work and will continue to do so.

I say, and I think every hon. member here will agree, that certainly in view of the present-day conditions, the present old-age pension is entirely inadequate. I am firmly committed to that. But to what extent and how exactly that will be improved to a level at which we would like to see it, is a very difficult problem, and I do not think we can hope to raise the level to where we would like it to be, until there is some satisfactory conclusion to the Dominion-Provincial Conference.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger) made a very peculiar remark with regard to that. He was very much inclined to state at various points that this, that, and the other thing is on Hansard, so he mentions something with regard to the Dominion-Provincial Conference, and says that the Drew Government did nothing, that they say they have nothing to do with it. He says there have been many invitations given to the Drew Government to take part in a further Dominion-Provincial Conference.

Mr. Speaker, there has been put on the record, time and time and time again just what has been done by this Government in regard to the conference, and correspondence has been tabled which has been exchanged with the government at Ottawa, demanding the conference reconvene, with no interest whatsoever displayed in the replies, and the Dominion Government has given no undertaking to reconvene the conference.

In his irresponsible way, the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger) says the Drew Government will have nothing to do with it, because "It is all or nothing," and that they have repeatedly ignored the requests on the part of the government at Ottawa. In view of statements of that kind here, I do not think we should take a great deal of stock in any statement which the hon. member (Mr. Meinzinger) makes.

He has gone down the line, considering various points. He speaks of "housing." I am rather sorry that the legislation that is coming before this House later on in this session is not before the House today.

Another illustration of his complete irresponsibility and lack of constructive criticism is that he gets up and says "I have said, and I have said before, and it is on Hansard, that I do not believe that this or any other government should enter into the housing business or any other business." Then he says, with regard to housing, that the Government should build houses, that they have not done anything; they have not purchased a nail or anything else. That is completely contradicting himself. That is not constructive criticism.

I believe that housing is the most urgent problem we have today. It certainly affects my riding, and I do not think there is an hon. member in this House whose riding is not affected. It is serious. Something must be done. And again I think probably the answer to that lies in the failure of the Dominion Government to reconvene the Dominion-Provincial Conference. There have been circumstances which affected it, true; shortage of supplies, of labour, and material, and what have you. However, slowly but surely the supply is beginning to catch up in some respects to the demands, certainly not in the housing field, but in other fields, and it is improving in regard to housing. This Government never did state it was going into the housing business, as such, but that it was going to institute a programme to facilitate housing, and it would be an intensive housing programme. Frankly, personally I would have liked to have seen it come sooner, but circumstances were certainly not entirely favourable in that respect, and I think it is vitally necessary that everything that can be done in the way of acceleration must be implemented to get housing going. However, I do not think the Government should enter the housing business or any other business other than those which are, of course, in the category of utilities.

In regard to housing; there have been peculiar remarks bouncing back and forth from all sides and all angles on this question. It is serious. It is bound to be serious. It is affecting a great many things, but, on the other hand, when you start talking about "depression," and not being able to feed the poor people, and everything else, the very fact that housing is such a major issue, and is such a long way from having caught up to the demand, that I think that is a very good example of the prosperous times which are in store for us for some considerable time to come, because when the building trades are active and fully employed, it benefits the people in all other industries, it means full employment, and full pay envelopes, to a very large proportion of our population, as large as we are apt to have at any time, with the possible exception of the fantastic situation which occurs during war emergencies.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not want to prolong the debate. There are, however, one or two other points upon which I would like to touch.

One point was raised which cannot be considered in the way of constructive criticism. That was in connection with the division of lands and forests or travel and publicity, I am not just sure which. It started out to be travel and publicity, and I think it wound up as game and fisheries.

The question was raised "Where are the fish?" Mr. Speaker, statistics about fish are published annually, are easily procurable, and very easily read. I know where the fish are located in my own riding, not because I happen to be on the Government side of the House, but because I am keenly interested in that subject, and there are many local waters here which have been proven extraordinarily fine waters. Although I do not know it as a fact, I do believe that there are not as good natural waters in any area in the province as we have right here, and, therefore, it is only natural that there be a better supply in our local streams.

Where I live, in the village of Woodbridge, the Humber River flows directly through. For many years this was one of the outstanding salmon streams in Eastern Canada; today I believe it is almost established as one of the finest brown-trout streams anywhere. There are brown trout and speckled trout in the upper reaches, and in the lower reaches, are the odd bass, pickerel, and so on. There are also many other rivers around this area, which one can easily get at. One does not have to be so well established in life that he can necessarily have a car to get to these fishing spots. There is entirely local transportation by tram, bus, and train, all within a very short range of Toronto. But still the question is asked, "Where are the fish?" Is that constructive criticism of any government? I don't think so, Mr. Speaker. Statistics are published showing where they are. I think any hon. member of this House could find out what he wants or needs in his area, and if he wants more fish planted, if the water is right, it could very easily be arranged, I am sure.

There was another peculiar remark made with regard to the Department of Reform Institutions, with particular reference to the Burwash institution. It was to the effect, on the one hand, that the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) and his department are doing an extraordinarily fine job; on the other hand, that they are not. I do not believe in respect to that there was one instance that might be considered constructive criticism, in that there was a suggestion of an alternative. I do not know that any other alternatives were offered.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to try and conclude within the prescribed hour. I do not want to prolong this, but with your permission I will go through past the hour of 6 o'clock, and will be as brief as I can so the hon. member following me may adjourn the debate, and carry on after the recess.

Labour is another question which is very close to me in my riding. Some sections of my riding are very highly industrialized, and many of my constituents are working in those industries, and in industries in surrounding areas, and a very large proportion of them are amongst the ranks of labour.

I am a great believer in organized labour and all that it represents, and all that it has done. Certainly organized labour has assisted this and every other government many, many times.

I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but I made a notation regarding a remark which was passed, which I would like to find. I do not want to make a mis-statement, and I am not just sure of it. However, we heard a number of remarks about "over-lapping" in every department. One of them was in regard to labour and the Federal labour code. We hear that "at long, long last this Government is going to adopt the Federal labour code," and again it is carried back to the Dominion-Provincial Conference, and the failure of this Government to comply with any requests or invitation made by the Federal Government.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I do not think I need say very much more except to refer to the reports and correspondence which have been tabled in the house. I believe sincerely that this Government has the finest labour legislation in the Dominion of Canada, and I think it would be hard for anybody who disagrees with that, to stand up and explain why or how we did not have the finest labour legislation in the Dominion. I believe we have, and this Government has taken the lead, rightly, in these matters, and has urged the adoption of the Federal labour code, and requests that it be formulated through a continuation of the Dominion-Provincial Conference which was again denied by the Federal Government.

Now, just a few concluding remarks, Mr. Speaker.

Another question was raised with which I cannot acquiesce, and that was in regard to over-lapping, as applied to Ontario House. Mr. Speaker, I wish the hon. member who made that remark (Mr. Meininger) had seen the functioning of Ontario House while our troops were stationed in England. I wish he could see the functioning of Ontario House as it is today. He might change his mind completely and quite readily. That institution, Ontario House, is one of the finest bits of advertising of which I know, and is doing a wonderful job in many respects, and is very, very instrumental in the movements under the immigration scheme. There was also talk about "over-lapping" in regard to the immigration scheme. Well, who took the lead in the immigration scheme? The present Government of the Province of Ontario.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SALE: They instituted the scheme, and they were told it would not work, but they showed the Federal Government it would work, and now the Federal Government says they are going to do the same thing. We have brought in the finest immigrants this province could possibly have, most of them of British stock.

We also have heard the remark that the British are not farmers, never did any farming and never will.

If the hon. member (Mr. Meinzinger) could see the British farmers working under the worst possible conditions during the war, the women of the country out working on the farms, beautiful farms that many people in this country and this province would be proud to stack their farm beside and say: "ours comes pretty close to that"—no farmers?

MR. MEINZINGER: How did these 7,000 get along?

MR. SALE: That I do not know, but I do object to the remark that the British do not make good farmers, because they make some of the finest farmers the world can produce.

MR. MEINZINGER: I do not agree with that.

MR. SALE: And they have some of the finest farms. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to labour this point, but to me, these things are very near and dear to the heart, and those of us who are fortunate in having the opportunity of seeing the British people working under the trials and tribulations of war, such as they were subjected to, and doing the magnificent job they did, have every right to be just that much more proud—and I know the average Canadian is—to say: "we are part of the British Empire. We want you immigrants here to build up our stock, because they are the finest we can get and there are none better."

I am proud to be a member of this Government which has seen fit to institute that and to do that. Obstacles were put in their way and they were told that it would not work, but they made it work and now we are getting some of the finest immigrants possible. They are going into all walks of life and I have yet to find one, other than a few misfits that are bound to occur in a thing like that, but generally speaking—and I have encountered many—they are doing an extraordinarily fine job. Many of them are examples to those who work around them, and they are improving the work of those around them. The more of them we get the better.

MR. SPEAKER: I do not want to interrupt the hon. member for York South (Mr. Sale), but does he intend to bring his speech to a conclusion or would he prefer to carry on after eight o'clock?

AN HON. MEMBER: Carry on.

MR. SALE: No, I will conclude, Mr. Speaker. I would like to carry on, Mr. Speaker, but I think I will stop there, and at a later date, carry on with that subject.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Are you going to continue, or are you through?

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. member (Mr. Sale) can carry on after eight o'clock if he wishes to do so.

MR. SALE: No, that is all right, I am through. The following speaker may move adjournment.

MR. M. T. ARMSTRONG (Parry Sound): I move the adjournment of the debate, Mr. Speaker.

Motion approved.

It being six of the clock, the House recessed.

MR. M. T. ARMSTRONG (Parry Sound): Mr. Speaker, this is the first opportunity I have had to congratulate you since you have been elected Speaker of this House. I wish to extend my sincere congratulations, and at the same time it is so seldom I get a chance to congratulate the Government, that I do want to congratulate them on their choice of Speaker, because I think most of the hon. members will agree that the former Speaker of this House, I believe a member for Parkdale (Mr. Stewart), was a most efficient and capable Speaker and I am sure that most of us received his resignation—forced apparently, or otherwise—with dismay. However, a new Speaker had to be elected and I just wish to say that I do not think a better choice could have been made than yourself. I wish to say to the new members—I have sat for many years in this House—and I can assure them of one thing, that the business of this House is run in a business-like manner and any member of this House, no matter what his politics are, will receive a fair deal.

I have always been very glad to be a member. I want to say that right at the commencement of this talk, I am proud to be a member of the party as I am now, because when I see what the present Conservative Government have done, what little they have done, after all the promises they have made, then I won't sit over there. When I hear the promises which have been made in order to obtain power, then, once again, I would not want to sit over there.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when this Government came into power they found the business of this province in a first-class shape. I think any fair-minded person in the province or in this House will say this, that in nine years of Liberal rule in this province, that the finances of this province were far better when we left than when we took over. We paid our debts and carried on and left this province in a good financial condition, something that the previous Conservative Government did not do. Now then, if you think for a moment the task we took over in the government of the province that is almost bankrupt. You took over the government of a province whose finances were in good shape, and I think the average person throughout this province will say this, that even with all our bad times, that we have done more for the ordinary farmer, the white-collar worker, the ordinary workers throughout this province than this Government has done with all their easy money.

Now, then, there is always some criticism from the Opposition in regard to the two great departments—that is, Hydro-Electric and Lands and Forests, and, frankly, we hear so many conflicting reports about these two great departments from different governments and speakers, that I think I am pretty safe in saying that most of our heads are in a drivel. But I do think, that not only in those departments of this Government, but in most of the departments, this present Government does not know whether they are coming or going. In one of your 22 points, you said you would bring in a great Labour law, and here you are, still carrying on, under our good labour laws we brought in, with a few little adjustments, that is all. I want the members of this House to remember, that when we were bringing in the labour law we formed a committee. We wanted to get the best law we could get. We formed this committee, got different employers and employees here and talked it over with them. We invited the Conservative Party, in opposition then, to come and join us. Not one would come and join us. When we put the labour law through, what happened? You voted against it, but when you get in you still carry on under the same good law, and I just say that it is the same thing over again, that you are carrying on the good work that was started by our own previous Liberal Government.

When I say the Government does not know whether they are coming or going, just let me point to the tourist industry. I think I am safe in saying the tourist industry, the Government here is spending millions of dollars on roads for tourists. You are spending thousands of dollars on all kinds of literature, sending it all over the world. You are spending thousands of dollars on fish hatcheries, and that is right, because you know this, that to have tourists you must have good roads and you must have fish. You can build all the roads you like and spend all the money you like on advertising, but if you have not got fish you won't have the tourists. All right, you are going ahead and doing this on the one hand, you are spending all this money, and, at the same time, you are granting commercial fishing licences—I am perfectly safe in saying to some of your friends—and at the same time, you are turning down returned soldiers, refusing to renew their licences where the lake trout were never as scarce as they are now. You turned down a returned soldier, whose two boys went overseas, and all they wanted to get was some yardage, but they could not get it. There right in front of my own town you spend all of this money and this American tourist will go and troll all day where he won't get one trout where he used to go and get trout. I say the Government does not know whether it is coming or going, spending money on one hand and killing it on the other hand. We come now to this same thing I spoke about last year, old age pensions.

I cannot understand, and I cannot think of a word strong enough to condemn this Government in the way they are treating these people. Let me remind the hon. members of this House, that, in a few years, there may be some of us, right here, want the old-age pension, but we will have that old-age pension and I do not think we would care to take the same treatment for ourselves that we are handing out to these old people.

Before I go any further, I want just to read from the 18th Point, so that there will be no misunderstanding. Now, this is your promise:

"There will be an immediate increase in mothers' allowances, and old-age pensions, in keeping with the increased cost of living. There will be an immediate repeal of the shameful provisions that old people who have a home of their own, which they have established by their savings throughout the long years, must dispose of their home before they will be granted the very limited allowance which they are entitled to receive.

"In future, the old people, who have played their part so well in making this great province what it is today, must not be forced to mortgage their own homes before they can receive this small pension."

I know you have been pretty smart to get out of everything. This is a smart thing, but I do not think there is a thing you can get out of, your promise—you will raise the old-age pension.

The Dominion Government saw the need and they raised it $5.00, while this Government said: "Well, what we will do is this; we will give $40.00 to those old people who are in need." Can anybody in this House tell me what man or woman getting $30.00 a month, and that is all, is not in need? Everyone of them are in need, nine out of ten are in need.

Now then, we will take you, even at your own word.

On January 29, 1948, I had an old man walk into my office, very poorly clothed, when the temperature was ten degrees below zero, with a little old fur coat, with a little old fur cap that he made himself. He is over eighty years of age, lives all by himself in a shack 12 by 20; does all his own cooking, pays his taxes of $18.00 per year; has to buy all his groceries, his clothes, and enough fuel to keep himself warm all winter. He applied for the extra ten dollars months ago. He was told that it would be months before he would get it. He came about the old-age pension and I said to him, "Did you ever apply for the ten dollars?" "Yes." "When?" "Oh, away back, as soon as it came out." "What did they tell you?" "Well, they said it would be a few months before I would get it anyway." "Well," I said, "they are a pretty busy crowd down there, that is handling this. Did they tell you, you would get it?" "No, I did not hear anything." Now then, just before I left, he came up to my office and said he received a letter from the department. I want you to just remember this: this old man is over 80 years of age. He lives all by himself in a shack 12 by 20. He does all his own cooking. He pays his taxes of $18 per year. Now, he has to buy all his groceries, his clothes, enough fuel to keep himself warm and to cook all summer, and he applied for this ten dollars. Remember this, that nine out of ten of our old-age pensioners are not educated people. This fellow never went to school beyond the second book. I doubt if he ever got that far. Here is a copy of the letter that he receives:

"Dear Sir, It would appear, upon reviewing your circumstances as implicated by reports on file, that your eligibility for Provincial bonus is doubtful. Under the terms of regulations governing the Provincial bonus, a supplementary allowance may be paid in the case of a pensioner who is paying more than $10.00 a month for his shelter exclusive of his board or in the case of board and lodging if he is paying more than $25.00 a month."

Listen to this paragraph; this is good:

"If neither of these circumstances exists but there is some extraordinary situation being faced by a particular pensioner not common to a great many pensioners, special consideration may be given with respect to that extraordinary situation."

Is that not a great letter for an old fellow to receive. Now, they say:

"If you feel that your circumstances have not been clearly placed before the commission, a review of your case will be undertaken in the light of such matters as you may wish to draw to the attention of the commission."

I want the hon. members of this House to know that that is a stock letter, all they have to do is date it and put in the name. They probably have thousands of them over there. If any man in the world is entitled to this, this man is and still he cannot get it. What is the answer? I think I can say truthfully that in my 6,000 square miles of territory, there are not five of all the old-timers I know around Parry Sound, who receive the $40.00.

Now, then what is the use of getting the poor old fellows all "het-up." They think they are getting $10.00 a month extra and they do not get it. I cannot understand it, after that promise. I would sooner do without roads, fish and tourists and look after these people. It is the most important job this Government or any government has got to do. I cannot understand why. Could it be there might be an election coming and that at the last minute give that $40.00 to everybody. Well, if that should happen, I do not know, I would expect every old-age pensioner, all their relatives, if they have any, and every fair-minded person in this Province would put this Government out of power on that one issue only. There is no reason in the world why you cannot give a little bit and treat them all the same.

I want to say to the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) we appreciate very much the way he kept our roads open this year, did a first class job, and I want to congratulate him on that. The roads were never any better in the winter time than they have been this year and I want to congratulate him on it.

I notice we are spending many millions of dollars on highways, and that has to be done, but to me we still could cut down a little bit on that at the present time and spend a little more money on our side-roads because I think everybody will agree you cannot get cement and steel without paying through the nose for it. On your back roads you do not need that big expenditure.

Now, to me, with your tourists all up through my own district off No. 11 highway, over on the east side, we have many roads like the one south of Callander running along the south shore of Lake Nipissing, we have one from Burke's Falls to Sundridge and little roads off this, it would not take much to fix these and they have to be fixed some time, I am asking the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) to think it over and if he can spend a little more money on that it will be advantageous to tourists. On the west side we have a highway the Liberal Government built for about forty miles off the shore of Georgian Bay, but up until a year ago the hon. minister (Mr. Doucett) could not finish it. It would have been senseless to do it. I do not mind saying that because we would be taking men away from other jobs to put them on that. But I should say today we have three or four hundred drawing unemployment insurance now in the town of Parry Sound and if there was some chance of doing a little bit—

I am not pushing for big bridges over the rivers—but there is a little bit of road that would give these men—if he does not feel like doing it this Spring that he do it in the Fall—

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): We will be on the way in the Spring.

MR. ARMSTRONG: Thank you. I cannot understand why such a good fellow in his job does make such terrible mistakes. He takes in 6,000 square miles, 20 unorganized townships—remember that means they are Government babies, there is not a thing; there is no council, no reeve, they are government babies in everything, education and roads and everything and if anybody tells me that 6,000 square miles of territory with roads all over, does not need a highway—well, come up and try it. You may save a few “bucks” I do not know whether you do or not. You might, but even if you did these men have to pay it to travel to the highway office when they want to go. I still suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) to put it back. If he does not, I am sure it will not be long before it will go because when the Liberal Government comes in that will go where it belongs.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): You and I will not be living.

MR. ARMSTRONG: I may be like the Scotsman in the parade, everybody out of step but him.

I want to say a few things on immigration. This Government and all its members and very many of the newspapers, most of them, have been making a great fuss over immigration. You would think to hear the press talking that they were saving the life of the province or saving the life of somebody and what a grand job they have done. I will admit when they undertook it they did make a good job. I do not know how they could have made a better one. But my claim is this, they should not have undertaken it for another year or two. That is my argument.

We are taking people from England where they have already jobs, where, according to all reports, England wants people to save her own life and still we bring them over here, and if the Marshall plan does not work, I am going to predict this right here, that probably in one year this Government or the Dominion Government will have to do a public works programme to give our own boys work.

HON. W. GRIESINGER (Minister without Portfolio): They just passed $5,000,000,000 the other day.

MR. ARMSTRONG: I am sorry I did not hear you. As it is now houses are scarce; our own people have to live in attics, basements and whole families have to live in one room. Yet you bring more people into the country. Hydro has to be rationed and the next thing will be fuel oil or coal; still you bring more people in. Food prices are soaring up so that wages for labour have to be raised in order for them to live here. Still you bring more in. Not long ago I looked at a paper and I saw a picture, I think of Bay Street, where a whole line-up was getting free meal tickets donated by some very generous hearted man in Toronto. The reason they were getting the tickets was because they were not getting enough steady work.

Now I hear on the radio Toronto says, “Do not send any more people in here, do not come down here to work because we cannot do more than look after our own.” The next night out in Vancouver 16,000 men out of work. That might be seasonal, or it might not. Nobody can tell just what is going to happen and my argument is this, why all the rush? Could not we very well have waited another year or two?

This is the first time that a province has ever stepped into this field. Personally, I do not believe they have any business in the field. I think it is a Dominion matter because the Dominion can keep their fingers on every province if every province in Canada starts to bring in men and women just the minute they need them without any reference to the other provinces what kind of a mess are we going to get in? Here is the Dominion bringing them in, Ontario bringing them in and if every province brings them in, what is going to be the answer? We will have to have good times sometimes and I hope we do but if we do not then watch out.

Mr. Speaker, just a few more little things I would like to say in regard to Hydro. I think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) got possibly 100 wires in one day last year regarding some little lines up around one or two tourist places. These were places around Sundridge and Burke's Falls, but particularly Sundridge. They have their own private plant and if anything goes wrong with it then they are right out of luck. There was wiring down last year—and it does not take very many miles of lines—

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): How many?

MR. ARMSTRONG: I would say about fourteen.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: About twenty-four.

MR. ARMSTRONG: It should not, taking that from Trout Creek, unless you cannot supply from Trout Creek. I do not know. But anyway, that is all they have to do; they do not even have to turn the juice on if they do not want to, but if anything goes wrong with that little plant as it did last year in the big tourist season, they are out of luck completely. That is all we want. We would like more, of course. This is a serious thing and I think it would not cost very much and they could very well do it.

Before I close, I want to say, there is only one way to judge any particular government and that is by the legislation that they pass which benefits every person in this province. When I think of what the Liberal Government did for this province I am happy and proud, as I said at the start, to be a Liberal. We brought in labour laws that you are now working on. It is a good labour law. We brought it in, even with your opposition. We gave the Mother's Allowance to the widow with one child, we brought in a bill making it compulsory to pasteurize milk, which I think everybody in this House will agree that that has saved many thousands of lives. We took the entire cost of construction of maintenance of provincial highways, we relieve the counties of their highway tax and old-age pension tax.

We did away with your examination fees in schools.

We gave medical services to all classes receiving pensions.

We reduced the licences of all motor cars and trucks.

We raised the percentage of all grants to municipalities that were over 50 per cent.; we raised those to 60, 70, and, in some cases, over 70.

We were the first Government to assist the municipality by providing a subsidy of one mill.

We did all these things to help the average person of this province. Make a list and show me what you have done that can compare with that.

There is one thing that you have done, that is, given a lot more money in grants to education. While I am on that subject, I want to say this: there should be more supervision somewhere in connection with that. I have heard you argue this before but I think if you would read it over, you would find that most of us would conclude that our taxes would be cut 50 per cent., that is, our school tax. That is what the people of Ontario believed anyway. Now, you say that was not the idea, but in my town, our tax was 58 mills, it is still 58 mills, and on top of that, just before I left town this time, they had set it at 58 mills and the school board had a meeting and said to the council: "Look, we have to have 7½ mills more." My tax this year is going to be 65½ mills after what this Government has claimed.

What I say is, it needs—I do not know what it needs, but it needs more supervision. There is no use of this Government or any government putting out money and continuing to raise the taxes, because I am going to tell you the taxpayer cannot pay them, and that is what is going to happen.

I am just bringing this to the attention of hon. members. We are glad to get the grants, of course, and they are a grand thing, but there is something needed—some supervision some place.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Would the teachers be getting any more salary?

MR. ARMSTRONG: Oh, yes.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Well, that does not grow on trees.

MR. ARMSTRONG: No, that is true, but you do not mean to tell me that if my mill rate was 20 mills, and you promised that you would cut it down to 10, you would now be adding on $7\frac{1}{2}$ more? Then, we are going to pay $27\frac{1}{2}$ mills, just to pay your teachers. Is that what you mean?

MR. WILLIAM DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): What have we to do with your council raising the taxes? That is up to it.

MR. ARMSTRONG: I am just saying that we are spending money and there is not enough control on it as far as the taxpayer is concerned. That is my argument because if that is going to happen, the taxpayers cannot carry on.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to recommend to the Government that this Government accept the Dominion Government's proposal so that all the provinces can get together and bring in a definite national health and social security programme whereby all the people of this province will receive a pension at the age of sixty-five years, without the means test, and a sickness, accident and hospitalization plan whereby the individual can contribute some money, supplemented by the Government so that the average man or woman of this province will not have to worry as they do now, concerning their health.

The Dominion Government says one thing and the Provincial Government says the other thing as far as the Dominion-Provincial conference is concerned. I say this, that something has to be done some place so that a national health insurance plan may come into effect. Naturally, because I am a Liberal, I believe the Liberal Government; naturally because you are Conservatives, you believe this Government. Now then, if they cannot agree, no matter what, it is no use their going down and fighting like two Kilkenny cats. If they cannot do it, I have one suggestion to make, that the private member for once in his life has something to say. I am sure if they cannot do it, the private members of the different Legislatures can get together and do it if the "big-wigs" cannot, and it will come to that yet.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish this Government would spend a little more on roads. As far as hydro is concerned, I am not going to touch on it except in this general way, and I am ready to be contradicted if I am wrong. Here is the way the hydro situation strikes me.

Away back about the time of the contracts, I remember that we had I think about 100,000 or 150,000 horse power for which we had no sale at that time. With all this big fight that is going on now, the whole thing is this: Who is to blame?—each one blaming the other.

To me, there is no blame attached to either one. Nobody knew that consumption was going to rise at the rate it did. If I am wrong I will be very glad to take it back, but at that time the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) was Leader of the Opposition—

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): What year are you talking about now, would you let us know that?

MR. ARMSTRONG: Oh, the time of the contracts—1942 or 1943, was it not?

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): 1943.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The contracts were repudiated in 1935 and renewed in 1938. Now, what year are you talking about?

MR. ARMSTRONG: It does not matter. In any year, any time that you want to name, did the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), when he was the Leader of the Opposition, ever rise in the House here and say that there was going to be a shortage of hydro—criticize us and say that there was going to be a shortage of power? If he did, I never heard him.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Well—

MR. ARMSTRONG: What I say—

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Do you want the answer?

MR. ARMSTRONG: Yes.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: When you repudiated it in 1935, you said not a horse power of Quebec power would ever be needed in Ontario. We said that every horse power would be needed, and we asked you to defer the takings rather than repudiate the contracts.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER (Prescott): Who made the contracts?

MR. ARMSTRONG: All right, we took them back.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You were not here when it was signed.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. ARMSTRONG: I say I do not think either government, or anybody, ever thought there would be such a terrible jump in the consumption of power, so why should either the Liberal Government or the Conservative Government be to blame? If they made a mistake in judgment, all right, let them say so, but it does not help to go around making accusations. It makes things seem a little bit silly to people out in the country.

We have enough business to do here without blaming each other.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, as I rise to take part in this debate, I can feel an atmosphere of hate—not hatred of myself; that would not matter too much—but a hatred of the union movement of which I happen to be an officer.

Whenever the problems or the aspirations of Labour are before this House, there is a stench of hatred which rises from a few in the benches opposite. However, that is nothing new, Mr. Speaker, to us in the Labour movement. It is a hatred of those who have for those who have not. It is a hatred of the exploiter for the man whom he exploits. It is a hatred which will continue as long as there are men in this world who seek to impose their will by force upon their fellow men, by physical force or by economic or political tyranny.

We in the trade union movement are used to that. We can read in our history books of the day when Labour was organized, of all sorts of prohibitive laws and when those laws were enforced by the most savage of penalties; when working men were fined and sent to jail, or even exiled from their homes, for the crime of just getting together with their fellow workers for the purpose of improving their social and economic conditions.

When, after years of struggle, the legal right to organize was won, Labour found that its real battle had only begun. We had still the bitter opposition of employers to overcome. There is not a trade union of any importance in this country which has not experienced, and cannot remember, those early days when its organization was bitterly opposed by employers, when every legal means and many illegal means were used in an effort to smash our unions.

In the case of the older unions, especially the craft unions, those days are, for the most part past. They have fought and they have won their battles. There are still struggles time and time again, on questions of wages and working conditions, but these unions have won the right to recognition. They are generally accepted as the bargaining representatives for their members.

But, Mr. Speaker, the history of Labour relations in the mining industry did not happen to be just that way, and that is the section of the union movement that I choose to deal with. The history of the union that I am privileged to represent, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, that dates back to Butte, Montana, over half a century ago, has had many and many a struggle; the good fight for the good cause, for the good people, down through that half a century.

In Butte, Montana, the Cordelais of northern Idaho, Colorado, and all of those places; I am privileged to go down there every once in awhile, and I see the symbols of suffering and misery, not only in books, but in the faces of the old-timers who fought this good fight for a good cause, that democracy might live and expand.

Not so very long ago I was down in the Cordelais in Northern Idaho. I drove through that area with an old-country Irishman and an old-country Swede. While driving through the Rockies, they were describing those historical sites to me—historical but tragic. The Swede showed me one place particularly, because his brother and he had spent some time there in what is known to trade unionists as a “bull pen” which was guarded by the Pinkerton Agency and if any of you ever go down there, you will find that you can not see anything outside the holes in the wall, but a sawed-off shotgun. They told me the tragic story of that section of the mining industry. This Swede pointed to the graveyard which was then not so far away and said: “I survived all of this, but my brother laid down his bones for the cause.”

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. CARLIN: It is nothing to laugh at, it is a history of tragedy. In Butte, Montana, not a great distance from where we held our convention a couple of years ago, there is a little hall where shortly before one Christmas, the miners were out on strike at the time to improve their wages and working conditions and they scratched up the finances that they could get to make happy at least their own kiddies and other kiddies who would participate at such a concert. While the concert was going on, the company, or the same type of company that we have to deal with here in this country—sent in a fire alarm, and the way they did this was by sending all their “goons” in to holler “fire.” In the meantime, the kiddies and the womenfolk on their way downstairs—as they had to go upstairs to get to these quarters—trampled over a number of kiddies and exterminated them—tramped the life out of them. This, we maintain was a deliberate act.

Oh, yes, we have our “Joe Hills,” lots of them; some of them are written up in the history books of the union movement here as it relates to Canada and the United States. We have got many “Joe Hills” in the labour movement who have sacrificed not only to promote their own well-being, but in the interests of democracy.

I became an active participant in this movement in 1915, when I was but a kid. I recall the stories of the old-timers in Cobalt. Lots of them came from the Western United States, and a great number of them from Cornwall, England. I recall the stories that they told about the industry in which they chose to work in both the old country and the Western United States. I recall vividly one Cornish miner who was an organizer for the union in Cobalt in the early days, urging the young people who entered the mines and the mills of that camp, to join the union, and giving them reasons why they should. Of course, the logical reason to give, the only reason you can give a man whom you are urging or are desirous of getting into your union, is a proper, honest reason. So he gave the story of the Labour movement as it related to his own great country, that citadel of democracy, Great Britain. He told of his experiences in the mine and the experiences of his father, when his father used to go down with a tag around his neck with a number and the name of the employer on it. He was the sole property of the employer. He advised how this was changed, and we know that the authentic history of this nation, or any other nation, bears that out, through the struggle of those people to better their own economic position, knowing that in the process of doing so they would better the position and conditions of all in their community.

They undertook to build our union in Cobalt, to some degree before I arrived in that town, but I got there early enough to participate in some of the organizational work and, later, in a general strike. That strike, like all other strikes, was not wanted by the miners, as is true of most strikes by any group of workers.

In 1919, after World War I—and I recall I worked in Cobalt during practically all the years of World War I—I listened, with many hundreds of other miners in Cobalt, to the same people who were prattling to us during World War II about the new world order that we would be ushered into. I listened in World War I, but I did not take it as seriously as I did in World War II, because I was younger, but there were men of my age then who were taking it very seriously, because they knew they lived in sort of an economic state that is just a repetition of war, depression, war, or, in other words “boom, bang, bust, war.”

So they “got wise,” as the union people will say, and they organized their unions.

In 1919, true enough, the promises made by the operators, the industries, and governments were not put into effect. The first thing we knew after the war was over was that we were advised we would have to take a cut in wages of 50 cents a day, and we were not sufficiently well organized to conduct the strike to retain our wages, and we did take the decrease in pay, during which time the mines poured out a steady flow of silver from those camps, of profits and dividends.

The same thing is applicable now, since World War II.

I will go back, prior to the war. We know what we came out of; we came out of one of the most devastating depressions in the history of mankind; we went into a war which was the most ghastly in the history of man's knowledge.

Prior to the war I recall assisting my fellow workers in Kirkland Lake to become organized, and I am very mindful of the opposition that many of them met with. I recall in the mines of Kirkland Lake, when they knew there were certain men on a given level who were members of a union, they would fire every man on that level, and they laid off as high as two hundred and fifty men at a time, I maintain, just to “get” certain men they knew held membership in our union.

Well, the mine is worked out. I told that story last year, and I do not want to go into it again. That is where I ended my days in mining, through no choice of my own. Needless to say, if I had not liked the job I was doing, I would hardly have spent over twelve years on the job. I left through no choice of my own, but because I chose to do something for these people, whom I saw outside the gates, who were quite as capable of doing the job as I was, but there was no job for them to do. There were ten men and seven jobs, and the only way a man could get a job underground or in the mills or on the surface was if somebody got fired or killed, because they were not quitting.

I recall, when I was working there, some 500 people were outside the gate at the Tech-Hughes mine, where I worked, at a time when two men were caught in a rock blast, and thousands of tons of rock came down; in fact, it was four days before they discovered the first man. They had to be replaced, and I remember the superintendent coming to the gate and saying “We want four men.” It was a very dangerous place to work, but the men did not question it; no, they went to work.

One of the men who worked in this place, the very day the accident took place, remarked to the underground superintendent that it was a very dangerous place to work, and that, in his opinion, neither he nor his men should be compelled to work under those dangerous conditions. He was told by this man that if he did not wish to do that type of work, or did not wish to work in there, he could go to the top and get his time.

Well, in those days, anybody who got his time, irrespective of the circumstances, usually hung around the gate for months and months, some of them until the war broke out, and then they got their first steady job in months, when they donned His Majesty's uniform.

We in the union movement are very conscious of all these things. True, we will make mistakes in the process of organizing ourselves into unions; true, we may make mistakes after we become organized, but they are not deliberate mistakes. Our intentions, in the main, are to do good to our fellow workers, and we trust and believe that by doing good to our fellow workers, we will do good to all mankind.

At this moment we are in the process of organizing one of the most anti-union industries on the North American continent, the gold mining industry, an industry which at this time is holding what is tantamount to a stick or a blackjack over the heads of the government, saying, "If you do not give us a greater subsidy or a higher price for gold, we will go on strike," and certain of them have done just that. The McIntyre mine has done that, for instance. They say "We know you need the gold"—in so many words—"but until we get a higher price you will not get our gold."

However, we are continuing our campaign, but just as has happened every time a campaign starts to gather momentum, and looks as if it is going to be a success for the people—and they take the position that what is good for the workers must be bad for us—as sure as you attempt to organize those miners, the operators will look for ways and means of destroying your organization.

You have all heard of the Kirkland Lake strike. I recall that the leader, the man who filled the office I now hold, came to Kirkland Lake. He was there for several months, and neither the press, nor the operators, nor anybody else, paid too much attention to him. He was just another McGuire from the United States. But after the campaign started to pick up and show signs of freeing and liberating the miners, and bringing them into industrial democracy, they came out with all types of editorials, saying "This 'guy'"—who certainly nobody could accuse of being "red" or "black" or "blue"; who was, to begin with, a devoted Catholic, who was a member of the Democratic Party of the United States—when he became successful in this campaign, there were cries going up, "Chase this foreigner home; get rid of him."

One man can never organize a plant, no matter how small it is. He must have the co-operation of the workers within that plant, and McGuire got the co-operation of the miners. The rest of the story is history, and I will just repeat it in brief.

We entered into negotiations on June 10, 1941; we got no action from either the operators or the Government until November 18th of that same year. We complied with every rule and regulation of the Federal Government, the Provincial Government, and the Municipal Government, and we wrapped around the cause of these workers the entire community.

That was not enough. All we were asking for at that time, Mr. Speaker, was union recognition, just the right to have our union recognized. We did not deny the right of recognition to the Mine Managers' Association, but they denied us the right of recognition of our democratically chosen local union.

After going through conciliation—and I will put emphasis on this, because I want to deal to some extent with the situation in gold—and getting a unanimous report from the Board of Conciliation, who was chaired by no one other than Mr. Justice McTague—and the representative of the operators was a man quite friendly to the operators; no question about that—those operators did what is almost equal to thumbing their noses at their employees and the government of this nation. The only support we got from government, the only consolation or advice from the government of this nation, prior to, during, and after that strike, was when Mitchell Hepburn sent his 250 Hussars up to Kirkland Lake. That was a very poor solution of the matter, a very poor substitute for recognition of our union, and that is all we were asking for. If we become a little bit embittered at times, you should not wonder.

What happened on the picket lines in those days? All the policemen were not bad, perhaps none of them were, but they had a duty to perform. Some of them did not perform that duty as they should. It was not uncommon for them to go down the picket line—and I can assure you that men on a picket line at 40 below zero are not in a mood for jokes—and say, particularly to a new Canadian, "Have you your citizenship papers with you?" If he did not have them, he was rushed to the "hoosegow." They would ask them any question, irrespective of how illogical or unnecessary it was, and if they received a reply to it at all, they took the man down and locked him up in jail. It appeared to us as if what they wanted to do was to break the morale of our membership, and finally break our treasury, and the union would perish and die.

However, that did not happen, and we are up there again conducting a campaign.

In a release I gave to the press, I said that the operators are out to destroy our organization, and to get rid of some of our organizers. I have reason to believe that. In the process of just simple negotiations, where they were handling grievances, and grievance procedure, a spokesman for one of the operators, told one of our organizers, "If you do not make a greater attempt to get along with us, and to co-operate with us on our basis, we will go to Ottawa, and get you deported." Shortly after that the press carried a story of the deportation of certain organizers.

On that score, I just want to make this statement, Mr. Speaker. I have no intention of discussing certain matters which were brought up here by certain hon. members the other day, because it is the policy of the union movement to discuss it in proper places.

The crocodile tears which the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) shed the other day, when he ended up by saying he believed in labour, we did not take seriously—not at all. Particularly when we know the gold mine operators, and particularly when we read this appearing in the Financial Post, regarding the man I wish was in his seat, the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts).

I quote now from the Financial Post of 1944, "Directory of Canadian Directors, 1944."

"A. Kelso Roberts, M.P.P.:

"Partner — Roberts, Osborne, Archibald and Seagram, Barristers.

"President, Margaret Red Lake Mines (1940) Ltd.

"Secretary-Treasurer and Director of:

"Mosher Long Lac Gold Mines Ltd., American Nepheline Corp., Nepheline Products Ltd., G. B. Explorers, Ltd., McMarmach Red Lake Gold Mines Ltd., Thompson Landmark Gold Mines Ltd."

All I can say is that when he was shedding his crocodile tears at what was going on, it appeared to me as if the hands were the hands of Esau, but the voice was the voice of Jacob. It sounded a great deal like the gold-mine operators themselves.

There have been other statements made also. The other day a certain question was raised in this House regarding certain organizers in my union. In reply, I just want to say this, Mr. Speaker, that these are matters concerning the internal affairs of my union and other unions; they have been and will be fully dealt with; will be discussed at union meetings and at union conventions, and at executive board meetings; they will be discussed there, and will be settled there. The union members will take care of it, as they always take care of this type of problem. I do not believe it is a part of my office to thresh out internal union affairs on the floor of this Legislature, and I refuse to do so. There are ethics in our movement.

I do not expect hon. members opposite to understand this point of view. They are not labour men. But I will say there is not a loyal trade-unionist in Canada, no matter what his union is, or where it may be, no matter what his political beliefs are, who will not agree with me. I will not help to make a political football out of our union affairs in this House. All that labour asks of this government is that they pass the legislation for which labour is asking, a fair and just labour code, two weeks vacation with pay, and a reasonable work week. Do that, and that is all we will ask for. We will look after the internal affairs of our unions ourselves.

Mr. Speaker, my position in the union which I represent, and with which I am identified, has on various occasions been questioned—and I am not referring any longer to the political parties. It has never been questioned by my colleagues, but has been by others, and without any justification whatsoever. I wish to make a statement here, Mr. Speaker, and with your permission I will read it. It is:

“I am a C.C.F.-er and have been for ten years. I have never been a member or supporter of any other political party in my life, nor am I a member or supporter of any other political party now. Nor do I seek or draw support from any other political party, nor shall I.

“On this platform, the C.C.F. platform, I was elected by the people of Sudbury in 1943 with the largest vote of any of the 90 members; and on this platform I was re-elected in 1945 with a majority of many thousands of votes over my nearest rival. In that election I was opposed by candidates of all other groups in this House—a Liberal, a Conservative and an L.P.P. candidate—and I polled almost as many votes as all the others put together.

“The position of our party with respect to the Communist party has been stated in this House by our House Leader, the hon. member for Cochrane South. It has been stated nationally by our national leader, Mr. M. J. Coldwell. I support both these statements without reservation and without qualification.”

With that said, Mr. Speaker, I want to deal with a few matters pertaining to my own riding. I was hoping the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) would be in his place, as there is one very pertinent matter I would like him to hear me speak upon, although I only intend to say a few words about it, as the subject was covered most extensively by my leader (Mr. Grummett). I am referring to the highway from Parry Sound, and Sudbury, to Timmins. I think it is time that the construction of this highway was undertaken.

This highway, if completed, will open up a fabulously rich country, rich in mineral wealth, in game and fish, lumber and tourist resorts. Much has been said in this House within the last few days regarding the “beauty of the north.” I had a feeling at the time that both the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) were making a last desperate attempt to woo the people of the north country back into one of the old parties, but if I do not miss my guess—and I do not think I will—the people up there will continue to vote as they have during the past two elections.

Mr. Minister (Mr. Doucett), I would like to see you undertake the construction of that highway. This is a request from practically all of the people in the north country. When I go to Timmins, people ask me “When is the construction of the Parry Sound-Sudbury-Timmins highway to be undertaken?” When I go to Sudbury they ask me the same question, and the same question in Parry Sound, and I always have to tell them that since I am not close enough to the Government that they take me into their confidence, and tell me when they will commence the construction of the highway, everything is sort of suspended, but I do hope, Mr. Minister (Mr. Doucett), that you will undertake the construction of that highway in the north country, because it is my feeling that you could start a road almost anywhere in northern Ontario, from one end to the other, and by the time you reached your destination, the highway would almost have paid for itself, the country is so rich.

We have heard a great deal about having tourists up in that country. They like that country. The only complaint I have heard from any of them is "You have awful roads here in this country; you have a beautiful country, but awful roads." I think we should do our utmost to make them change it to "beautiful roads."

And I would suggest to the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) that he take steps to pass such legislation as will enable the miners and working people of this province to have two weeks' vacation with pay, so they can enjoy the beauties of this province. There are many workers in the north country, particularly in the mines and the lumber camps, who have far to travel if they want to see a city, and a city is a change for them. But with only one week's holiday, they have to turn and go back almost immediately upon their arrival. So I say that should be extended so they will have two weeks' vacation with pay, so they, too, like us, could travel through this north country and see its beauty.

Not so long ago I was talking to some people in the north country, and was telling them about our bills last year, and they wanted to know what happened to them. I had to explain to them honestly and as honourably as I could what happened to those bills. They were interested particularly in the two weeks' vacation with pay, and the forty-hour work week.

One chap said "How many hours do you people work in the Legislature?" and I told him, generally speaking, the sessions started at three o'clock and terminated at six; sometimes we did have night sessions, and I explained also we had a lot of work to do in our departments, and he said "Do you not think the miners and the workers in general do not have things to do after they come off shift, too?" He said "If three hours is long enough for you people, then I think you should reduce our hours at least by eight a week."

Mr. Speaker, I am not going to say more than this; we live in a fabulously rich country. On the one hand we have people who are rich as rich can be; on the other hand, we have people who are relatively poor, and I am mindful at this moment of a man whose name I will give, Mr. Palock. I am sorry that the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is not in his place, although he handled it as satisfactorily as he perhaps could. Not so long ago an old-age pensioner came into my office and he explained how difficult he found it to get along. He is 78 years of age. His wife is 69. He was getting $30.00 a month to live on. He brought in the receipts showing how he had spent this money and I showed them to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow).

He paid $15.00 a month for rent, $10.00 a month for fuel, $2.00 for water, and $1.50 for light, leaving him a grand total of $1.50 for he and his wife to get along on for one month. That is not enough—not even for one day.

I asked him how he got along on that, and he said "Well, do you know what I do? I go to the butcher shop, and they save the bones." I can imagine what they would have done with the bones if he had not been in there to pick them up; likely somebody would have picked them up for the poodle. He said "I bring them home, and my wife makes soup, and that is what my wife and I live on, together with a few crumbs I manage to get from the bakery."

I wrote the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow), and I did succeed in getting him $5.00 of this $10.00 supplementary allowance they give for such cases. I was going to ask the hon. Minister if he would not consider giving this old couple, who have reached the autumn of life, and who have to live under these conditions, the extra $5.00. At present they have the grand sum of $6.50 per month to live on. I ask the hon. members of this House if there is anyone who can live on that amount of money? And I may say, Mr. Speaker, that there is not one of us better than either one of this old couple.

He started out when he was 10 years old; he made a great contribution to this nation, and now the nation has said to him, just like the industrialists, "You are worn out, we are through with you, we are throwing you out on the scrap heap."

Mr. Speaker, I could give you many more cases of this kind. I just want to refer to what I said in the Legislature a couple of years ago, that I think it is a disgrace to this nation, when you walk down Bay Street and Yonge Street in the City of Toronto and see men without legs, no eyes, and with a tin cup, rattling it so as to get your nickels and your dimes. I remember the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) saying "Are there many of those in your riding?" Well, Mr. Speaker, it is a pity there is even one in this whole nation. It is a scar on our nation; it is a disgrace to our intelligence that such conditions should obtain in this rich country of ours.

Frequently when I see up in the north country men shivering with the cold, sitting out, if they can sit, some of them standing on stumps of legs, some of them blind, I say it is a crime if this system under which we are living, this capitalistic system, cannot do better for these people. And they obviously cannot. If not then they must give way to a socialist set-up; they must give way to the C.C.F. Party of this nation, and they will one day, Mr. Speaker.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. GORDON CHAPLIN (Waterloo, South): Mr. Speaker, I want at this time to add my small tribute to those which have already been paid to the late Dr. Hobbs Taylor. I saw him perhaps in a somewhat different light to many of the senior members who have already spoken. I never had the opportunity of knowing him or meeting him, until I came to this Legislature in 1945, but his help at that time, his kindly advice, his obvious interest in new members, and his words of encouragement and inspiration will forever endear him in the hearts of all those who came to know him and came in contact with him.

I would like to offer my congratulations to the new member for Huron (Mr. Pryde), not only on his election to this House, but also on his very excellent address in moving the adoption of the speech from the Throne. From what I have heard, I am sure that all of the members of this House, and more particularly perhaps those in the north-west corner, feel that he is an acquisition to this House, of whom we will all be very proud.

Mr. Speaker, I could not fail to note that all the speeches on the opening day here rather extravagantly extolled the virtues of Scotland, of all those of Scottish descent and I was then fully conscious of the fact that I am at least partially of Scottish descent, but in listening to these speeches, one could hardly fail to gather that these people were a race apart, somewhat of a chosen people, and it was not, I must confess, until the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) rose up in his place and disclosed to us his own ancestry, that I fully realized that after all they are not a super race, they are subject to the same weaknesses, the same failings, the same shortcomings as beset all other mortals and they too, I must say, apparently have their share of those unfortunate, misguided, mislead and frustrated black sheep who have strayed from the fold. Mr. Speaker, I think that perhaps it is rather presumptuous of me to paraphrase the words of Mr. Churchill, but I think that perhaps his historic description of Mr. Atlee, might really apply in this case, and I am sure some members here will subscribe to the view that the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) might be described as a black sheep in black sheep's clothing.

MR. MACLEOD: That is not what he said.

MR. CHAPLIN: You seem to be familiar with what he said.

MR. MACLEOD: You do not have it right.

MR. CHAPLIN: I am sorry. Well, it could not be a wolf.

Well, Mr. Speaker, in his opening remarks here the other evening, the hon. member from Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) did me the distinction of mentioning apparently certain ambitions that he thought I had of sitting in the front seats. He got out his crystal glass and he gazed into it and he went into his usual trance and he came up with a lot of prophecies and forecasts, and I can only say to the hon. member that I have no such ambition as far as I am concerned, but if I did have the ambition that he attributes to me, I could think of no quicker way of having them blighted at birth than receiving recognition from that particular quarter.

MR. MACLEOD: I hope it works out that way.

MR. CHAPLIN: That makes it unanimous. I would also say, while I am still on the same subject, that if I did nourish any such ambition as that, I would feel, under the circumstances a very keen embarrassment, I would feel, I am sure, the same sense of uneasiness that pervades the rank and file, and more particularly the Leadership of the C.C.F., who has so lately experienced the unwelcome attention of the Communist Party.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw to the attention of the Hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost)—I am sorry to see he is not in his seat here tonight—of a serious omission in the compilation of his otherwise excellent book, Prospectus of the Province of Ontario. His staff, I feel, were rather unfortunate in the choice of a map of Ontario that they used in conjunction with this publication. I realize, of course, that this was not intended as a detailed map of Ontario, but rather as an illustrative map, but, nevertheless, this is an official publication and will no doubt be used as a reference throughout Ontario and throughout every province in Canada and no doubt in many other countries as well. Therefore I was very keenly disappointed to learn that the City of Galt was not included on this map, although many centres that, in my opinion, are of less relative importance to the Province of Ontario, were included and showed up very conspicuously.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not want to take up too much time of this House by quoting too many statistics, but I think perhaps it might be of interest to point out in this city of some 17,000 people, there are a very diversified and very stable group of industries. There is an iron and steel industry, steel fabrication industry, and machinery manufacturers of some thirty-two companies employing 2,830 people. There are eight major textile companies, employing 1,711 people. There is a leather and shoe industry of five factories employing 540 people. Rubber and plastic companies in the neighbourhood of four, employing 944 people, and there are dairy products and flour and bread and various miscellaneous companies to the extent of some 28, in all, employing another 460 people—a total of 6,300 people engaged in the industries of Galt, and the value of the production of industry in the city is over $30,000,000 annually. Now, Mr. Speaker, Galt, is located on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, it is on a branch line of the Canadian National Railway, and also has very excellent electric railway services between Kitchener, Hespeler, Brantford and down to Lake Erie. It is the centre of a very extensive highway system and it has some 141 retail concerns and 188 acres of parkway. 48 per cent. of all the homes are owner-occupied and I say this because I think it is somewhat significant of the character and stability of the inhabitants of this community.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to give you a description of that very attractive little city, nestled as it is on the banks of the Grand River and extending up unto the hills, but this afternoon I was in the House and I listened to the description of the various constituencies from the hon. member for Bruce (Mr.

Johnstone) and the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Robinson), and I feel that, having heard them today, that I could hardly expect to do justice to the subject of Galt.

I would like to probably describe it a little further in the words of another person, the attitude of people towards Galt. I had the experience this year of meeting a young Englishman who had just come out under the air-immigration scheme. He did not accept the work that was immediately offered to him on his arrival here, but, having reserves of his own, he travelled through the province. He visited many cities in south-western Ontario, visited many friends that he had, and at last he came up to Brantford and he took the electric railway up the Grand River valley, and the beauties of that valley captivated him—the beautiful, rolling country and wooded slopes, and when he got to Galt, and finding that opportunities existed there, in the trade in which he was interested, that there was accommodation for him, he told me that he was sending immediately for his wife and family and that was the place in all Ontario that he had decided that he wanted to settle, and bring up his family. And so, Mr. Speaker, I think that perhaps the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), if he gets the opportunity on reading this some day, I think perhaps he will appreciate the feeling of the civic officials and more particularly the public spirited citizens of the Board of Trade and various service organizations who have done so much to help build up that community and the feelings they must have of being left off this official map of the Province of Ontario. I realize, of course, that a mistake of a junior clerk in printing office could account for such a thing, and what it really takes to put a city on a map is the character and initiative of its citizens, and this Galt has in abundance. Now, I can only say to the Hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) that I hope, when the time comes to print a new edition of that particular book, that he will give due consideration to seeing that the cities of Ontario are properly represented and presented on that map.

I would like, at this time, to draw the attention of the Government to the fact that civic officials, of the Board of Trade and certain public spirited individuals in the communities of Port Dover, Simcoe, Preston, Kitchener have endeavoured to open up new avenues of tourist traffic by trying to arrange a boat service across Lake Erie, from Erie, Pennsylvania, to Port Dover.

The advantage of this plan I think becomes apparent when one realizes that within eight or ten hours drive from the City of Erie, Pennsylvania, you can draw upon a population of some twenty-five million people and if you look at the map adjoining Lake Erie in the Lake Erie region, and if you draw a line directly south from Erie, Pennsylvania, you will see why anyone driving west or rather from the west side of that line to Hamilton or Toronto or points north would save some one hundred and twenty-five miles by taking a two and a half hour steamship trip across the lake. This also circumvents the Buffalo bottleneck and opens up a new and short route to the north which is little known to thousands of American tourists and takes them through an area rich in beauty and steeped in the early history of this province, through a rich agriculture and important manufacturing area, including the municipalities of Simcoe, Waterloo, Brantford, Paris, Galt, Preston, Kitchener and Guelph.

Back in 1931 a boat operated from Erie, Pennsylvania, to Port Dover, and carried over 25,000 passengers during that year. This boat had accommodation for one hundred cars, and at times could not take care of the traffic.

Unfortunately this old boat, by name "The Keystone" was burned and due to the depressed financial conditions of the company, they did not see fit to put another steamer into operation.

In the meantime the harbour facilities of Port Dover have deteriorated, and it is not possible to establish a boat service of this kind until the harbour is dredged, and the docks re-habilitated to take care of a boat of sufficient size.

I realize the whole key to this development is of course the putting of the Port Dover harbour into shape, to take care of this traffic. I realize this is entirely a Federal matter and I understand it has been taken up with the Minister of Public Works in the Dominion Government, and I am hopeful that the Dominion authorities will act on this matter in due course.

In the meantime, Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest to the Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh), the Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) and the Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), that they might give consideration to this matter and if this boat service is established, to be in a position to act in their various capacities for the promotion and development of this route to the north. I might say in this regard that I understand that the Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) has already acted in improving the highway between Port Dover and Simcoe. I believe that the highway from Simcoe to Brantford, while it is in good shape, could be straightened out and improved in many respects.

From Brantford to Galt, or the alternative route from Paris to Galt, the highways are both excellent, and an excellent road connects Galt, Preston and Kitchener, and Galt, Hespeler and Guelph.

The Minister might consider an improvement in the connection between Guelph and Orangeville on highway 24, and if this was done, I am sure this would make an excellent route to the north and would give all these communities, plus many others, a share in the tourist business which they do not now get, and which otherwise they could not possibly develop.

I might suggest also that these hon. Ministers might readily consider lending their assistance to the municipalities in putting this case before Ottawa. I am sure their assistance would be appreciated at least by the municipalities. A scheme of this kind which has a very wide implication throughout a large portion of Ontario, I feel sure should receive the official support of the Government of this province.

I am sorry that the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) is not in his seat tonight; I would like to offer him my very sincere congratulations in the excellent speech he made the other day in connection with Hydro. It was a very well thought out and studious speech and I am sure for those who are interested in Hydro it could almost be used as a text book on that subject.

I did not have the opportunity to be down near Huron County during the time of the by-election and therefore I am not familiar with any of the statements made by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in regard to Hydro. I must confess I did not pay very much attention to any of the press reports of his speeches,—I do not say that in a discourteous fashion, but I did not just happen to see any at the particular time, but anything he has said in this House, as far as I am aware, in regard to Hydro has been in a manner of relatively mild and minor criticisms. But this is not altogether so of some of the leaders of the Liberal party in Ontario. I refer to the statements of one who was a member of this House at one time, a former member of the Liberal Government who now stands, I believe, well up in the hierarchy of the Liberal party and might even be termed a member of the board of directors of the Liberal party in Ontario and his statements that I have seen in the press and heard on the radio are anything but mild and anything but accurate.

My main point in bringing these statements before the House is that this gentleman in one of his radio broadcasts accused the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) of making certain statements to a Progressive-Conservative convention and the implication, as I understood it, was simply that he had made statements to this particular meeting that he had not made on the floor of the House and it was implied he dare not make them on the floor of the House.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am anxious at this time that every point that this gentleman has seen fit to discuss is brought before this Legislature so that whatever merit it may have can be debated and it cannot be said in the future that the Opposition did not get an opportunity to discuss these matters in full.

Many of the statements and charges that have been made have already been dealt with effectively by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and the member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) and there is no point in mentioning these further at this time.

I think it might be well to keep in mind that there was, as we all know, a tremendous expansion of industrial activity throughout this country during the war years. We all know that the demand to meet the needs of our own fighting forces, and the forces of the allied nations reached vast proportions that had never been experienced in this country.

There were many who predicted that there would be a sharp falling off and a power shortage in this country after hostilities. In fact, I think that matter was dealt with by the hon. member for Parry Sound (Mr. Armstrong) today, and I was extremely interested. I was extremely interested to hear him state he thought nobody was to blame for the Hydro shortages, particularly in view of the press reports I had been reading and indulged in by the hon. Mr. Hipel, a former member of this House. It might be interesting to note that after the termination of hostilities in 1945, the Hydro Electric Power Commission was supplying approximately 2,250,000 horsepower of electrical energy throughout Ontario.

Today, I believe, it is supplying approximately 2,900,000 horsepower and the rate of demand is increasing. The shortage of electrical power is not by any means peculiar to the Province of Ontario or even to Canada. It is continent wide and extends through every state of the United States.

There appears in a recent issue of Fortune magazine an extremely interesting and enlightening article on the power situation in the United States. Without quoting from this article in any detail, I will mention the headings shown at the beginning of this article, and give you some idea of the contents dealt with:

"The U.S. family uses nearly 500 kilowatt hours more a year than in 1939.

"Over 2,000,000 new customer families appeared last year—75 per cent. of them rural.

"The advanced, fast growing industries—light metals, alloys, chemicals, aeronautics, atomic energy—are power hogs.

"Overall industrial use of power has jumped 84 per cent since 1939.

"The capacity is simply not there."

It is also stated, Mr. Speaker, in this article that no area in the United States is exempt from power shortage. Power is tight everywhere. Power companies in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Wisconsin, and the Dakotas are considering rationing. For lack of power no more big industries can move into upper New York State's Niagara area.

That situation is similar and parallel in Ontario. The basic reason for our power shortage is not very difficult to understand, but it has definitely been aggravated by unfavourable weather conditions that have prevailed during the last several months. An exceedingly dry fall, and an exceedingly cold winter in which there has been no thaw has cut the available water supply at many of the generating plants.

Despite some mistakes and miscalculations that may have been made I think that the citizens of this province owe a debt of gratitude and their sincere thanks to the Hydro officials and operating employees who have kept the system operating to peak capacity under very difficult and trying conditions. In this regard, I say we have indeed been well served by our public servants.

The charge has been made that the whole situation could have been avoided by adequate planning and by the energetic pushing to completion of certain power developments. Let me remind you, Mr. Speaker, that hydro cannot be tailored to meet the day-to-day conditions that may exist in the Province of Ontario. It cannot be tailored to meet even the year-to-year fluctuations that may take place, and to adequately plan hydro development in this country, one must of necessity take a long view of the problem.

Back in the 1920's, plans had been made under Dr. Gaby for what was considered the normal and expected expansion in this province, and during the years of the middle and early 30's, no doubt—no doubt about it—there existed a surplus of power for the immediate needs of this province. But those conditions should not have blinded the then Government of this province to the future. The basic difficulties that we face today have been sorely aggravated by the short-sighted policy of the Hepburn administration of which Mr. Hipel and certain other hon. members who are still in the House were members, when that Government cancelled certain power contracts with the Province of Quebec and did not provide sufficient reserves of power, for even normal future expansion in this province, not to mention the necessity that arose during the war.

Just let me go on here for a minute because I want to mention some of the charges that have been made. These are just the headlines of articles that have appeared in the press in recent months:

"Hipel speaks at Toronto on power shortage."

"Hipel charges hydro shortage caused by Drew."

"Power restrictions 'discriminatory' declares Hipel."

"N. O. Hipel throws hydro challenge to Premier Drew."

"Hipel says Drew to blame in coming power shortage."

"Hipel charges hydro shortages caused by Drew."

"Hipel blames Drew cabinet for present power dearth."

And then we have a large advertisement:

"N. O. Hipel will tell the people of Ontario the true facts about the hydro shortage."

AN HON. MEMBER: Hear, hear.

MR. CHAPLIN: I was delighted indeed to hear the remarks of my friend for Parry Sound (Mr. Armstrong) tonight. He seemed so careful to refute the remarks that have appeared in the press concerning Mr. Hipel.

I simply want to say that the lack of appreciation of the Hepburn administration of the bare needs of this province can perhaps best be appraised by Mr. Hepburn's own words back in 1938. The hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) dealt with this subject the other evening. He made this same quotation, but I think that it is sufficiently important, it is the crux of the whole situation, it is the crux of the whole policy of the Liberal Government of that day, and I will quote these again, if I may:

"Insofar as power requirements are concerned the fact is well known to you that Ontario has an ample supply for many years to come—indeed a high surplus—for which it must pay and receive no benefit."

Again on the 21st of September, 1938, he stated:

"When the Government came into office, the province was swamped with a surplus of unusable Quebec power—we now have a surplus of power which we can carry, but which is rather larger than we require as a reserve, and certainly sufficient for many years."

Just note the wording of that, "we now have a surplus of power which we can carry"—the inference is surely there that there was a surplus or in their minds, there was a surplus that could not be carried before, and they have cut that down and now have a surplus that they can carry. Again, continuing with the quotation:

"This province is simply not interested in the production of any more power. To take part in any negotiations which may lead to this end would be unwise and misleading—

"Quebec and Ontario are suffering from a surplus of power which will continue for many years to come."

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): What was the date of that, might I ask, Mr. Speaker?

MR. CHAPLIN: On September 21st, 1938.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): A war happened after that, you know.

MR. CHAPLIN: Did it?

AN. HON. MEMBER: Yes.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without portfolio): They were not allowing for the war.

MR. CHAPLIN: I will come to that. The words I have just quoted are the words of Mr. Hepburn himself, and I think that is a perfect summary, I think it is a fair statement of the policy of the Government of the time, and mind you, hon. Sir, that was in the year of Munich, and within three years of that date there was a power shortage in the Province of Ontario.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Mr. Speaker, might I ask what was the answer from Mr. Chamberlain in 1938, the Leader of the Government in Great Britain?

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): "Peace in our time."

MR. HABEL: "Peace in our time," not war, so I do not think we are to blame.

MR. CHAPLIN: I didn't know Mr. Chamberlain had too much to do with the hydro system.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): That is why they didn't have the surplus.

MR. CHAPLIN: Mr. Speaker, I can remind hon. members opposite that Mr. Hepburn, during the war years—when we did have a war, yes, was very fond of condemning the Federal administration of Mr. King for his war effort. He many times took exception to the fact that Canada came into the war totally unprepared, and I do not think there was anyone in this country who ever came close to him in his vitriolic and virulent attacks on Mr. King, and Mr. Hipel and some hon. members opposite who were members at that time, as far as I am aware, they are not on record as having got up and said anything opposed to Mr. Hepburn.

MR. HABEL: On a point of order—

MR. CHAPLIN: They just sat there—

MR. HABEL: On a point of order—

MR. CHAPLIN:—during those same attacks—

MR. HABEL: On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker. I know the hon. member (Mr. Chaplin) wants to be fair.

MR. SPEAKER: What is the point of order?

MR. HABEL: A question of privilege, Mr. Speaker, the fact that he says no hon. member took exception to the attacks on the King Government. I want to tell him that I, for one in this House, and those who were sitting in the House at the time will remember that in 1940 I did not mince my words in telling my leader then that our business was to deal with provincial affairs, and as far as the war was concerned, it was a matter for the Federal Government to deal with.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I never heard it.

MR. HABEL: Not only did I tell him that, but voted against him—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Where did you say all that? Never in the House.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The man is dreaming.

MR. CHAPLIN: Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to the statement of the hon. gentleman (Mr. Habel), in fact if I have been wrong about that, I apologize and not only do I apologize, but I congratulate him.

MR. HABEL: Thank you. There were ten of them, too.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. CHAPLIN: Ten?

MR. HABEL: Sure.

AN HON. MEMBER: Did you say it before the House?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That almost upset the Government.

MR. CHAPLIN: Regardless of the Dominion Government, the facts are that the Ontario Government was completely unprepared for war, and Ontario went into the war period with no sufficient reserves of power to take care of the expansion of her industries and that lack of action was due to the lack of action of the Hepburn Government at that time, and Mr. Hipel and some hon. members there were in that Government, they were all partners, even if extremely silent ones.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The whole ten were defeated.

MR. CHAPLIN: Yes.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): No, they were not.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER: (Waterloo North): Now, George, no prompting.

MR. HABEL: Was Great Britain ready for war?

MR. SPEAKER: Will the hon member for Cochrane North (Mr. Habel) keep his words to himself?

MR. HABEL: May I ask a question?

MR. SPEAKER: No.

MR. HABEL: I was asking if Great Britain was ready for war.

MR. SPEAKER. Order, please.

MR. CHAPLIN: Mr. Speaker, it takes years to plan and build new hydro-electric power plants and the Government, up to 1938, under Mr. Hepburn was busy, not in planning development to meet future power requirements, but in the repudiation of contracts for power already made and necessary to meet the demands of the Province of Ontario.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I heard some of the hon. members tonight, and I know that Mr. Hipel has made a great to-do about the enormous savings that apparently have resulted from the repudiation of those contracts, and in that regard as far as I can see anything that has taken place, I cannot see where the Province of Ontario or the hydro ever benefitted substantially from these alleged savings. I have looked through some of these contracts and I must admit that I am a layman in this regard, I have no technical knowledge, and they are very technical questions, but as an example of what I have in mind, in the Chats Falls original contract, as an example, the contract provided for the generating company receiving $15 per horsepower for power and had to pay the share of the transformation cost in order to step-up power from generating voltage to transmission voltage. Under the new contract of $12.50 per horsepower, the generating company paid no share of this transformation, which, again, about equalized the original price.

In the case of the Gatineau contract, the 60-cycle area in which the original price was $14.50 per horsepower, the company paid the Commission $60,000 per annum to take that power to Smiths Falls. When the contract was rewritten at $12.50 per horsepower, that payment was not included. That would seem to be a fact through most of the contracts. There were very substantial changes in all of these contracts, and it seems difficult to judge whether there were any savings at all, or whether the people of this province were just being kidded.

As an example of that, I have here the statement of the auditors of the Commission, and I want to quote a few words from that statement. They state:

"It would appear to us to be impossible to make any calculations which would provide for all of these contingencies and happenings, and the Commission's municipal Engineering Department has not attempted to do so."

Again:

"Accordingly, it should be understood that none of the figures produced or from the calculations by the Municipal Engineering Department, however correct they may be can be regarded as expressing the precise savings to be actually realized over a long period of years in the future of our people, with the unknown factors that may develop in the working out of these contracts."

That would give an indication that the auditors themselves had some difficulty in determining whether there was any possible or potential saving under these renewed contracts after they had been repudiated.

Then, Mr. Speaker, a word on the repudiation itself. The power bonds in this country that were affected when the Government announced its intentions dropped very rapidly. That might not be a serious matter in all cases, but, despite the belief of some hon. members of this House that bonds of that kind are held only by what they term "bloated capitalists," actually many of them are held by estates, trusts, insurance companies and small individuals who have put aside something perhaps for their own security, and those are the people who are inevitably hurt in a matter of that kind when the door is left open for the violent fluctuations and speculations that took place. I maintain that the course that the Government followed at that time was absolutely improper. There were many people who suffered because of that action, and it was quite unnecessary.

Those bonds fell in value very rapidly.

AN HON. MEMBER: Who bought them up?

MR. CHAPLIN: They recovered again and at the same time that money was made when they went down, money was made again when they went up. There is no question of that, and it would almost indicate that the door had been left open for every kind of tin-horn gambler, and speculator on the continent to come in here and make a killing. I do not think it was good business for the province, that it was good for the reputation or good for the name of this province. There can be no question about it, when things of that kind happen, there usually are people with some intimation or knowledge as to what is happening, who can take advantage of it. I do not say that happened at all in this case; there were apparently, however, a number of people with extremely sensitive intuitions wandering around in Ontario at that time.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not want to continue too long on the question of hydro, but I do want to deal in one more instance with what I consider to be a rather malicious statement from the same source that I have previously quoted. It would seem that Mr. Hipel in some of his speeches was not satisfied with the grossly misleading and inaccurate statements that he has made, but he continues further now on the subject of housing. Mr. Hipel criticized the Drew administration for its failure to assist in solving the housing scarcity in Ontario. And he stated among other things as follows:

"Mr. Drew could have called upon the timber operators in the north of this province to divert their lumber to Ontario residential construction rather than shipping it to the United States. I hold Mr. Drew to blame for turning his back on the returned men of Ontario seeking lumber for housing and referring them to Ottawa."

I am sure that hon. members do not need to be reminded that there are many materials entering into the construction of houses, other than lumber, and they have all at one time or another been in exceedingly short supply, so that lumber has not been by any means the only thing, or even perhaps the major thing that has held up the construction of houses in this country.

However, he failed to recall the fact that lumber and practically every other building material has been under Ottawa control. That there has been a timber controller who has had complete control of lumber, and it was Ottawa through their controller, that set the export quotas of this country, and determine how much lumber would go to the United States, it had nothing whatever to do with the Ontario Government.

That quota for export to the United States is still in effect, or was until a few days ago. If the export of lumber to the United States is the big and deciding factor as to whether we get sufficient housing in this province, then I would say that Mr. Hipel and his friends ought to approach the Liberal Government at Ottawa to amend their regulations and to cut down or prohibit the export of lumber altogether. Let him put the blame where the blame belongs on this, on those who have had control of lumber in this country, and those responsible for the establishment of the present export quotas.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this is a continuation of the quotation I have just given:

"I hold Mr. Drew to blame for turning his back on the returned men of Ontario."

Well, Mr. Hipel, in his remarks has been very solicitous of the welfare of the returned men, and well he should, as well as all of us should be, but this was the same gentleman who was associated with certain hon. members opposite who were in Mr. Hepburn's government when he made the most vicious and unprincipled attack on the civil service of this province, including many who were veterans of the first great war. He is the man who dismissed them from their positions wholesale for no other reason than that they were the appointees of another political party, and they pursued this political revenge with almost sadistic satisfaction, and again Mr. Hipel and the hon. members were silent. On that particular occasion their silence was most spectacular. So far as I am aware, never once did any of them raise his voice in protest against this disgraceful action which took place at that time.

Mr. Speaker, whatever legitimate criticism there may be against the present government, its policy has never deviated from that of giving priority to ex-servicemen in government appointments, and I hope that once and for all that will put an end to the malicious statements of that kind.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the air immigration scheme that was inaugurated by the Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) of this province, is now assuming an importance which perhaps was not fully realized and appreciated when it was first put into effect.

We all know the tremendous expansion which took place in Canadian industry during the war, and it was thought by the government at Ottawa, and by many industrialists and businessmen throughout this country, that to utilize this increased productive capacity, it would be necessary to expand tremendously our export business after the war, and the Dominion Government spent large sums of money in trying to establish export markets. There was a great advertising campaign carried on, stressing the importance of exports to the economy of this country; extensive trade missions were sent to many countries throughout the world, but the chaotic international situation that has developed, plus the chaotic thinking of the policy makers at Ottawa would indicate that we are not going to be able to depend on the export markets we originally anticipated.

There will no doubt continue to be a greater demand for our foodstuffs and our raw materials, but country after country is putting restrictions, embargoes and quotas on our manufactured products and our own financial policy has even further restricted these markets.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, to ultimately support the industrial capacity which has been built up in this country, it becomes of vital importance to substantially increase our population by immigration, and to maintain that population here, and I think, sir, that we well may be proud of the leadership shown in this field by this Government, and by the vision, initiative and faith in Canada's future which has been exhibited by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. CHAPLIN: I was glad to be in the House the other day to hear the hon. Prime Minister's (Mr. Drew) remarks in regard to the action of the Dominion Government in banning the importation of foreign Communists. The attitude of this Government is well known, and I do not believe it needs any further comment at this time.

The Liberal position was made clear by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), much clearer than the hesitant steps of the Dominion Government indicate.

The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) has made a statement that should leave no doubt as to the attitude of the C.C.F. But, while no one who has been in this House for even a short while will question the sincerity or integrity of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) one wonders sometimes whether he knows and realizes what his left hand is doing.

I have listened to the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin). He has made a very definite statement as to his support of the C.C.F., but I am quite frank to admit that I do not know whether it has been any repudiation of the Communist party, and the suspicion in my mind still lingers as to whether he has not more than a platonic interest in the Communist party.

This I think is very important to the C.C.F. but if the words of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) are to have any meaning, obviously they must be confirmed, not only by words, but by actions regarding the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin).

I saw in the paper yesterday—and I am sorry the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) is not here—a reference to Ralph Carlin, the anti-Communist business agent of Local 241. I understand that is a brother. I can only say that Mr. Carlin—Mr. Ralph Carlin—opposed the Communist infiltration, and recently attacked Reid Robinson, who came here from the United States, as an enemy of democracy, who had attacked non-Communist members at their meetings. I only hope—and I do not know whether this is true or not—that the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin) shows as much an aggressive attitude as his brother, Ralph. I think that might convince the hon. members of this House as to where he actually stands. There is a lot of confusion on that point.

In last night's paper I saw where one of the C.C.F. members stated he "could not co-operate with rattlesnakes," referring not to the Communist hon. members of this House. I would not have said that. I do not know whether R. H. Carlin, M.P.P., subscribes to that or not; it was not quite clear, and perhaps the hon. member (Mr. Carlin) would clear that up for us.

The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) is no doubt acutely aware that all Socialist parties are extremely vulnerable to infiltration from the Communists. He is, no doubt, fully aware of what has happened to practically every Socialist party in countries where the Communists have become strong enough to turn on them.

The other night we had a hodge-podge of history by the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod), but I would remind him that the Bolshevik uprising in Russia, when the Communist party seized control,—it was a Socialist government they overthrew; it was not the feudal government of the Czar; it was a Socialist government they overthrew in a welter of blood.

I need hardly remind you what is happening to the Socialist party today in Czechoslovakia. I need hardly remind you what has happened to Socialists everywhere throughout Europe, where the Communists have gained control.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): The last bulwark against Communism will be the Socialists, and you can remember that.

HON. DANA PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Just as the last what—just the first step of the party.

MR. CHAPLIN: The last bulwark?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes.

MR. CHAPLIN: It sounds like bull at work again. However, the speech of the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) last night demonstrated very clearly the feeling of hate which the Communists have for our form of society, and our system of government. I say to the hon. members of this House, that individually, and we as a party, have no illusions as to how they feel, for us they have a consuming hate. But for the Socialists the world over, they reserve nothing but contempt. Time after time they have used the Socialists to serve their own purposes, and then laughed at them, and liquidated them. No wonder there is a sort of uneasiness in the ranks of the C.C.F.

MR. GRUMMETT: Where were the Tories?

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): They look pale, do they not?

MR. MACLEOD: The Tories were supporting the Czar.

MR. CHAPLIN: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Canadian people, and people throughout the democracies have been profoundly shocked by the events which have taken place in the last few weeks in Czechoslovakia. There is an uneasy feeling that we have seen all this before somewhere, that this tragedy which has been unfolded before our eyes is a repetition of Munich.

MR. MACLEOD: Who supported Munich?

MR. CHAPLIN: I do not know who supported Munich.

MR. MACLEOD: Your leader did.

MR. CHAPLIN: Maybe he did. I would not take your word for it.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. CHAPLIN: They are like people, Mr. Speaker, who have gone into a motion picture theatre in the middle of a performance, and suddenly there has been flashed on the screen something which is vaguely familiar, and they realize that "this is where they came in."

Now, Mr. Speaker, the grand putsch in Czechoslovakia has occurred, with startling similarity to the first. The Red Army has played its part, as the oppressor, and it put pressure on the country; it has played the same threatening role that the armies of the Reich played in 1938 and 1939 and Henlein has been traded for Gottwald.

Mr. Speaker, to get an insight into the events of the last few weeks as to just how the Communists go about taking over an established democracy, we see that in a coalition government they insist always upon receiving the Ministry of the Interior, which gives them control of the police; then they put their own men in the majority of high police offices throughout the country.

Controlling the Ministry of Industry they took hold of the large industries in the country appointing party men as managers and foremen and organized in each factory an armed workers' militia, presumably to guard the factory.

They took over complete control of the trade and union organizations—they sent thousands of party workers secretly to the Soviet Union for special training—they organized party cells in every ministry, every factory, every municipal government—and when the time came to give the signal these cells became armed squads and took over everywhere and functioned like a military machine.

This presents a problem in democracy today as to how to organize more effectively against such tactics of infiltration which we have seen overthrow a well established democracy like Czechoslovakia in a relatively few hours.

The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) in his justification of revolution took us back in history and tried to draw a parallel between the causes that led to the French Revolution and what we have just recently witnessed in Czechoslovakia.

I have never listened to a more cynical piece of sophistry—than that speech which simply insults the intelligence of the hon. members of this House.

The inferred comparison of conditions in a feudal monarchy such as France in the 18th century or Russia under the Czars—with a modern democracy such as Czechoslovakia is simply untenable.

These Communists believe in revolution—they applaud what has happened in Czechoslovakia and they would welcome and work for the same thing in this country.

Of course, the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) does not believe in excesses—in fact, he abhors them—unless they are absolutely necessary.

What manner of mind is this that associates human progress with Communism, that associates the forward march of mankind with an utterly ruthless dictatorship?

There is no relationship between human progress and the purges—liquidations—and concentration camps that are standard equipment in Communist countries.

When are we going to smarten up? When are we going to recognize these Communists for what they are? When are we going to stop this nonsense of treating them as members of one of our Canadian political parties, with full privileges? When are we going to recognize them for what they are, nothing more and nothing less than Fifth Columnists, “stooges” for Stalin. When will we stop treating them as a Canadian political party, as I say, with full privileges?

MR. MACLEOD: Is the hon. member (Mr. Chaplin) inferring that I am a Fifth Columnist?

MR. CHAPLIN: I said “potential Fifth Columnist.”

MR. MACLEOD: That is not what you said at all. I am asking you a question.

MR. CHAPLIN: I referred to Communists as potential Fifth Columnists.

MR. MACLEOD: Did you infer that I am a Fifth Columnist?

MR. CHAPLIN: You are a Communist.

MR. MACLEOD: I am a Communist. Do you infer that I am a Fifth Columnist?

MR. CHAPLIN: Yes.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order; the rules of this House are perfectly clear —

MR. DEPUTY SPEAKER: What is the point of order?

MR. MACLEOD: That the hon. member who is speaking now (Mr. Chaplin) has called my loyalty into question.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. members may laugh until they are sick.

HON. MR. PORTER: You said you were a revolutionist the other night.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): I do not think there is a point of order here, Mr. Speaker.

MR. MACLEOD: There is a point of order, whether you know it or not. My point of order is this, that I, in common with all other hon. members of this House,—

AN HON. MEMBER: You admitted you are a Communist.

MR. MACLEOD: —did what we all have to do when I took my seat in this House, swore the oath of allegiance. My point of order is that the hon. member who is speaking (Mr. Chaplin) has insulted me by saying that I am a Fifth Columnist, and that I owe a loyalty to some power out of Canada. I say that is out of order.

HON. MR. PORTER: Is it true?

MR. MACLEOD: Oh, you cannot do anything with a bunch of Tory reactionaries.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Now, now—

HON. MR. PORTER: Take it easy.

MR. MACLEOD: —people over there.

MR. CHAPLIN: Mr. Speaker, this is just a case in point. The hon. member is now appealing to parliamentary rule, and invoking parliamentary rule. What did the Communists care for parliamentary rules in Czechoslovakia when they took over? What did they care about parliamentary rules, or the rules of democracy, or even the rules of human decency?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. CHAPLIN: The only rules that they cared for were the rules that guided these men, the rules of force and aggression.

MR. MACLEOD: That is nonsense, pure nonsense.

MR. CHAPLIN: I repeat this "rules of force and aggression."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. CHAPLIN: The rule of terror, the rule of proscription; those are the only rules they understand.

MR. SPEAKER: Order, order.

MR. CHAPLIN: Mr. Speaker, after Czechoslovakia,—

MR. MACLEOD: Which your party betrayed.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER (Minister without Portfolio): If you were not a Communist, you would not get mad.

MR. MACLEOD: All right, Minister of "flood control."

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. CHAPLIN: After Czechoslovakia, our leaders responsible for the safety of this country must take action, because we are certainly on the list to be conquered from within. Do not let us have any doubts about that.

We cannot do anything for Czechoslovakia today; it is too late. It was too late also at Munich. But we should be grateful to that little democracy for the time it has given us, and that time, Mr. Speaker, must not be wasted.

Thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker—

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, the list of speakers suggests that the hon. member now to speak is the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg).

MR. ANDERSON: Mr. Speaker, I am quite agreeable. I thought it was suggested by the chair I should go on.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): In defence of the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson), I may explain that the deputy speaker, while he was occupying the chair, sent in a message to the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) asking him if he would go on next, stating that, according to his list, he was to be the next speaker.

The hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) consulted me and I said it was quite all right if he was prepared to go on now.

We do not want to upset the order in any shape or form but we understood Mr. Speaker had received a later instruction than we had. I had the list here, but we thought perhaps you had left with the deputy speaker later instructions.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): I understand, and I think the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) understands that he was to change and go on in 14th position, in place of the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Carlin). We have now a list made up of everybody who is prepared to speak in the debate.

MR. ANDERSON: Well, Mr. Speaker, as our House leader (Mr. Grummett) has pointed out to you, I was merely trying to co-operate with what I thought was the latest list. During your absence, sir, I sent the list given me by our party Whip (Mr. Taylor) to the deputy speaker, and it is probably on your desk now. I attached a little note saying that I was to go on later, but if it was his wish I would go on now, as I am quite willing to co-operate with the party Whips, and let the previous arrangement stand, if that is what is wanted.

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) that we might pass a vote of censure on the Whips, because I have a list in front of me, but it is rapidly becoming all mixed up. I cannot tell from this list who the next speaker is, who is scheduled to go on.

MR. MURDOCH: Mr. Speaker, let me say a word here. For years we have been co-operating in the order of speeches between the Whips, and the next order is the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg). I might add that earlier in the evening when we recessed, the hon member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) tried to change the order of his speaking, but I did not concur, because I do not like to change the order any more than is necessary. I understand that all evening he has been sending hon. members notes, unknown to me, trying to change the order. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, in order to preserve the rule which we have followed in this house for years, I would respectfully suggest that the next speaker be the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg).

MR. GRUMMETT: That is quite agreeable to us, Mr. Speaker. We want to try to assist your office in any way we can.

MR. CHAPLIN: This is the first time the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has not wanted to speak.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that this exchange had to precede my remarks in this debate.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): We want to hear you.

MR. SALSBERG: I am highly complimented, as suggested by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) that the Government benches are extremely anxious to hear me, and they cannot possibly wait until the next debating day.

However, I am obliged to state that the Whip for the Conservative party (Mr. Murdoch) in the House is a bit unkind. I was in no way responsible for any changes that were made by the Chairman or Mr. Speaker. A member is still at liberty to communicate with Whips. That is no crime and I agreed to accept the decision of the chief Whip of the major group in the House (Mr. Murdoch), and he knows that. I also want to state that the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) quite innocently, suggested that if it was all right with me, he would go on this evening and I forthwith notified the Whip that this was the situation and that I had agreed to it. That is a fact. Now, let there be no misunderstanding about any lack of cooperation. It is clear, however, that the Conservative party so far this session insists on calling the motions, calling the bills, and calling speakers in a manner ordered by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) from which order no one dares budge.

MR. SPEAKER: I might state to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) there is no necessity for him to make those remarks.

May I say as far as I am concerned, as Speaker, I have the list in front of me, which I imagine was prepared by the Whips, but when the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) stood up, naturally he was the first one that caught my eye, but you were the next one on the list.

Go ahead with your speech.

MR. SALSBERG: I am in no sense reflecting on your integrity. I understood from what you said before the list was muddled and nobody here could make head or tail of it. However, I will proceed with as much time as is left until the regular adjournment of the House. I understand that is eleven of the clock.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: I must state that I will not be able to complete my address in less time than the previous speaker who took much more than an hour, and I will therefore proceed, Mr. Speaker, with as much as I can this evening until the regular closing time and hope that I will be permitted to continue when the debate is continued.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that there was this exchange when I, like all other speakers, wished to be very felicitous and very friendly, and I want to start my remarks with the greetings that are due you, as the Speaker of the House, a Speaker against whom I find no serious complaint.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, we have to rely very much upon your defining a member's rights more than on any other group, and until now my experiences have been quite satisfactory and I trust that in the future, your guidance of the House, your defence of the rights of every member, even those who otherwise incapable persons can attack, will be protected. I know they will be under your guidance as Speaker.

I regret that the hon. members who moved and seconded this Speech from the Throne are absent tonight. I should have desired to say some very nice things to them. It will be formal in their absence, to do so, and I will therefore merely limit myself to extending to them my appreciation of their fine efforts and of the impression that they left on the House.

May I also, Mr. Speaker, extend my appreciation to a few back-benchers in this House, particularly the hon. member for Addington (Mr. Pringle) whom I am glad to see in the House now, and the hon. member for Bruce (Mr. Johnstone) who is absent.

I listened to their speeches with the greatest of interest and enjoyed them immensely. I wish that the Government would permit more of their back-benchers to speak up. Hon. members like those from Bruce and Addington speak plainly, but with a great deal of truth and simple conviction about things that really matter. I may not agree with everything they say. Their speeches ring far more sincerely than other speeches delivered by those who are not in the back-benches.

On this occasion, Mr. Speaker, I want to express my hope that two hon. members of this House, who have been absent so far, will return to the House at an early date. I have learned only this afternoon that two highly respected hon. members of this House—supporters of the Government, but highly respected nevertheless, the members for Woodbine (Mr. Elgie) and the member for Riverdale (Dr. Millen) are unfortunately rather seriously ill.

I am glad Mr. Speaker has it all arranged with the Clerk.

MR. SPEAKER: Just a second. I might say to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that remark is uncalled for, and distinctly out of order. I do not know what he meant when he made that remark. What are you insinuating?

MR. SALSBERG: I am puzzled at your reaction to a very innocent remark. I assure you, Mr. Speaker, it was a very innocent remark, as anyone would make when the Clerk of the House was engaged with you in conversation, and every member felt that it was difficult to go on under those circumstances and when that stopped I merely remarked I am glad the Clerk had it all arranged, whatever had to be arranged between the Clerk of the House and yourself, sir. I assure you I had nothing in the back of my mind, and I hope you will understand it that way.

Now, as to the two hon. members who are absent due to illness, I had the privilege of sitting with the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Millen), in the City Council, and though we often disagreed we were good friends. I was sorry to hear that he was ill, and I may say I express, not only my sentiments, but those of all the members of the House when I say I hope they will recover speedily and will join us again.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts), in his speech showed that he has made some progress since a few years ago, particularly in his readiness to pick up cudgels that he did not touch before and to step in where angels dare not tread, and also in his approach to our French-Canadian population.

I was glad to hear his appeal for unity. That reminded me of a speech he delivered in this House a few years ago in which I thought he expressed sentiments that were unfounded when he spoke about two rivers, the Athabaska and another river that flows into it, never uniting. He used that when speaking of the two main groups in this country. Remembering that remark, I was happy to hear he now emphasizes it correctly and so convincingly that there is not only the need but a possibility for unity between the main national groups in the country.

MR. A. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick): If my hon. friend (Mr. Salsberg) would permit me to correct one word; the word I used was "assimilate"—"will never assimilate"—there is quite a difference.

MR. SALSBERG: Now, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Bruce (Mr. Johnstone) has said today he often listens to speeches and he wonders why they are delivered because they deal with matters outside the immediate concern of the people of Ontario.

I want to say on this occasion that he is quite right, that a great deal of the time of this House is taken up in discussions on matters that have no immediate or direct relation to the affairs of this province. I think the record will show—and since he made reference to my hon. friend, the leader of my group in this House, the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod), and myself—that since our election in 1943 to this date we have introduced legislation, proposals and points of view on various items brought before the House that are exclusively a concern of the people of this province.

If we were to go over every single bill introduced by the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) or myself, every motion we have placed on the order paper, then one would conclude that we dealt exclusively with matters affecting the well-being of the province and its people.

Unfortunately, that was not always true for others and particularly for the Leader of the Government (Mr. Drew). Attacks were made upon us, issues entirely outside the Conservative province were injected and at this session particularly, outbursts have been so frequent and so extreme that one is quite justified in concluding that the "Red scare" and the frequent tirades are for the purpose of concealing many things from the electors and that therefore these issues of no immediate concern to the province are injected into the discussions of the House.

I might say to the hon. members opposite that they have had a field day since this session started. When any of them have nothing concrete to deal with, they know that they can divert themselves onto the anti-Communist issue and get a headline. On the other hand, they show extreme inability to take the slightest criticism that comes from the two humble hon. members here. They show not only poor sportsmanship, but they also show some guilt of conscience. They love to give it, but cannot take it. All of you against two members, and we have taken it and we will continue to take, but we will also give. We ask you, having launched yourselves on this trap, to be a bit more "thick-skinned" and a bit more considerate and also take replies without getting so touchy, as some of you are becoming.

The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) for instance, threw at us quotations from Abraham Lincoln that he does not like.

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to the hon. member for St. Andrews (Mr. Salsberg) it does seem to me he is just wasting the time of the House. Cannot he get on with the speech.

MR. SALSBERG: I am debating on the Speech from the Throne.

MR. SPEAKER: I think you are just killing time.

MR. SALSBERG: Whether I am killing time or not, I am within the bounds of discussion far more than many if not most of those—

MR. SPEAKER: Will you sit down?

MR. SALSBERG: You have not interfered with a single hon. member when they took up time.

MR. SPEAKER: In my opinion I think you are just trying to kill time and I would prefer that you come down to the basis of your speech. I do not want to have to report you to the House, but that is my opinion.

MR. SALSBERG: I am sorry you have such an opinion, you never formed it when anyone else spoke.

HON. W. GRIESINGER (Minister without Portfolio): Who can't "take it" now?

MR. SALSBERG: I am "taking it," don't you worry. I am speaking on the remarks made in the discussion by the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) when he brought up quotations from Lincoln, disapproved of what Lincoln said and then saying we are bad because somebody quoted Lincoln in a Communist publication. He brought out quotations of Walt Whitman and asked in a Boy Scout fashion, "Do you approve of that?"

I might say to the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) that he might very easily have used quotations from the Bible. There are many statements in the Bible that in the present frame of mind of the hon. member from St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) would be seditious and hair-raising and educational no less than the quotations he gave from Lincoln and Walt Whitman. He might even come to the conclusion that the march of those who went against the money-changers in front of the temple was incitement to riot and that anyone who approves, is guilty of inciting to riot.

When it comes to quotations, I might say to the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) that I can give him some, too. He quoted to me, or to the House rather—

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): From Browder, now be fair about it.

MR. SALSBERG: I am very fair, my hon. friend (Mr. Roberts); if he would only be a little more calm and let an hon. member proceed. The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) was quoting the former leader of the Communist party in the United States, who was expelled, in order to show certain things.

Well, I will quote from the founder of his party, whom he and all Tories revere and whom they have never disowned or expelled, a letter by Sir John A. Macdonald. It comes from the volume entitled "Correspondence of Sir John A. Macdonald," edited by Sir Joseph Pope. It is a letter addressed to A. Watts of Brantford, and is dated from Ottawa, the 26th of February, 1880. It is a very interesting letter, and I am going to quote it for the record. He says:

"Dear Sir:

I have your letter of the 17th instant on the subject of patronage generally, and I think I may as well give you my idea of the way such matters stand.

"By constitutional practice, appointments are vested in the Crown and the whole responsibility of appointments rests on the ministry of the day. For the appointments they are responsible, in the first place, to the Crown, and in the second place, to Parliament, but they are not responsible to any constituency for their actions.

"It is usual in cases of local appointments for the ministry to consult the member representing the constituency in which the vacancy occurs if he is a ministerial supporter. If he is not, then the Government act on such information as they can procure.

"We have been always in the habit of consulting our leading friends in those constituencies which are so unfortunate as to be represented by Grits, but that is merely a custom and is in no way obligatory upon us."

Now, Mr. Speaker, comes the pearl of the thing—

"The contrary doctrine is democratic and must be repudiated by all Conservatives."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: The founder of your party maintained that a doctrine which is democratic must be repudiated by all Conservatives. That is your party, and you speak of "democracy" and you give quotations.

The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) and his colleague, the hon. member for Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin) spoke a great deal about revolution and so on. Neither the hon.

member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) nor I advocate revolution nor desire revolution. Both we and our party—

AN HON. MEMBER: Your party does.

MR. ROBERTS: Better be careful there, you might be out of the party.

MR. SALSBERG: —are on record for a democratic struggle for the achievement of a socialist society in this country.

HON. DANA H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): What about Czechoslovakia?

MR. SALSBERG: And it is opposed to any acts of terror. But you did not get a copy of our constitution to read.

AN HON. MEMBER: It changes very often.

HON. MR. PORTER: What about Czechoslovakia?

MR. SALSBERG: You didn't get that.

HON. MR. PORTER: What about Czechoslovakia?

MR. SALSBERG: I will not forget Czechoslovakia, I promise the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), not to forget.

AN HON. MEMBER: It must have been a long-range plan.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member—

AN HON. MEMBER: Did you plan the coup over there?

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member (Mr. Roberts) spoke about actions of which he disapproves as not democratic. Mr. Speaker, I have in my hand a very interesting volume which is entitled "The Rise of Toronto," it covers the period from 1850 to 1890. It was written by D. C. Masters, who is professor of history at Bishops University. On page 28 of that volume, the author says the following, and I quote:

"Passage of the Rebellion losses Bill in April, 1849, is usually associated with the scenes of disorder which it evoked in Montreal, but the incident also brought out all the fervent anti-French sentiment in Toronto."

Further on, I quote again:

"A more violent indication of the sentiments of at least some of the Tories in Toronto was shown in a placard which appeared in Toronto before Elgin's impending visit to Toronto in October, 1849."

May I add that he is referring to Lord Elgin? The placard he refers to read as follows:

"Awake! Treachery! Treason! Men of 1837-38, the plot has leaked out for the purpose of receiving rebel-rewarding Elgin, and under that pretence hundreds of armed cut-throats have been hired to pour into Toronto on the day of his arrival to massacre the loyal inhabitants and to destroy their houses and property, in case they should give utterance to their feelings of disapprobation of him and of his treacherous ministry. Therefore, perfect your organization! Arm! Arm! Arm!"

Three times with three exclamation marks—

"Forward from the country, forward from the city, to protect your wives and little ones from Elgin and the ruthless assassins.

The Watchers."

Then, says the author—

"The demonstration which actually occurred upon Elgin's arrival was somewhat mild in the light of this violent exhortation. Several stones and rotten eggs were flung at the vice-regal party, but no doubt used to that sort of thing after Montreal, preserved their composure."

And he adds—

"It would be wrong of course to assume that all of Toronto was Tory or that all the Tories were violent, yet the dominant element in Toronto was Tory even at this time."

Now there you have the background of true Toryism calling upon the citizens of this city to arm themselves and to converge on the city from the country against Lord Elgin who had come here as the emissary of the Queen, and to carry out certain instructions. What a background; what a gang that was. And the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) and others speak of violence. Why, evidently your party was born in violence.

MR. ROBERTS: Read us another bed-time story.

HON. MR. PORTER: What about Czechoslovakia?

MR. SALSBERG: I believe the hon. member (Mr. Roberts) will not sleep easily after this.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: He is whistling in the dark. It shows the origin of the Tory party, and I quoted from their own sources.

Let me, Mr. Speaker, say something about the hon. Premier's (Mr. Drew) attacks upon us and upon other people, and entire governments and entire nations.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, his cry about democracy rings very falsely in the ears of all progressive and thinking people. The record that he has, is well established, and one can say about the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) that his star never shone in the firmament of democracy at any time; to the extent that he shone, he was always in another sphere, the very opposite of democracy. I challenge anybody in the House to recall when the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) rose in wrath when Hindoos were slaughtered and demanded their rights. And speaking of Hindoos I ask any hon. member to point out when the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) defended democracy when Hitler was in power and he visited Germany. When did he ever rise to defend the democratic rights of the Italian people when they were subject to the bloody dictatorship of Mussolini? When did he rise to protest the selling of Czechoslovakia down the river by Chamberlain? When did he defend democracy anywhere in the world when democracy was actually attacked?

He champions those in Greece now who come down to the villages with heads of Greek democrats that were cut off by bandits who display the heads in villages in order to claim a prize.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) does not protest against such brutalities; when an hon. Prime Minister has such a record, then his outbursts here will fail to convince people of any genuine sincere concern about democracy. He is scaring people, he is using it to conceal the failures of his own Government, and he is spreading a war hysteria that has very few equals.

Mr. Speaker, I had an experience a couple of days ago that illustrates the effect of the hon. Prime Minister's (Mr. Drew) words upon those who are subjected to such propaganda.

I was in the council chamber of the city council of Toronto on the invitation of the mayor to attend a meeting of Toronto members with the council. We were discussing the Toronto bill that is to be introduced in this House. I dare say the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) did not consider it important for him to be there, although he is an hon. member for a Toronto riding. Nor did the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew).

However, there we were discussing Toronto's bill when, out of the blue, in rushed Controller Balfour, pale of face, shaking with fear. He rushed up to His Worship, the Mayor, and shouted almost with an unnatural voice: "Whatever you are discussing is unimportant, the red flag is flying over Queen's Park."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: You could just see that the man was actually terribly unnerved.

AN HON. MEMBER: Who put it up there?

MR. SALSBERG: He believed that the red flag had been raised over Queen's Park, that a "putsch" had been put over, because the hon. members speak about "putsches" and "fast ones" and infiltration and here is a controller of the city who evidently had seen nightmares as a result of these outbursts of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), and when he heard the news came down in fear that here a "putsch" had been pulled, the red flag was up and there we were, totally ignorant of the thing and discussing Toronto's bill about taxation and hospitals and fair wages and things like that.

It took us quite a while before we calmed him down, and I assured him on behalf of the Labour Progressive Party that we had nothing to do with it, and knew nothing about it. That was the first I had heard about it, and I assured him that we were opposed to such things and that it was the act of either a prankster or of someone who wanted to pull a "Reichstag Fire" incident in order to justify another attack upon us.

Well, he quietened down, and after a while was able to proceed with some of the business before us, but it just illustrates what effect your "line" has in our present democracy and others like it upon people such as Controller Balfour and others.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I see that it is 11 of the clock, and it being the regular time for adjournment. Mr. Speaker, I draw your attention to the clock which is in front of you and which clearly indicates that it is past 11 o'clock.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: There is no reason why we should not go on. The hon. members would like to finish the debate some time Thursday night, if possible, and there are seven speakers yet to come. I do not want to push the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg), but he will have several chances to speak in the House, and if he could finish before midnight, we would be only too pleased to stay here.

MR. SALSBERG: I would appreciate it if the Acting Leader of the Government would agree to my suggestion. I do not think I could finish before midnight.

MR. KENNEDY: I have stayed here until 9 o'clock in the morning. Many mornings the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) and I have stayed here until 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): And had a good time, and enjoyed it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Had a better time than we are having now.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, in view of the pleasure the Government is getting out of my speech, I will continue, as they say, although I do wish to remark that it is somewhat irregular, and not quite in accordance with the courtesy usually shown by the Government.

Now, there is the big cry about Czechoslovakia. The hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) who raised the question is so concerned that he is now walking out of the Chambers when I begin to deal with Czechoslovakia.

May I say that I have no other opinion about Czechoslovakia than any other hon. member of this House who reads no more than the Telegram or the Globe, or for that matter the Toronto press alone. Whatever I know about Czechoslovakia is from reading, and from discussions with people, and on the basis of some of the observations I made when I was in Europe. I want to say that all this talk about the "putsch" and about the "Communist coup" is, in my opinion, a falsification of events which took place in that country. In my opinion there was no "coup," there was no "putsch"; there was an attempt at a "coup" and a "putsch" by the counterpart of the Tories in Czechoslovakia, which they led. I will not take up the time of the House in a long discussion on Czechoslovakia. We will have opportunities later, and those who genuinely want to find out will have an opportunity of reading more about it.

Let me say just this, that it is quickly becoming clear to those who have eyes, and wish to use them—for those who have no blinkers on their eyes—that in Czechoslovakia an attempt was made by the reactionary forces to upset the national unity government of Czechoslovakia, and to replace it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Did you read that in the newspaper? Where did you read it?

MR. SALSBERG: The ones who will be subservient—

HON. MR. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): How do you know that?

MR. SALSBERG: Hon. members have spoken of the hon. Premier of Czechoslovakia, that he was a usurper of power. They wilfully ignore the fact that he heads a party which received 38 per cent. of the votes in the last election. Some hon. members might say that is not a majority. Of course it is not.

But over on the other side of this House sits the Government which did not receive 50 per cent. of the votes of this Province, and yet they say they have no doubt but that they have the right to do anything they please, and not to share Government responsibility with any other party.

In the last Legislature, the Government, headed by the present Premier (Mr. Drew) did not have more votes than the Communist party in Czechoslovakia, less than 40 per cent. but the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) representing only such a small percentage, refused to share Governmental responsibility with other parties, and more than that challenged the Old Country on some very fundamental issues. He, as the head of a Government which had a minority vote, challenged the Dominion Government on the well-known question of family allowances. He was going to stop them. He also acted quite freely in municipal-provincial affairs.

In Czechoslovakia, as I can gauge it, there was a national unity government, and attempts were made to break up the national unity government, but the attempts were not successful.

Oh, yes, there were numerous battles amongst all the parties, and the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) who speaks about serious party fights in Czechoslovakia as being engineered from without, if his memory does not fail him, he ought to know that he participated in many inner-party fights in that party of which he was a member, and now is the leader. He knows that party fights take place. Yes, there were fights in it.

In Czechoslovakia, attempts were made to break up the national unity party, and those who opposed the breaking-up were replaced by leaders who favoured it.

They have in Czechoslovakia today a government which includes all the parties which were previously in government; the non-Communists are in there; the leader of the Socialist party is the Vice-Premier; members of the Socialist party are in the Cabinet; two of the Czech National Socialists are in the Cabinet; two of the Catholic Peoples' party are in the Cabinet; one member of the Slovak Democrat party is in the Government; and two non-party men are in the Government. They are the same parties that were there before and are there again. And, to stoop to such methods as exploiting the tragic death of a revered personality in Czechoslovakia in order to create hostility and animosity and to confuse the people, is very low indeed.

I have a clipping before me from last night's paper, and it says:

"900,000 in Czech church back Gottwald states the Bishop. The head of the church, with 900,000 members, says that he and his church support the national unity government—"

AN HON. MEMBER: He had better.

MR. SALSBERG: Fantastic stories are told about what went on in Czechoslovakia. I was not there when it happened, any more than any hon. member here, but I have before me the picture of two outstanding Canadian sportsmen who were there with the Canadian hockey team, and they say that the Czech people shouted, but it was for the hockey players, and they were there when they were supposed to be in all these riots, which were invented by certain newspapers in order to serve their purposes.

I might add this, Mr. Speaker, that all of the people of Czechoslovakia, of all parties, remember one thing which the Premier of that country emphasized, and he said to them "We have nothing to learn about democracy from those who have Munich on their consciences." They remember Munich. I believe that time will show that country is united behind that national unity government, composed of all parties.

I am afraid that what is really bothering the reactionaries in the world is not Czechoslovakia; what is bothering them and disturbing their peace is the fear of democracy. This may sound odd to you. I am quoting now from a headline in the Telegram which appeared yesterday, and it says:

"Could be war in Italy. Italy's votes bring in Reds."

Yes, there is the fear that the democratic processes in Italy may, through the ballot, elect a majority of Leftist parties—they are afraid of that.

So we need not talk about "conspiracy" and "coups" and "putschs."

Mr. Speaker, the first party in France, the Communist Party, received the highest vote of any party in a democratic election. In Italy the party has 2,250,000 members—the Communist Party of Italy. And no Russians were there. It is not in the Soviet zone of influence. The Czech Party has about 1,500,000 members. When I hear talk about "small groups," "conspiracies," "putschs," and all that, to my mind the size of these parties and the votes they receive in democratic elections, lead me to paraphrase Churchill and say, "Some groups; some conspiracies." To say that a party with 2,250,000 members is a "conspiratorial group" is nonsense. It represents the masses of the people of that country.

May I also add another point for the enlightenment of the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter). What is usually laughed at is, that the Socialist parties in those countries and other democratic, non-Socialist groups work hand in hand with the Communists there. The Socialist Party in Italy is a mighty non-political party. I do not know its membership now, but it is not far behind the Communist Party of Italy. It is they who propose to form a democratic block in the coming election, the Socialists, not the Communist Party.

So you have a party of 2,250,000, a party of Socialists with 1,500,000, or so, and other groups gettings together and forming a democratic bloc, placing single candidates in every field, and uniting their support behind a single candidate. It looks as if they will win the election. The reactionaries are fearful of this democratic development, and they speak of the danger of war if the Reds win in Italy, democratically.

Mr. Speaker, I am not here to attack any hon. member of this House, and I regret as much as anyone—and more than most—that an attitude seems to have been created here—not by us, but by others. I am obliged to say this to the hon. member (Mr. Chaplin) that to cry about “conspiracies” and “putschs” and “groupings,” does not correspond to reality in Europe, in Italy, in France, nor in Czechoslovakia.

To raise the cry that is raised by the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) and some hon. members, simply means a refusal to face facts, a refusal to recognize reality. It is either that, or a deliberate attempt, to confuse and mislead. It is either that, or something even worse, to create a war hysteria, and pave the way for plunging the world into another war. May I say that if that is the motive of some people, then they are committing a crime which no decent person should have on his conscience, that of contributing toward a war hysteria and a war.

Mr. Speaker, may I at this stage of my contribution say a few words about my trip to Europe. This is as good a time as any. Unfortunately, however, we are now in a period of the great hysteria; we are in the midst of the “big-smear” campaign; we are in a period of “big lies,” and because of that it is necessary for me to digress for a moment and deal with a matter that I had hoped would be unnecessary.

Most hon. members of this house, if not all, received a letter sent to them by “Responsible Enterprises,” by Mr. Gladstone Murray, memorandum, No. 61, in which Mr. Gladstone Murray says:

“Communists explain their support of the C.C.F.

“The attached photostat of extracts from the Communist organ the Canadian Tribune elaborates the new ‘party-line’ communicated from the Cominform to Mr. Joseph Salsberg, Communist member of the Ontario Legislative Assembly, who recently returned from a special mission to Moscow, Palestine and the Balkans.”

Mr. Speaker, before I share some of my views about Europe, I feel I must state to this House that there is only one word of truth in everything I have read from Gladstone Murray’s bulletin, and that is the word “Palestine.” As regards the rest, there is not a word of truth in it. I was not in Moscow, even though it would have been no crime to have been there. I was not in the Soviet Union, although it is no crime to go to the Soviet Union; I was not in the Balkans, although it is no crime to go to the Balkans—however, I was not there. I did not bring any message from any place I was not at, and the so-called “new-line” of the Labour-Progressive Party, which—is not so radically new—was agreed upon at a session held during my absence.

I was in Poland when the Dominion Council met here to discuss political trends and problems in the country. I say to you, Mr. Speaker, and through you to all hon. members that this is not true. I could use stronger language, and I would be justified in using it, but I still hope that Mr. Murray, in view of this explanation, will correct the misinformation he has sent abroad in this bulletin, which reaches most of the hon. members. I hope that he will do that.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say that the date of my going to Europe was actually determined by the hon. Prime Minister of Ontario (Mr. Drew) indirectly, of course. It is unfortunate that these things have to be explained, but in the days of the "big smear" they have to be explained.

It was more than a year ago when an organization which is interested in Canadian Jews of Polish origin selected a committee to go to Poland and see the conditions, and learn their problems. I was one of those selected to go. There was to have been a conference with other groups from other countries, but it was called off. A large number of people in my constituency, and outside, who knew me, and who have also a right to their opinions, thought that I might give a factual, honest report of what I saw there, and asked me to go.

A committee was formed for that purpose, but I would not go, because of the adjournment of the House in April, and the indefiniteness of our reconvening. Mr. Speaker, I have never missed a single sitting of this House since I was elected, and I have no intention of missing any.

However, I could not fix a date, and my going was postponed month after month. As a matter of record, I confided in an hon. Minister of this government in October, in strict confidence, and told him it was difficult to get transportation arranged. I said, "Do not tell me anything you do not wish to, but in view of the fact that the House is going to meet, would I be justified in booking passage on the Queen Elizabeth which leaves on November 1st?" He smiled, and said, "I am not saying anything that I should not, but I think you should book." That is when the booking was made. My going was known to all the hon. members of this House. There was a big "send-off" here—and for the sake of accuracy in The Globe and Mail, I will ask them to please correct their statement. Last year they misinformed the public; the "send-off" was here, not in Europe.

I went to Europe, not as an emissary of the party, although that would be no crime; my minister goes there, and other people go, and nobody questions their right. I know some hon. members will ask "Who paid for it?" The committee raised the money, and in this day of the "smear" I must also say they are in debt, and have not yet fully covered the expenses which were very modest. I travelled third class on the Elizabeth, and I hope to make up the balance of the deficit from public addresses which I will deliver under their auspices. You will bear with me for mentioning all these things, but they have to be mentioned, and be on the record.

I might say that throughout my trip I was in the closest touch with representatives of our Government, of Embassies and those of Ontario House. And may I at this moment express my sincere thanks and appreciation to our Agent-General in the United Kingdom, Mr. Armstrong, for his kind assistance and interest in my affairs while I was in London. It may shock the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) to know that the first house I visited after reaching London was Ontario House. I had no sooner cleaned up in my hotel room, than I went to Ontario House. I just felt like doing that. And I want to thank the Agent-General for his interest and for his helpfulness.

I also want to thank the representatives of Canada House, and other government representatives elsewhere, who helped me in the securing of visas, and arranging things with the American and British governments, under whose auspices I made my trip to Germany. I also want to thank Sir Howard D'Egville, the secretary of the Empire Parliamentary Association, who showed me undeserved kindness and consideration while I was in England.

My trip comprised England for a week, then into France, 4 weeks in the D.P. camp areas in Germany, 4 weeks in Poland, and 2½ weeks in Palestine. That was my itinerary.

About England I can only say this: I was very much impressed by the procedure in the House of Commons. Sir Howard D'Egville arranged for me to attend some very important sessions, and I was there when the Great Master spoke, defending what I thought was a very false cause, but he defended it in a most dramatic fashion. I am referring, of course, to Mr. Churchill.

I was impressed by the procedure. The fact is that the first hour of the House sessions is devoted to the answering of questions. It is the most interesting period of the session, when hon. Ministers get up and walk to the table and answer questions which are on the order paper. And I can assure you that there are scores of them. They allow hon. members to follow up, and ask supplementary questions, unless it is a serious deviation from the main question. The hon. Ministers do not mind answering them.

I was also impressed, Mr. Speaker, by the freedom of the hon. members on the government side. They heckle their own Ministers. They ask their own Ministers embarrassing questions, which no hon. member on the government side here would dare to ask. I was sitting there, and I thought to myself, "Well, well, well; if the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) or anyone else, dared to place the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), or any hon. Minister, on a 'spot,' by embarrassing questions, he would be led out of the house." I suggest we have a lot to learn.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): That is the only time they see their Ministers.

MR. SALSBERG: I suggest we have a lot to learn from their procedure and I hope that we do.

I saw remnants of the war scars on London and around London. There has been devastation. I saw the austerity conditions under which the people live, and I discussed matters both Canadian and Ontarian with responsible people of various parties and organizations. I even discussed Ontario bacon with responsible people in the British Government, as a private individual, of course.

I think the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) will be glad to know that I told a person who is as responsible as any man in England, in regard to British foodstuffs, of the special way our hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) and the farmers of Ontario were working in order to meet the British demand for bacon and other items.

On this point I might say, Mr. Speaker, that there is something to the suggestion of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) about the problem of marketing, which undoubtedly will be before us. I am sorry to see that. My impression, both there and elsewhere, was that while what has been done until now is extremely important in improving the quality and trying to adapt our production for their specific requirements, there will be problems, and I am afraid sooner than we expect. The marketing and selling will be affected, and I do not think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) was justified in brushing it aside. I think it is something that deserves consideration.

However, I left Britain with this feeling, Mr. Speaker, that we are able to do far more than we are doing to help the British people—and they need a lot of assistance.

I will not speak about immigration, nor Ontario's immigration scheme. I will have an opportunity on another occasion to do that. I do want to say that the system is very well organized. I am not opposed to what the government is doing. I do not agree with them all, as to how it is done, but to me it is very natural this government should want to bring in immigrants from the British Isles, and, to the extent that it is being done, the system is the finest and certainly the most expeditious that I have seen elsewhere.

I might add this point, Mr. Speaker, that whatever people may say about the question of immigrants who come in—whether they suit industry or not—I am inclined to think, Mr. Speaker, that no Fascists came in under that scheme. I wish I could say the same thing for the Dominion scheme. But I am left with this feeling that we do not do enough, because we are allowing ourselves to be "hog-tied" by American restrictions, and by other restrictions, and trade exchange, and so forth, more than I believe is in the interest of the British people and in the interests of Canada. That is true upon a whole lot of items which Canada could import, and a whole lot of material we could sell to them, which would ease their problem, and also solve some of ours.

In continental Europe, I have taken with me a few basic impressions which you might or might not care to have, but I have been asked by so many hon. members privately to tell them, that I will take the time now briefly to mention them.

One finds in Europe a lot of destruction and devastation, and tremendous suffering among millions and millions and millions of people. And the more one goes into the continent, the more one enters this vast area of destruction and hardship.

One is moved by the loss of the labour of centuries, destroyed by the war; works which required the genius of men for generations have been wiped out. And the farther east one goes, the more the destruction.

I do not quite agree with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) who spoke in this house about the impressions he got from Berlin, when he was there. If I recall correctly, he said that Berlin was so shattered, it was almost unthinkable it could be rebuilt. Well, Berlin has been devastated in many parts, and so has Frankfurt, and Munich and Hanover. Those are the areas I visited, because those are where the camps are located, but when I came to Warsaw I saw more devastation than I saw in Berlin, and when I told the Canadian Charge d'Affaire, he said, "Yes, Warsaw was destroyed, but if you go farther east, it is even worse." I spoke to Polish people, and they said, "Warsaw is devastated, but if you go to Russia you will see real devastation, where cities are completely wiped out," and I came to the conclusion that one should go to Germany from the east, rather than from the west; they would be prone to be less moved when they saw the suffering that was brought upon so many countries and upon so many people.

In Germany, I might say, that there is, in my opinion, a great deal of Nazism still left, of which some of the hon. members might possibly not be aware. Let me, therefore, quote from a British newspaper, a copy of which I bought in Poland. It is Beaverbrook's paper, the News-Chronicle of December 17th, and its chief correspondent writes of Germany, and I will give you three brief extracts, with which I fully agree. They express the exact impressions I took of them. And he said:

"The ragged, child beggars who scout the streets for cigarette ends place in sinister relief the newly rich class of 'black' farmers, industrialists, salesmen and functionaries who manage the vast illegal economy which spreads over the country like a web.

"Incidentally, ex-Nazis are among the leading traffickers and in centres like Cologne, Duesseldorf, Hamburg, Hanover, Frankfurt and Baden-Baden, virtually dominate the loose but effective black market 'bunds' that maintain a form of headquarters in the railway depots."

Then another quotation:

"In my opinion, which is based on many talks with British and German administrators, this parallel 'black' economy which is superseding the 'legal' system in Germany is aided and abetted and most German officials."

And then another few lines, the third quotation, in which he says:

"A high British official spoke frankly: 'We are afloat without a chart. I do not know what our policy is and I have no frame of reference to guide me. I am told we can advise the German administration, but that we must give no orders.'"

That is very unfortunate, because it makes possible the revival of these Nazi organizations and a recurrence of the evil which brought the world to disaster.

Permit me, Mr. Speaker, to say a few words about the main object of my mission, the Jewish condition.

There were 6,000,000 Jews slaughtered, aside from those who served in the armed forces of the various governments. Those who were slaughtered were of all kinds; they were not singled out because they were rich, or poor, or kind or unkind. They were exterminated, together with millions of others. I was in Warsaw where there lived at one time 3,500,000 Jews, before the war. There are only 100,000 left now. They were exterminated, together with millions of others.

I visited the D.P. camps where millions of people were exterminated, gassed, and burned, and one is affected by those observations and by these experiences in a manner that is difficult to forget. There was an attempt to exterminate an entire people, and in a very large measure, entire units were wiped out. In Warsaw, where lived 300,000 to 400,000 Jews, there is not a sign of a building standing, and the last 40,000 who were there in 1943 carried on an open war of 30 days which resulted in the final destruction of the whole area as big as some of our small-sized cities.

As for Poland, there is an awful lot of destruction. I failed to see any sign of an "iron curtain." Now, Mr. Speaker you, of course, would not see it, you would go in by the back door. Well, I did not. There was no back door, there or anywhere else, and again, I will quote Lord Beaverbrook's News-Chronicle, which I bought in Europe. It is dated December 7, 1947:

"I cannot speak for other Eastern European countries, but in Poland and Czechoslovakia the so-called 'iron curtain' is a myth. The foreign visitor finds nothing more substantial to penetrate than a piece of pantomime gauze. He is free in both countries to move and talk as he pleases.

"Both peoples are immensely proud of what they are doing to reconstruct their countries and both are ready to discuss its implications frankly."

That is the truth as I saw it. Every London paper was sold in the hotel at which I stopped in Warsaw. The Canadian Embassy, by the way, is in the same building, and a number of the Canadian diplomatic representatives held the same opinion.

The country was devastated terribly, but is nevertheless rebuilding itself. There is a great deal of reconstruction and they are building heavy industries and are pathetically anxious for friendship and understanding and trade with Canada. In my opinion Canada stands as high there as any one else, and I spoke to people who were clearing away the debris in a street, and there are whole streets still impassable in some of those cities; they were doing it by hand, and they asked, "Why cannot Canada sell us tractors in exchange for what we may be able to give them?" I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that these people deserve our friendship and our support, and that in the long run it will not only be the right, but the profitable thing to do for us and for them.

As to Palestine; I came there when the fighting was going on. I should say I am not a member of any Zionist organization, but I was deeply impressed by the tremendous progress that the Jewish community shows for the short period of their effort. Whole cities were built where there was sand-dunes 30 years before. Industry began to develop. Fine agricultural colonies have been established where there was nothing for centuries. There are hundreds of thousands of survivors of the Hitler régime in Europe among the Jews. I left Palestine feeling that all Jews and Arabs can, and in a very large measure do, get along. I have seen Jewish farmers and Arabs tilling their fields with nothing but an ordinary fence between—often with no fence between—and riding the same highways and working the same plant, and I was of the opinion, and I think it is correct, that most of the trouble comes from without. It comes from those few high families which have contaminated the life of the Arabs for centuries. In the trouble that is going on, innocent Jews and innocent Arabs and innocent Jewish soldiers fall. I have seen the British there too. In fact, I invited a few Scottish lads, as soon as their training is through, to come here, and I am sure the hon. Minister of Planning (Mr. Porter) will help them. They are fine lads from Glasgow.

I may say in Palestine I was conscious I was a Canadian. Every morning I opened the window in the hotel to see if the ship, Western Canada, was still in port. It was unloading lumber. The further away you are from home the more you look for these things. If you promise not to record it, Mr. Speaker, I even did not mind the hon. Mr. Drew's picture in Ontario House, when I saw it there. All I thought was that the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) should have his picture there. I leave that to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew). I wrote the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) suggesting that. I looked for it, and I saw a steamship lying there. I went down to the port, and I have a picture of myself standing on the barge that brings in Canadian lumber, and I really touched machinery marked "Massey Harris, King Street Plant."

In some of the Colonies I visited, they know our Guelph College. Those people on the land know it quite well, and I found a lot of things coming from this country to Palestine and I think there is a possibility for the development of trade. We are not competitive but quite complementary, and they are extremely anxious to trade. I was given complete statistics of Canadian-Palestine Trade, up to a year ago, and I meant to discuss them with the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter)—and I am serious in this. I do think there is a possibility of developing not only friendship but also trade between the two countries. I am sorry to say, however, that the policy pursued by the present British Government there is an extremely unfortunate policy—extremely unfortunate. It is not only in the eyes of the Jews, but I am convinced that Bevin's foreign policy in the Middle East is inviting disaster, not only in Palestine but elsewhere in that area.

You might say it is midnight, and I have not yet spoken about the points in the Speech from the Throne. What I said has relation to the Speech from the Throne. If you, Mr. Speaker, want me to wind up, I will make it very brief and come back to some of the points on another occasion.

I want to say, in my opinion, the Speech from the Throne failed in most essentials; that it gave me the impression that it was an attempt to touch everything and to be able to say in an election year—"Well, we dealt with housing, we dealt with everything else," and yet nothing is done fundamentally. I am sorry that the Speech from the Throne left out an item that I considered important—legislation to guarantee fair employment opportunities. I am sorry this was left out. I appeal to the Government year in and year out about that. I am sorry the old age pension was not dealt with properly, and I am obliged to say—and I say it regardless of what reaction I get—that there is no excuse for the fact that you failed to provide what is necessary for an older person to live on. There can be no justification for failing to do that.

As for Hydro; there will be bills coming up on this question, but I do think, Mr. Speaker, I am justified in saying that a wrong impression is being created in that this Government is going to give the people of Ontario a change-over to 60-cycle that will cost them nothing. I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that an hon. member is justified in saying that is fooling the people. It is not correct to give the impression that this will be for nothing. I want to repeat that. Money that will be used in the reconversion—and I am not speaking against it—will be money which would enable the Hydro to reduce rates otherwise. There will be no reduction in rates. The reserves and other amounts which have been used for reduction of rates, will go towards the payment of the reconversion. It is bound to. In other words, it will be paid for by the hydro users of this province, and I think we should say so, and make it clear.

On housing; just one word: I am quite upset about this, particularly when everyone acknowledges the price of housing and yet so little was done. The Dominion Government offered Toronto to build 4,000 houses, and the Mayor called a conference of the neighbouring municipalities and they decided to send a deputation to see the Premier and I read in the press:

"Tried for 29 days to see Drew, says the Mayor."

The Mayor of Toronto failed to get the Premier of this province in the same city, for more than a month, to discuss with him . . .

HON. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Is the member quoting from a paper?

MR. SALSBERG: I am quoting from the Star of March 5, 1948.

MR. SALSBERG: And, Mr. Speaker, I might say I asked His Worship the Mayor, a few days ago, whether he had had an opportunity of seeing the Prime Minister with the Committee of Representatives of the neighbouring municipalities and he told me, "No, he had not."

HON. MR. MICHENER: May I ask the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) whether the mayor said that he had asked for such an opportunity?

MR. SALSBERG: The Mayor said that he did ask and he did not get it.

I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that a matter of 4,000 houses, which the neighbouring municipalities are willing to have built in their area providing the Province will take some responsibility for education, should at least be discussed and when the Premier cannot be reached by the Mayor of Toronto and a committee of representatives of neighbouring municipalities, then I say it is serious.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is an entirely incorrect statement, Mr. Speaker, as to what the proposal of the Federal Government was. The proposal of the Federal Government had absolutely nothing to do with any contribution of any kind by the Province.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I am not holding it against the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) other than his inability to follow at this late hour what I said. What I actually did say, was that the Mayor of Toronto called a conference of representatives of neighbouring municipalities in regard to a proposition from Ottawa for the construction of 4,000 houses in this area, which could be built only on land available in the adjoining municipalities. The representatives of the municipalities came and said they would be willing to have these houses built if the Province was to assume responsibility for the educational costs which are being loaded on them and they cannot take it.

I am sorry to say the Hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) did not attend—I was there as an hon. member of this House and so was the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod). The only reason was I was told I should be there and I went. I thought it was my duty. I know what was decided and they have been seeking a conference and I think such a conference should take place and I think it is wrong that it is denied.

Mr. Speaker, I will leave some of the other questions till some other time. I am sorry for having kept you here so late. It was not my desire. Some hon. members managed to have a nap, others did not. The hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) did not and I spoke directly to him. If I kept you late, it is not my fault. You are witnesses to the fact I tried to avoid it but I could not help it.

I want to conclude by saying, Mr. Speaker, that the world today—and I had an opportunity of seeing quite a chunk of it—does not want war. The people of Europe do not want war, the people of Russia do not want war. They lost 17,000,000 people; the people of Poland with whom I mixed and mingled for four weeks do not want war, nor do the people of France or Italy, and we should not say anything that will create a war mood and a war spirit. There are things that are difficult to understand for some people, but we are living in an historic period and some of the things that appear odd will appear clearer in the days to come.

I have given you my impressions and I can say to you sincerely that the people whom I saw—and I think it is true for the whole of Europe—do not want war. They want peace, they want security and they are afraid of the return of those forces which in the past gave them nothing but want and Fascism and war, but these people were alarmed when they read Franco became a partner in the recovery programme. They know what Franco stands for. They are alarmed when they hear Turkey is a champion of democracy. They want security and they want friendship. And I want to appeal, for whatever it might be worth, to everyone from the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) down, to speak less about the need of war and the need to fight, and emphasize more the need for peace and the organization of the people for the people.

Mr. Speaker, I was in a tent which the Nazis used for the destruction of people, it is called "Auschwitz" in German and "Oswiecim" in Polish. Four million people were destroyed there—4,000,000. The government is keeping it as a museum, as the Americans are doing with Dachau, near Munich. In Auschwitz, 1,500,000 of those killed were Jews and 2,500,000 were non-Jews. I was in the gas chambers and ovens and saw the fruits of Fascism.

I want to draw your attention for half a second to what was pointed out to me as the "torture chamber" from which no one came out alive, and there on the wall of the torture chamber, clear to the naked eye one could see drawings of exclusive religious characters drawn by the Polish priests, and priests of other countries, brought there by the Nazis to be exterminated, in the hours before their death. You look at the wall and see Jesus on the Cross and you see the head of Jesus and you see Crosses all over worked into the wall with their finger-nails. That is all they had. That is the way they spent their last moments. That is Fascism.

I was in Auschwitz, in a chamber one-third the size of this Chamber, still used as part of the museum in which human hair, taken from the heads of women exterminated, is still kept. Let us not so readily throw our arms to Franco and to others in this great crusade against the democratic forces of Europe today, to strengthen Fascism and to give re-birth to that monstrous thing that has brought this destruction to the world.

I wanted to leave these last words with the House and to thank you for being attentive at this hour and I apologize for having kept you here but I repeat, it was not my doing.

MR. J. M. NEWMAN (Rainy River): Mr. Speaker I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion approved.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): What will we proceed with tomorrow?

HON. MR. KENNEDY: Bills.

Motion approved.

The House adjourned at 12.18 o'clock a.m.

And the House having met.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. T. A. MURPHY (Beaches):
Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the second report of the Standing Committee on private bills, and move its adoption.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Mr. Murphy from the Standing Committee on private bills presents the following as its second report.

The Committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 4—An Act respecting the Town of New Toronto.

Bill No. 11—An Act respecting the City of Peterborough.

Bill No. 17—An Act respecting Knox College.

Your Committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 25—An Act respecting F. D. Burkholder Limited.

Your Committee would recommend that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted on Bill No. 17, An Act respecting Knox College.

Ordered, that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted on Bill No. 17, An Act respecting Knox College.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, moved by myself, seconded by Mr. Kennedy, that a Select Committee be appointed to direct the expenditure of any sum set aside in the estimates for art purposes, the said Committee to consist of:

Messrs. Duckworth, Chairman, Chart-rand, Creighton, Davies, Hamilton, Martin (Haldimand - Norfolk) and Robinson.

Motion approved.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

TRAINING SCHOOLS ACT

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Scott, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Training Schools Act, 1939, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved, first reading of the bill.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) give us an inkling of the purpose of this bill?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, Mr. Speaker, this is to increase the per diem allowance from $1.00 to $1.50 for all training schools in the Province of Ontario. That means that 50 per cent. will be paid by the province and 50 per cent. will be paid by the municipality, an increase of 25 cents to municipalities and 25 cents to the Government.

MR. BELANGER: Will that apply to unorganized territories, also?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: In the case of unorganized territories, we pay the full $1.50.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Grummett, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend The Workmen's Compensation Act, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

ACT RESPECTING THE PROVISION OF SERVICES BY THE PROVINCE AND MUNICIPALITIES TO PERSONS OCCUPYING DOMINION CROWN LANDS

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, moved by myself, seconded by Mr. Blackwell, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act Respecting the Provision of Services by the Province and Municipalities to Persons Occupying Dominion Crown Lands, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DREW: I think it would be well if I were to give some explanation of this bill, in view of the fact that I referred in general terms to the introduction of such a bill earlier in the week, and to the possible effect it might have on some bills introduced in connection with various acts relating to the administration of the Department of Education.

The effect of this bill is to provide that where suitable arrangements have not been made to pay for provincial and municipal services in any of these areas which are now Crown land or held by Crown companies or other agencies of the Crown in the right of the Dominion, that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may exclude such area from the local municipality and the county, if any, in which it is situated, for the following amongst other, purposes:

- Education
- Fire and police protection
- Planning
- Highways
- Sewers and sewage disposal
- Garbage disposal

Public health, including hospitals and hospitalization

Welfare including relief and payment under any Act of this Legislature with respect to the inhabitants of the area

Public utility as defined in the Department of Municipal Affairs Act

The payment of any grant by the province in relation to such area or the inhabitants thereof

And other purpose in respect to which provision is made from time to time that any municipality or the province may spend public money.

Without going into further detail of the effect of this Act, I might explain that this Act has become necessary as a result of the difficulties which have arisen in relation to those areas of Crown land or land occupied by agencies of the Dominion Government in the form of Crown companies or otherwise, which were set aside for war purposes. Since the war emergency classes and reasons for which they were originally set aside have disappeared, the areas have in many—if not all—cases, continued either as Crown land areas or as areas under the control of agencies of the Crown.

As most hon. members are aware, difficulties have arisen in a great many cases. In fact I think it would be correct to say that difficulties have arisen in most cases in reaching satisfactory adjustments between the Dominion Government and the province or the municipality, as the case may be, for compensation offered for those services which the province or the municipality would, in the ordinary course of events, supply to those coming within their jurisdiction.

It will be noted there is not a blanket exclusion of those areas under this Act, but simply the provision that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may exclude any of those areas from a municipality or county, as the case may be, if satisfactory arrangements cannot be reached. This Legislature should know that it has been impossible for many municipalities to reach any arrangement at all with the Dominion Government in regard to satisfactory compensation for services they are called upon to perform.

In effect, the result of this decision to exercise control over these areas by the Dominion Government during the war—an exercise of authority which I am not questioning at the moment—has resulted in a number of areas within this province, which are really small areas directly under the Dominion Government, and not under the ordinary authority, either of the province or the municipality in which they are situated.

Unless such an Act is put into effect and becomes law as a result of the decision of this Legislature, there is no effective way to enforce satisfactory agreements in the interests of the municipalities, which are called upon to perform the major services mentioned.

I would remind hon. members, however, that there are very important services also offered by the Provincial Government, which are affected by this Act. May I mention, as an example, education? In a number of these areas there has been no indication of willingness by the Dominion Government to reach an agreement which would take care of the costs of education in those areas, where all the people are tenants of the Dominion Government, and where they receive the whole revenue from that land.

That, Mr. Speaker, is a very unsatisfactory situation from the point of view of the municipalities, and from the point of view of the Provincial Government. Other services, such as policing, are in a similar position. This Act simply makes it possible to decide whether these areas are to be dealt with under the ordinary provisions of the provincial or municipal services, or are, by the decision of the Dominion Government, to be regarded as separate areas over which they must assume full responsibility, as well as exercising complete control.

That, Mr. Speaker, is a brief summary of the effect of the Act, and the purpose it is designed to serve.

LABOUR RELATIONS ACT, 1944

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Grummett, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend the Labour Relations Act, 1944, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HAMILTON ST. ANDREWS BENEVOLENT SOCIETY

MR. R. E. ELLIOTT (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Knowles, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act respecting the Hamilton St. Andrews' Benevolent Society, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

RESPECTING THE CITY OF TORONTO

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Duckworth, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act respecting the City of Toronto, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

FUMES CONTROL ACT, 1948

MR. R. H. CARLIN (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Grummett, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled The Fumes Control Act, 1948, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

CANADIAN NATIONAL EXHIBITION

MR. T. A. MURPHY (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Duckworth, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act respecting the Canadian National Exhibition, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I rise to draw to the attention of the House the fact that this is the anniversary of Ireland's patron saint, St. Patrick, and on this occasion all people honour the Irish, and the Irish honour themselves, with a very good time.

There was a period when such an instrument as I have in my hand at the moment, a shillelagh, was used very effectively on skulls, both Irish and non-Irish, and with an abandon that at times was somewhat distressing. Actually on this particular one there are a number of shamrocks engraved, all the better, possibly, to use in case of emergency.

Now, fortunately, the Irish resort more to their ready and quick wit than to brawn, to get out in front of their fellow men.

There was a period when Irish bards and literary men in other nearby countries tried hard to outdo each other by throwing back and forth limericks and rhyming couplets. On one occasion an Irish poet was out in front of his home brushing the sidewalk with his broom, at the curb, when a Scottish bard came along and said to him:

"You Irish loon, lay down your broom,

And let a Scotsman by."

And the reply instantly came back:

"You Scottish ass, there's room to pass between the curb and I."

And it is my hope, Mr. Speaker, that there will be plenty of room to pass, not only today, but into the night for Irishmen everywhere, and that the morrow will find few broken and few heavy heads.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. T. A. MURPHY (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, being the only native-born Irishman in the House, I cannot allow this occasion to pass without adding a few words to what the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) has said.

I have been in this House for a great many years, and during all that time, the hon. members have always honoured the birthday of the patron saint of Ireland.

I can recall some years ago when the dean of the House (Mr. Nixon) and the hon. members to my right, who are senior to the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and myself, were the only four continuously-sitting members for the past 20 years or more. On many occasions, during the régime of different hon. Prime Ministers, there was an Irishman in the corner of the room from the County of Renfrew, who used to get up and eulogize the patron saint. His name was "Tom" Murray.

On this occasion I wish to thank the members of my ladies' organization, in my riding, for the beautiful bouquet of shamrocks which is placed on my desk, and it is their wish that each hon. member in the House take a bloom from this shamrock, which came from the good "ould sod," and I will have pleasure in conveying my thanks, and the thanks of the House, to the ladies' organization, and to all the Irish in Toronto, because we celebrate, not only today, but for several days, the anniversary of our patron saint.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. M. C. DAVIES (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, in rising to acknowledge the patron saint of Ireland, I think it is vitally important to recognize that the patron saint of Ireland came from the little principality of Wales, and for that reason, being a thoroughbred Welshman, born in Wales, it is impossible for me to wear the shamrock, but I will be glad to smoke the pipe, because it is a useful gift.

I think it is quite important to trace back the origin of St. Patrick to that great little land which has contributed so much to the world, which has meant so much to the freedom of the peoples of the world and while we recognize St. Patrick as being the off-shoot of the Welsh we, as Welshmen, think we should receive due recognition for our contribution and the well being of this freedom which we now enjoy.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I wish to deal with a matter that has occurred since we met yesterday, a report of which appeared in today's press.

What the members of any provincial legislature in Canada may do or say in regard to their own affairs is something with which these legislatures alone are concerned. But when the member of the Government of any other province takes it on himself to make a statement, and particularly a most inaccurate statement, about the conduct of another provincial Government, then that becomes a matter of very real concern to the other Government.

Yesterday in the British Columbia Legislature, the Attorney-General of that province, the Honourable Gordon S. Wismer, said that the Governments of Ontario and Quebec were depriving the rest of Canada of increased social security. He is further quoted by the Canadian Press as saying:

"In Dominion-Provincial taxation negotiations, neither Premier Duplessis of Quebec nor Premier Drew of Ontario gave an indication they were willing to settle the question of taxation for all provinces."

He then went on to say that he did not believe Ontario or Quebec had any intention of signing a tax agreement, and he was further quoted by the Canadian Press as using these words:

"Those wealthy provinces . . . which syphon many millions from British Columbia should give consideration to the people of Canada as a whole. If the taxation agreement is not satisfactory to Ontario and Quebec, there must be a compromise. The people of Canada will not stand for their attitude much longer."

There would be no reason to correct Mr. Wismer in regard to any statement he cares to make about the affairs of his own province. But when he makes such an improper and untrue statement about the position of this Government, it is my duty to this Legislature to deal with it immediately.

I can quite understand some people, who have no personal knowledge of what took place, being affected by the propaganda of the Dominion Government over the radio, through the press, and elsewhere, which seeks to build up the impression that Ontario and Quebec brought the Dominion-Provincial Conference to an end. After all, they have no way of checking such statement with their own personal knowledge and it is only natural that in many cases they should not know how utterly untrue such statements are. But this excuse is not open to Mr. Wismer. He attended the Conference. He knows what took place. He knows that the Conference did not adjourn because of any action by the Governments of Ontario or Quebec, but that it adjourned on the motion of the Dominion Government for the stated purpose of considering the proposals then before it. Since that time, this Government and many other Provincial Governments beside that of the Province of Quebec have been urging the Dominion Government to reconvene that Conference. The only reason there is no general agreement today between the Dominion and all the provinces is because of the arrogant attitude of the Dominion Government and their flat refusal to reconvene the Conference.

I would remind the hon. members of this Legislature that the first proposal for such a Conference, and in fact the basis upon which the Conference was called, was contained in the original request by this Government for such a meeting. Mr. Wismer is fully aware of that fact because he attended many of the meetings.

The hon. members of this Legislature will recall that as recently as November 6th last I again urged upon the Dominion Government the need for such a Conference to deal with health, social security measures and taxation. You will also recall that on November 15th I received a reply from the Acting Prime Minister of Canada in which he refused to reconvene the Conference, without offering any explanation or giving any reason.

If Mr. Wismer will read the record of the Conference which he attended, he will find that at all times the Ontario Government expressed its consideration for the people of Canada as a whole and made it clear that every proposal we put forward was with the thought that the full resources of the whole country should be pooled to the advantage of the people of Canada, of every part of Canada.

Mr. Wismer is well aware, no matter who else may be ignorant of that fact, that the health and social security proposals put forward by the Dominion Government were conditional upon the provinces agreeing to the imposition of a new and additional 5 per cent. income tax on all incomes without exemption, plus a poll tax on every man, woman and child of 16 years and over, whether earning any money or not. In the case of Ontario, that poll tax was estimated at $12.00 a head. Neither the British Columbia Government, nor any other government in Canada, indicated any willingness to accept those proposals which were an integral part of the overall health and social security measures put forward by the Dominion Government.

The Ontario Government is not only willing to sign satisfactory agreements, it was the first Government to urge a Conference for the purpose of reaching that result. It has continued to press and will continue to press for such a Conference. It will never, however, submit to arbitrary and dictated terms such as those put forward by the Dominion Government since the Conference adjourned.

If Mr. Wismer really desires general agreement between all governments, then let him urge the Dominion Government to meet all the other governments in a general Conference so that we may discuss our mutual problems around the council table in a manner which recognizes that we are one nation with a federal system and not nine independent states within the sphere of influence of one autocratic authority.

That, Mr. Speaker, was our position then. It is our position today.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move you do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House.

Motion approved.

House in Committee; Mr. Reynolds in the Chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 45th Order.

COMMISSIONERS FOR TAKING AFFIDAVITS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The 45th Order; House in Committee on Bill No. 72, An Act to amend the Commissioners for Taking Affidavits Act, Mr. Blackwell.

Sections 1 to 4 inclusive approved.
Bill No. 72 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 46th Order.

CHANGE OF NAME ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The 46th Order; House in Committee on Bill No. 86, The Change of Name Act, Mr. Blackwell.

On Section 1.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, on Section 1, which is the definition section, I desire to propose a series of amendments, affecting each subsection.

By way of explanation I want to say that these amendments make no change in the intended meaning whatsoever, but merely use the present drafting methods of the legislative council. That section was just taken without reflection from the old section.

The changes I suggest are these:

"In the first three definitions, the words 'shall mean' be struck out, and substituted therefor, the word 'means.'"

Similarly in the last five definitions, the expression "shall include" be struck out, and substituted therefor the word "includes."

Mr. Chairman, I move these amendments.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Is that not incorrect, Mr. Chairman? In subsection "G", the amended copy I have received reads "means" instead of "includes." The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) said that in the last five definitions the words there were struck out, and the word "includes" was substituted.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I want to thank the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). He is quite right, and I appreciate his drawing it to my attention.

In the second last definition, strike out the words "shall mean", and substitute the word "means." Thank you.

Sections 1 (as amended) to 3 inclusive approved.

On Section 4.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): I have not read the bill, Mr. Chairman, but may I ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) if this repeals the old Act entirely?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Yes.

MR. NIXON: Are there any changes in the procedure from those under the old Act?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: For the information of the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), the explanatory note is set up for the purpose of directing the minds of the hon. members to any change in principle, and that explanatory note, I assure the hon. members, is comprehensive. Does that satisfactorily answer the question?

Mr. Chairman, if the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) wishes me to read the explanatory note, I will, but I find myself in a much better position if I see it with my own eyes, than from somebody else's comments.

Sections 4 to 11 inclusive approved.

On Section 12.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, if my hon. friend (Mr. Blackwell) can get some information from Section 9 without reading all of them, he is better than I am.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I think that is perfectly true, Mr. Chairman. I think any hon. member who wishes to take the responsibility of doing that, has to check all this through. I think the hon. members are generally in agreement with that. That is what we have had to do ourselves.

Sections 12 to 25 inclusive approved.

On Section 26:

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Before the bill is reported, there is one point, I do not know whether it should be elevated to the importance of principle or not, but I would like to draw to the attention of the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) that there is one change in the structure of the bill which is not mentioned in the explanatory note, and that is that services are no longer required to be made upon the Attorney-General. The matter is made an entire proceeding in the court.

Section 26 approved.

Bill No. 86 reported.

HON. MR. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): 48th Order.

That the Registrar and every local registrar of the Supreme Court shall be paid a fee of 50 cents for each statement of divorce furnished to the Registrar-General, in accordance with subsection 5 of section 27 of the said bill.

HIGH SCHOOLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 53rd Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 76, An Act to amend The High Schools Act, Mr. Drew.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) if figures are available to indicate how many children will be involved in these Crown Companies, like Ajax?

HON. MR. DREW: No, not covering the whole province.

MR. OLIVER: I would like to have them.

HON. MR. DREW: I would be very glad to obtain such information as is possible in that respect. I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will recognize that one of the considerations is the fact that some areas are under agreements and some are not, but I will get an approximate figure, at least, for his information.

MR. OLIVER: Thank you.
Sections 1 to 9 inclusive approved.
Bill No. 76 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister) : 54th Order.

TEACHING PROFESSION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 54th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 82, An Act to amend The Teaching Profession Act, 1944, Mr. Drew.

HON. MR. DREW: No, but the executive has been increased to 9.

MR. OLIVER: To what figure?

HON. MR. DREW: 9.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 55th Order, House in Committee on Bill 83, An Act to amend The Department of Education Act, Mr. Drew.

Bill No. 83 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister) : 56th Order.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 56th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 84, An Act to amend The Public Schools Act, Mr. Drew.

On Section 1:

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, if there is necessity to amend The Public Schools Act in that respect, has it been considered whether The Separate Schools Act is also to be brought into line?

HON. MR. DREW: As far as that is concerned, as I explained before, these Acts are adjustments, in this case called for by serious changes that have taken place, and in so far as any changes are required in The Separate Schools Act, they would have been pointed out.

MR. BELANGER: I remember years ago when the question arose as to the power of a Board to expropriate, we found that the same powers were not given in The Separate Schools Act as in The Public Schools Act, and we had to make changes at that time. And now, I was just wondering—I have not looked into the matter—if you were making a change in The Public Schools Act regarding these powers, whether The Separate Schools Act has been brought into line?

HON. MR. DREW: As far as that is concerned, the separate schools are covered by Section 55 of The Separate Schools Act.

MR. BELANGER: For instance, subsection 2 of section 1 is further amended by adding thereto the following clause:

"The purchase of a bus or buses or other vehicles for the transportation of pupils."

Apparently this is meant to apply only to public schools. It only relates to The Public Schools Act.

HON. MR. DREW: That is all that can be dealt with under The Public Schools Act. This is an amendment to The Public Schools Act.

MR. BELANGER: I know, but I am asking the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Drew) whether consideration has been given to changes in The Separate Schools Act so as to bring it into line?

HON. MR. DREW: Yes.

MR. BELANGER: It has?

HON. MR. DREW: Yes.

MR. BELANGER: Will that be put forward to this Legislature?

HON. MR. DREW: This is covered by Section 45 of The Separate Schools Act, which provides that:

"The Trustees of the Separate Schools may—" and it is set out in that section, which the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) will recall, with all the detailed powers as there set out.

"(m) exercise all such other powers and perform all such other duties of public school boards as are applicable to the case of separate schools, except as to matters as to which other provision is made by this Act."

The amendment in this case carries with it an application to the separate schools under subsection (m) of section 45.

MR. BELANGER: So the officials of the Department do believe that this omnibus clause in The Separate Schools Act will include this also?

HON. MR. DREW: It is not a case of "believing," there is no doubt about it. I want to emphasize the fact that section 45 makes applicable to the powers of the trustees of the separate schools all provisions under The Public Schools Act, except such as are specifically covered by some other Act, and as this is not covered by any such specific provision, that omnibus clause brings the effect under the general powers of The Separate Schools Act.

MR. BELANGER: Yes, Mr. Chairman; I think it is a good thing if we get an authoritative statement of this kind in the House on occasion, to be broadcast so that trustees of Separate schools will know that they have this power under the omnibus clause.

HON. MR. DREW: I am very grateful to the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) for having raised the point, as it will explain the effect of a number of these amendments which, as he has quite correctly pointed out, deal with public schools particularly, but there is no necessity for a separate act because of that general clause.

MR. BELANGER: Because effect will be given to the separate schools at the same time?

HON. MR. DREW: That is right, subject only to the qualification that I have mentioned.

MR. BELANGER: Yes, of course.

HON. MR. DREW: Except in so far as there is some specific provision in another act dealing with that.

MR. BELANGER: Yes, we will see to that.

MINING ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 60th Order, second reading of Bill No. 63, An Act to amend The Mining Act, Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 63.

In so doing, I may say that this bill is, as the hon. members will have seen, a complete revision of the Mining Act. I know that some of the hon. members opposite will recollect when the Mining Act was last revised in 1939. At that time, the hon. Mr. Leduc was Minister of Mines and I recollect at that time we asked some questions concerning the nature and extent of the Act which was then introduced, and I suppose that the same questions might be asked now.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to tell the hon. members of this House that this Act contains an immense amount of technical detail which they would probably like a chance to look into. I could give them this outline.

A complete revision of Part Eight of the Mining Act takes place usually in intervals of from five to ten years. I would say the last revision took place in 1939, nine years ago. This is not, by any means, a haphazard revision. Preparations for the proposed revision have entailed an enormous amount of study and discussions with special reference to the Report of the Committee which dealt with the Paymaster Mine Disaster. You will recollect the Paymaster Mine Disaster involved the breaking of a rope in a mine shaft with very deplorable loss of life. At that time we had a committee under the chairmanship of Dean Young of Toronto University go into the matter, investigations were made concerning conditions which obtained in South Africa and other places. This study which has been made of the Mining Act has involved considerable changes, particularly with those dealing with hoisting ropes and matters of that sort.

The Chief Inspector, Mr. Tower, with his staff, made a draft proposal of the changes which we had in mind. The Department of Mines had previously taken this matter up with other mine departments in Canada—all of the provincial mine departments and the dominion department, and, in fact, met in conference with the heads of the various departments and which under the chairmanship of, I think, Colonel George Cole of Winnipeg, former member of the Department of Mines in Manitoba, considered a great number of changes, with the result—with all the experience which we had as a result of studies we had made, the report of the Paymaster Committee, the reports of the Interprovincial Committee on Mines, the Mine Minister's Committee—the Committee under the chairmanship of Mr. Tower, made a complete revision of the Act. Mr. Tower is the Chief Inspector and under him are a number of other inspectors stationed at various points in the province. These men are all engineers and are technical experts. Mr. Tower's inspectors therefore went over it and revised it. To make sure, we were getting the views of everybody a total of 818 copies of this draft bill were sent out for discussion, comment and suggestions. Of this number 409 copies went to mining operators, 201 copies went to labour unions, 96 copies to scientists and mining engineers recognized as authorities in their own field; 94 copies went to rope hoisting manufacturers and manufacturers of electrical equipment and mining machinery, and 18 copies were sent to Accident Prevention Associations and Workmen's Compensation Board and others, and, furthermore, notices were posted in mines and in public places asking advice and the opinion of workmen in connection with this whole problem. So that you will see, Mr. Speaker, that this matter has not been taken care of by the Department of Mines only, but a very wide distribution has been made of this Act to obtain the very best information possible from any person or any combination of persons who are interested in the mining industry.

Following the distribution of the Act, the mines in each district formed committees to discuss suggestions, and then a central committee was appointed to co-ordinate the efforts of all the reports we would get and all of the information and all suggestions that were obtained, to reconcile any conflicting views, and there were some conflicting views presented.

Mr. Tower, the Chief Inspector, and his staff obtained the best information available on the problems involved, and then discussed them with scientists, mining engineers, manufacturing concerns and anybody who was interested in the problem. Following this, a central committee had been set up by the mining operators and they held a series of meetings with the Chief Inspector and his staff during January, and finally, a draft of the amendments was completed on January 24th.

I should like again to point out to the hon. members of the House that opportunities were not merely given but comments were invited from mining engineers, labour unions and anyone who had any suggestions of any kind or nature to make in relation to this revision of the Mining Act.

The suggestions dealing especially with hoisting apparatus and mining cables, as contained in the Report of the Paymaster Committee, was adopted in the main, and any departure that has been made from the suggestions of the Young Committee has been made after conference with practical men.

Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of this bill I may say this, that we invite the comments of all of the members of this House. This is a very important bill—in many ways a very highly technical one, and one which involves matters of the utmost importance to a very great industry. If any of the members of this House would prefer to discuss the matter with the officials of the Mines Department themselves, I would be very glad to arrange that. I would be very glad to have Mr. Ruckbie and Mr. Tower and others engaged with this work sit down with any of the members of this House and discuss the problems arising out of any of its sections with them. I quite realize the difficulty of laymen taking the sections, particularly in Part Eight of this Act, and having any reasonable understanding as to what they mean.

Now as I say, any of the hon. members of the House that would like to discuss this matter with the members of the Mines Department, I would be very, very glad to arrange that.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South) : Mr. Speaker, I appreciate what the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) has said about hon. members conferring with the different officials of the Department, and I think it would be a good idea. At the same time, Mr. Speaker, I feel that in an important Act of this nature the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) should prepare and deliver to the House a summary of the important changes incorporated in the Act.

Quite a number of Acts have been introduced by the different hon. ministers here at this session and frequently the expression has been used, "We will have an opportunity to go into the changes, in committee." We sit here in committee and the bills are passed, "Shall section No. 1 form part of the bill?" and-so-on, and there is no discussion.

I think we must find some way where these measures are more fully discussed in the House. I think that the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) has put his finger on the proper solution. Committees of the House or all interested hon. members should be permitted to meet with the hon. minister who is introducing a bill, as the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) has done, and we could then discuss the outstanding features of that bill, those of us who want to learn the particulars of the bill.

The way bills are introduced here, we try to follow them, we try to find out what they mean, but there is not sufficient time; we have to do so much research work. I suggest that we follow the hon. minister's (Mr. Frost) idea and have the hon. members or a committee of the hon. members meet with each hon. minister that is introducing a bill, if it is of an important nature, and find out what it contains.

I have been very dissatisfied with the system of introducing legislation and the lax, careless way in which we pass it through the House. For once I see a ray of light in the suggestion made by the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) that will help us.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister) : If there is any lax, careless way of dealing with this, the responsibility is entirely with the hon. member who has just spoken (Mr. Grummett), and any other hon. members who fail to raise the question on any of these bills when proceeding through committee. After all, never at any time in this Legislature since the present Government took office has any attempt been made of any kind to close any discussion off, anything in the nature of arbitrary proceedings and the bills are heard in committee and if they proceed without question that is the whole responsibility of the hon. members who have not asked the question.

I want to make a most emphatic statement, there is no laxity in the method of presenting them and if there has been any failure to obtain information, that failure is only the result of not asking questions while in committee.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods) : Mr. Speaker—

HON. MR. FROST : Before the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) speaks, may I say in reply to my hon. friend who has just spoken, the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) that actually there is no change in any principle involved in this bill. My hon. friend knows on second reading it is proper to discuss the principle of the legislation involved. I can assure the hon. members of this House that there is no change in any basic conditions, in the Act itself. The principles are the same.

There are, however, a great host of changes in detail and that means it would be impossible to go over these things, in fact, it would be a waste of the time of the hon. members of the House to go over this matter in detail, section by section, at the present time because that will be done in committee.

I may say, however, in part eight of the Act the hon. members will notice that there are regulations which are set out in great detail.

I well recollect when we were in opposition some years ago we raised a question at that time, in 1939, as to why these multitude of sections were not included in the regulations and I suppose that question might be asked here this afternoon. The purpose is this; at that time I well remember the hon. Mr. Leduc, Minister of Mines, said they desired to have the force of a statute behind these regulations—or perhaps I should not say regulations, but what might be regulations, if another course were adopted, and for that reason he argued, and we accepted the view, it was quite proper these things should be placed in the Act and made statutory, and that is the procedure we are following at the present time.

I find that representations which have been made by miners and individuals who are interested in mining all take the position that these rules should have the full force and effect of a statute and that no government or any inspectors should be allowed to change them or make them any easier, and they should be very strict in their application and they should be strictly enforced and adhered to, and that is the reason they are in that method.

As far as my hon. friends opposite are concerned, this bill is very lengthy and involves, as I say, a host of highly technical matters. If the hon. Leader of the Opposition and the hon. member from South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) would like to canvass their members and find out those would like to meet me, I would be very glad to have them meet the officials of the Mines Department in the Mines Library on any morning or any other time satisfactory to you, and I can assure you any information concerning the host of technical details contained in the Act will be readily available for you and an explanation can be given by men who are highly qualified to give you the required information.

MR. GRUMMETT: The hon. minister (Mr. Frost) referred to the fact 800 copies had been prepared, or more, and sent out to different parties. I was wondering why perhaps some of us in the Legislature did not receive a copy.

HON. MR. FROST: Perhaps you are not a miner.

MR. GRUMMETT: We, as members, have to consider this bill and I think it would have been extending a courtesy to us if we had received a copy.

Now, replying to the remarks of the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), I would remind him this bill was placed on our table somewhere about one o'clock or later today and here we are asked to go into the second reading.

When I spoke before, I did not want to refer to the fact I have protested here many times about rushing these bills through. I did not want to raise the question but I do now. We are rushing legislation through this House without due consideration.

HON. MR. DREW: I do not intend to carry this argument back and forth. The hon. member (Mr. Grummett) knows perfectly well we are in second reading and the principle of the bill is before the Legislature.

There is no "rushing" of the bill before the House; the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) has made what seems to me to be a sensible and logical suggestion of dealing with this by offering to place the officials of the Mining Department at the disposal of such hon. members, and that includes the whole group, if desired, on the Opposition side of the House, so any questions in relation to this may be asked. He furthermore said he would do it any morning or any other time convenient to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. Leader of the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett).

MR. GRUMMETT: I wish to make it abundantly clear that I am not criticizing the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) by any remarks I made. He is the first one who has given us this opportunity. My remarks were in reference to other departments and not in regard to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost).

MR. A. A. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I realize there is a very heavy social engagement later on and I do not intend to speak at length on this question.

I feel in the circumstances the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) did what he was called upon to do on second reading. I do not see how he could have given what has been suggested as a "summary" of all the provisions in this bill because many of them are technical and, as he suggests, I think that can best be handled by the technical experts.

I am wondering, however, if the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) would agree that since second reading marks the most important stage of the piloting of the bill through the Legislature, whether second reading could not stand over until the hon. members have had an opportunity to have the details of the new section of the Act explained to them.

It seems to me it would be rather a routine matter, let us give it second reading then we will go into a session with the experts later. You may feel we should just carry on and give it second reading and then anything we might be in doubt about can be cleared up in committee stage, but if you are not pressed for time in as much as the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) has expressed apprehension in dealing with the bill in a hurried fashion, perhaps it would not put you out if second reading were withheld and let us try to arrange the type of meeting that you propose within the next day or two. I might ask the hon. minister (Mr. Frost), would that put you out very much to have second reading stood over?

HON. MR. FROST: I might say this, Mr. Speaker, I have no feelings of opposition whatever to letting it stand; the only question is this, Mr. Speaker, it is a question of the best method of effectively dealing with this thing. I can assure the hon. members of this House there is no question of principle involved in this. I discussed that with my Deputy-Minister, Mr. Rickaby, and this has involved, as I say, a tremendous amount of detailed work and I asked him specifically if this thing involved any change in principle. I may say this, that I was under a very definite obligation to tell my own colleagues that, if there was a change of principle I should advise them as to what the change of principle was.

There is not any change of principle in the Act, but there are a host of technical changes.

I would leave this to the hon. members opposite. If they desire a second reading of the bill to stand, I am perfectly prepared to concur in it. On the other hand, I do not think there is much to be gained by doing that. I think it would be better to let the bill have second reading, which is, after all, more or less routine, and then we will hold it out of committee until such time as the hon. members opposite have had a thorough opportunity to go into the whole question. If you are satisfied with that, I will give to the hon. members the undertaking that we will not rush this bill into committee stage. I would prefer not to do that. We are most anxious that any suggestions for bettering this Act should be made by the hon. members of this house, and we will give them every opportunity.

May I say to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) that I do not know how the 818 copies were sent out. Perhaps the hon. member looked at it as one of those folders which one gets occasionally, simply glances at, and throws away. However, I will inquire into that.

Notices were posted all over the country, and I suppose the technical men in the Mines Department, who handled this matter, overlooked the fact that sometimes elected representatives are more interested in these things than they imagine. I am sorry the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) should have been overlooked.

MR. MACLEOD: Was there a satisfactory response from the unions to which you sent the report of Dr. Cole?

HON. MR. FROST: I would say this, Mr. Speaker; the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) might make that inquiry of the mines inspector, when the opportunity is given. I will say, however, that no objections have been raised in so far as I am aware from any of the unions concerning this matter. There have been suggestions from private individuals, all of which have been considered, and which have been weighed, and the best solution has been adopted in each case.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, before you put the motion; I think the hon. members of this House will appreciate that the suggestion made by the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) is one which will find favour amongst the hon. members generally.

As to the advisability of proceeding with second reading of the bill at the moment; I, for one, believe that the ends of justice and good legislation would be served equally well by giving the bill a second reading at the present time, and allowing it to proceed to committee stage. What will be gained to the hon. members by withholding second reading, is hard to say. It is a very long bill, and if the hon. members who are interested, from the opposition groups, are given an opportunity to analyse the proposed changes, in consultation with the officials of the Department of Mines, and then time enough is given before the bill is brought back into the House in committee, I think we can say to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) that he has gone a long way indeed to meeting what I think was a very reasonable request for going into this matter fully. I think we all appreciate that a bill of this magnitude—and certainly of this length—is one which cannot be passed over casually, but should be given special, intensive study on the part of those hon. members who are interested, and more particularly than others, in this matter.

My suggestion, Mr. Speaker, for what it is worth, is that we should give this bill second reading now, and then carry on the procedure as suggested by the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost).

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 68th Order.

AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT FINANCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 64th Order, second reading of Bill No. 93, An Act to amend the Agricultural Development Finance Act, Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 93.

In doing so, Mr. Speaker, I would say that its provisions are merely a regularizing procedure, which has been followed for many years. Perhaps the hon. members will have looked up the section in the old Agricultural Development Finance Act, which is being repealed, and the proposed bill brought forward as a substitute, and if so, they will see it is a matter really of regularizing the proceedings.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 65th Order.

NORTHERN DEVELOPMENT ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 65th Order; second reading of Bill No. 94, An Act to amend the Northern Development Act, Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): This is another technical matter —

SOME HON. MEMBERS: It is not printed.

HON. MR. FROST: Then we will let it stand.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 61st Order.

INDUSTRIAL STANDARDS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 61st Order, second reading of Bill No. 81, An Act to amend the Industrial Standards Act, Mr. Daley.

HON. CHARLES H. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this bill, with this explanation, that on the introduction of the bill, a very comprehensive explanation was made of the aims and objects, and the reasons for it, and the explanatory note which is supplied here very clearly explains the purpose.

I move second reading of Bill No. 81.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) how long the gasoline service industry was under the provisions of the Industrial Standards Act.

HON. MR. DALEY: About two years.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I wish the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) had decided to deal with this bill as did the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) in connection with a previous bill, by throwing it open for discussion and explanation as to why he is prepared to put this onus back on the municipalities.

When at home last week-end, I had several of the garage owners in my area come to see me about this. The Garage Operators Association have made various proposals to the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley); they have offered compromise proposals along the line of a zoning system, in effect at Ottawa; they have agreed to waive all legislation during the months of July and August to take care of the tourist industry, and they certainly do not want this condition to revert back to what it was, prior to the last two years or so. They feel it is definitely going to put the little garage operators out of business.

It is utterly impossible to expect the small municipalities to pass legislation which will be effective in the interests of the garage operators.

One can only assume that this legislation is prompted and promoted by the larger oil companies, because the only people who are silent in opposition to this bill are the garage operators which are operating garages largely financed by the large oil companies.

I sincerely plead with the hon.

Minister (Mr. Daley) to give this further consideration, and give us the opportunity of hearing some of the pros and cons from the people actually affected.

I am not referring to the labour legislation which applies to those men employed in this industry, and working for these garage men, but I do apply it to the small garage owners who are sitting up half the night—or having their wives sit up—in order to stay open, to stay in business and to make a living. I do not think there is any need for that. If there was need for it, we should pass legislation to make Eaton's and Simpson's stay open on Saturday afternoons, because the people cannot do their shopping otherwise.

I think that people can buy their oil between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., just as well as they can buy their bread, milk, and other commodities, and I do fail to see why the garage owners should not be extended this very mild request in connection with the legislation.

I certainly urge the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) to give it further consideration.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, this bill looks simple enough and innocent enough. All it seeks to accomplish is to refer back to the municipalities the question of the regulation of hours during which gasoline service stations may remain open.

However, there is more to it than meets the eye.

The hon. member who spoke previously (Mr. Taylor), mentioned the small gasoline distributors in his community, who came to see him about this bill. I, too, have been approached, and I am sure most of the hon. members of this house have been approached. We received telegrams from the association speaking on behalf of the people in Ontario. Therefore, we know something about the problems involved.

I have already raised this question, and am raising it again, that the Government should agree to the very reasonable request made by the association to refer the bill to a committee, to give every interested party an opportunity of appearing and arguing their case. I think there is reasonableness in that request, and that the Government should accept it.

The manner in which a previous bill was discussed I think was quite satisfactory. The hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) explained how the matter was presented to all parties, opportunities given to change, amend, or improve the bill. He agreed it should have further investigation. Yet the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) tells us, when I raise this point, that he has already discussed it with all parties, and he can see no further need for additional discussion. Well, the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) may have discussed it with all parties, but all parties evidently are not satisfied with the conclusions to which the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) came.

A most important party to this problem, the Association, speaking for the operators, feel dissatisfied, and ask for the opportunity of discussing it further in a committee of this House, and I think the least we can do is to give them that opportunity and give us an opportunity to hear what they have to say.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say what hon. members are saying privately, and what I have heard said by other people, that the big gasoline combines are behind this bill.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: Now, Mr. Speaker, I am only saying aloud what has been said by other people, including hon. members of this house. Whether that is so or not, I do not know.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Then why do you say it?

MR. SALSBERG: I am repeating what has been said, because—

HON. MR. DREW: It suits your convenience.

MR. SALSBERG: —when such talk exists, there is all the reason in the world why the request of the Association should not be refused. On the contrary, because of these talks, we should give them every opportunity to appear.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Have you lost confidence in municipal government?

MR. SALSBERG: I will come to municipal government in a moment. I am speaking now about the Provincial Government.

Spokesmen for the Association explained to those whom they could reach that while the big oil companies may benefit, it will completely upset a system which has been in existence for a few years, and which is eminently satisfactory to people actually distributing the gasoline; not the big companies, like the Imperial Oil and others, who distribute the gas through distributors, but they maintain that for the first time the industry has attained a condition that permits a reasonable amount of working hours, that permits gasoline operators to enjoy family life, to go home and be with their families, and they explain further that they provide opportunities for outlets to remain open in the evenings in given areas, so as to serve motorists who may find emergency requirements necessitate the opportunity to procure gasoline. I think it is quite satisfactory. We can all get into the habit of filling the tank during the regular hours, and if an emergency occurs, if the public is provided with a station within a reasonable distance, to secure emergency gasoline, there is no cause for complaint.

This affects the well-being of a considerable number of people in this province.

Then the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) asks "Have you no confidence in municipal government?" Yes, I have. I think municipal government is far closer to the people, and far more sensitive to their opinions, than the Provincial Government.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I agree with you.

MR. SALSBERG: But I may say, Mr. Speaker, that it is not a problem which municipalities alone can handle satisfactorily. For this reason it would be quite possible for Galt to decide to keep the gasoline stations open until 12, while Preston would close them at 6 o'clock. Of course, the business will flow where it is open, with the result that the Preston gasoline stations, the owners and employees, will feel obligated to do the same thing as Galt, and the result will be a destruction of the regulations and controls, and of the system that now prevails, within a very short period of time.

Toronto, for instance, can decide to establish closing hours at, say, 6 o'clock or 7 o'clock or 8 o'clock, but there is nothing to stop New Toronto, Long Branch or the Village from keeping the stations open, and, of course, the result will be that the Toronto station operators, the lessees, and their employees, in order to make a living, will be obliged to follow suit, and before you know it, they will all be working the longest hours established by the nearest community.

I feel that this matter is sufficiently important and affects a sufficiently large number of citizens of the province, to warrant the bill being referred to a committee.

The refusal on the part of the Government to refer it, raises the suspicion that they are under the influence of forces which are more influential than the thousands immediately engaged in that industry.

I do not see why the Government would want to leave itself open to such suspicion. I ask that this bill be referred to a committee. I think it is the fair thing to do, and I think it is the least we can do. The refusal to do that will, of course, leave everyone free to think as he pleases about the forces and the influences behind this bill and the role of the Government in this matter.

HON. CHARLES H. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it would ever be possible for the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) who has just spoken to approach a bill, and discuss the benefits or merits of the bill without bringing in some nasty insinuations?

MR. SALSBERG: What did I say?

HON. MR. DALEY: My record in municipal life and in this House is just as clean and as fine as his.

MR. SALSBERG: But I did not insinuate anything, Mr. Speaker.

HON. MR. DALEY: When he makes a statement that pressure from the big oil companies has been put on me, then he is making a statement that I simply will not stand for.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, may I correct the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley), with his permission? I did not mention the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley). I did say that there is talk that the big oil companies—

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Just an insinuation, that is all.

MR. SALSBERG: —but that has nothing to do with the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) who introduced the bill.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): You are true to life.

MR. SALSBERG: I did not say that—

HON. MR. DALEY: I think you would probably succeed more if you would adopt a little different attitude on some of these things, because there are some decent people left in this world.

MR. SALSBERG: Of course there are.

HON. MR. DALEY: I would like to say that as far as the major oil companies which you have mentioned are concerned, what they would prefer is no regulations at all.

MR. SALSBERG: That is right.

HON. MR. DALEY: I have never known—

MR. SALSBERG: This is the opening of the wedge.

HON. MR. DALEY: I have never known any of them to want them. I will, however, go as far as to say this: I am in sympathy with the operators of those stations, and I am willing to admit that these regulations that we have, have brought numerous benefits to the—numerous benefits—and we are by a complementary act endeavouring to retain those benefits for them, with the exception of the hours of closing.

Now, in creating a zone under the Industrial Standards Act, it has always been felt necessary to overlap a municipality. To be fair, you have to have a zone, and it is almost impossible to confine it in some cases, not in all, to a municipal boundary, at least I have found it that way, and in designing these zones, we have found it necessary to overlap municipal boundaries. But what has been the result? Every municipal government that was affected has, by resolution in their own council, demanded that this Government return to that municipal government the right, the time-honoured right that it had always held, to administer its own municipality. This bill is simply to return to them that right, which until prior to a year and a half or two years ago, under the Industrial Standards Act, these regulations came into effect was theirs.

I would like to say also that there is a great misunderstanding in connection with this Act. My hon. friend for Temiskaming (Mr. Taylor) said, if I understood him correctly, that the operators in his municipality protested this. This is not in effect in Cobalt. This has nothing to do with Cobalt, there are only four cities affected by this legislation, there is Windsor, there is Brantford, Hamilton and Greater Toronto; it is not in effect in any other place. It does not affect any other place.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): No, but—

HON. MR. DALEY: Any other hours of closing are governed in the way that this Act will permit, that is, by municipal authority, by petition of a percentage of the operators, should 75 per cent. request certain hours of closing in any municipality, a municipal government must pass a by-law to that effect. The municipal authorities can, on its own initiative, pass a by-law without a petition, but upon having a 75 per cent. petition submitted, they must pass the by-law.

We have endeavoured to retain for the industry the benefits that have accrued to it, we have endeavoured in another Act to make it possible for the municipal governments to do the very things that will be requested of them by the operators, and I can only say that it is the policy of the Government to return the authority to the municipalities that we feel is rightfully theirs.

MR. TAYLOR: I would just like to correct the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley)—or rather, not to correct him, but probably to enlarge on my statement when I referred to the garage operators of my own area. I might say I spoke to the Garage Operators Association three weeks before I came down here, on which occasion this matter was discussed, and the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) will probably bear me out that the Garage Operators Association all over the province have been more or less conforming to this zoning regulation that concerns the four cities you referred to, and they have been operating under more or less a gentleman's agreement on that basis.

Now, they feel that if this wide-open legislation is to be taken away from them, or returned to the municipality, that they will lose all the benefits they have gained over a period of years.

In my particular area, the situation is this, that we have some 5 municipalities involved in approximately 10 miles. How are you going to get 5 municipalities, a mining area, a farming area, and so on to agree and reconcile their legislation to be satisfactory to all the garage operators in that area? It is an utter impossibility, it cannot be done except by provincial or federal legislation. That is the point I wished to make.

HON. MR. DALEY: There is another point, another reason why it should be returned to the municipalities and that is that in defining a zone, one has of necessity to cut across a municipality. For instance, in Scarboro, the zone cuts right across the township of Scarboro. Immediately that zone is defined, somebody—and it has already been done in many cases—goes just outside of the zone and builds a station. Then you have the necessity of changing the zone again. Where the municipality can define any portion or all of their municipality to conform to the wishes that they receive, either through petition or on their own initiative, to manage their own municipality, I do not think that there is any way that we can escape returning that authority to the municipal government. If the operators in any area want certain regulations as far as the Industrial Standards Act is concerned, they can have the wage contract, the hours of work provision covers the hours of work angle, and if they can convince the municipal government that hours of closing should be such-and-such, then there is nothing to stand in their way.

MR. SALSBERG: Except that you multiply the border problem a thousand times over. Is that not right?

HON. MR. DALEY: Well, I do not know any other way that we can do it, and as far as consultation is concerned, I think I can safely say I have had a hundred different groups, and I also have had resolutions—to repeat myself—from every municipal government affected by this requiring that they be permitted to—

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): May I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) while he is on his feet how is it that so few municipalities are to come under this Industrial Standards Act? If it is so popular with the employees and operators, why, having said Brantford, should not London or Woodstock or Galt be included?

HON. MR. DALEY: The way it comes about is this, there is what the Minister might consider a reasonable request for a conference. I should say that in the province we have many requests that would have been dealt with except for the difficulties that this thing has entailed. Windsor was the first to make a request, a conference was granted, and at the conference, a very substantial majority of those engaged in the industry approved of it. Regulations were set up and it became law in Windsor and the surrounding area, including East Sandwich and Tecumseh Road. There lies the difficulty: East Sandwich said: "We will not have Windsor tell us when we are going to close."

MR. TAYLOR: That is my argument all over again.

HON. MR. DALEY: I am giving you facts.

MR. SALSBERG: That is an argument against it, though.

HON. MR. DALEY: And so it went all through the piece. Hamilton made representation for this and by a very substantial majority of those in the business requested certain regulations, but to confine it absolutely to the city limits of Hamilton was very unfair to a number on the easterly end, and so the zone was to take in a small portion of Wentworth County. Immediately, Wentworth County said: "We do not want this; we are not going to let Hamilton tell us when we are going to close."

The same thing occurred around the entire City of Toronto, North York, Scarboro and so on. Representations had been made by those people who opposed these regulations, that: "We want our rights. This is a free country and we want our rights returned. We want our municipal government to have the power to adjust this thing for itself."

Therefore, the Government has had to decide that as far as hours of closing are concerned, that is the only thing they can do.

MR. TAYLOR: Would you have the same regulations for liquor stores? If a municipality asked for its liquor store to be closed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, would this Government be prepared to concur in that?

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): This is not liquor.

MR. TAYLOR: I think the Garage Operators Association is a democratic organization, I think you will agree that they represent the majority of people in the Province of Ontario, and all they are asking for is a blanket law to close service stations at 7.00 o'clock at night. Then I do not think you would need to worry about your zones, and passing the buck back to the municipalities.

HON. MR. DALEY: We are not passing any buck back. I have resolutions from all these municipal councils. We are not passing the buck.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, could the hon. minister (Mr. Daley) tell the House when these requests from municipalities came in?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, I would just like to ask, on a point of order—

MR. SALSBERG: I beg your pardon?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, ordinarily it would not be my purpose to try to choke off any ordinary questions, but this debate has degenerated now into repeated questions of an argumentative nature in relation to sections, and I really think that hon. members should speak once only unless there is some good reason otherwise, and then confine themselves to the principles of the bill.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether that is the end of the hon. Attorney-General's (Mr. Blackwell) contribution, or not.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Excuse me, I have not spoken on it yet. I am going to, but I rose on a point of order, I think.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, I certainly gathered the impression that there was a speech coming.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: There is.

MR. MACLEOD: And I wanted to convey to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) that I would like to have a moment or two before he delivered the knock-out blow.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Watch the clock now.

MR. MACLEOD: I do not think I would be violating what is expected of hon. members of this House at this stage in the debate on the bill if I merely repeat, or underscore, what I consider to be a very fair proposal. The hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), who is a very genial and reasonable man—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, a very genial and reasonable man, and a very decent man—I have always found him to be that.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You are looking for something?

MR. MACLEOD: No.

HON. MR. PORTER: There is a sting in that one.

MR. MACLEOD: No, and if I were looking for it over there, I would not get even ordinary courtesies.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) says that he has had many discussions, many consultations, with both parties, and that he has tried to the best of his ability to get a solution, and the bill before us represents the best that he can achieve in the circumstances. Now I suggest to the House, Mr. Speaker, that in the Committee on Miscellaneous and Private Bills during the last couple of days, we have had brought before us bills that have been discussed at great length by such an august body as the Municipal Board. You have gone into it, your Board has gone into it, and you are great experts on the question—no doubt about that—and yet a bill, covering a specific piece of legislation, is referred in the ordinary course of events to a committee. The Committee on Miscellaneous and Private Bills is an all-party affair, the Conservative members constitute a majority of that committee, and that committee from day to day hears representations from various groupings of people who are sponsoring legislation, and the hon. members of this House, all of them I believe, have received a telegram from an organization which presumes to speak for 30,000 people—that is an awful lot of people, it is even an awful lot of votes—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DALEY: I never thought of that.

HON. MR. PORTER: You do not need to tell us that.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: See how many you get.

MR. MACLEOD: I would ask you not to overlook that.

The hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) asserted that this Government is going to be in power for 30 years.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I was putting it mildly.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, we all know the effects of the Thirty-Years War—

MR. SPEAKER: I think the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) will agree with me that it would be better if he were to speak to the point.

MR. MACLEOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker, having mentioned the Thirty-Years War, I think I had better get back to the subject.

I would suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) that he will lose absolutely nothing by allowing this bill to go before the next session of the Committee on Miscellaneous and Private Bills, and let the officers of the organization that sent us the telegram appear and explain their point of view. It can be settled in a day, and we will all be much wiser. We will have knowledge of the situation that you possess and that we do not possess, and it will not delay the legislative programme of the House at all and everybody will be satisfied. It is a very reasonable request, and I cannot for the life of me see why you are so adamant on this question.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Carried.

MR. MACLEOD: Do not choke off the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell).

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, the first thing I would like to do is to associate myself with the mild protest of the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) that, almost invariably when a socialist rises to speak in this Legislature, he predicates what he has to say by making some inference not warranted by anything that is before the Legislature. There always is the insinuation that there is a big interest, or what not, lurking in the background. Both groups seem to do it, both the real socialists and the communist group, who are realists and know where they are going while the other socialists merely pave the way for them—

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Or the Tories, who go nowhere.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL:—and as Mr. Churchill put it, are “sheep in wolf’s clothing.”

MR. MACLEOD: Get the quotation right; it is “sheep in sheep’s clothing.”

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Yes, that is right.

HON. MR. GEO. A. DREW (Prime Minister): They are the people you are going to support.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is the kiss of death.

I would like to deal with the question whether or not this is a suitable subject to place before a committee. The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) has emphasized the fact that certain types of bills before this House are at times referred to committees, and as an example, I believe he referred to such Acts as the Municipal Act, Assessment Act. May I direct the consideration of the House to the nature of such bills. Those are the type of bills where the ordinary function of a department of Government does not lend itself to the gathering of the necessary information for the Government to take responsibility in putting forward the bill as settled policy without that process.

I would like to distinguish the present bill. No matter what sort of a committee the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) might refer this bill to today, it will not add one iota to the knowledge of this subject matter by the Minister who has the responsibility of putting forward recommendations to the Government. There will be nothing developed from that process that would assist him or assist the Government in taking the responsibility it must take for the public policy behind this bill.

MR. SALSBERG: What about health amendment?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Under those circumstances, I would like to make a reference to the fact that it has been brought to the attention of the Legislature that the hon. members have received a number of wires asking them to use their influence to send the bill to a committee. I think that every Minister of the Crown, and certainly some of the hon. members of the opposition, are perfectly familiar with the technique of the modern use of the telegram. This happens to be a case—and no matter how sympathetic the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) to the group of people affected within the Regulations under this Act may be, he already knows what his responsibilities are, and it would be, if I may so put it, a vulgar gesture to pretend that the functioning of that committee would be of assistance to him.

Under those circumstances, it is his duty and that of the Government as a whole not to bury his or its responsibility in a committee. That is one of the things that is wrong with Government in this country, the lack of willingness to assume responsibility of Government and to frankly put forward the reasons on which they base public policy. I commend that thought to this Legislature because I think it is of some importance, Mr. Speaker.

Now, coming back to the subject matter of the bill itself, I know some of the facts with which the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is well acquainted. The fact is that prior to the emergency regulations creating the early closing of gasoline stations in wartime, as a service measure, the lot of both the operator of a service station and those that were employed in the service station was definitely an unhappy one. Most of the operators were lessees. What they did, generally speaking, was they took the business responsibility, they took the risk, they had to buy their equipment, and they had an agreement that they would sell exclusively usually the products of one of the companies, and I do know that under those circumstances, it was a very difficult task for the average lessee to make a living in the operation of a gasoline station, let alone his help. Therefore, when it was discovered that during the war, in relation to what gasoline could be sold, that he sold for the same amount irrespective of what hours the station was open, it was a perfectly natural deduction for those who operate gasoline stations and those who work in them, to come to the conclusion that all the improvement in their circumstances was the result of early closing regulations.

Under those circumstances, under the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act—and I have to make reference to that Act to make myself clear—the type of by-law that could be passed was limited in its scope as compared with the type of regulation that could be passed under sections of the Industrial Standards Act. It related to an infeasible system of early closing, and had nothing to do with the other matters that were dealt with under regulations of Industrial Standards Act, such as minimum wages and hours of work.

Therefore, any desire to have a system in operation in gasoline stations that would do something more than merely provide for early closing, approaches were made to the Minister responsible for the administration of the Industrial Standards Act. Now, his position was a very simple one. He was the Minister charged with the responsibility of administering a public act in this province. Therefore, it was his duty, and he was bound to give consideration to these representations that were made to him and to call the conference requested that led to the establishment of zones in the five areas in the Province mentioned—not necessarily the same area as the municipal bounds. But we had a difficulty arise and it arose immediately. The whole difficulty that created irritation and difficulty under this Act was the fact that we never created a permanent boundary to a zone. If the municipal boundary line is the zone, then what happens if regulations are not applicable in the next municipality? Then, big gas stations will be built just outside the zone. But when you take the metes and bounds description of a municipal boundary, and instead of that we will say “make metes and bounds description of a zone,” you establish in principle exactly the same thing. Left to their own devices, the large companies build stations, and so you have got to decide whether you are going to go through the process of expanding and expanding zones until, in effect, you get the matter province-wide or whether you have got to revert to municipal responsibility.

Now, let me leave no doubt in anyone's mind as to what these combined Acts accomplish. The combined amendments to the Industrial Standards Act and the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act, enables a municipality to pass under its municipal authority a flexible type of bill that was impossible under Section 2, I think it is, of the Act as it stood. In that Act precisely the same definition has been adopted as in the Industrial Standards Act itself, and consequently, the by-law is directed to the conduct of the business, and that is an improvement because before by-laws broke down before the magistrates by reason of the difficulty of determining whether something was a person's principal business or whether it was not. That is cleared up by the present amendment. Also that provision in the amended provisions permits flexibility as to variation of hours, closing for part of the season, Sunday permits in rotation, rotation through the days of the week, as is capable of accomplishment under the Industrial Standards Act itself.

And all that can be effectively done by that agency that traditionally in this province has always dealt with the question of early closing, and that is the municipal level of Government. Let me put it to you this way, that in any single municipality conditions will vary, regulations will require revision from time to time or by-laws will require revision from time to time in relation to the change of conditions, and there is no level of government that can do that job as a municipality can that is close to those circumstances and has intimate and local knowledge of them.

Let me emphasize this, that as far as these very same regulations are concerned as to hours of work and minimum wages, may I emphasize that that part of these regulations is, by an amending Act, confirmed, and they remain in existence in those zones.

There is a further picture I would like to make plain about the confined legislation of the Department of Labour, as I see the picture. At the time the Industrial Standards Act came into effect we had no collective bargaining legislation in the Province of Ontario; we had no Hours of Work or Vacations with Pay Act. And so, if I might describe it this way—

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): That was immediately after the defeat of the former Tory Government we had all those.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Don't be silly.

MR. SPEAKER: I think we should have a little order. You have already spoken.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, there is a divided field; there is a field that is occupied by organized labour where, according to the varied circumstances in that field, better agreements under collective bargaining can be obtained in relation to wages and working conditions than possibly can be obtained under any standardized legislation that goes across the whole field of activity. But in relation to that unorganized field there is the other arm of the legislation of the Department of Labour, of the hours of work and vacations with pay and the minimum wage provisions of these very regulations under this Act which are not put forward by the Department of Labour as being the goal, the ideal, but which are written there as a floor to protect these people who have not got combined power of collective bargaining. In relation to this particular field there is open to it organization for one thing. There is this protective legislation of that department on Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act and the Minimum Wage structure which that Department proposes to continue and all that this legislation does is take off one part and that is the mere question of early closing. It leaves that subject to the very flexible by-law provisions that I have mentioned.

I want to close, Mr. Speaker, with this thought because it has been emphasized among those who own and operate stations there has been a strong demand for the continuance of that legislation. Might I remind the House, however, that very recently garage operators themselves met, and the views that they expressed that appeared in the Press did not indicate by any manner or means they were entirely satisfied with the effect of these regulations because, may I suggest this, that even within the confines of a municipality the size of Toronto if the score was examined today, what would be found? It is the big down-town stations that are getting the increase in gasoline business, and the suburban stations are finding they are losing business.

Before this question is well solved, Mr. Speaker, I am quite satisfied it will not be well solved on the mere question of early closing, it is deeper and a more difficult subject than that, and I am quite sure that the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) will devote his consideration to bringing forward the best recommendations he can from time to time to deal with that very, very difficult unorganized field.

Mr. Speaker, may I say a word. As sympathetic as the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) may be, as sympathetic as I may find myself, the Government of the province cannot be entirely impressed by what any group in a community in Ontario may ask for. There are other groups; there are the tourists; there is the travelling public; their organizations such as the Good Roads Association, the Ontario Motor League, and others, who also happen to be citizens in this province, and entitled to consideration. And the job of government is not to be the advocate or representative of any one of the groups, but is to find, according to the best judgment it can exercise, under the conditions as they exist, what is the fairest compromise, which deals most equitably with these competing interests, and competing rights.

I put this forward with great seriousness, because that is the job of government.

Mr. Speaker, I want to take the position of very definitely supporting the position taken by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and all he said, in his motion to move second reading of this bill.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 62nd Order.

VITAL STATISTICS ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 62nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 91, The Vital Statistics Act, 1948, Mr. Dunbar.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 91. The Vital Statistics Act, 1948.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) if he will in a few moments indicate what is new in this bill.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: There is not very much new. It is a revision of the Act. There are some new sections which I would prefer to discuss as we go along, section by section, at which time I will be prepared to give you an explanation. We have worked on this for a few years, co-operating with the Department of Vital Statistics in Ottawa. Mr. Marshall has visited our office, and we have had our men visiting the department down there. We also have had our men attend the conventions called by the department in Ottawa, and we have endeavoured to make this uniform for the Province of Ontario. So much so, that we have had people coming here to visit our department. Just last week the Deputy Registrar-General from Saskatchewan spent five weeks here, three weeks in the department, and two weeks out on the road, with our inspectors. We have also had several people visit our department from the United States. They all feel we are performing a great task, as far as we have gone, with these new birth certificates, and we have sent our inspectors throughout the province assisting the Deputy Registrars in the different municipalities.

What we are interested in is registration, nothing more than that. We want to see that every child born in the Province of Ontario is registered, that every marriage in the Province of Ontario is registered, and that every death is registered. We want posterity to say that at least we did a good job on this bill.

I think when this has been completed, and we have studied it when it goes to the House in committee of the whole, and discussed section by section, you will agree with everything that is in it.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, on this bill I want to say something which I hope will not shock the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), nor the hon. members of the Government. I fully agree with the principle of this bill. I am very glad to see it presented. It deals with matters raised by myself in this House in 1944. The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) at that time promised there would be legislation brought down. Well, departmental wheels grind slowly but at long last, the legislation is down, and I am very glad to acknowledge that, and the fact that this legislation is finally before the House.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 63rd Order, Bill No. 92.

FEMALE REFUGES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 63rd Order, second reading of Bill No. 92, An Act to amend the Female Refuges Act, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 92, the House will recall that this amendment simply brings—

MR. SPEAKER: May I check the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell)? We have been going along a little irregularly. The question is not before the House. Let us get things in order now.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I apologize, Mr. Speaker.

Motion approved, second reading of the bill.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): You lost a chance to make a speech.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 66th Order.

ADOPTION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 66th Order, second reading of Bill No. 95, An Act to amend the Adoption Act, Mr. Goodfellow.

HON. WM. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 95.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 67th Order.

THE APPRENTICESHIP ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 67th Order, second reading of Bill No. 96, An Act to amend The Apprenticeship Act, Mr. Daley.

HON. MR. DREW. Mr. Daley is not in his place. I will call the 32nd Order, Bill No. 58.

MUNICIPAL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 32nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 58, An Act to amend the Municipal Act, Mr. Salsberg.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 58, An Act to amend the Municipal Act, and I would like to say a few words.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is similar to the bill I introduced to this House at a previous session, and if I repeat some of the arguments used then, it is only because the arguments advanced a year ago evidently did not influence the Government and its supporters, and they voted against the bill.

However, I am sure that other hon. members of this House consider this bill as an important one, and it has been brought up again in the hope that it will be carried.

What the bill seeks to achieve is to so amend the Municipal Act as to leave no doubt whatsoever about the rights of municipalities to engage in the buying, storing and selling of milk within the boundaries of the municipality. It is essentially permissive legislation, but legislation that is required.

I know, Mr. Speaker, that in the past, arguments were advanced that any municipality which wished to do that, may do it, and that no new change in the Act was required.

However, it is also known that the argument was advanced in certain municipalities—at one time in Toronto—that under the present Act a municipality has no right to buy, store and sell milk. The Act does permit the municipalities to do that in so far as fuel is concerned, but it did not specify milk, and there was some argument as to whether “food,” which is also included in the old Act, is broad enough to include milk. I do not think we should leave any loop-holes or any doubt in the minds of those who within a municipality may desire to engage in the distribution of milk by the city itself. It is an important question.

It is true that the Government has had the milk problem before it for quite a while now, and unlike the confidence which the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) displayed before when he spoke about governmental responsibility, and that the “Government must take its stand,” they did not display that responsibility on the milk question; they referred it to a Commission instead, and got reports, and introduced a bill and then withdrew it in the middle of the session, and we are still waiting for legislation which will indicate a responsible Act in regard to the question of milk, that is so important to the population at large.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, may I ask what bill was withdrawn?

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, we are discussing Bill No. 58, which is an amendment to the Municipal Act—

HON. MR. DREW: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has spoken about a bill that was put before the Legislature and then withdrawn. I would like to know what bill that is.

MR. SALSBERG: I was under the impression that the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) introduced a bill, and my impression was that it was withdrawn. I may be mistaken.

HON. MR. DREW: Your impression is, as usual, quite wrong.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: If the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg), Mr. Speaker, will accept it as an act of kindness, I think I can recall what happened.

It was indicated to the House at the time the amendment to the Milk Control Act was before the House, that there was a question of policy in relation to the report of the Commission as to what the Government might or might not put before the House, in relation to what is dear to the hon. member's (Mr. Salsberg) heart, and that is, the municipal distribution of milk. I believe that it was indicated at that time that the sort of amendment as proposed here was not very helpful in that it would not enable municipalities to go into the milk business on a utility basis, which I think is what the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) was talking about.

At that time, the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) himself was very well satisfied to leave the matter, and to wait and see what the Government might propose.

Now, I feel he might take the very same attitude this year, in view of the fact that the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) has some legislation pending. However, he hurdles into the situation again, with the same little bill as last year. I felt I should draw this to his attention.

MR. SALSBERG: I appreciate the latitude shown to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell). I am very glad, because although he did not quite recall what I had in mind, that is, as to whether it was correct or not, he did speak about the bill before us, but he has forgotten the bill I introduced last year, and the bill which is before us now, are pretty much the same, and we did not, and do not, seek to make a public utility of it.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I did not suggest any such thing.

MR. SALSBERG: There will be another bill regarding that, which will be introduced later, I believe, by another hon. member of this House.

I do hope the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) was not serious when he referred to this bill as a "little bill." All it seeks to do is to add one little word, that is all—"milk," which would, if enacted, in the opinion of certain legal authorities, remove all question of doubt about the right of a municipality to go into the distribution of milk.

I suggest that this is a "little bill" as the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) suggests, as it only seeks to amend the bill by the addition of one little word, so we can all agree to let it go through, and it would then be progressive legislation which municipalities could take advantage of, if any of them desired.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I will finish in two minutes, because I know all the hon. members want to leave.

I just want to add this to what the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) said. Many people in the Province of Ontario got the impression last October that the Government itself would bring in legislation which would permit municipalities to go into the milk business if they so desired. At least one newspaper in the City of Toronto, the Toronto Daily Star, under date of October 20th, 1947, says:

"Mr. Kennedy"—the hon. Minister of Agriculture—"predicted that the Municipal Act will probably be amended to permit municipalities to go into the milk business if they so desire. This will automatically take care of Brantford, which last session tried by private bill to obtain this authority, but were finally asked to withhold the private bill until the publication of the Milk Report."

This is, of course, a press statement. I have never confronted the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) with it. He is not in his seat today, but it was attributed to him, and inasmuch as it is a newspaper so popular with the Government benches, and with a daily circulation of 365,000 copies, an awful lot of people did get the impression that legislation was going to be brought before us.

I understand now that the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) is going to bring down some legislation some time before the session adjourns, and it may very well be that a part of that legislation will implement the promise that he is alleged to have made in the columns of the Toronto Daily Star, on October 20th, 1947.

In the meantime, Mr. Speaker, I say that the amendment here is a very simple one; it will be a step along the way toward the desired goal, of which the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) speaks, and I think it would be a very happy thing if at 6.00 o'clock on St. Patrick's Day, we all agreed to let the amendment pass.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, before the motion is called, may I point out, so that the members may not be misled, that it is not just "one little word"; it goes a great deal beyond that. The amendment provides for buying, and storing fuel, milk, and such other articles of food as may be designated by order of the board.

MR. MACLEOD: That is in the Act now.

HON. MR. DREW: Quite true. The effect of this is not one which carries out the intention expressed by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg). The amendment is unnecessary; the amendment does not even produce the result that is indicated, and the Government will oppose this, as it did last year.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, if I may just be permitted to say a word. During the hearings before the Wells Commission, Mr. Sedgewick, and many other legal authorities pointed out in reply to representations made for legislation of this kind, that all that was necessary to give them what they were asking for was to add that one word "milk" to the section of the Municipal Act.

Second reading negatived on division.

AYES: 2

NAYS: 58.

HON. GEO. A. DREW (Prime Minister): I might say, before moving the adjournment of the House, that we will be resuming the debate on the Speech from the Throne tomorrow, and sitting tomorrow night.

I move the House do now adjourn.
Motion approved.

The House adjourned at 6.10 p.m.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I would like to draw the attention of hon. members of this House to an important anniversary, particularly as it affects the Liberal Opposition in the Legislature.

Today is the birthday of the birth of my hon. friend for Prescott (Mr. Belanger), who has been in this Legislature, as hon. members will recall, for twenty years, and during that twenty years has exhibited the courtesy and the charm that are inherent in the race from which he springs. It is within the knowledge of us all that our hon. friend (Mr. Belanger) is an able debater. He has an eloquent way of saying things. There are those, perhaps, who would say that his type of speaking belongs to the past. If that is correct, Mr. Speaker, the present has lost something to the past.

We, in this House, who have heard the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) on various occasions, have been very much impressed with his method of speaking, with the clarity of the arguments presented, and we do appreciate the opportunity today of wishing him many happy returns of this anniversary and many more years of usefulness to this Province of Ontario.

We on this side of the House recognize in the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) a scholar, a firm friend, and a gentleman. We have, down through the years, come to appreciate his abilities and on this occasion we want to say to him with all the warmth that we can command that we do appreciate the part that he has played in building up this province, the contribution that he has made, in the various capacities in which he has been placed, to the welfare of this Province of Ontario, and I wish him again, on behalf of not only this Opposition, but also, I am sure, of all hon. members of this House, many happy returns on attaining what I believe is his seventieth birthday.

No one would believe in looking at the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) that he had attained his majority, but I am afraid that the calendar does not lie, in this instance. However, we are sure that the years that lie ahead will be good to the hon. member (Mr. Belanger), and in being good to him, will also be good to us.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do want to join most warmly in the presentation of good wishes to the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger). In this case, I certainly support the statement of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that he can speak not only for the group of which he is the leader, and the Opposition officially, but for every hon. member of this Legislature.

I was speaking to the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) a few minutes ago, and I do wish to express the hope that he may feel there are many, many good years ahead of him yet in the service of this province and of this country.

We do not always agree on his interpretation of rules, excellent though they generally are, but with the utmost sincerity I want to say to him and to the hon. members of this Legislature that we agree more frequently than not with him, but, whether we agree or not, we always respect the courtesy and the manner in which he puts forward his views in this Legislature. He is truly, as has already been said, a very fine example in every way of the contribution made by the members of his own racial stock to the advancement of the common purposes of this country of ours.

I was just a little startled for a moment when I came in, because, due to the distance, I did not see the bright red flowers on top of the plant, and I thought for a moment that some of the shamrock had remained over from yesterday. I realize no matter what the name of his riding might be, that the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) would join in the celebration of St. Patrick's Day, but would feel on his own birthday, that some other flower would be appropriate.

I do not want to say any more than that I join with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and share with him the confidence that all will agree that the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) has made a very useful contribution to the welfare of this province, and I join in wishing him many, many happy returns of the day.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) in extending to the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) our congratulations on his birthday. I hope that he is spared to enjoy many more of them.

We, in this group, have always listened with a great deal of attention whenever the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) spoke in the House. A great majority of us here are a lot younger in experience than he, and we have come to look to him for a certain amount of guidance in rules, but not in political affiliations, Mr. Speaker. We hope that he is spared for many, many more years and that his political life will be as useful in the future as it has been in the past.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I defer to the hon. member for Cochrane, North (Mr. Habel).

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane, North): No, no, go ahead.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, I merely want to join with those who have already spoken, and I do this on behalf of my colleague as well, in expressing our sincere felicitations to the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) on having attained his seventieth birthday.

I think that all of us might hope, Mr. Speaker, that having attained our seventieth birthday, we may be as full of wisdom and have such dignity and courtesy as the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) manifests in this House.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. HABEL: Mr. Speaker, I hope that I may be honoured in joining those who have already congratulated the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger). On behalf of his compatriots in this House, and throughout the province and, indeed, throughout Canada, I am greatly honoured to be called upon to congratulate him today on his birthday.

The hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) has a background which could be given as an example to the youth of today. As a school teacher he certainly did a great deal to get the youth to understand the need for education. Then, later, he became a school inspector, and in that capacity also he certainly contributed to education to a great extent.

At 24 years of age—he will forgive me, I hope, for mentioning the fact—he thought he was old enough to get married, and was fortunate indeed in finding one of the best companions for whom he could have wished in the person of the present Mrs. Belanger. They have raised a nice family of 7 children, one of whom is an Oblate Father, and two of whom have served in the armed forces during the last war.

He entered public life in 1923 as representative of the riding of Prescott, which he has now represented for over 20 years.

Not satisfied with being in public life, he kept studying and finally became a Certified Public Accountant, and later on a lawyer. It has already been said, and it must be admitted, that he always kept politics on a very high level. He fought hard at times for what was just and fair, but always without bitterness in his words, always preferring to convince by sound arguments rather than by violence. In that field also, I think that we can take him as an example to the younger hon. members of this House.

We owe a great debt to him, and on behalf of his compatriots whom he has so ably defended and represented, I wish him good health and many happy returns of March 18th, which is his birthday.

Mr. Speaker, with your permission I would like to add a few words in French.

M. L'Orateur, avec votre permission, je me permettrais maintenant de parler en français, qui est la langue maternelle de l'Hon. Député De Prescott, M. Bélanger.

Au nom des Canadiens français siégeant dans cette Chambre, aussi au nom des Canadiens français de la Province, et même, je dirais, du Canada tout entier, je me fais un plaisir et c'est en même temps un honneur de présenter à l'Hon. Député de Prescott, mes plus sincères félicitations à l'occasion de son 70^{ème} anniversaire de naissance.

Pour nous Canadiens français, M. Bélanger est un exemple à bien des points. Non seulement, nous lui devons beaucoup pour son travail à notre cause, mais nous lui devons aussi d'avoir été souvent l'ambassadeur de Bonne entente entre les anglais Canadiens et nous —mêmes, non seulement dans la Province d'Ontario, mais, en plusieurs circonstances, dans les autres provinces canadiennes.

A vous, M. Bélanger, par l'entremise de l'Hon. Orateur nous vous souhaitons, un joyeux anniversaire et puisse La Providence vous bénir avec encore de nombreuses années et le bonheur.

Thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

(Translation)

Mr. Speaker, with your kind permission, I would now speak in French, being the mother tongue of the hon. member of Prescott. In the name of French Canadian members sitting in this House, also in the name of all French Canadians of Canada, as a whole, it is a great honour bestowed on me, and it is with pleasure that I do present to the hon. member for Prescott our sincere felicitations on the occasion of his seventieth birthday.

For us French Canadians Mr. Belanger is an example in many points. Not only do we owe him much for work for our cause, but we do owe him also a lot for having been on many occasions the ambassador of goodwill between Anglo and French Canadians, not only in this province, but in many circumstances in other Canadian provinces. To you Mr. Belanger, through the hon. Mr. Speaker, we wish you a happy birthday, and may the Divine Providence bless you with many more years, and with happiness.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, in the turmoil of feeling that knocks on my brain for expression this afternoon, words would be entirely inadequate to express my sentiments toward every hon. member of this House, as represented by those who have spoken this afternoon, extending to me their wishes for many happy returns of the day, an anniversary is commonly called a "happy day", but the time cometh when these anniversaries are perhaps not so happy.

There is only one word which covers it all, there is only one word which fits, there is only one word I feel able to express this afternoon to my hon. friends in the House through you, Mr. Speaker, and that word is a deep, heart-felt "thanks".

Monsieur le President, comment dire a mes compatriotes dans cette Chambre, les sentiments qu'ont éveillés tout au fond de mon âme les bienveillantes paroles de leur interprète, l'honorable député de Cochrane Nord (M. Habel). Avec quelle éloquence il a résumé ma carrière et surtout ma carrière politique dans cette Chambre!

Combien je le remercie, combien je vous remercie mes chers amis, des expressions, exagérées sans doute, mais respirant une sincérité émue, que vous avez employées pour remémorer le rôle que j'ai pu remplir dans l'Assemblée Législative, ainsi que dans la province et le pays, au cours de ma vie publique.

Avec mes remerciements, acceptez l'assurance que les quelques années qui me restent, je les emploierai fidèlement à continuer de veiller à la sauvegarde de nos traditions catholiques et françaises, ce qui est encore chez nous le meilleur moyen de travailler au bien-être de notre province.

(Translation)

Mr. Speaker, how can I adequately express to my compatriots in this House the feelings which in my very deepest soul have been awakened by the too kind words of their interpreter, the hon. member for Cochrane (Mr. Habel)? With what wonderful eloquence he has summarized my career and especially my political career in this Assembly! How grateful I am to him, how grateful to you, my dear friends, for the words—quite exaggerated of course—but breathing deep sincerity—which you have found to recall the part I have played in the Legislative Assembly, as well as in the province and the country in the course of my public life.

With my thanks, please accept my undertaking that the few years my life may as yet have to run I shall employ as in the past in doing my utmost to safeguard our catholic and French traditions in the belief that therein lies for us the best means of promoting the welfare of our province.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I wish to present to the House the report of the Department of the Provincial Secretary, for 1947.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I think it is desirable that I should indicate to the hon. members what would seem to be the appropriate adjournment over Easter. I have delayed saying anything about this until today, because it seemed wise to wait until there was some indication of the way the debate was proceeding. It is quite apparent that we will not finish our work before Easter, and I propose to move when we do adjourn next Thursday, that we adjourn until the following Wednesday.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 37th Order.

DEBATE ON THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 37th Order; resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion for the consideration of the speech of the Hon. Lieutenant-Governor at the opening of this Session.

MR. J. M. NEWMAN (Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak on the Speech from the Throne, I would like first to congratulate you, sir. It is good to see you enjoying good health and so ably administering the rules of this Legislature. I would also like to pay my respects to the late Dr. Hobbs Taylor. He was a fine man to visit with, and one that you would value highly as a friend. It has been a pleasure to meet his successor the hon. member from Huron (Mr. Pryde). His reply to the Speech from the Throne was interesting and well presented.

Our Government often talks about the best labour laws. In the Rainy River district, which is my riding, we talk about the best labour relations between labour and management. We have had no strikes in years. There is no visible reason why we should have any in the near future. I believe the reason for this is the good leadership that has been available from the ranks of our own labour organizations. They are some of the best citizens and are always represented on all our community undertakings. The hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) visited our district last year and we feel made a worthwhile contribution to this happy situation.

Mr. Speaker, I would now like to comment on the 30 miles of new hydro main line that was completed for us this past year. Several of our towns and villages are served by this now. Also many of our farm homes are taking full advantage of this. I do not know of anything that will make work easier and make living more pleasant for those living in rural areas than electricity.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) that we do need another 25 miles of main line to continue west from where the present line ends. Then we would be in a position to serve those who do not already have electricity in the western part of our district. They are just as deserving as those who now have this service.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to talk for a while on our tourist business. Fort Frances is the fourth largest port of entry in Canada. I believe that in 1947 we had more tourists than any previous year. We have about 50 tourist camps. They have an investment of $40,000 to $50,000 each. They contribute many thousand American dollars of which we are so short.

The hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Welsh) has made a worthwhile contribution to this industry by establishing and operating a good tourist information bureau.

Mr. Speaker, hand in hand with the tourist industry must go good roads. What could be worse for this business than for a party to have bad roads and a poor fishing trip. This would surely mean not one lost customer but many. The hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) after many experiments with oil coatings and spreading calcium which were not satisfactory last year started reconstruction of 12 miles of our highway. It is being rebuilt with an eye to the future. This road bed is tiled where necessary; the ditches to be wide and well drained. This road will be a credit to him and everyone who has been associated with him in the plans for the construction of it. One could truthfully say that it has a permanent road bed. The need for this type of construction to continue on to the north side of our district or to Nester Falls is very urgent. Everyone in our district hopes that the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) has this in his plans for 1948 construction. We know that the reconstruction of these parts of our old highway will enable us to keep and maintain our tourist business and facilitate the hauling of farm produce and pulpwood. This also is the only road through our district, from the Minnesota border to the Trans-Canada Highway and then on to the new Red Lake road which was so recently built and is 120 miles in length.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to refer to growth of agriculture within our district. The hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) has made a very worthwhile contribution to the expansion of this through his land clearing and drainage programme. Our farmers have been able to put about 1,000 to 1,200 acres of bush and scrub land under cultivation. This past year they produced about 30,000 acres of flax which yielded about 10 bushels per acre. I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that we are very happy to be associated with the hon. member for Bruce (Mr. Johnstone) and be known as the two largest flax-growing communities of the Province of Ontario.

Another farmer produced 2,000 bushels of barley which sold for $10,000. It is not my intention to refer to all our increases in agricultural production. I just mention these to show some of the growth and development we have had. It should also indicate to the Government how our farmers will respond to any further help which may be given agriculture in our district.

Mr. Speaker, in our agricultural area we want many more farmers. Large groups of carefully selected families who want to immigrate to our province could be placed on our farms each year for many years to come. It would be necessary to use great care in selecting these families. Make sure that they would be adaptable to farming and intend to make it their permanent means of livelihood. They possibly could find some temporary winter employment in our logging and pulpwood operations which would assist them in their first year becoming established on their farms. By observation I would say that many of our recent immigrants are finding their way into industry and business. This is possibly causing some of the unemployment in our large cities.

Mr. Speaker, we are aware of the important part that forestry has played in the development of the Rainy River district. We can also see the importance of it in the future. With careful forestry management and good, fine protection, our forests will continue to aid in the development of our district for many years. I would say to the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Scott) that the report prepared by Major General Kennedy was a very fine report. It carefully dealt with careless and wasteful methods of the past, then offered sound corrective measures for our timber operators to use in the future. I would also suggest that copies of this be made available to timber producers on a complimentary basis. I feel that the recommendations in this report, if put into practice, would extend the life of our forests many years. The Government policy of reducing the export of wood 10 per cent. each year, and stopping it within 10 years, is also good, providing we can use the natural growth of our forests in our own Canadian plants.

After carefully reading this report and discussing our timber growth with several of our timber producers I would estimate that we can produce from natural growth each year nearly 100,000 cords of jack pine without depleting our forests. This year we are being allowed to export approximately 30,000 cords, after making allowance for jack pine that has been manufactured into railroad ties. I would suggest that we still have from 30,000 to 50,000 cords that could be used or exported. Due to the length of time that it took our operators to get their export permits, some of them were compelled to reduce their operations. Railroad tie producers usually get from one to two pulpwood sticks from each tree. They cannot operate profitably nor economically unless they have a market for the whole tree. It would certainly not be in keeping with the recommendations in this report if they left the tops of these trees in the woods to waste. I would say that in stopping the export of this wood our Government has created a problem. To solve it we must find a way to use this wood in our own district.

Mr. Speaker, our industries who use the products of our forests most extensively are the Ontario and Minnesota Pulp and Paper Company and the J. A. Matheau Saw Mills Company Limited. They have millions of dollars invested in their plants, timber limits and other equipment. They, of necessity, are keenly interested in the proper preservation of our forests. They co-operate with the Government and are aware that these forests are the life-line of their industries. The end of large saw mills in our district is already in sight. The life of this industry could be extended some if we were to use care in seeing that all saw log material is directed to this industry.

We have many small saw mills in our district. Their logs mostly come from our local farmers, who in the past year have produced well over half a million dollars worth of lumber and cedar poles.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to talk about another industry; Steep Rock Iron Mines, which is located in the east end of our district just north of Atikokan at Steep Rock, Ontario. This company started by draining a large lake and in spite of unusual difficulties with land slides and many other obstacles, they have the largest open-pit iron mine in Canada. The total iron production in Canada last year was 2,023,000 tons. Of this, Steep Rock Iron Mines produced over 1,250,000 tons. During the time this mine was being developed, the company found time to build fine homes for their employees; with Government assistance they were able to put in about eight miles of sewer and water throughout the town. During the past summer a group of Toronto business executives, along with several of our Government cabinet ministers visited Atikokan and Steep Rock. They were amazed with the development and were very pleased with the progress that had been made in building the fine modern community. I think it is a fine thing to have this group of men see this part of north-west Ontario. The good opinions which they expressed regarding this new community will no doubt aid greatly in its future development.

I would like to say that there are many problems confronting us in this new community such as roads, schools and hospitals. The faith that industry and private business are putting into this community should indicate to our Government that this industry is permanent; also that it is time their many needs were given some preference. At Fort Frances we talk of a road east to Atikokan. At the lake head they talk of a road west to Atikokan. At Atikokan they speak in terms of a road as an outlet. Regardless of where the road is put we must all admit that it is a necessity.

The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs and Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar), on his last visit to our district, chose a site for an industrial or a reform farm. Everyone is keenly interested in his programme, and we hope that its construction will be in his plans for 1948.

Our Kiwanis Club last year, in co-operation with the Department of Health, sponsored a T.B. Mobile X-Ray Clinic which went throughout our district and did a very fine job. This was very worthwhile work, and I am sure that the Department of Health will find the people of our district ready to co-operate on other projects of this nature.

Mr. Speaker, I have endeavoured to briefly indicate a few of the needs of our Rainy River district which are closely related to our future progress.

MR. WILLIAM DUCKWORTH (Dovercourt): Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate you on the able manner in which you rule this House. I consider you fair in your decisions, and you give each speaker a fair opportunity to explain himself, and if you disagree with him, you find out whether he is right or you are right, and both parties are usually satisfied with your decisions at the finish.

The first thing I would like to do, Mr. Speaker, is to pay my respects to a great man. You know great men are becoming scarce in this world today. That is unfortunate. This man was a great man, the late Hobbs Taylor. He left college and university and set out to look after the physical welfare of the people. When they were sick they went to Dr. Taylor, and he looked after them. The people of Huron county lost a great man when they lost Dr. Hobbs Taylor.

Then in later years he figured that, "I have done so well for people's health in Huron county," and he ran for Parliament and was elected to the Provincial House, where he continued in a greater spirit to assist the people of that great county. It must be a great county, for in the by-election it sends a great man to this House to carry on the work. So, wherever great people are gathered together we are sure to get good people from that particular part of their county.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the mover of the Speech in reply to the Speech from the Throne (Mr. Pryde). He had great ideas. He brought out many good points, many important facts and ideas for the benefit of the people of the Province of Ontario, and he did it in the good old Scottish manner. Scotch people are a race we all like to have amongst us. He brought it out in the same manner as the great "Bobby" Burns would have in one of his poems had he been here today.

I want to congratulate the seconder of that motion (Mr. Hamilton). In his speech he gave to this House some facts dealing with his hydro. Hydro is one of the big assets to the people of Ontario, and anybody who takes the responsibility of explaining and outlining the development of hydro, he assumes a great responsibility to the people whom he represents. He did it well; he brought things out and explained to the hon. members of this House many great facts in connection with hydro—which I appreciated, and I am sure the other hon. members did also—facts regarding the development of hydro, how it developed and the way hydro is set up. I doubt whether there is another member in this House that could have done as well for hydro and explained it any better to the people of the Province of Ontario than that hon. member who seconded the motion in reply to the Speech from the Throne (Mr. Hamilton).

Mr. Speaker, I am speaking this afternoon on behalf of a lot of unfortunate workers, the unorganized labour. We have organized labour; they are organized and they are rightly organized to protect the workers who belong to their particular organization, but the unorganized workers have no way of demanding higher wages. If I may speak here this afternoon on behalf of the unorganized worker, I wish to prove some facts to the hon. members of this House that I am right in what I have to say.

In the building trade there are many trade unions. In the automotive plant there are one or two unions, and in the building trades there are many unions; there are carpenters, plumbers, steam-fitters, plasterers, roofers, and they are practically all organized. But then there is the other fellow, the labourer on this particular work, the unorganized fellow. He works just as hard, he does just as efficient work, and carries out his job very efficiently, but he is unorganized, and he only receives, in a great many cases, half the pay the union workers will receive. This is unfair. He works just as hard. I claim this is the man on behalf of whom I want to speak, because he cannot speak for himself. He is not organized strongly enough to make any great demand; therefore, I am making demands here for him.

I have a great many of these boys in my riding, and those are the boys I am speaking for this afternoon.

We talk about the minimum-wage bill. I have always been in favour of a minimum wage, but after giving this more consideration, and more thought, and finding out more about the workers, I have come to the conclusion that the minimum wage is an unfair wage. You cannot set up a minimum wage for all classes of workers across the field. You cannot do it because some are more important than others. That is the way the unions feel, and that is the way they have their unions organized. So you cannot set up a minimum wage scale for all types of workers, therefore, I differ with the minimum wage. The boys are organized, and they demand what they consider are their rights, but here is the other labourer who probably pumps the gas in a service station, washes the cars, changes tires and does all the rough, dirty work, probably only makes 65 or 70 cents an hour, whereas the machinist in the same place probably makes $2 an hour. The unorganized labourer only gets 65 or 70 cents, and works just as hard. To my mind they are the boys we should protect. In the grocery stores, the butcher shops, in any of our department stores we have the unorganized workers. Are they not entitled to the same consideration? Just for the reason they are unorganized, have we any right to set a minimum wage for them?

MR. J. MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Yes, to protect them.

MR. DUCKWORTH: By setting a minimum wage we probably set wages lower than they are entitled to. Therefore, I say we should bring down a bill to protect these boys.

Some workers in these particular stores are organized; they demand higher wages and they receive them, but the men who work around, do a lot of heavy work, are unorganized and therefore have to take whatever wages they can receive, and I consider they do not receive enough.

The helper works just as hard as a plumber or steamfitter, and does practically the same kind of work, only he is not trained as a plumber, but he will do just as hard work and probably work longer hours and have just as much responsibility, but will receive only about 65 or 75 or 80 cents an hour, whereas the plumber will probably get $1.50 an hour. The plumber will charge you from the minute he leaves his home until he gets on the job and leaves, but the unorganized worker is not the same; he only gets paid from the time he starts until he quits. That is the reason I say he is not being treated fairly and that is why this afternoon I am speaking on his behalf.

Regarding the workers who belong to a union; when the cost of living goes up, the union men get together and say, "Now the cost of living has gone up we have got to have higher wages," and they consult the management of the plant, or whoever is in charge, and they get together and say "the cost of bread has gone up, the cost of milk has gone up, the cost of butter has gone up and the cost of bologna has gone up, we must have higher wages to maintain our families," and in a great many cases they get it. If they do not, they go on strike and demand it because they are unionized. I say the men are right to protect themselves. But the unorganized workers, when the cost of living goes up, have no power to say to the "boss", "You must raise our salaries because the cost of living has gone up." Therefore, they stay in the old category and do not receive any more money. I say they are the fellows who need some consideration.

Last year I remember seeing two men working on a job putting on a roof and they worked just as hard as other fellows, and I met the same two men in a store buying things. One man received 70c an hour and the other man who worked with him got $1.10 an hour. These men were in the store buying the same goods, paying the same price and carrying the same stuff home to their families. The man who got 70c an hour had to feed a family just the same as the man who got $1.10. I do not consider there is anything fair about that. Why do not both men get 70c or $1.10 an hour because they do practically the same work, and work under the same conditions. Therefore, I feel, these are the men we have to protect and you cannot protect them with a minimum wage, because you may set the minimum wage at 75c an hour and a man may be worth $1.00 an hour. Then you bring another fellow up that does half the work and pay him 75c an hour and he is only worth 50c. That is not fair. Let us be fair in the administration, and be fair in what we do for the workers of this great country.

There are two types of people in this world, the farmers and the workers who keep the wheel going. Do not ever overlook the fact that the farmer and the worker keep things going. Without them we would have no country. Consider the unorganized worker and the union worker who buy homes. They come out here and buy homes on the same street and pay practically the same; the unorganized worker gets from 70c to 80c an hour. He has a wife and family, and his responsibilities in life to carry on. He gets 70c to 80c an hour. The union man who buys a home on the same street gets $1.50 an hour, pays the same rate of interest, the same taxes and everything else. Is there anything fair about that? Why should not the other fellow have the same opportunity when he is willing to do the same work even though he is not organized. So it pays to organize. That is the reason I stay in public life because I am organized. That is the reason I am speaking for those boys who keep me in public life.

The cost of living has gone up. Since 1939 a dollar's worth of goods has gone up to $1.69 in 1947. Has the unorganized worker's wages or salary gone up in that proportion? No, but the union boys have got their's up because they say, "No pay, no work." The sad part is that the unorganized worker is unable to go out on the market and buy the necessities of life the same as the union worker. How can the union man, who gets $1.50 an hour, expect the man who only gets 75c an hour, to pay him $1.50 an hour for doing a job? That is the unfortunate part of it. He has to pay the same prices as the union man. He goes to work at 70c an hour, and when he calls in the plumber he has to pay a $1.50 an hour. I consider that unfair, and that is the reason I am speaking on behalf of them today.

In 1939, anyone earning $28.25 a week could live pretty good. But the same man today, to have the same standard of living as he had in 1939, would have to get $40.00 a week, and I do not think the unorganized-labour wages have gone up that much, therefore, he cannot live up to the same standard of living.

I have talked this over with different union men, and they agree with me, if the unorganized labourer does not get more money, it is going to have a tendency to slacken down their business, and they are going to be laid off work. We must have money to keep the whole system going, and therefore unorganized labour must get more money.

I think that is one of the reasons the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), of this Government, did not want to see a minimum wage, for the simple reason he feels that there is a lot of those men should get more money, and I feel sure, from talking to our hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), we are going to have legislation brought down whereby these unfortunate labourers will get a similar amount as organized labour, and to my mind that is a grand move.

MR. G. ANDERSON (Fort William): Is that a definite announcement of Government policy?

MR. DUCKWORTH: Well, I am in the Government; I can surely speak some for the Government.

The Dominion Government, has raised all their employees' salaries, and the Provincial Government have raised them all. These employees' salaries have all been raised, but these unorganized boys and girls have to pay taxes to keep the Government going, and how are they going to meet their obligations unless they get more money?

Regarding office workers; pick up the paper and see what wages they are offered. What I am trying to do, is to increase their pay. I feel this Government is in a position to do it. Bring up the pay of the unorganized workers a little closer to the union workers, and we will all be happy and will avoid a lot of depression.

MR. W. ROBERTSON (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, since this debate has commenced, the members have been wishing you well, both regarding your health and your high office, and I would like to offer my congratulations and well-wishes, myself.

When we are congratulating, I would also like to pay my respects and congratulations to the hon. member for Huron (Mr. T. Pryde) who I see is now in his seat. I would say—while not agreeing with what the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) actually said during his speech—it gave me great pleasure to listen to him. I liked—perhaps it is the clanishness of the Scotch—to hear the charming sound of his voice. It came very, very close to giving me the same pleasure as the skirl of a pibroch would, up in Scotland. I also would like to congratulate the hon. member for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton) on a very, very ably delivered speech. It dealt with a subject which ordinarily is very difficult and to me, at least, I would say that he handled it very well. He must have put a lot of time and study into his speech. So I also would like to congratulate the member for South Wellington (Mr. Hamilton).

Mr. Speaker, quite a few of our hon.

members have referred to their ridings, and I would also like to do so. The riding is known as Wentworth. It takes in the southern half of Wentworth, combined with the east end of the City of Hamilton. It is, what I would say, a very diversified riding. We have the industrial centre of Hamilton, and we have also surrounding the city, the farming districts of Wentworth.

About the farming districts—while not a farmer—I would like to say a few words. There have been many attempts to paint the beauty of various ridings, and I would suggest to the hon. members that if they really want to see beauty, come to my riding and the ridings immediately adjoining it during the blossom week, and they will see real beauty. We have one of the finest—I believe just as fine anyway—fruit farming districts, as there are in this country, and during blossom week it certainly is one of the glorious sights to see.

We have diversified farming, quite a lot of grain is grown and also quite a lot of fat cattle. In addition to that, we have some really beautiful beaches. We have Burlington Beach and the beach adjoining the Township of Salt Fleet. Concerning these beaches I would like also to say a few words. At the present time we suffer occasionally from black-outs. We have been assured from certain quarters that these black-outs occur owing to a scarcity of water. That is one of the peculiar things, one of the quirks of nature. At the present time and for several weeks to come we are going to see entire areas in a flooded condition. The beaches I have referred to are no exception. On Burlington Beach there will be quite a number of houses unable to use the sanitation services because of high water, water-logged land and the sanitation services that they have will be unable to absorb the sanitation and water.

We have also further along in the Salt Fleet district, a very serious problem. What is the real cause I am not prepared to tell you, but there we have enormous sections of the beach being washed away. In fact several years ago, to be exact 1939—I was in the habit of going down to a place on what you call Cherry Beach. The house there that I was in the habit of going to at that time stood quite a distance back from the lake. We had many good parties on that lot adjoining the house. I see some of the hon. members laughing—perhaps the parties were not of the nature they are thinking of. But the reason I mentioned to this house and the fact that we could have parties on the land in front of the house, is because of the fact where that house stood is now under Lake Ontario. There are large sections of that beach being washed away. Several different reasons are given for it. Talking about whether we have high water or low water, I would suggest that perhaps one of the reasons we are having so much flooding and such extremely high water could be in the fact in certain parts of Ontario that we have completely removed from the land the forests that protected and held the waters, that slowed the delivery of that water into the streams and that those forests being now gone, this water moves freely—far too freely for that matter—and the result we are having high waters. These beaches are being practically made unfit for use during the summer time, and I would suggest, if there is any truth to that idea, that perhaps the Government of the Province of Ontario has some responsibility to these people who are losing their lands and the use of their lands because of that.

I have heard also that it is possible that it could be caused by the diversion of waters that otherwise in the natural course of events would have flowed into James Bay, but now comes down through the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes. Being no judge, I am merely handing this out as a suggestion and I suppose it will require to rely on the engineers to solve the problem and they will arrive at conclusions of what are the best methods to cure the trouble.

I would like to say a few things concerning Labour and Trade Unions. I told you that my riding took in the east end of the City of Hamilton.

The electors of that area, I believe, number somewhere in the neighbourhood of 25,000, so it really is the bulk of the riding at the present time. They are industrial workers, and it is from these industrial workers that the trade unionists are drawn. Now, I wonder how many of our hon. members sit down and study why there are trade unions, what brought them into existence, why they fight in the manner that they do fight.

I think I can answer some of the questions. I became a member of a trade union at the age of fourteen. I would not claim credit for that. My dad was a great believer in the trade union movement and he saw to it that I became a member just as soon as I started work. At any rate, I have had quite a lot of experience in the trade union business.

The union, by the way, that I first became a member of, was the Lanarkshire Mine Workers Union—coal miners—they were federated with the British Miners Federation. We had many strikes for wages and for working conditions and living conditions. I will not try to tell you that we won. I can assure you that on many occasions we lost, at least on appearances we lost. I say “on appearances” there were quite a few occasions when statements were made that we were going to be starved into submission. Well, I would say that we were starved into going back to work, but I would not tell you that we were starved into submission.

Trade unionists, because of the very nature of what they undertake to do, are largely composed of very determined men. Their leadership is selected from very determined men. It has to be. They are continuously fighting, not only against their employers, but very often against the laws of the land, and I say that advisedly.

That being so, when these trade unionists find that they can get nowhere following the natural course of industrial action, in the long run resort to political action.

I would say that it was on the determination of the employers of Great Britain that the employees of the various industries were going to work when they said they were going to work, under the conditions that they fixed, and the times they said they would work. The same employers created the British Labour Party; the same employers eventually created the Labour Government of Great Britain.

The reason that I am referring to that is to account partially for the reason why we have these men from the north. There we find practically the same situation of employers who say they will not deal with the trade unions, who do their level best to prevent the organization of trade unions, and all they succeed in doing is to create not only trade unions but politicized trade unions—politicized for their own protection. I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the process is under way in Ontario for the same situation to be brought about.

Now, we have heard the employers of labour making statements that their employees were well paid. I would like to point out that it is the employer who makes that statement, not the employee. The employee says that he is not.

On that question I would ask, just where does our Government stand? We have heard the statement made that our civil servants are best paid in the country. They speak as the employer. I wonder what the civil servants say? I can answer for one or two branches. The Provincial Bank, I would suggest that if its members were allowed a free say, with no fear of their jobs being lost because of giving their opinions, they would tell you that they were not well paid, they would tell you that on the contrary they were poorly paid. I know that they received a bonus at the end of last year, but bonuses do not permit the budgeting of a home in a proper manner. From discussions I have had with several of the employees of the Provincial Bank, they are anything but satisfied with their conditions, and I can assure you if that is so in time they will organize a trade union, because any organization that is brought into existence for the protection of the workers of any group whether it is doctors, lawyers or civil servants, they are merely trade unionists, and these people will form a trade union that really will battle for what they desire and not for what the employer thinks is their just due.

That is one group. There were also others. Stationary engineers employed in the trade school in the east end of Hamilton, which was used during the war for the training of soldiers and is now being used by the Department of Education, I have been assured by employees in there that their wages are far from equalling those of men doing the same job in industry. They hold the necessary qualifications, but they do not receive the same wages.

There is one other group, that is the employees of city jails. What they are, I do not know, and I do not think they are quite sure themselves; on the one hand, they are paid by the cities, but so far as I have been able to find out, their wages are controlled by the Provincial Government and they rate so very poor in pay that the labour turnover in these city jails—and I am referring at the present time to the jail in the City of Hamilton—is so great that they cannot properly staff that jail. I would suggest that is not a very happy position for that class of institution. That class of institution should have properly trained men; if we want to create in this province a Borstal system, or a system that is going to help them resume their places in society, then we will require that in any institution they should be under the care of properly trained individuals. We will never have that condition so long as the pay is insufficient to attract properly qualified people.

Before I sit down, Mr. Speaker, there is one subject that I would like to touch upon.

We, in this province, boast, and boast with great justification, that this is a great province. We have all the resources required by man—I should not say all the resources, but an enormous number of resources required by man—that nature has been very, very generous to the Province of Ontario in the natural gifts she has made to this province.

With these natural resources, what do we do? I heard the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Duckworth) refer to what was required in terms of money to keep a person alive at the present time. The point I would like to raise is, when we are considering all these people, we should consider our old folks first. All others can organize, they can do something to protect themselves, but the old people have reached the stage where they should be under our care. The day was when they took care of the children of their period. In that day they were the people who really developed this land. But what do we do when these people are old? We give them what is classified as an old age pension. At the best of times, when even such a crazy monetary system as we have was somewhat stable, it merely managed to keep these people alive. There was nothing at any time to give them the little comforts, it was merely sufficient to keep them in existence. What is their position today? We see in this province a situation brought about whereby under certain conditions they can receive an additional $10 per month. That may be good if these people were given $10 a month, but we know that so far very few of our old people have received that sum of money.

The provisions for the receipt of this money have been classified as a "means test." Mr. Speaker, I would submit to the hon. members that this is a misnomer. It is, in fact, an extreme means test, and I feel that with all our wealth in this great nation and this great province, that it is a shame that any persons in their declining days cannot receive sufficient to maintain them in comfort.

My own opinion—and I am only giving this as an opinion—is that it is not right.

A system I would rather see in force, would not be a stated sum of money, although that may be all right under certain circumstances, but until we get a properly stabilized dollar, I would far sooner see a system somewhat along the line of our old people receiving grants, which would ensure them being able to reside in decent homes, which very few, unless they have children, are able to do at the present time.

The grant should also be sufficient to keep them clad in a decent, reasonable manner. There should be sufficient granted to them to give them the daily necessities of life, including medicines and medical services.

In regard to medical services; I would like, in conclusion, to make a comment.

I heard recently of an old man who had developed heart trouble. He was receiving free medical advice, but was required to buy his own medicines. The medicines which he was told to get to keep himself alive cost $3.00 per week. Mr. Speaker, we have heard various figures in this house as to amounts paid for rent, light and fuel, and all the rest of it. I would ask the hon. members just what position they would be in, in that situation.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, may I at this time join with the many hon. members of the House who have paid their compliments to the mover (Mr. Pryde) and the seconder (Mr. Hamilton) of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, and to the other hon. members who have made such excellent and able contributions during this debate. It is not easy for an hon. member—let alone a new hon. member—to rise in the House for the first time and deliver a speech upon any subject. In fact, those of us who have been here for more than a few years, I am sure find it more difficult with each succeeding year. I do congratulate those hon. members, and I feel that many of them will go far in public life in the Province of Ontario.

There seems to be in circulation, at the present time, such a mixture of misunderstanding and misrepresentation as to hydro affairs, that I feel duty-bound to bring to the attention of the hon.

members of the House sufficient authentic information and facts to enable them to decide dispassionately if there has been a lack of planning in power supply and if so where the responsibility rests.

I must, at the outset, express wonderment and surprise that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) should move an amendment to the motion condemning the Government and the hydro commission for the present power shortage. In fact, if he had not done so, I would have felt constrained to have kept my seat. However, I thank him for it, and I shall confine most of my remarks to the amendment.

I am not only amazed that he condemns the Government and hydro for lack of rainfall and seasonal thaws which are responsible for the present power shortage, but that he did not condemn the Government also for shortage of fuel oil, of natural gas and of other gifts provided by nature, as it would be equally unreasonable for him to do so. It is a compliment to the Drew Government that the longest speech in a debate on the Speech from the Throne that I can recall should have brought forth such widespread commendation and approval.

Let us review, in not too much detail, some of the important Hydro events that occurred during the years 1934 to 1943—with a Liberal Government, of which the new Liberal leader was a member, controlling affairs.

The carrying out of their policies had and still has a direct bearing on the problem. Indeed, its effects on power supplies are more evident now than earlier.

The outstanding blunder that affected the whole Hydro situation and has made planning for power supply most difficult for present and future needs was the repudiation of the Quebec contracts in 1935.

All hon. members will recall how the hon. Attorney-General of that Government spoke, hour after hour, day after day, with all legislative business side-tracked. How he stressed that not one horsepower of electrical energy was ever required from Quebec for Ontario needs. How the contracts were illegal, void and unenforceable. How the then Prime Minister said "The greedy power barons of St. James Street wouldn't again get their hands in the pockets of Ontario taxpayers." Yet this same Government three years later was forced, because of greatly increased demands for power, to renew (1938) the repudiated contracts on terms that time has proven to be less advantageous to the Ontario power users. I mention this not so much to prove that the stand we Conservatives took against repudiation—was a just and proper one, but to point out that the renewed contracts carried provisions that not only nullified the price advantage, if any, but more important still, carried an Escalator Clause in relation to future power contracts that made increased purchase of firm power from Quebec companies practically prohibitive. So, I emphasize that the repudiation of the Quebec Power Contracts in 1935 and their renewal in 1938 in a modified form for a less total amount of power was a major blunder. It caused antagonism and ill-will with Quebec companies and with the Quebec Government as I will later disclose. The Ontario power users' net gain is nothing, in fact, time has proved there is a definite loss in prestige, in electric power, and in money.

So, when anyone asks "why doesn't the Commission contract for more firm, long term power from present or new generating plants on the Ottawa River and its tributaries", the answer is—"The Liberal Government made it practically impossible to do this."

As I discuss more individual problems and incidents related to the Hydro problem, I ask the hon. members of the House to note carefully how the statements of the Government of that day differ from facts; how their policies and practices, in the light of present-day circumstances, were contrary to the best interests of the province.

Let us deal first with the Ottawa River power developments. Contrary to the view expressed in the House by the Liberal Government, that the Ottawa River Power Sites Bill, when introduced in 1943 for divided sites was the Government's preference over that of joint developments advanced by the Conservative Opposition—the following facts have come to light which prove that the Ottawa River Power Sites Bill, as introduced, was only an alternative plan.

Let me quote from a letter by the Power Controller to the then Chairman of the Commission, dated August 30th, 1940:

"In connection with power survey, I have, among other things, asked Shawinigan for all the information they have with respect to the possible Carillon development, the capacity which could be developed, the time it would take to develop and the approximate cost. I assume that you have probably made a similar study and if you feel at liberty to do so, I would appreciate it if you would send me the information."

All I can find in the Hydro files is an acknowledgment of that letter. I ask the hon. Liberal members—at least those from Ontario—to follow this rather closely, and see if in this they do not find the solution for the position in which they are placed at the present time, in connection with the Ottawa River Sites, as far as they are concerned.

In view of this, it is right to assume that the Quebec company was not interested in any joint development with a Government that had so recently repudiated its contractual obligations with other Quebec companies.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Is the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) reading from a letter?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: No, this is a statement that I am making.

MR. NIXON: It looked as if the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) was reading.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Let me continue with the letter, and I repeat:

"I have, among other things, asked the Shawinigan for all the information they have with respect to the possible Carillon development, the capacity which could be developed, the time it would take to develop and the approximate cost."

I say, Mr. Speaker, that this letter from the Ottawa Controller to the Chairman of the Commission in 1940, asked for an invitation to develop at Carillon, and my own conclusion, and the conclusion of anybody who knows the facts, is simply that the Quebec company was not interested in any joint development with a Government that had so recently repudiated its contractual obligations with other Quebec companies.

This view must have been held by the Quebec Government according to a statement contained in the Commission's minutes of June, 1942—I am quoting from the Commission's minutes, regarding a delegation from Eastern Ontario Municipal Electrical Association, which waited upon the Commission asking for this joint development on the Ottawa River. You will see that in 1942 there was still some thought that they should develop Carillon as a joint development.

The minutes read as follows:

"Dr. Hogg explained that the Commission had tried unsuccessfully for some two years to conclude arrangements for the development of the divided power site at Carillon, but that the Quebec Government had cancelled the power rights to this site. Dr. Hogg explained how he was then appointed to represent Ontario and enter into discussions with Premier Godbout for the purpose of coming to some arrangements whereby the Commission could immediately develop power on the Ottawa River so necessary to meet war demands. It early became apparent during his discussions with Premier Godbout that Quebec was not interested in joint development at Carillon, or elsewhere.

"Dr. Hogg also stated that he suggested to Quebec that the Commission would develop the complete site at Carillon, take all the power and make arrangements whereby the Province of Quebec could purchase one-half of the power site at a later date. This offer was not accepted, and it was finally decided to make arrangements for the allocation of sites.

"Because of the inherent difficulties involved it was necessary for Dr. Hogg to carry out his negotiations with Premier Godbout without publicity and without consulting the municipalities."

In 1940, that is the way the Commission and the Government were dealing with Hydro. Is it any wonder that, in 1943, when the Conservative opposition asked that the Ottawa River Power Sites Bill be brought down, which would bring before the House a representative of the Hydro engineers so that they could get some information, that their request was refused.

That, Mr. Speaker, is the official record from the minutes of the Hydro Commission. They had ample opportunity to develop the power site at Carillon as a joint development project, but in 1943 they come in and tell us that they do not want a joint development, but want to allocate the power sites on the Ottawa River.

Again Quebec Government would not enter into an agreement for joint development with a Government that repudiated its agreements. This difficulty with Quebec was acknowledged in a speech in Port Arthur on August 24th, 1942:

"Our negotiations for purchase of power from Quebec during the last year have been about as successful as if we had been dealing with the MacKenzie King Government itself."

He was negotiating for the joint development, and could not get anywhere. He acknowledged in 1942 that they could not even get any power in 1942 from the Province of Quebec.

This speech goes on to say:

"I have long since disagreed with the attitude of the Dominion Government in establishing industries in Old Ontario, where no power is available."

In 1942 they did not want industries in Ontario. Why? Because they could not get any power.

This goes on:

"Citing establishments of an industry at Pickering, Premier Hepburn said that labour had to be brought in; there was no power except what was taken from other industries."

That was the position of the Government of which the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) is a member, and who moves a motion condemning the Government for the present power situation. Premier Hepburn was saying to the Province of Quebec very definitely that there was no power from either the joint development or any of the developments available for that Government.

In the second paragraph of that speech it says that the Government did not want new industries, and in the third paragraph that they had already reached, in 1942, the peak of the supply of power in the Province of Ontario.

Those are the words of the then hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Hepburn) himself. No co-operation with the sister province, and no desire for industries because of lack of power.

These quotations should be sufficient to convince anyone of the disastrous results caused by the then Liberal Government's policies, supported by all Eastern Ontario Liberals, the policy of repudiation, in 1938. As I say, that policy was supported by every Liberal member from Eastern Ontario, and they are responsible, together with the rest, for the fact that by supporting repudiation, there was no power available at that time on the Ottawa River sites, or anywhere else.

The policy of the Government at that time is very clearly outlined in a letter from Premier Hepburn, to the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister in Ottawa (Mr. King). It has been stated in the House before, but is well-worth repeating, that when this Government came into power, the province was swamped with a surplus of unusable Quebec power. That is contained in a letter from Premier Hepburn, to Rt. Hon. Mr. King, dated September 21st, 1938.

Then he goes on—and I am still quoting from the letter:

"We now have a surplus of power which we can carry, but which is rather larger than we require as a reserve, and certainly is sufficient for many years. This province is simply not interested in the production of any more power. To take part in any negotiations which may lead to this end, would be unwise and misleading.

"Quebec and Ontario are suffering from a surplus of power which will continue for many years to come."

You will notice he says there, "This Government is not interested in the production of more power." And I quote from another letter of August, 1938:

"I have on various occasions ventured the opinion that the St. Lawrence Waterways Project could not be justified on economic grounds."

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Liberal Government's power policy in 1934 to 1943 can best be summed up in the following statements, as far as its source of power for Ontario is concerned. On the St. Lawrence,—not in favour.

"Irrespective of any propaganda—"

I again quote from a letter from Premier Hepburn to Prime Minister MacKenzie King:

"Irrespective of any propaganda or squeeze play that might be concocted by you, you may rest assured that this Government will resist any effort to force us to expend the public funds in such an unwarranted manner or to foist upon the people of Ontario an additional burden of debt and taxation."

Would it not have been a nice thing in 1938 to support the St. Lawrence project, give it a boost in 1942 when power was short and badly needed for war efforts?

On the Ottawa River: Under repudiation cloud. There is no co-operation from Quebec power and government interests, Ontario has to go its own way—no plans.

On the Niagara: Complicated international and inter-state difficulties. That was the policy of the Government of that day. We have heard so much of the "Back to Niagara policy". I have given you the fact they did not want to develop any more power sites and one can be forced but to the conclusion instead of doing what they represented to us the fact was, they were facing away from Niagara, had their backs to Niagara.

Now, the plans for Des Joachim have been discussed here and in the newspapers. I think now is a very opportune time to put the matter straight. I have searched in our Commission records and made inquiries and this is my conclusion. We hear the Opposition Leader (Mr. Oliver), his supporters mostly outside of the Legislature, and his chief political organ say that when the Liberal Government left office in midsummer of 1943, plans had been made for construction of the Des Joachim power site under the Ottawa River Power Sites Act and that the Drew Government ordered the work stopped as soon as it assumed office.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I say this, I assure the House that there is not an atom of truth in such a contention. The plans were not available for Des Joachim. Certain preliminary drilling was under way the same as is done on many sites as a preliminary to other field work. I can remember very well 25 years ago when they were drilling on the St. Lawrence and the people down there thought power development was going to start the next day. That was 25 years ago. Drilling on the power site of Des Joachim means nothing.

If further proof is required that immediate development was not contemplated of any major development, let me quote from a statement by Dr. Hogg which appeared in the Evening Telegram of December 5th, 1942. I quote:

"Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, Chairman and Chief Engineer of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, declared in an interview today that any relaxing of all out voluntary co-operation in saving electrical power would be the worst thing that could happen at this time."

There is an indication of under control, there was a lack of energy. How much energy was there in December, 1942? Well, quoting from Dr. Hogg's statement:

"Though another million horsepower could be used by conservation, demand for power is being satisfied at the present time. Dr. Hogg did not feel that any new power developments could be undertaken. Skilled labour is scarce, materials necessary for a Hydro plant are essential war materials, and it would take two years to develop a new plant."

That was not a major development in two years. DeCew Falls, Stewartville and similar developments cannot be built in two years, it takes four to five years to develop Des Joachim and five or six years for some large plants.

There is an admission that in 1942 they never contemplated any development at Des Joachim. That was 1942, yet we are asked to believe that plans were ready in 1943, six months later for a development at Des Joachim. Mr. Speaker, these contentions fool no one except those who wish to be fooled.

We have had some discussion about the substance of our plans, Hydro plans in 1940 to 1945. I want to support the statement of the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton).

The new Liberal leader says that industry follows power. I think that is true. I think he got that from our urging in 1933 that industry follows power.

MR. F. A. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I did not get anything from you and I do not want it.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Let us examine how much industry could follow that Government's power planning. Remember in 1934 to 1943 that Government in Southern Ontario, in nine years, installed 132,000 horsepower; 132,000 horsepower new installation of electrical energy,—industry cannot follow that power very far. Let us take the system of Thunder Bay, Abitibi and Southern Ontario, 285,000 horsepower in nine years.

Now, Mr. Speaker, let me just point this out, this Commission will increase its capacity of power this year by 133,000 horsepower, in two years. This year that will be the increase. I might also interject that while the Liberal Government from 1934 to 1943 was putting 285,000 horsepower in all of the Province of Ontario and, to be fair, there was extra energy added in the Province of Ontario by private companies, but while they were adding 285,000 horsepower, the Province of Quebec increased in the same period 2,144,000 horsepower, while at the same time his government of that day increased 285,000 horsepower.

When one considers that with renewed contracts in 1938 there was only an adequate reserve of power, no surplus, a reserve that was wiped out in 1941 except for a purchase of some at-will power, this should have been warning enough for any government in power at that time to prepare immediately for future power needs even in peace time.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) questions the statement of the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) in connection with power demand and supply for the year ending December, 1943, the Southern Ontario system. The hon. member Mr. Hamilton stated that by 1943 the Commission's supply was about equal to its demand, the hon. Liberal Leader (Mr. Oliver) contending there was a huge supply. Let us examine the situation.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I am assuming my hon. friend (Mr. Challies) wants to be fair.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I do because in a matter like this we should be fair. I thought you objected to it.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): No, I never said any words that could be construed to mean there was a huge supply. I agreed with his summing up.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: All I can say is we are very happy you have seen the light, but it is a little too late.

What was the situation in 1943? The normal plant capacity was 1,221,000, a purchase of 940,000 horsepower making a total of 2,161,000 horsepower, a combined load of 2,115,000 horsepower but, to casual observers you would say there is a surplus of 46,000 horsepower. Let me say that 46,000 horsepower is only the bump we are getting in the difference between a cloudy day and a sunny day. A day like today when the sun is out and a dark dull day, when we will get a bump of 150 horsepower. That may appear as a reserve of 46,000 horsepower.

I mentioned 940,000 horsepower of purchased power and renewed contracts in 1938 were only 766,000 horsepower. So, if more at-will horsepower had not been purchased in 1943,—after 1942 that power was under the control of a federal power controller and it was very fortunate for the Province of Ontario because he arranged for further deliveries of Quebec power that could not have been arranged at that time by the Government. I say if more at-will power had not been purchased in 1943 there would have been a deficiency of 128,000 horsepower,—just four years after the Prime Minister talked about huge surpluses of power.

With these facts before you, indicating the results of Government policies, I am sure that every hon. member of this House can but arrive at the following conclusion:

(1) That the Liberal Government between 1934 and 1943, by the repudiation of contracts in 1935, created a situation which made it impossible for them to secure any substantial quantity of additional power, either by purchase or by co-operative joint development of a new source of power with the interests they injured or elsewhere.

(2) Because of lack of vision and faith in this province's future, this same Government neglected to plan in pre-war years for sufficient power to meet the constantly increasing peace-time needs of our power users.

(3) In the early years of the war when men and materials were available, neglected to provide for the inevitable large increase in normal power demand as well as for additional large war industrial needs.

That brings us to the question of power demands. I would like to not go into too much detail, but I want to deal with the question of demand because, after all, there are two factors that have to deal with the power situation, that is demand and supply.

I am going to take the opportunity, Mr. Speaker, of only giving the highlights of these figures. I will leave them with Hansard because I suggest to every hon. member of the House who wants to get a very interesting picture showing the progress of the Province of Ontario as is reflected in the power demand will be able to look and find it by the statistics that I shall leave with them. But I do want to point out that the primary peak demand for power on all systems and in later years, including the load cuts from 1910 to 1933 there was an increase in that 23 years of about over 1,000,000 horsepower.

DECEMBER PRIMARY PEAK DEMANDS ALL SYSTEMS

(Actual Load Plus Cuts)

Year		Horsepower
1910	All Systems	5,385
1913	All Systems	55,113
1923	All Systems	678,550
1933	All Systems	1,138,027	} Over 100% increase in 10 years
1943	All Systems	2,348,492
1945	All Systems	2,482,541	} Over 20% increase in 2 years
1947	All Systems	2,994,913

That was the demand or increase in 23 years was 1,138,027. From 1933 to 1943, in 10 years there was a little over a million increase in demand, which is 20 per cent. increase in two years. So that in 1910, while the Province of Ontario refused 550,000 horsepower, in 1947 it was using 2,994,913, in horsepower. In 1910 to 1940 over that period there was an annual natural increase of over 80,000 horsepower, while in the last 2 years there was an increase of 250,000 horsepower.

There is where your problem is. Now, I just want to break this down in consumers. The total annual consumption per in Ontario:

Fiscal Year	Total Ontario Kw-hrs.	Annual Consumption per Capita Kw-hrs.
1938	6,782,568,923	1,847
1939	7,599,449,132	2,049
1940	8,720,587,966	2,327
1941	9,179,274,158	2,423
1942	10,241,447,731	2,637
1943	10,214,511,367	2,608
1944	10,354,907,590	2,612
1945	10,978,122,783	2,741
1946	11,127,609,712	2,709
1947	12,663,614,950	3,051
1947	12,662,614,950	3,044

That is an increase from 1938, 8,847 Kw-hours, and in 1947 to 3,044 Kw-hours.

The domestic consumption increased from 1938, 1,978 Kw-hrs. to in 1946, 2,713 Kw-hrs., an increase of about 47 per cent.

Year	Per Consumer Annual Consumption	Average Revenue per Kw-hr.
1938	1,978	1.28
1939	2,038	1.26
1940	2,098	1.23
1941	2,139	1.24
1942	2,187	1.23
1943	2,221	1.19
1944	2,324	1.15
1945	2,454	1.07
1946	2,713	1.03

In commercial service, which is a very heavy consumer, in 1938, 5,473 Kw-hrs. In 1946, 8,142 Kw-hrs. or an increase of over 50 per cent. as follows:

Year	Per Consumer Annual Consumption	Average Revenue per Kw-hr
1938	5,473	1.62
1939	5,822	1.58
1940	6,400	1.53
1941	6,777	1.48
1942	6,874	1.45
1943	6,196	1.44
1944	6,706	1.39
1945	7,520	1.33
1946	8,142	1.29

In our farms—and in this schedule hon. members will find how there has been a gradual decrease in the amount of revenue received, or the cost per kilowatt-hour, and I just want to call the attention of the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) when he spoke about using the revenue for the reduction of rates in the Province of Ontario. The domestic rate in the Province of Ontario is 1.03. How much lower can you get it? The fact is, under the present lack of sufficient energy to meet the needs, you cannot get the people to conserve something that does cost them so little. That is our problem. The domestic rate, in the Province of Ontario is 1.03 cents.

On the farm, in 1938, the farm consumed 1,695 kilowatts, and in 1946, 2,568 kilowatts. Now, any one from the rural areas can go into this schedule, which I will leave with Hansard, because it points out, that, in 1938, the farmer paid 2.52 per kilowatt-hour. In 1943 in five years, they paid 2.42 cents per kilowatt-hour, a very slight reduction, because of the new uniform rate that this Government brought in, the reduction from 1938 was 2.52 to 1946, 1.74, as follows:

ANNUAL CONSUMPTION FOR ONTARIO
Average Yearly Kilowatt-Hours—Average Cost per Kilowatt-Hour

	Farms Only		Total Rural Consumers including Farms
	Average Annual Kw-hrs. per Consumer	Average Revenue per Kw-hrs. Cents	Average Annual Kw-hrs. per Consumer	Average Revenue per Kw-hrs. Cents
1938	1,695	2.52	1,289	2.76
1939	1,670	2.55	1,310	2.77
1940	1,682	2.56	1,331	2.75
1941	1,755	2.51	1,381	2.68
1942	1,833	2.46	1,428	2.64
1943	1,897	2.42	1,454	2.61
1944	1,967	2.11	1,591	2.30
1945	2,199	1.90	1,766	2.09
1946	2,568	1.74	2,069	1.91

NOTE: From 1944 New Uniform Rate Schedules.

I challenge anyone to state here, or anywhere else, if there is any jurisdiction in the world where the farmer is getting energy for 1.74 per kilowatt, and that is to the credit of this Government in inaugurating a uniform system.

Now, in order that we may get a little picture of a little wider area, I would like to give you the kilowatt hours per capita in some of the countries of the world.

IMMEDIATE POWER DEMANDS

PRIMARY POWER DEMANDS—ALL SYSTEMS

The primary power demands (actual load plus cuts) for all systems established a new high 20-minute peak in December, 1947, of 2,994,913 H.P., an increase of over 25 per cent. over 1943 and 5.5 per cent. greater than the peak in December, 1946. The K.W.H. demand (actual load plus cuts) recorded an increase of 5.6 per cent. over the same month a year ago.

Canada leads in the schedule we have here, while Ontario is 3,044 kilowatt per capita, less than the average all over Canada. That is easily explained by simply reciting that there is a province in this Dominion has a much larger generating total than we have, who use energy in large blocks for electrical works, use it for paper, etc., and that brings the average up.

Now, gentlemen, there is your problem. There is the picture of your problem, and I can bring you up-to-date by giving you the latest figure as far as primary power demands of all systems. The primary demand, including the peak, in December, 1947, was 2,994,913 H.P., an increase of over 25 per cent. over 1943 and 5.5 per cent. greater than the peak in December, 1946. The kilowatt demand increased, December of this year over December last year was 5.6 per cent. Now, Mr. Speaker, in order to meet the situation, some one asks: What has the Drew Government done since it assumed office. First it assumed a tremendous back-log of power demand with no provision for new developments to meet that demand. The Government and the Commission lost no time in planning for the future as the greatest construction plan in the whole of the Hydro System will show.

We are asked what has happened since 1943. The answer—new generating stations in which the designing and construction have started since this Government came into power in 1943. Gentlemen, again, I do want to be fair, that was started under a former Government, but was completed by this Government.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Oh, within two weeks after you came in.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I will go back a little further. DeCew Falls was possible because this Government purchased the Abitibi Canyon and included it in the Government-owned property and spare parts were brought down from that plant and installed in DeCew Falls. We still get the credit for the machinery installed. The second unit of DeCew Falls came in 1947. You rather smile. I want to go back, I am reminded of something. We heard from the Liberal Government when we purchased the Abitibi Canyon: "You are getting nothing but a lot of junk and useless stuff and how the municipality of Sudbury, North Bay, etc., would have that millstone about their necks for years to come. Let me tell you, since we purchased in 1932 the capital invested is $29,000,000 and reserve is $16,000,000. Is that a pretty good record for what they called a bunch of junk?

Now, what have we done since 1943. DeCew Falls, Second Unit, in 1942 constructed. Stewartville will be in this year. Now, that makes a total of new generation by 1948 of 81,000 h.p. That is significant. That is just double the Liberal Government brought in 1934.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): My hon. friend means the re-negotiation of the Quebec contracts of course added a great deal more than that.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I would not bring up the question of the repurchasing of Quebec power. It is too sad a story.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): My hon. friend is difficult to follow because the first you gave us was 285,000.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I say the difference between 1934 to 1943, before this Government came into power in 1943, the new installation in all systems of the Province of Ontario was 285,500 horsepower.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): The figure you just gave us was 85,000.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: No, 285,000. Now, the first unit of DeCew Falls, I have already stated, was started by that Government and converted and opened under our installation. Now, I want to make this clear, to emphasize it. These smaller plants are possible because, as I have already stated in the House, a small plant, like the plants mentioned here, are possible in planning in two or three years to bring into development. A major plant it takes longer to construct, so I want to give you what just is the programme of this Government. These are contracts that have been planned and contracts let for some and contracts will be let for another—they are all planned and all approved. Des Joachim, 480,000 horsepower I might say incidentally, we expect to pour concrete on the east end of the spill way either this week or the beginning of next.

Chenau	160,000 h.p.
Pine Portage	160,000 h.p.
Steam Plant	240,000 h.p.

You have 1,040,000 h.p., and that is from plants all under way for power all over Ontario. The grand total of plants in by 1948 means 1,325,500 horsepower.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this gigantic plan—mostly worked out in the offices of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission—for new plants, with its accompanying Transformer Stations, Transmission Lines, Frequency-Changers and etc. means a GRAND TOTAL CAPITAL EXPENDITURE OF—$318,597,855—the largest in Hydro's history.

I repeat, all developments are progressing according to schedule. The only limiting factor for greater progress or delay of schedule will be delivery of raw and fabricated materials and equipment.

In order to appreciate what the Commission is doing, note the following facts on Capital Construction Budget: The capital construction budget for 1946-47 was $57,386,507.

The actual expenditure was $46,000,000 or 80.3 per cent. of the budget. That is up until the 31st of October, 1947. Here is the 1948 programme.

In November, December and January—November, 1947, December, 1947 and January, 1948—the budget was $19,659,000. The actual expenditure was $14,846,000, or 75 per cent. of the budget. The total construction budget for this year is $83,184,137.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask will any hon. member in fairness, with this information before him, ask again what has the Hydro and this Government done since 1943? Four short years. I say quite seriously, it is a record to be proud of and I want to publicly pay my sincere tribute to the work of the Commission's efficient and loyal staff.

Now, let us bring it a little more up-to-date. What is the cause of the present power situation?

The energy situation since December last has deteriorated still further. The rainfall in a large section of north-eastern Ontario and northern Quebec was below normal. The storage capacity in this area was down to 65 per cent., the lowest in fourteen years. In co-operation with the industry and the municipal commissions, a plan of conservation was carried out most successfully, and it is expected that the Commission will have ample energy resources to carry them through to the spring break-up.

Southern Ontario: In southern Ontario, or more specifically in the Ottawa Valley, the precipitation has been very light, and as a consequence, the natural flow of the Ottawa River and its tributaries, the Gatineau and the Lievre, are lower than for many years.

The three Quebec companies during the late fall supplied the Commission with "at-will" power in excess of their contractual obligation. This "at-will" energy supplied by these companies amounted to a total of 8,000,000 kilowatt-hours per week.

Owing to poor water conditions, this supply of energy was cut off in December and was no longer available to the Commission.

This reduction was serious in itself, but due to a continued marked depletion of reserves of stored water, the Gatineau Power Company notified the Commission to reduce its energy consumption by 4,000,000 kilowatt-hours commencing February 8, 1948.

On February 10, 1948, the MacLaren-Quebec Power Company requested the Commission to reduce its consumption by an additional 4,000,000 kilowatt-hours commencing February 16, 1948.

This second reduction in energy delivery made a total of 16,000,000 kilowatt-hours at the time of the yearly peak. Let me emphasize, the cancellation of 8,000,000 kilowatt-hours per week of "at-will" energy then reducing firm deliveries by another 8,000,000 kilowatt-hours per week by Quebec companies is the primary cause of the present shortage.

Therefore, it was found necessary to require all municipal and direct consumers in the southern Ontario system to reduce their energy demand.

I stress these storage conditions simply to emphasize the cause of the present power shortage, and to point out the absurdity of the amendment moved by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), in which he condemns the Hydro Commission and the Government for the present power shortage.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): You mean it was not caused by the Liberal Government?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: If they had planned far enough ahead, we would not have had it.

It is not necessary to enlarge further on the amendment but to emphasize that to criticize the Commission for lack of water, which means power shortage—which is a condition covering almost the whole of this continent, although Ontario is better off than most countries—is simply and wholly criticism for criticism's sake.

We have taken advantage of every possible circumstance to obtain more power, and we have been successful to the extent of adding, at peak, approximately 175,000 horsepower, or a total of 8,000,000 kilowatt-hours of energy per week.

This includes especially Hydro-Quebec, Gatineau, MacLaren-Quebec and Beauharnois, who have always been willing to make available to us since 1943 any power resources not being utilized. We are grateful for this assistance.

Now, Mr. Speaker, actually there is no great cause for alarm about our power situation. This province is still enjoying unprecedented prosperity and expansion. Our difficulty, owing to natural cause, is seasonal, and wholehearted co-operation by all our consumers will solve it, with very little hardship to anyone. If consumers will but conserve what is being wasted, it would not be necessary to restrict even "at-will" customers, and there would be power enough for industry, farm, and home. The Government and the Commission wishes to thank all who have co-operated in the plan of power conservation.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, all power and other problems for years to come will be met and solved by the brilliant, courageous and vigorous leadership of our present hon. Premier of the Province (Mr. Drew),—

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. CHALLIES:—in whom the people of this province have explicit confidence, and with whom it is an honour and a privilege to serve.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. VICTOR MARTIN (Nipissing): Mr. Speaker, as I rise to take part in this debate, I want to associate myself with the other speakers who preceded me in extending to you, Mr. Speaker, congratulations on your second anniversary as Speaker of this House, and the hope for continued good health for years to come.

I also wish to extend my thanks to you, Mr. Speaker for the lovely dinner you gave us last night. I do not know if it was because it was St. Patrick's Day, but every one seemed to enjoy themselves tremendously. I think I speak for every one when I say "sincere thanks." It was a grand party.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MARTIN: I also wish to congratulate the mover and seconder of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. Everyone in this House admired the way the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) delivered his address. He made a very good impression on all the hon. members in appearing for the first time in this Legislature.

To the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) goes my congratulations. He has acquitted himself very well, and his subject on hydro was well received by all.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to associate myself with the previous speakers in paying tribute to the late Dr. Hobbs Taylor. Although I did not know him as well as some hon. members in this House, it was my good fortune to personally meet him and he seemed like a real country doctor; always ready to render service. His memory will be long remembered by all those who had the opportunity of knowing him.

At this time, Mr. Speaker, I want to tell the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) how pleased I was to have had the pleasure of meeting him in the City of North Bay this January, and sitting together at the same table at the luncheon tendered him by the civic officials of the City of North Bay, and to a dinner sponsored by the North Bay Chamber of Commerce at which he was the guest speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I listened attentively the other day to the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) when he spoke on the north. I was waiting for the moment when he would say something about Nipissing. I suppose it was not intentional that he overlooked my riding. We, of Nipissing, consider ourselves of the north. We may not claim mines as they do in other districts, but we have in Nipissing, of primary importance, lumbering, farming, fishing and so on. I remarked that he also mentioned that there will be a federal riding created in the north, dividing the Cochrane district into two ridings. I might mention that Nipissing is also divided into two ridings in the federal House, thus making two extra ridings for Northern Ontario in the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker, I also listened to the hon. member for Addington (Mr. Pringle) who claimed to have the only mica mine in Canada. I might say that we had in Nipissing the largest mica mine ever found in North America. Every one has heard of the Purdy Mine, which was discovered by Mr. Purdy. He was a government scaler previous to this discovery; then he sold it to a mining company.

This mine is located half way between Bonfield and Mattawa, two miles off the Trans-Canada Highway, and it was in operation all during the war years, which contributed a lot towards the winning of the war. You can find in the Toronto Museum the largest piece of white mica ever produced on this continent. I believe it is 4 x 8 feet in size. They had a shop in Mattawa and one in North Bay where the mica was cut.

There was also another smaller mica mine opened adjacent to this property known as the Amic Mica Mine. The cutting of this mica was done in my home town. We were able to attract this company to open up a shop there to do the cutting. Since the war ended, they were forced to close, as the market dropped in price considerably and they could not operate at a profit and meet foreign markets such as India.

There was a new discovery made a few years ago close to this property, of large deposits of brucite. The Aluminum Company of Canada has purchased many claims and staked others. Magnesium products are made from brucite. It was also used for making flares and incendiary bombs during the war. You can also produce a metal lighter than aluminum and stronger than steel. If the Aluminum Company of Canada is interested in this property, there is no doubt that this mine will be in operation before very long, which will mean a lot to the people of Nipissing.

Mr. Speaker, I was glad to hear our leader speak the other day and mention the necessity of establishing a processing plant in the north. For two years, I have been advocating such a plant, and have spoken on it at length so I do not propose to take the time of the House in repeating it again.

Since the North is daily increasing in population, new town sites are being formed, and all the meat that could be produced in such a plant could be used up locally, and as our hon. leader (Mr. Oliver) mentioned, it should be tried on an experimental basis and as time goes on, build it up. I still maintain there is no better location for such a plant than North Bay, as it is the hub of the north, with three railways passing through it, and all highways are leading to and from in every direction.

Mr. Speaker, I wish at this time to thank the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) for the extension of hydro line through our community. We were hooked up on the 17th of December, and it really was a good Christmas box. It was a very long time in coming, but we are all very appreciative of it now, and hope that within a very short time, all the rural areas of my district of Nipissing will enjoy electricity as there are no persons more deserving of hydro than the farmers, as there are so many things they can do with electricity.

In many cases, a farmer's wife has not only the upkeep of the house, but must also take part in the chores of the farm, and are very deserving of enjoying the same things that the urban wife enjoys. She would have her washing machine, refrigerator, et cetera, which is really needed on a farm. During the summer, they cannot be at the store to shop daily and, therefore, cannot enjoy to the same extent the foods that their urban sisters enjoy, as they have no way of keeping them.

This is the main reason why many farmers abandon their farms, and more so, they cannot induce their sons or daughters to stay on the farm as they are so far behind in the way of living that after they have tasted a bit of city life, one cannot coax them back as they are deprived of so many things. The complaint is why be a farmer without all the necessities of life that we are deprived of by not having electricity. The young boy or girl cannot be induced to remain or go back to farm life. So the sooner our rural areas are electrified, the sooner the exodus towards the city will ease and our urban centres will not be influxed with boys and girls that should be on the farm.

Mr. Speaker, as you all know, I come from a small town of less than 500 population, and with the hydro in, it may be that we can encourage small factories to establish in Bonfield as we are well located. The C.P.R. passes through our town, and we are only 2 miles from the No. 17 highway with a good road leading into it. We are situated on a nice lake, and plenty of room for expansion; we have over 800 acres within the corporation, with 465 of a population.

Many more towns in my riding could enjoy the same benefits once they are served with hydro, and might be one solution in relieving the congestion which exists at the moment in the large cities. I hope the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) will keep Bonfield and other towns in Nipissing in mind when he urges decentralization of industry.

Mr. Speaker, since speaking last year on highways, the paving of North Bay-Mattawa highway has begun and about half of it is paved and plans are to complete it as far as Mattawa early this year. The traffic on this No. 17 highway has tripled within the last 2 years, and will still increase. This is due to the development of the power plant at Des Joachim, employing so many men, and the building of the Cave Plant Dam above Mattawa.

Two years ago there was one bus making one daily trip between Ottawa and North Bay, and after December, they were not in operation until spring. This winter, there were two busses daily in operation all winter, and by this spring, proposals are there might be four busses in operation; that in itself gives you an idea of the increase in traffic.

To the Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett), I want to say thanks for the paving of part of this highway. I am also appreciative of the re-routing of the Verner Warren Highway, which is well under way, and which will eliminate a railway crossing which may result in the saving of lives.

Mr. Speaker, during the last and previous years, I received many requests from disabled and unemployables who were asking if I could do anything for them in the way of obtaining some kind of pension from the Government. I strongly believe that such persons are very deserving of pensions, as, through no fault of their own, they cannot work. We also have to care for their dependants.

Some pension scheme should be introduced by the Ontario Government to cover all these handicapped persons. The only recourse they have is to unemployed relief, and this, for a small municipality, is almost prohibitive, be it a township or a town. I will cite my own town for an example, and the hon. members will see what I am driving at, and will agree with me that it deserves a lot of merit; and I am not only talking for my district, as I know most of the hon. members are confronted with the same problems in their respective ridings. We have a population of 465, and an assessment of $65,000 in round figures, which means that one mill represents $65.00. Suppose we had two or more families of unemployables on relief, where would the position of this small municipality be if we have to contribute 50 per cent. to the relief cost, plus so much per person for medical fund which was 56 cents per person a year ago—I believe it has increased since that time.

We are very fortunate not to have any at the present time. However, the township of Bonfield, of which I am the treasurer, had to support 1 family for 5 months, and will give you exactly what the Government share and the municipality's share was for that short period. The time they were on relief was from December, 1946, to April, 1947. There were 11 in the family, which meant the municipality was paying 11 times 56, or $6.16 per month for medical funds of which the municipality pays 100 per cent. During these 5 months, relief to the amount of $319.00 was issued, of which the department paid $143.82, and the township contributed $175.18, or just about 22 per cent. more than the department paid.

The municipality has an assessment of $125,000, which represents $125.00 per mill rate. Had this family been on relief for the year it would have cost 3 mills to the ratepayers to keep this family alone, and had they been in the town of Bonfield it would have cost the ratepayers 5.65 mills to maintain the same family. We do not know the day we will have 2 or more such families and all small municipalities in the province are up against the same situation. So I urge the Government to amend its share of the cost of relief to small municipalities on a gradual scale, say starting point of 90 per cent. for the smaller municipalities and decrease as the ability of larger municipalities to pay increases. Such municipalities simply cannot afford relief on this basis and are sometimes penalizing the applicant which would be very deserving of it.

Mr. Speaker, I mentioned last year the seriousness of the shortage of country doctors especially in Nipissing and I presume the same situation exists in other parts of the province. In such a large district as Nipissing I can only count 2 country doctors. The only other towns and cities in which doctors are available are Mattawa, Sturgeon Falls and North Bay. Some families are as far as 30 miles from doctors. If there were a few more country doctors you would soon relieve congestion in our hospitals, as instead of rushing to the hospital at the least little sickness, patients could be treated at home by a local doctor. The Government would save a tremendous amount of money as most of these patients are a charge to the Government and the municipality. With part of the money saved they could find some way of helping a new doctor to establish himself in a small town by either supplying him with the necessary equipment to begin, or paying him a subsidy for a few years. I was vitally interested in this matter of doctors and heard that Quebec had passed a bill last year, and I wrote for a copy of the bill, which I will quote now in part:

"An Act to encourage the establishment of physicians in country districts, as passed by the Legislative Assembly, February 28th, 1947:

"WHEREAS many country districts of the province lack a sufficient number of physicians to provide the necessary medical assistance to the population:

"WHEREAS it is expedient to adopt measures in order to encourage the establishment of physicians in these districts;

"THEREFORE, His Majesty, with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and of the Legislative Assembly of Quebec, enacts as follows:

"1. The Government is authorized to spend, out of the consolidated revenue fund, a total sum of $1,000,000 during a period of 10 years, as and from the coming into force of this Act, to encourage the establishment of physicians in country districts of the province which are not sufficiently provided with medical services.

"2. The Government may, out of such sum,

"(a) grant scholarships to medical students who are recommended by the Council of the Faculty of Medicine of a University within the province, and who undertake to establish themselves and reside in country districts as soon as they are admitted to the practice of the medical profession, and to grant them allowances for such purpose at the time of their establishment;

"(b) to grant similar allowances to all other physicians who agree to establish themselves and reside in the country."

Now, Mr. Speaker, if we had more country doctors the general public in rural places could be educated to pay regular visits to their doctor thus preventing a lot of serious sickness and a decrease in mortality would be felt. You will agree with me prevention is better than cure so therefore the sooner we can encourage doctors to establish themselves in small towns the better.

Mr. Speaker, there is a matter I would like to draw to the attention of the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett). I think if I read a letter from the North Bay Chamber of Commerce I just received, the problem will be clear to the hon. Minister and perhaps he will give it serious and early consideration. I quote:

"Now that spring is almost here, and bearing in mind the flood conditions which existed in this area during the spring of 1947, the people of North Bay and district are much concerned about what the Provincial and Federal Governments proposed to do, concerning adequate flood control of Lake Nipissing's water.

"Following the terrible damage inflicted on property owners and our lakeshore last spring, we received assurances that both the Federal and Provincial Governments would take some action in the near future to correct the situation and prevent a recurrence of flood conditions in this area.

"Mr. Williams, Deputy Minister of Public Works, in your Government, assured me by telephone several times, that he was most concerned about the problem and was giving it lengthy study. Two months ago, at which time I last spoke to him, he assured me that he was about to make recommendations for quick action on the construction of a spillway, which would assist in preventing future floods, by creating a greater outlet for water from Lake Nipissing down the French River. He told me at that time, also, that they were in communication with the Dominion Government at Ottawa, concerning what proportion of cost the Ottawa Administration would bear.

"Would you be so kind as to place this question before the Government at your earliest convenience. We would appreciate it if you would explain to them that the voters in this district are becoming a little impatient and that they would like to know what the Government is going to do about flood control on Lake Nipissing. I think you will agree we have all been very patient and have accepted the Government's word that it plans to take some action to remedy the situation. We feel now, however, that the time is ripe for action and not for words.

"Thanking you for your attention to this request, I am

Respectfully,
(signed) Bruce McLeod,
Secretary."

Mr. Speaker, in closing may I express the hope that the suggestions I have made will be accepted in the spirit in which they are given so that the people of Nipissing may benefit through the action of this Government.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, may I suggest that you now declare it 6.00 o'clock.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) if it is the thought that we will finish the debate tonight?

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, if the list I have before me is correct, I think we will finish it, except for the conclusion of the debate, which I think the hon. members will agree could more conveniently be done on Tuesday afternoon. It is customary for the mover to close the debate where there are amendments, and we can have the vote on Tuesday afternoon.

It being 6.00 o'clock, the House recessed.

MR. M. C. DAVIES (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, at the very outset, may I join with other hon. members who have spoken in bringing to you our sincere appreciation of the patience and the kindness and the firmness which you have exercised in occupying the office of Speaker during this session. We wish you many, many more years of splendid service, and I can assure you, hon. sir, that to look at you with the broad smile on your face gives one who is about to make his first speech a good deal of confidence and assurance.

Likewise, I consider it only part of my privilege to express the kindly feelings which all of us have had with regard to the late Dr. Hobbs Taylor, a kindly gentleman, most sincere in his duties as an hon. member of this House, and most conscientious in the discharge of his duties towards his constituents.

We are very grateful on this side, Mr. Speaker, in that the mover of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne (Mr. Pryde) was selected from this side. Sometimes, we are considered to be a little bit outside of the pale by some of our hon. members farther to the right on this side, but I can assure such hon. members that we are very close to the full working of the Government, and we are whole-heartedly behind all of its endeavours and its legislation.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. DAVIES: And, so we are very grateful that the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde), a new hon. member in this House, was selected for this honoured position, so I know I am doing just as others have done in passing on to him our heartiest congratulations and our best wishes for further success.

Likewise, to the seconder (Mr. Hamilton), who handled a subject which is very, very difficult, and which he discharged with an excellence which I am sure is worthy of the commendation of all.

As seems to be the custom, it is the part of the local member to say something about his constituency. I have the honour and privilege to represent one of the great industrial areas of the Province of Ontario, the City of Windsor. We are a manufacturing and a residential area. Mine is made up of the great industries which have enabled the town of Walkerville—as it once was, and we still like to think of it as such—to be known far and wide in almost every country of the world. We make everything from wire fencing to cars, from paper boxes to toilet articles. We have anything in the line of heavy and light industry, which I believe is evidence of the fine workmanship we have, the splendid management we enjoy and the happy relationships which exist in my constituency.

Very strange things, to people away from the border, seem to happen along the border. Usually we know what we want, we take it, and then we follow the procedure of asking for it, and by and large that seems to work quite satisfactorily, although sometimes a little bit to the disturbance of other parts of the province. And yet, it is that very spirit, Mr. Speaker, which has made the border what it is, a community of daring, of courage, of faith, and of tolerance, where we find the banker living next door to the electrician, the employer living on the same street as the employee, where there is no racial difference, where, I am very happy to say, we know nothing of religious intolerance. These are typical of the experiences which one enjoys living in such a place as the border cities.

Its history goes well back into the history of this province, with both French-Canadian and Anglo-Saxon stock; tremendous contributions have been made by some of the well-known names throughout this province, the Drouillards, the Willetts, the Poissons, the St. Pierres and the Langlois', these are common names representing splendid families of the area. Likewise, with them, we find the name of Prince, the name of Wykel, the name of McKee, the name of McGregor, the name of Campbell, each in his own particular way having contributed toward the building up of this very important part of our province and of our Dominion.

When one stops to think of the border, he realizes that there are tremendous opportunities, and yet that those opportunities create responsibilities. We have known what it is to go through a very severe depression. Likewise, even through depression, we have held on to what we believed to be our Canadian way of life with a firm tenacity of faith. We have enjoyed tremendous prosperity, and in the days of that prosperity you will find the border has in its expression of generosity matched itself with any other community in the Province of Ontario.

Made up of, I say, these rather strange differences, knowing these varying experiences, it is no wonder that there is a tremendous future ahead of us if only we can retain the fine faith which our forefathers had when they made on the Detroit River the fine city of Windsor.

Now, it is my purpose to speak, Mr. Speaker, on two or three matters which I believe to be of general importance.

First of all, I think that every hon. member of this House, and indeed everyone in the province, is vitally interested in the question of old-age pensions. I am in no position to speak from a legislative standpoint, because I am not a student of the great statutes and enactments which are passed from time to time by the Government of our country, but I think that it is vitally important for us to come face-to-face with a very real problem which does exist today at the very outset, and may I say that this Government has done far more than any other government in the appreciation of old-age pensions and their payment to those who deserve and who are entitled to them—granted, not as much as we would like, but at the same time I think that we have to face this matter of old-age pensions from a very realistic point of view.

I said I knew nothing about the necessary procedure in the enactment of various laws, but I have raised this question in my own mind, Mr. Speaker, just as a very ordinary citizen:

I think that we all recall the enactment of legislation federally with regard to the baby bonus. If my memory serves me right, the various provinces were not consulted in that it became a matter of economic necessity. I am full out for the baby bonus, but at the same time, as you and I, Mr. Speaker, look back over the history of our own families and of their families, is it not a fact that wherever there was a spark of love in a mother heart, or there was any semblance of responsibility in the heart and life of the father, the children were taken care of? I am not decrying the importance nor the benefit of the baby bonus, but no means test is required here for it, I am given to understand—although I received none myself; the bonus coming in after my own children were grown up—that whether rich or poor, whether needing it or not, the baby bonus must be accepted.

But, what about the old people? I believe very thoroughly that it must become a federal matter, and that it must become a matter which can be put into effect on exactly the same basis—though perhaps not guaranteeing quite as many votes for the party in power—as that which made the baby bonus possible. I feel that those who have given of their lives, who have contributed of their services, who indeed have made their sacrifices, are, if there is any question of debate, entitled to their care and preservation in their declining years, even more so than the children.

It should very definitely, I believe, be on a contributory basis. After all, if this country is worth working in, worth living for—yes, and very many died for it—surely all of us who have the ability to earn should be quite prepared to give of our share in order that some day, though we may not enjoy it ourselves, those who have attained the age of 65 or 70 years will not feel that they are paupers as they receive their monthly cheques, but will be honoured to feel that they are now receiving part of that which they have contributed and which has been contributed by others.

I am given to understand that this Government of ours is full out for a nation-wide contributory old-age pension scheme, and I say that it is time for us to cut the red tape and for Ottawa to take this matter as a federal matter, not necessarily hanging various sorts of enticements before provinces and taking taxes away and all that kind of thing, but rather face this thing as a federal responsibility in exactly the same way as they accepted and gave to us the baby-bonus responsibility.

The second thing I wish to speak about for a moment, Mr. Speaker, has to do with what I believe to be a most important part of the make-up of our reform and mental institutions. As perhaps you know, hon. sir, during the last war, it was my privilege to be a padre in the Royal Canadian Air Force, and I think that any of us who had the privilege of serving our country in that capacity came to realize that, after all, our job was not just simply to preach a 20-minute sermon on Sunday and call that a week's work, but rather we found there were innumerable opportunities. I know from my own very limited experience, there were innumerable opportunities when the chaplain was the only man who could finally straighten out the chap who went "off the deep end," as we used to say, and it was the padre's job to go into the cells and see just what was back of the particular trouble which brought this boy into this particular situation.

And I venture to say this, that, even from my experience as a civilian, when I have gone down to jails and have visited men and women in their cells, I have found that some, in many instances, very small and disturbing factor was the beginning of what developed to be a life of serious crime, because the boy or girl had no one in whom to confide, was afraid of the police officer, thought the best and smartest way to live was to beat the law, found himself or herself in serious trouble.

Surely, when these boys and girls and men and women are confined to our institutions, it is vitally important that there shall be available to them at all times—not just part of the time, but at all times—the benefit of spiritual help and spiritual counsel.

It is recognized in almost every phase of life that part and parcel of the make-up of man is his spiritual side, and I submit that in this province of ours, where tremendous advancements are being made in the line of reform for those who have run afoul of the law, we shall not overlook the intrinsic value, and the absolute necessity of caring for the spiritual side of those who are put under our care in this way.

I have spoken to the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Dunbar) and he is very sympathetic to this, but I think it is well for us to have this matter brought before this House in order that further impetus might be given to bring into being a responsible, qualified chaplain service in each of our reform institutions. And may I add, Mr. Speaker, I am in no way looking for a job; I have had the present one for twenty-six years, and I expect to stay where I am for another such length of time, if they will have me.

With regard to our mental institutions; some of us know these institutions very well, Mr. Speaker, and here again, if I may refer to my own experience in the chaplain service, I found that in very many instances, some of the boys who “cracked up,” as we said, were able to be straightened out by the sympathetic understanding which could only, it seems to me, be displayed and manifested through a padre. I have had many experiences, for there were “crack-ups” in the Air Force, both on this side and Overseas, and somehow or other, the chaplain who is trained to deal with these particular mental problems is of splendid help and assistance to the medical staff. We have everything else for them, and yet are safe in saying that we cannot find a complete restoration, physically and mentally, without some sort of restoration, spiritual as well as physical.

I feel in these two great services which this province is called upon to render, there should be coupled with them, the importance of establishing full-time chaplain services in our penal institutions and in our mental institutions.

I want to speak about one more thing, Mr. Speaker, if I may, and that is the problem which is confronting every one of us so vitally during these days, as manifested by this evil ideology we call “communism.”

It is not my intention to speak about it politically, as there are others who are far more qualified to deal with it than am I. I do want to pay tribute at the very outset, however, in dealing with this matter, to the splendid series of articles now being published in the Windsor Daily Star as a result of the visit of their reporter, Mr. “Don” Cameron, to some of the hot-beds—if we may call them the “hot-beds”—of communism.

The courage displayed by this newspaper is so great that there are 25 and more newspapers across this country now making use of that series, and there is becoming in the mind of the individual—the citizen, the ordinary man—a consciousness that there is something going on in our midst, working, striving, struggling against the very things which have made this nation and this province of ours really great.

I want to speak of the responsibility which rests upon each one of us as individual citizens, because after all, if this Canadian way of life of ours is worth living for, then I plead with each one of us as citizens to live for it.

It is so simple for us to say that the responsibility for the carrying on of government, for the maintenance of law and order, for the protection of citizens' rights will be passed on to the hands of others. If we are Canadians, then it is for us to so live our way of life that there will be no room in the life of individual Canadians to give any place for any of the teachings of that which would destroy the Canadian way of life.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. DAVIES: I find nothing, Mr. Speaker, in the teachings of this so-called form of government which can be of any attraction to me, because, somehow or other, I believe that I am the inheritor of something great, something splendid, and something that is far beyond what we have now attained, and that has been made possible because men and women come to this province and to this country, not with the idea, Mr. Speaker, of getting everything they can out of it, but of giving everything they can to it. When I listen to bills being presented in this house which contain anything that touches finance, and money, and increased taxes to give people all sorts of things, whether they deserve them, or whether they have earned them or contributed toward them, it is amusing to me. Surely to goodness it is the bounden duty of every citizen to accept his responsibility and so master our way of life that we shall find no place for the intrigue, nor for the gradual working in of that which would destroy the way we seek to live.

Mr. Speaker, our heritage is tremendous. It is in the hands of individual citizens to preserve our heritage, not in the hands of government, not in the hands of the army, the air force or the navy, or the police; it is your responsibility and mine that we shall live fully, completely, and well. Thus it is that we plead for a re-kindling of the fine, noble, strong Canadian spirit, for that tenacious British spirit which has been the means of giving to the world that which we now enjoy: a freedom, a tolerance, an understanding, a Christian way of life.

The great bulwark against communism, it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, is the heritage which we have received in our holy religion. Perhaps this is not the best place to mention that, but certainly as we are searching around for ways to combat that irreligious teaching, we shall fall back on the way which does represent the truth and the light. And I am holding on to that. Then, come what may, as stalwart soldiers and citizens, not only of this great Dominion, but also of the Great God, we shall be prepared to maintain that which we have received.

Thus it comes down to the point where each one of us must choose by whom we shall live. Shall it be Christ, or shall it be Stalin? Shall it be God, or shall it be mammon? The answer rests, Mr. Speaker, with each individual citizen of this province.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. GARFIELD ANDERSON (Fort William): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate, may I join with those who have preceded me in extending to you my congratulations in assuming your office for the second term, and also for the fact that you are enjoying good health; and I am sure that you will fill your office in a very dignified manner, and a very fair manner.

I would like also to join with the other speakers in congratulating the mover of the reply to the Speech from the Throne (Mr. Pryde). He did a difficult job very well. Also to the seconder, the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton), who did an excellent job in seconding the motion. I am sure we all appreciate it.

I believe at this later hour as regards the debate that most of the ground has been fairly well covered, and I will not deal with it in too much detail, but I do want to take up some matters pertaining to our own part of the country, and later on deal with two or three points that are mentioned in the Speech from the Throne.

I suppose it gets a bit monotonous to speak of your own riding, but I would just mention briefly, for the benefit of some of the hon. members who have not had the opportunity of getting up that far, one or two points. I do not have to mention the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) because we have in Fort William one of our streets, and one of our schools, named, I understand, after his father, so he is fairly familiar with Fort William. I am accepting the word of the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Scott) that there are many hon. members who have not been up our way, and so for their benefit, if for no one else's, I am going to mention just a few of the industries we have in Fort William.

As you know, we have a railway terminal, where the two great trans-continental railways transport the grain from the West into the elevators. The storage capacity at the head of the lakes, including Port Arthur, as well as Fort William, is 92,000,000 bushels; that is a bushel for every mile between the earth and the sun.

We have a very large plant which, during the war, made airplanes. I am sorry to say that back as far as about 1938 they were making airplanes and sending them to Turkey, but in some mysterious way they cannot explain, they were used by Franco. However, today that plant is engaged in making trolley coaches and gasoline buses, and I understand that a number of the trolley coaches are used on the streets in the City of Toronto. We also have a number in use in our own town, Fort William.

We have a very large sawmill, and most important of all, we have a lot of very fine people, upward of 32,000 in all, with 39 different nationalities. These different peoples, many of them coming from Europe, get along very well together. We have no racial discrimination, and as the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. Davies) mentioned regarding his riding, the different religious denominations get along very well together.

Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to speak on labour, but I might mention the fact that throughout the entire war we had nothing in the way of labour troubles at the head of the lakes, as far as the local people were concerned. We had a couple of strikes. One of them had to do with the great lakes shipping, and the other the saw-mill and lumber workers and not the city employees, but we got along very well.

They are very highly industrialized and I think that shows the advantages of the unions.

I missed the opportunity of hearing the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) present his address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, and the answer given by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew).

On that day I had the good fortune, while I missed something here, to be a delegate from the council of Fort William, in Chicago. I was there with the Rev. Dan McIvor, the hon. member of the House of Commons for Fort William, and we presented 4 former Fort William hockey players with tokens of goodwill, in the way of club bags. We have a man by the name of Poile, Bodnar, and Stewart, of the Chicago Black Hawks team, and then a man by the name of Jack Adams, who for some years has been manager of the Detroit Red Wings. That was my first trip to Chicago, and I was somewhat surprised that so many people want to live in such a small space. It is a very large city. I was only there for a couple of days, and did not have a great deal of opportunity to see the city, but I did enjoy the visit, and it was indeed a pleasure, and I felt very proud that we had produced in Fort William such excellent hockey players.

Now, as most of the hon. members know, up in our part of the country, we have not counties as the word is commonly used here. There are some 12 districts in the Province of Ontario, so up there at the head of the lakes we have organized a number of organizations that possibly would not be in existence, if we had counties. I am not saying that in any critical sense, but it is the type of country that counties are not so suitable for.

We have the Thunder Bay Municipal League, and last year a new organization was formed, the North-western Ontario Municipal Association. I attended the first annual conference in Kenora, and there a brief was presented, and I am going to refer to extracts from some of the motions which were passed at that convention.

We are no different from many parts of North-western Ontario. The first item that I see, is the paving of the Trans-continental Highway from the head of the lakes to Kenora. I fully realize that all these matters cannot be dealt with at one time; it is a tremendously big problem. From the eastern boundary of Port Arthur constituency to the Manitoba boundary is a distance of between 500 and 600 miles, and this Association which was formed last year, known as the "North-western Ontario Municipal Association," takes in the four ridings, Port Arthur, Fort William, Rainy River and Kenora.

However, we are spending considerable money in the western districts in securing tourists to come to this province, and there is nothing in my opinion which will help to encourage the tourist trade like the providing of good roads for them to ride on. One of the motions that was passed at the convention was a motion asking this Government, as soon as possible, to pave the Trans-continental Highway from the head of the lakes to Kenora.

The next was concerning the road from Shabandowan to Fort Francis. That is a beautiful part of the country. There is no better place, I think, in Canada, for tourists. There are a number of mining businesses in that country, including the great iron ore deposit at Steep Rock, that is now in a stage of development.

Another one was a suggestion that an increase be made in the grants toward side roads.

In making these brief remarks regarding the riding of Fort William, I did not mention the fact that we have got a good agricultural settlement in that part of the province. In the production of milk and cream, the Thunder Bay district comes 6th in the province. Some years ago, under the Liberal Government, there was a marketing agent up there, and he was doing a very fine work. It was under that Government that he was withdrawn, and there has been a request for some years to re-appoint one or two more marketing agents in that part of the province.

The gentleman we had before did a lot of very fine work in the form of developing the co-operative marketing agencies, and a number of them are still found in the Rainy River district.

Another suggestion was the appointment of a qualified veterinary surgeon who would assist those who were engaged in fur farming. In the Thunder Bay district there is some $3,000,000 invested in fur-bearing animals that are domesticated, and in plant and equipment. It is a very important business, and there is great need for a qualified veterinarian to be placed there to assist in this very important business.

Another request was the grant toward the transportation of children to secondary schools be increased. Also the revision of the annual seasonal dates for big-game hunting. Last year, of course, we had a very mild fall, and it is considered by the people who live in that part of the country that quite a number of moose were shot at a time of the year when it was too warm to save the meat, and as a result a lot of the meat was wasted.

I want to read from one short motion regarding taxation:

"As tax-exempt property, both Dominion and Provincial covers a large area in any municipality in North-western Ontario, this organization would urge that an annual grant be made to such properties in lieu of taxes."

I think one could go a little farther than that, and I hope when the committee that is forecast in the Speech from the Throne is appointed, it will review the exemptions that are now enjoyed by private companies. There are a number of private companies throughout the province. I know in my part of the country they have enjoyed special exemptions for many years, some of them even covered by special Acts of Parliament, and I think now they are able to pay their fair share of taxes.

Another motion was one dealing with the extension of hydro. That has been mentioned by previous speakers from that part of the country this afternoon as has also a grant for old-age pensions. I will have more to say on that, when I come to the Speech from the Throne.

I was rather amused the other day by the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) in his address. He suggested that up in Northern Ontario they load up a northland railway coach and bring the young people down to show them Toronto. Well, I think in this very important part of the province of ours, it would be better if they took a load of the people from down here and took them up there, and let them see that part of the country. I think our young people up there know more about this part of the country, than most people think. I know that some of them do.

I am going to mention some motions which were passed by another organization, which I mentioned earlier. I have in my hand the submission by the Ontario Municipal Association, which represents some 253 municipalities throughout this province, and they have a very active Association.

Last fall they recorded some very important resolutions, and I think they are worth putting on the record here.

The first I am going to quote is one regarding the marriage regulations:

"The Association believes that one of the causes of the increase in the divorce rate, and the increasing welfare problems flowing from domestic discord, is a lack of knowledge of the problems of married life, and that an important factor in the development of such problems is the prevalence of venereal diseases.

"We, therefore, recommend first, that persons intending to marry be required to file a health certificate with the issuer of marriage licenses, or if the marriage is to be by banns, that the clergyman who solemnizes the marriage and;

"2. That the registrar - general supply the issuer of marriage licenses with a booklet explaining the 'Problems to be considered on contemplation of marriage,' to be issued to all applicants for marriage licenses."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. ANDERSON: The next is one dealing with hospitalization costs:

"The Association requests that all hospitalization costs should be the complete responsibility of the Provincial Government, as such costs are not a proper municipal responsibility."

I could say a good deal about that. I know that they are something that are a problem in many municipalities. I mentioned in my speech last year that in the year 1946 the City of Fort William had given grants totalling $138,500.00 towards our hospitals in Fort William. This past year, 1947, we had hoped to get off a little easier. We started off by giving approximately two mills, which is $60,000, and then we assumed the bonded indebtedness, interest on debentures, for the year, which amounted to $21,000, and, in addition to that, we took care of the indigent patients which amounted to almost $10,000, and before the end of the year we were faced with another grant of approximately $13,000. If you add these amounts together, you get a sizable sum for a municipality the size of ours. I know this Government has agreed to assist in financing new hospital accommodation, but prices have gone up, the cost of building has gone up to such a point that the assistance that the Government is prepared to give is not sufficient to enable many municipalities to finance the balance. If we in Fort William got a very generous grant from the Government under the present regulations, we would still be faced with approximately $1,000,000 to finance through the municipality, and that, of course, is a very large amount.

Now, the next item is one on welfare:

"The members of the Association are keenly aware that during the years of unemployment in the 30's the burden of providing even a portion of welfare costs forced many municipalities into default, and are apprehensive of the result of a change in economic conditions, the control of which conditions is beyond the power of the municipalities. The Association, therefore, would urge that the Province and the Dominion assume the full responsibility for and administration of, welfare and kindred services."

I have two more to quote. The next one is one dealing with The Children's Aid Society, and it is rather lengthy. They are just asking again for a greater amount of financial assistance to be provided by the province.

The next one is on education. We change in our thinking as the years go by. I remember back in 1938 I presented a motion to the City Council of Fort William—I was then a member of the Council—that the province be asked to provide 50 per cent. of the cost of education, and I was looked upon by many of the members of Council as someone, if they had not lost all their senses, they were almost in that position. Now, this is the motion that we find by this organization:

"The Association requests that the Provincial Government, in co-operation with the Dominion Government, should meet the total cost of education."

I think that clearly shows the situation which has developed throughout this province in the past few years. While the financial position of the municipalities is in excellent shape, nevertheless the social services which have been requested by the people throughout the province in the past few years, coupled with the fact that costs have increased, costs of government, wages, et cetera, many municipalities are being faced with financial problems that are almost impossible to meet.

I was glad to see that the Speech from the Throne contained news of the appointment of the committee that would make a study of this whole provincial-municipal problem. If you remember, last year, Mr. Speaker, I presented a motion calling for a conference to be called. The Government felt that it was too much of a problem because of the very large number of municipalities, and I was indeed pleased to see that a committee is to be appointed to look into this very perplexing financial problem.

The next and last motion is one on housing, and, by the way, I will have something more to say on housing later:

"The Association has urged the Hon. Mr. Howe, Minister of Reconstruction, and the Dominion Government to take steps immediately to improve the housing situation in Canada by speeding up and making available more materials for the building industry. We would urge your Government as well as the Dominion Government, to give every consideration to the provision of a comprehensive plan for low rental housing."

I want to now deal with two or three matters that are connected with the Speech from the Throne. Again, I was rather glad to see that the Government has taken this question of housing seriously. Although it may become a bit tiresome to some of the members, I am going to read plank eight of the famous 22 points as of 1943:

"To create an Ontario Housing Commission for the purpose of wiping out slums, improving home conditions in city, town and country and providing post-war employment on a large scale.

"An Ontario Housing Commission will be created to plan a great housing programme throughout the whole province for the purpose of creating employment in the period of readjustment and at the same time bring to an end the unsatisfactory housing conditions in many parts of Ontario."

The Speech from the Throne states this, in part:

"The housing shortage has, I know, been a matter of great concern to all of you. Now that the increasing availability of essential supplies, for the first time, makes it possible for the Provincial Legislature to deal effectively with this matter, you will be called upon to consider measures designed to greatly increase the construction of low-cost accommodation to this province."

That is good news. I do not know what the Government has in mind, but I am going to take the time to just quote briefly from an article that I thought was very good, and which I took out of the "Saturday Night." It is dated February 14th of this year. It is by Benjamin Higgins. Let us see who Mr. Higgins is:

"The people of Canada have never been well housed, and the present housing shortage has reached an intensity that is unprecedented in the Dominion's history. In this, the first of two articles, Professor Benjamin Higgins, Department of Economics, McGill University, examines the extent to which the crisis has grown. The writer is a member of the sub-committee on Housing and Planning in the Advisory Committee on Reconstruction. During the war he was Chief of the Housing Unit for the U.S. War Production Board and Special Assistant to the administrator of the U.S. Housing Authority.

"He discusses factors contributing generally to high housing costs and the special factors in the current situation. For instance, the new housing being provided in Canada today is almost entirely in the $60 a month bracket and is within the means of only the top 5 or 10 per cent.

"Despite a fairly high level of housing construction in the last two years, Canada still fell short of current requirements by several thousand units, let alone any catching up on the tremendous back-log."

I am going to continue quoting, but first I might say that the next item, I think, is very important. The article goes on to say:

"In 1946, a year of full employment, our average income per family was not much above $125 per month. One-third of Canadian families had incomes below $100 per month, two-thirds had incomes below $150 per month. Our economy has failed more completely and more miserably in the housing field than in any other area vital to a minimum standard of living. Not more than one-third of the Canadian people can be considered badly fed or badly clothed, but at least two-thirds of Canadians are badly housed. Budget studies indicate that families in the middle and low income groups cannot pay more than one-fifth of their monthly incomes for housing without depriving themselves of other basic necessities. Not more than one-third of Canadian families can afford to pay over $35 a month for housing. Yet the new housing being provided is almost entirely in the $60 a month bracket and upwards. Such housing is within the means of only the top 5 or 10 per cent. of Canadian families."

Now, I do not believe it is the intention of this Government, Mr. Speaker, to go into the housing business. I am sorry that they do not feel so disposed, but I do believe this, that before we completely solve the question of supplying low-cost housing in Canada to those in the low income brackets it will be necessary for the Provincial Governments, and the Dominion Government and municipalities, to work out some plan for low-cost subsidized housing for those in the low-income brackets. I know we can get along without doing that. We may do it, thinking we are saving money, but we will pay the cost in other directions. We will pay for the lack of housing with an increase in the breaking-up of homes and juvenile delinquency, and in disease, if we have not got proper shelter for our people. I do hope that whatever plans this Government brings forth, that it will provide low-cost housing in some form for the people, for the many people in this province who are today in very great need of housing accommodation, that they can pay for.

I am going to say a word or two on old-age pensions, but before I do I am going to mention something that some of you may know and some of you may not know. I think it is well, sometimes to turn back the pages of history and just see what has happened. We take too much for granted sometimes. Our past leader, or founder, I should say, the late J. S. Woodsworth, was elected to Parliament following the first world war, and, by the way, he was put in jail although he was a very innocent man, and a good, law-abiding citizen. His parents were United Empire Loyalists, and he was a man who had a splendid record in this country. He was well spoken of in Parliament, even although he was on the Opposition. Prior to the 1926 election, he wrote a brief letter to the Leader of the Government and to the Leader of the Opposition, and I am going to put on record the short letter he wrote:

"Dear Mr. King: As representatives of Labour in the House of Commons, may we ask whether it is your intention to introduce at this session legislation with regard to (a) provision for the unemployed; (b) old-age pensions. We are venturing to send a similar inquiry to the Leader of the Opposition. Yours sincerely, J. S. Woodsworth, A. A. Heaps."

At that time the two old parties in Parliament were so evenly matched in strength that these two men, by supporting one or the other, could either keep the Government in office or defeat it. So, they felt and rightly so, it was an opportune time to see what kind of bargaining they could do. They did not get a very satisfactory reply from the Leader of the Opposition, and they got this answer from Mr. King. I will not read the entire letter, but just the part that has to do with old-age pensions:

"Dear Mr. Woodsworth: In answer to the question from Mr. Neill, Mr. Lapointe further intimated that it was the intention of the Government to introduce at this session legislation with respect to old-age pensions."

Let us see what the Senators said when the legislation came before the Senate. It is very brief and it is very interesting. This was a bill to give some small pension to the people at 70 years of age. This is what Senator, the Hon. C. P. Beaubien says:

"If this bill passes, the obligation of the children to look after their father and mother and grandfather and grandmother goes by the board. Is it judicious for us to impose upon our country such socialistic legislation as this—because it is nothing else—when there is no call for it?"

That is, Hansard, June 8th, 1926, page 160.

AN HON. MEMBER: He is still in the Senate.

MR. ANDERSON: Then I will read just one other short quotation. This is from the hon. John McCormick:

"I do not think there is any doubt in the mind of those who have been following the affairs of this country for some years that the measure was proposed simply in order to secure the support of two men who call themselves Labour men in the other House."

That is Hansard, June 8th, 1926, page 167. So, you see what was very unpopular in those days is recognized today, I hope, by every intelligent man and woman in this country as being a necessity.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): What is the name of that book?

MR. ANDERSON: This book was prepared by one of the daughters of the late Mr. J. S. Woodsworth. The title is, "The C.C.F. and the Liberals."

Now then, we are going to deal with old-age pensions a little bit. I want to quote, Mr. Speaker, part of the reference regarding old-age pensions in the Speech from the Throne:

"Ontario has undertaken to pay 25 per cent. share of old-age pensions increased from $25 per month to $30 per month. In addition, my Government has provided for a further provincial payment up to $10 per month in cases of need, over and above the $30, making a total of $40 monthly in such cases."

I have no fault to find with the wording of that. I think it states the case very clearly, but I want you to remember that "in such cases," in my humble opinion, does not mean very many cases. I have not the figures for the Province of Ontario, but I would be surprised if more than 5 per cent. of the people that are on old-age pension in the Province of Ontario are receiving any or all of this ten dollars a month. In the light of the quotations I read from Hansard, I want to read you a letter I received since I came down to Toronto to attend the Session from the City Council of Fort William, and I cannot be accused of taking any part in this because I left on the 29th of February. It is dated March 11th, written by the City Clerk to myself:

"I am directed to advise you that at a meeting of the Council of The Corporation of the City of Fort William, held on the 9th inst., the following resolution was adopted, a copy of which I was instructed to forward you:

"THAT the Federal and Provincial Governments be petitioned to increase the amount of old-age pensions to $100 per month for man and wife"—

That is a far cry from the day the Senators were quarrelling about giving them $20.

—"and to $50 per month for a single person;

"THAT the pension age be lowered to 65 years, and be payable to both man and wife, upon the man reaching the age of 65 years;

"THAT old-age pensions be payable to all, irrespective of their means;

"THAT such pensions be free from execution, and attachment in all courts;

"THAT old-age pensions be set up on a contributory basis."

AN HON. MEMBER: Who passed that?

MR. ANDERSON: I was very much impressed with the figure mentioned by the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. Davies) in his plea regarding the old people of this country—and I agree it is a Federal matter.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Might I ask the hon. member (Mr. Anderson) if the Mayor of Fort William (Mr. Anderson) is in favour of that resolution.

MR. ANDERSON: If you have patience I will tell you what I am in favour of. I believe it is a Federal matter, and I also believe it should be given on exactly the same basis as what we term the "baby bonus." That is, it should be sent out irrespective of your financial position when you reach a certain age. Then if you are well enough off so that you do not need it, the tax collector will get it back in the form of taxes. It will eliminate that very difficult situation that arises when this means test is attached to old-age pensions.

Before I came down to Toronto I got a list of cases of the number of persons who are receiving old-age pensions in the City of Fort William. I do not know how they compare with other places. I also got a list of those who are receiving pensions outside the city. There are 75 cases outside the City of Fort William, and one of them gets $10 a month that the province gives—one out of seventy-five.

HON. G. A. WELSH (Minister of Travel and Publicity): Can the hon. member tell me where he got that information?

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, I got it from the Welfare Department of the City of Fort William. For the city, the number is 319, and 10 of them receive $10 a month; 5 of them are receiving $6 of the $10; 2 of them are receiving $5 of the $10; 3 of them are receiving $3, and 1 of them is receiving $2 of the $10. Now, it would appear that while there is a means test for the old-age pension from the Federal Government, there is a meaner means test for this $10 because there are not very many getting it.

Mr. Speaker, I know it will be said possibly by some of the members, "Well, what is the C.C.F. doing in Saskatchewan?" I might tell you in advance they are giving $35, and they are giving it on the same basis as the other pensions. In addition, I want to put on the record what they are doing in the way of health for these old people who are unfortunate enough to be drawing old-age pensions.

"The first province in the Dominion to extend socialized health services to its citizens—Saskatchewan—has based its plan on the principle that every one, irrespective of his ability to pay, has the right to good health, medical and hospital care, drugs, clinical and nursing services—all aspects of health protection—are provided without charge to old-age and blind pensioners and their dependents"—

I think I may at this point tell you what I am quoting from—It might seem to be C.C.F. propaganda. I am quoting from The Veterans' Advocate of January, 1948. I think the paper is published here in the City of Toronto.

—"and to the dependent children and mothers who are recipients of mothers' allowances. This forward-looking programme is administered through the medical services division of the Provincial Department of Health.

"Coupled with the provision of free medical services is a social aid programme, administered by the social-aid branch of Social Welfare, through which old-age and blind pensioners and the recipients of mothers' allowances are given assistance in addition to their regular pensions and allowances. This is in keeping with the Government's policy of sharing 50 per cent. of any additional aid municipalities may consider necessary in case of need.

"By far the largest group to benefit under this free medical and social aid programme is the old-age and blind pensioners. The social aid and medical services division, in providing security and health to this group, are, together spending during this fiscal year more than $1,000,000. The medical services division will spend close to $400,000 for hospitalization on behalf of almost 18,000 old-age and blind pensioners and their dependents, in addition to an expenditure of approximately $400,000 for the provision of special nursing, dental, optical, medical care and drugs for the provinces' pensioners.

"The largest single expenditure of the medical services division is for medical care. During the first seven months of this fiscal year an estimated 24,000 medical treatments received by the pension group cost the divisions $88,000. Nearly $65,000 has been spent on approximately 15,000 drug prescriptions, $43,000 on 17,000 dental treatments, and $20,000 on 12,000 optical prescriptions. The policy behind the extension of these services to persons, who otherwise could not afford them, is upheld by the steady increases in the spending of the division of from $21.00 per pensioner in 1945 to $30.00 per pensioner in 1947."

Now, I have taken some time on this, because I believe, Mr. Speaker—I agree with those who say "We are living in a very wealthy province, we are not hard up at the present time, I understand—that there should be a little more liberal attitude on the part of the province to those people who are drawing old-age pensions until the time comes—and I hope it is not too far away—when the Federal Government will assume the responsibility for the entire amount, which, I think it should, because in this country, or any other country, the people who should have first claim on the wealth of the nation, in my humble opinion, are the old pioneers who helped to make it. No one else is more entitled to that consideration than are the old people of the country who are destitute when they get to be old. Before I close, I want to deal for a few minutes with Clause 19 of the famous 22 points programme. In 1943—

"19. To assure the public of adequate supplies of fuel, milk and other necessities. Adequate supplies at reasonable prices of fuel, milk and other basic necessities will be assured by effective organizations and administrative control. Representatives of labour, veteran organizations, and the consuming public will be appointed to all boards dealing with these matters."

Then I turn to the Speech from the Throne and I am going to quote a few lines from the heading "Inflationary Trends."

"During the year, prices have risen to inflationary levels. My Government has no choice but to recognize that responsibility for checking and controlling inflation rests with the Federal Government, with its jurisdiction over monetary policy, international trade, and the major sources of taxation, as well as its power to control the bulk of public expenditure."

With that I agree. I believe that the Dominion Government is and should be in a position to control prices, but I am at a loss to know if that is what the Leader of the present Government (Mr. Drew) thinks after he had this Clause 19 embodied in his programme of 1943, because it would appear since then he has changed his mind.

I do not think there is any single thing that has taken place in this country that has had such a damaging effect on a great number of the common working people as has this inflation, and I personally think it could have been prevented if the Federal Government in Ottawa and the Opposition had taken the advice of the great mass of people in this province instead of taking the advice of big business.

To back up my statement, I am going to read a little from The Monetary Times, May, 1947, issue. The heading is "Price Increases and Private Enterprise."

"Mrs. Gladys Strum, C.C.F. member from Qu'Appelle, and only woman M.P. at Ottawa was recently quoted as saying 'Sometimes when I read the opinions of some of our economists, I think it is time we started a new school of economics. They regard what they call the law of supply and demand as something like the law of gravity, over which they have no control.'

"Mrs. Strum's remarks were in support of her contention that Parliament should do something about the inflated prices of commodities, and, in her words should 'not allow the manufacturers to drag us into a depression because we do not like to go to the trouble of controlling prices.' Are we going to permit this thing to go on until consumer resistance and the lack of purchasing power bring on a buying strike and another depression?"

This was in the issue of The Monetary Times of May, 1947. Now, let us hear what the editorial writer has to say. I think, although he appears to be opposing the views of Mrs. Strum, he is almost agreeing with her. He says—

"If Private Enterprise is to prove to its detractors that it can be trusted with control of our economic system, it must first of all curb the inflationary spiral that has been set in motion by the more grasping and therefore the less fore-sighted of its members.

"Prices must be brought under control, and manufacturers who are taking advantage of the removal of ceilings to raise prices out of all proportion to values, must be made to realize that as sure as night must follow day, they are fashioning the noose that will hang us all.

"Examples are evident in store displays any day of the week which lead the observer to wonder how long the public will stand for it. Bits of twisted iron fashioned into garden furniture for a king's ransom. Poorly-made chairs and tables at double the prices and half the quality of pre-war years. Electric and mechanical contrivances with life expectancy of a third, now cost triple pre-war standards.

"It can't go on. Buyers' strikes are in the talking-up stage today; tomorrow, they will be with us, if the get-rich-quick merchandising policies of a minority of our manufacturers are not curbed."

Now, I agree with what is being said there with the exception of the one word, I do not think this is the minority. It seems to me that is applicable to the most of the merchandising and industrialists of this country for they have the advantage of the removal of price controls to charge prices out of all proportion to what they need in order to make a reasonable profit.

I do not think we can excuse this Government entirely. City councils across this country have passed resolutions protesting against the removal of controls, but to my knowledge this Government has never protested against the removal of control. They seem to have been satisfied to go along. Who wanted the controls left on? We will just call in two or three witnesses and see who wanted the controls left on.

Mr. H. H. Hannam—I am sorry the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) is not in his place, he knows him well, the president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture—on November 2nd of this year—that would be 1947—ten days or so after the ceilings and subsidies had been removed, said:

"Nothing that has happened in many years has stirred farmers and dairy farmers throughout Canada to such a high pitch of resentment as has the recent action of the Dominion Government in removing ceilings and subsidies from coarse grains at this particular time. The Government's action has cut the feet from under the best livestock programme we ever had in Canada—a programme that not only achieved the greatest production of livestock, dairy and poultry products in our history, but what is more important, established some degree of stability in the whole agricultural programme and offered hope for some permanency to this stability in the future."

Now, in addition to that, I am quoting this from one of Hansard's House of Commons Debates. I will give you the page number.

MR. A. H. ACRES (Carleton): We all get Hansard.

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, you all got the same copy, but it is no trouble; page 5, Tuesday, December 9th, 1947.

Now, in addition to that, the Trades and Labour Council of this country urged the Government to not remove controls until we had reached a point where there was not such an acute shortage of consumer goods across Canada. They did ask, but you see in the face of all those requests from the people, the farmers through their organizations, the trade unions through their organizations, many, many hundreds of municipalities had petitions signed, and in the face of all that, under pressure of big business to get back to what they call free enterprise, they removed the controls and today you see this, since I came down to Toronto, "Living costs up 47 per cent. over 1945, probe told."

Apparently the Liberal Government was prepared to remove the controls and the Conservative Government after seeing they had made a political blunder, now they are fighting the battle of Hong Kong all over again.

HON. D. H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): From what are you reading?

MR. ANDERSON: This is a blotter I have here. I don't say, "It's too fat for me," it is an ordinary blotter. If you are asking about the picture I showed you, I was reading from a copy of the Toronto Daily Star of March 13th, 1948. I do not know whether you would believe it or not, but apparently it is the result of the commission that is investigating.

HON. MR. PORTER: I just wanted to know your authority.

MR. ANDERSON: I am willing to give it to you, I have nothing to hide, and there is no reason I should.

I am going to close my remarks pretty soon. I just want to mention one or two other items. I thought I would look up this morning and see, just to make sure, what this Progressive-Conservative name means, and I can understand now why there is a tendency on the part of some of the hon. members like yourself, Mr. Speaker, who are professing to lead, and give us something new. And then there is the tendency of the Conservatives to hang back, and the result is that between the two of you you do not get very far. According to my dictionary—I have one in my hotel room—a "Conservative" is one who is adverse to change. I think the older type will admit that. And a "Progressive" is a man who is quite willing to move forward. So between the two of you I think you can see the result.

There is one other thing I want to read in spite of any objection you may make, because this is the only way I have of putting it on the record correctly.

I am very proud to represent Fort William; I am finishing my 12th year on the Council, and that is the reason why I should feel a little proud. I have finished 6 years on Council, and this is the 6th year as mayor. I was elected

2 3-year terms for mayor. I have been opposed at the different elections by Liberals and I have been opposed by Conservatives and Labour-Progressives, so I have been through the mill pretty well.

This winter I cut out this little newspaper clipping from the Daily Times Journal, our local paper—which is a very good paper—dated February 4th, 1948. I want to read it particularly for the benefit of the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar), whom I know fairly well—

"Local Student is 'Premier.'"

A resident of Fort William now attending Queen's University, Kingston, Gelindo DeRe, 532 McIntosh Street, heads the C.C.F. Party as Prime Minister in the Queen's model parliament. According to the January 27th issue of the Queen's Journal, which is published twice a week by the Alma Mater Society, the Queen's model Parliament was scheduled to convene on January 29th, when Prime Minister Gelindo DeRe and his C.C.F. Party assumed the powers of Government."

Although I am getting up in years and my hair is getting pretty grey, I am glad to see the young people, not only of my home town, but of Queen's University, see the need for social change, and they are not going to just go along as the old Conservative element, those who are adverse to change.

I am going to close with just a little quotation—and I have had to listen to a lot of other gentlemen quote and quote and quote and take us all over Europe.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Is that Dr. Chase's Almanac?

MR. ANDERSON: No, this is a book on life insurance without exploitation. I have never read the book by Edwin C. Guillet. I do not know who he is.

HON. D. H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): You are reading this for the first time?

MR. SPEAKER: May I remind the hon. members not to interrupt the speaker.

MR. ANDERSON: These are statements made by the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, the former Prime Minister of Great Britain. I just want to quote to show you when this little group here advocates social changes we are not alone. There are a lot of people in this world who realize we cannot stay in the old tracks forever; we have to make progress.

The first statement by the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, our Prime Minister:

"We are not going to continue to have the resources of the earth, which are the common heritage of all, become the property only of the few. These things should not be. There should be no monopolies by the few while thousands walk the streets in poverty."

The next was Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt:

"I am not for a return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few."

I like that word "regimented." I cannot forget how the young people of this country were "regimented" during the depression into slave camps where they had to work for 20 cents a day. President Roosevelt could not forget the day either.

"I prefer, and I am sure you prefer that broader definition of liberty under which we are moving forward to greater freedom, to greater security for the average man than he has ever known before in the history of America."

And the last, Mr. Speaker, is from Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, at that time the hon. Prime Minister of Great Britain:

"You must include me and my colleagues as strong partisans of national compulsory insurance, for all purposes, from the cradle to the grave. We hope to bring the magic of averages to the rescue of millions."

Thank you.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): I think the hon. member (Mr. Anderson) forgot to answer my question. He said he was going to.

MR. ANDERSON: Yes, about the letter.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Whether you are in favour, as Mayor of Fort William of that resolution.

MR. ANDERSON: It was the letter I read from home.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I understood you to say it was a resolution from the Fort William City Council.

MR. ANDERSON: Yes. What is your question, let me get it straight.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: As Mayor, were you in favour of the resolution?

MR. ANDERSON: I think I answered that in my remarks. I told you I believe the Federal Government of this country should pay the old-age pension without a means test.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is not what is in the resolution.

MR. ANDERSON: No, I do not think it was. If you do not accept that as an answer, I will give you a straightforward answer.

MR. SPEAKER: Might I tell the the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) he is not compelled to answer the question unless he wishes.

MR. ANDERSON: I don't mind. I would answer it in this way, that I must confess I was a little surprised at getting it because when it is so difficult to get a part of that $10 that the province is giving, I do not know how they expected the province would give them $50.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): It is not answered yet.

MR. S. L. HALL (Halton): Mr. Speaker, I consider it an honour to have the privilege of saying a word in this House, but before I do so, I wish, hon. sir, to congratulate you on the very high level on which you try to conduct the business of this assembly under very trying circumstances sometimes.

I also wish to pay my respects to the mover (Mr. Pryde) and the seconder (Mr. Hamilton) of the Speech from the Throne, and all those who have taken part in this debate, and especially the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. Davies). I am sure that those who respect British freedom and liberty will agree with me that his address was on a level suitable to this assembly.

There have been remarks made here about the late Dr. Hobbs Taylor. I am sure I agree with everything that was said about our late hon. member. He was my desk-mate in the House, and I probably travelled a little more with him than other hon. members here, because I travelled with him on his rounds and I can assure hon. members that this House and the people of Huron and those with whom Dr. Hobbs Taylor came in contact, have lost a friend such as one rarely meets in public life, and I wish to pay to the late doctor and to Mrs. Taylor and his daughter my respects to his memory.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a few remarks to the Dominion-Provincial Conference which the Federal Government has not seen fit to reconvene, but before doing so, I would like to remind every hon. member of this assembly why they are honoured to have the privilege of sitting in this assembly to represent free people in a free assembly of a country which is a member of the greatest commonwealth of nations in the world, the British Commonwealth.

Mr. Speaker, every hon. member in this House knows what all those white crosses in foreign lands stand for. They stand for the sacrifices of the pioneers of this country that give every hon. member in this assembly the privilege of representing free people in a free country, and I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, that has been abused to the extent in this House that I consider a disgrace.

If we are to have a united Canada, we must respect the labours and the sacrifices of those who have made it possible to live and enjoy these great opportunities as free people. It has been said by an hon. member in this House that farmers have not made a fortune. I think, Mr. Speaker, it all depends on what you consider a "fortune." I believe reference was made to a fortune in dollars and cents, for we have a group in this House that seem to measure everything in this world by dollars and cents, but I would like to say to the hon. members of this House that the pioneers of this country left us an heritage that is a greater fortune than any people were ever left in this world, for this reason: it is an heritage and a fortune that cannot be bought with dollars and cents.

Mr. Speaker, to help shorten if possible or bring to a successful conclusion the last world war, each province of this Dominion, gave to the Federal Government certain rights and privileges and taxing powers, which they promised to return to the provinces at the end of hostilities. Those obligations our Federal Government has not seen fit to fulfil, and if we are to have a united Canada, it is the duty, yes, the sacred obligation of every government of Canada to keep its promises and fulfil its obligations for the welfare of all our citizens.

Mr. Speaker, Canada offered its citizens more opportunity than any other country in the world, and by the Act of Confederation, certain rights were given the Federal Government and each province was given certain provincial rights, and until that Act of Confederation is changed, it is the duty of every elected representative of the people of the province of Ontario, yes, and of this whole Dominion, to see that those rights are protected, not only for the welfare of the people of the Province of Ontario, but for the citizens of this Dominion, and I am proud, Mr. Speaker, to say that it is the intention of the Government of the Province of Ontario to see those rights are protected.

Mr. Speaker, on the other side of the great Atlantic Ocean there lie some islands, the home of freedom, the British Isles. I would like every hon. member of this House to remember that it was the noble people of those isles that stood alone for a year between the hordes of destruction and the free peoples of the world, and it is from those shores came the pioneers of this great country in which we have the privilege to live.

I would like also to pay my tribute to those of French origin and to those of other European countries who have come here and have contributed in no small part in making this great Canada what it is today.

Mr. Speaker, it is the duty of every hon. member in this Government and of all the provinces and the hon. members of the Federal Government to see that those rights and privileges of which I spoke before are protected for all the citizens, for that is the heritage that is given us by the pioneers of this great country, freedom of religion, freedom of speech and freedom of every citizen to follow the vocation of his choice.

Mr. Speaker, those freedoms cannot be preserved unless our Federal Government asks the representatives of all the provinces to sit around the conference table to work out a national system of taxation and welfare measures that shall be of lasting benefit to the citizens of this great Dominion of Canada.

The British Commonwealth of Nations is the most powerful grouping of nations in the world, and Canada is the most powerful nation of that group. Canada is situated between two of the most powerful nations in the world today, two nations with altogether different forms of government, and it is our duty, the duty of every hon. member of this assembly and every government in our Dominion, to see that the affairs of our country are so directed that the citizens will see that our free way of life is a superior way, and if we are lax in our duty, another form of government can be established which shall deny you the right to sit in this assembly to represent free people in a free country.

Mr. Speaker, the great Province of Ontario, of which I am sure every hon. member of this House is proud to represent a portion, enjoys certain taxing powers and advantages that are not enjoyed by some of the other provinces of this Dominion. Those advantages we are willing to share, but the adjustments and regulations must be made around a conference table attended by all the representatives of all the provinces in conjunction with the Federal Government. In this respect, the Government of the Province of Ontario is willing to co-operate to the fullest.

Mr. Speaker, it has been said that the Ontario Government was to blame for the fact that this Dominion-Provincial Conference did not again convene. Mr. Speaker, there is no more truth in that statement than in any other statement we have heard both in this assembly and out of it. As I said before, Ontario is willing to share its advantages and opportunities with all the other provinces of the Dominion, but it must be done by mutual consent of all the other provinces and our Federal Government. What the Government of the Province of Ontario is not willing, and will never consent to do, is to sacrifice the liberties and rights of the citizens of Ontario to any group of bureaucrats for political advantages and not for the good of all the citizens of this Dominion.

Mr. Speaker, the development of the Province of Ontario, both agriculturally and industrially, has been accomplished under private enterprise and not under any controlled system.

I hope, and I am sure it is the hope of every hon. member of this House, that as the welfare of the citizens demand, the Dominion Government shall see that the Dominion-Provincial Conference is re-called at an early date to work out a national system of taxation and welfare measures acceptable to all the governments and to all the citizens of this great Dominion of which we are all so proud.

There is one other subject, Mr. Speaker, on which I would like to say a few words, and that is the greatest accomplishment that has ever been achieved in any dominion of the British Empire, an accomplishment which those in opposition to this Government said could not be done and which the Federal Government said could not be done.

I am proud to be a member of the Government which has been able to do things, and still will do things, for the benefit of the citizens of Canada as a whole, and especially in doing what can be done for those to whom we owe so much in those isles across the sea.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to refer for a few minutes to the Ontario Government's air-borne immigration programme, and to those who are in this House tonight but who are not members of this House, and to a number of the hon. members in this House who probably have not followed the air-borne immigration scheme as closely as I have, since I have had the privilege of being at Malton airport several times to meet those who came to Canada under this programme, I would like to say that the Ontario Government's air-borne immigration scheme was set up in less than six weeks. The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) went to England to meet representatives; formally announced the plan on June 20th, 1947, and the Ontario air-borne immigration branch was established on June 26th, the first planes arriving at Malton airport on August 3rd, 1947.

On Sunday, March 14th, of this year, the 185th plane landed at Malton airport, bearing the 7,000th immigrant, and I am very happy to say—and I am sure everybody connected with it feels the same—that there has never been a slip or mishap in the landing of all those planes. One thing of which I am particularly proud is that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has seen fit on every occasion possible to personally greet those immigrants when they stepped off the planes.

The organization was streamlined, Mr. Speaker, to give immediate attention to the various details connected with immigration, including Canadian customs, Canadian immigration, medical examinations, passports, shipment of baggage by sea, purchase of air transportation and the transfer of funds from Britain to Canada; in short, for the first time in history, it was possible to do all this at one time and under one roof.

All the immigrants are given information and advised about settlement in Ontario and assisted to the fullest extent by officials in London, Birmingham, Glasgow, and so on. Those coming under this plan are between 21 and 40 years of age; they must pass a medical and character test by Canadian immigration officials. They must have sufficient funds to pay their fare which is £67—$265—and have sufficient means to maintain themselves in Canada until employment is secured. This is an accomplishment that has not been surpassed in the history of the Province of Ontario or in this Dominion, and I doubt if it has been equalled any other place in the world.

The hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) spent several weeks in London early in July, conferring with Major Armstrong, Agent-General, Ontario House, in connection with setting up the organization in London. In all these plans, the full co-operation of the British Government was received.

Because of the shortage of housing for families, only single persons or men coming in advance of their families are accepted. At the present time about 500 of the married men who came over here have secured homes; they have jobs to support their families, and 500 of those families are settled today in Canada.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. HALL: I am sure I agree that housing in Ontario and in this Dominion probably has been short, but there is something for all of us to think about, and that is if 500 married men from those isles can come over here and without putting anybody else out of their accommodations secure homes and jobs to support their families, and bring them out here, surely some persons in this country have not been standing up and trying to look after themselves as they should.

In one month, the Ontario Immigration Branch organized the entire operation on this side, arranged the landing facilities at Malton, and secured and equipped the reception centre.

The immigration programme of the Ontario Government is not limited to the air plan; large numbers of British immigrants are making arrangements through Ontario House in London to come to Ontario by regular air lines and by water. These are given the same information, advice and assistance those coming under the air plan. The Salvation Army, the Red Cross and the National Insurance Service are giving the Government of the Province of Ontario invaluable assistance in all phases of immigration activity, and great credit is due Mrs. E. W. Brownell, Director of the Ontario Air Immigration Branch.

Our British immigrants leave the other side from either London or Prestwick, Scotland, they fly in large and comfortable 40-passenger aircraft, operated by the Trans-Canada Airways, or the Trans-Oceanic Airlines, and after flying one-eighth the distance around the world, they arrive at Malton airport, where, again, for the first time, an assembly line procedure has been arranged to clear them through Customs and Immigration. Officials of the Ontario Immigration Branch of the Department of Planning and Development greet them on behalf of the Government of Ontario. They are provided with fruit and cigarettes and they get lunch there, and within 40 minutes —or one minute for every passenger—after a plane comes in, if there is no other interruption, they are on their way to Toronto in buses provided for their transportation. If they have friends or relatives in Ontario, the Red Cross arranges to have them on hand to welcome them. Light refreshments are served, cables are sent home for those who wish them, and a pleasant social time is enjoyed by all when planes arrive, even in the middle of the night.

At the reception centres, also, dormitories are provided to house the single girls until they have found quarters of their own. For this accommodation, they pay a nominal fee. Over 2,700 night lodgings were provided in the first seven months of operation.

About 80 per cent. of the British immigrants are men. Those requiring temporary housing accommodation are taken from the reception centre to the large men's residence operated by the Salvation Army, where beds for 200 men are available, and in the first 7 months of operation over 12,000 night accommodations have been provided, again at a nominal fee.

These new citizens are naturally interested in employment. The National Employment Service has set up two small branches, one in the men's residence and the other in the reception centre for the women.

It is interesting to note that, in taking advantage of this, the new immigrants have found employment throughout the province in an average of three days. It is also of interest to note that about 65 per cent. of those coming to Ontario under the air immigration plan are under 30 years of age.

These activities have been designed to secure for the Province of Ontario the best possible type of new settlers and to place at their disposal all facilities to assist them to become successful, and permanently established in Ontario.

It has been my pleasure to be at Malton airport when several of the planes landed, and I have had the pleasure of talking to several of those who came under the plan, and I can assure hon. members of this House that they are the class of citizen we want in the Province of Ontario. They have the same faith the pioneers of this great country brought with them; they are placed under British freedom, and all they ask is the opportunity to make a living and to be provided with the opportunity, in a free land, to earn their own living.

Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of this house, I think the Government of the Province of Ontario, and the services they are rendering to those from the British Isles who want to come here and make their homes, is one of the greatest services they can render to anybody who wants to live under British freedom, and who only ask the opportunity to be able to earn their own living.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of the Legislature: In rising to speak in this debate at this late hour, I am doing so "pinch hitting" for my deskmate (Mr. MacGillivray) who has been "under the weather" for some time, and his doctor has ordered him not to stay out at night, so I felt I should take the opportunity of filling in.

I wish, in the first place, notwithstanding the fact that it has been repeated many times before, to congratulate the mover (Mr. Pryde) and the seconder (Mr. Hamilton) of the reply to the Speech from the Throne. The hon. Scotch member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) and my neighbour, the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) ably did the tasks assigned to them. It is no easy task for one who has just come into the House to accomplish this task, as they did. I am sure we look forward to seeing further evidence of their ability in the future. This may also mark the possibility of putting some stamp of approval on them for future promotion.

I should like, Mr. Speaker, also to compliment you on your work as Speaker of the House, and also for the fine dinner last night which you tendered to the hon. members of the House, and which I think promoted good fellowship amongst the hon. members, from all groups in the House. I think it is wise, once in a while to get together and forget the tasks of the week. We feel better the next day—some of us, anyway.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. McEWING: I would like to make some reference to the deceased member for Huron (Mr. Taylor). I think every one of us got to know him very well. He had a manner of forming intimate acquaintanceship with almost everybody; he was kind; he was generous; he was that fine type of citizen that are all too few these days. He certainly was a loss to his people, and a loss to this Legislature.

There is also one other person to whom I would like to make reference, who I think was known to a great many hon. members of this House. He has been mentioned once before, I think, by the hon. member for St. Patrick's (Mr. Roberts). I am referring to the press reporter, Kenneth Craig. He was a press reporter in this House for a number of years. Many hon. members got to know him fairly well.

I knew Kenneth (Mr. Craig) exceedingly well. He resided in my community. He went to school there. I knew him well, and I was many times on the farm where he lived, and from his memories of that farm, he wrote the book, "A Father on the Farm." Many of you who have read that book, I am sure, will agree with me that he portrayed life on the farm. He dedicated the book to the dwellers of the city, and I think he carried a message to them so that they should be able to realize that life on the farm was not quite so dreary, and so without colour, as a great many people believe it to be.

Kenneth (Mr. Craig) left Drayton, and got away from me for a number of years. Ten or 12 years ago, when I first came to this House, we picked up where we left off, and although many may not know it, we had a very intimate acquaintanceship which originated in his boyhood days.

Mr. Speaker, these are serious times, and I think we are getting into more serious times every day.

It is not my purpose, because I am a member of the Opposition, to take a great deal of time to fulfill what to some is expected of members of the Opposition, that you are supposed to oppose everything done, and tear the Government to pieces, just to show you can do something in that respect.

I think part of the functions of the Opposition is to put forth some constructive criticism, some constructive suggestions, which perhaps the Government may see fit to accept.

I do not propose to put forward anything in a manner that will be hostile. I may be critical of some things, but I do not want you to feel that I am hostile. I do not want you to take the attitude that any suggestion I may make is not worth while. I think the past has proven that that has not been the case, because a number of things I have suggested since this Government came into power, have been adopted by them, and they have been very sincere about it, and I appreciate it very much.

I would like to say there is one thing about which I am a little critical, and that is with regard to the opening date of the Legislature, as it has been recently. There are several reasons for being critical of that.

In the first place, many of us who sat in the House when the present hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) was leader of the Opposition, will well remember his demanding that the House be opened earlier, and be convened so that we could discuss matters which were important. In those times we met in the middle of February, and he thought it ought to be opened in January.

For the last three years it has been opened in March, and I think the majority of the hon. members, particularly the agricultural members of this House, are all in favour of an earlier opening day of the Session, than March.

Then there is the third reason. Reviewing the history of the opening of parliaments since the first parliament was opened in this House, we find it is rather interesting to note that out of some 76 or 77 openings, this House has opened only four times, I believe, in March. For 38 years it met in February; 25 years in January, 5 years in December, 5 years in November, and 4 years in March. The last three years, since the present Government came into power, the opening day has been in March. It seems to have been the universal thing to have it meet earlier in the year.

I would suggest to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) that he see, in his wisdom—and also in his wisdom if he is opening the House for another session—that it be a little earlier than March. This may not appeal to some of the urban centres, but it does appeal to those in the rural ridings.

Agriculture possibly comes first as a matter of interest, for a member like myself, who comes from an agricultural district. We are told now, and have been told ever since we were high enough and old enough to listen, that farming was the basic industry, and of great importance. We have an agricultural committee in this House which I think could play a very important part, which to my mind is not functioning to the extent that it ought to be. I think this agricultural committee should meet the first week the house is in session, and meet once a week during the time of the session. Many hon. members will say “What will you discuss?” There are many things to discuss, in an agricultural province, like Ontario.

For instance, freight rates: An application was made for some 20 per cent. increase in freight rates. As far as I know, there has not been a move made in this House by the agricultural committee, or the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy), or by the province, to oppose it. Seven provinces in the Dominion of Canada joined together and employed one whom they believed to be one of the best lawyers in the Dominion of Canada to oppose it. Ontario and Quebec were the two provinces which did not see fit to do so.

Increased freight rates mean a tremendous amount of money to the farmers of the Province of Ontario, and with any increase in freight rates, will come an increase in trucking rates, which will cost the farmers a tremendous amount of money, to meet these increases. I think it is things like these we could have been taking up in committee, and finding some way of putting forth our side of the question.

Marketing of farm products is a thing we should spend some time on. I do not think we are spending enough time in the grading of our apples, the grading of our fruits, and the grading of our potatoes. We are actually losing our markets. You go into a store to buy apples, and the grade of our Ontario apples is such that people will not buy them, but will buy apples from other provinces, such as British Columbia. It is a shame the place our apples and potatoes are taking in our own markets in Ontario, and I think we could and should spend a good deal of time on that. We are losing out in the competition.

These things will mean a lot to us. And there are many things which go along with them. Last year, when the feed situation was so serious, there was nothing done by the Department of Agriculture to assist the farmers to find a solution. In 1940 and 1941, the government of that day came to the assistance of the farmers when there was a feed-crisis, and it meant a good deal to the farmers. I do not think I will refer particularly to any more of them tonight.

The hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) spoke about these famous "points." I think pretty soon they will become "infamous."

However, there is one thing I would like to mention which is one thing from which the farmers have been suffering, and that is the manipulation and speculation of the stock market. It came to my knowledge three or four weeks ago that the thing is existing, as much so as ever. A friend of mine had six carloads of cattle brought down; he was on the market the week before, and he came down during this week. Those who were controlling the setting of prices offered him $2.50 per hundred less for the same grade of cattle than in the previous week, and when he disposed of those six carloads, he suffered a loss of $3,000. He cannot stay in business very long and do that, and the farmers are going to have to pay, in the end.

There is no justification for it. There is a market, and if there were small packing plants, the markets would be increased. I think if the Government would establish small packing plants in some of the smaller communities, like those in Kitchener and Barrie, North Bay, and places of that kind, it would save the situation. They cannot get away from it. If we had small packing plants all over the Province of Ontario, it would eliminate a lot of costs of transportation to these markets, and back again, to the country. It would also help to decentralize the problem of labour, and give employment in those smaller places.

There is another thing in connection with agriculture I would like to mention—and I am only skipping over a number of things it is because the time is limited—and that is in connection with this Drainage Report.

Three hon. members of this House were appointed to that Drainage Committee, and I would have liked it if the Drainage Report had come forward in the early part of this session, and put before the agricultural committee, and received either approval or disapproval, and any suggestions it saw fit to give, and then it could have been passed to the departments affected by any changes suggested therein. The result now is going to be that the session will be over, and there will be little opportunity to carry out these recommendations.

There are some things in there, probably some people do not realize are very important; some problems which we are facing in these recommendations. I will just mention one or two.

For instance, we have set up, under the Government recently, a number of authorities to deal with the water sheds over the Province of Ontario, and they are given almost complete control of those water sheds, and the Municipal Drainage Act which we have now, is handicapped in that way. We have a Grand River Conservation Commission set up on the Grand River, and it has full control of that river, and all the tributaries, and all the drains which lead into it. Now they are asking for an authority to be set up for the water sheds, with practically full control. Who is going to have the control? Any municipality who wants to carry out any project which has to do with a watercourse,—to whom will they go, under the present conditions? It has never been clarified. Both these authorities now claim they have full control.

We have the Planning and Development Department which enters into the picture, and I think, from conversations with them, the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) is perfectly in accord with the suggestion there must be some clarification there, or things will be tied up with so much red tape, we will not be able to accomplish the things these municipalities want to accomplish.

We have found a number of things which are delaying the drainage work in the Province of Ontario, which I think are important. As an example, we have our manufacturing of tile, and a great many of them are practically in the same business as making bricks, with a greater demand for building material, including bricks. A great many of those plants are devoting all their time to making bricks, and it is very difficult to get tile. We should give some encouragement to the farmers, by dealing with this matter so that they will be able to secure the tile which they require. The farmers are now forced to take a back seat, and this is because other industries can pay prices for the product that will put tile clear out of business for the farmer. As a result, the vast farm areas in Ontario will be without tile drain, unless something is done. And there are many other things which might be taken up in connection with that.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): They are all being considered and prepared at the present time. You will have the presentation next week.

MR. McEWING: That is very fine. I do not know just how far-reaching that will be.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Well, of course, we will have to wait and see.

MR. McEWING: I hope it secures the desired result.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a word or two with regard to the Welfare Department. I certainly appreciate the fact that the report has been taken seriously by the officials of the department, and we will wait for the results in the matter.

The hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Anderson) discussed some things in connection with the Welfare Department which I had in mind, and I am in accord with him when he speaks about the extra $10.00, and the "means test." He took the words right out of my mouth, because I think this test is possibly the most severe test, possible. He says maybe 5 per cent. were getting it. I would say that maybe 2 per cent. would be nearer to it. Am I out, Mr. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow)?

MR. McEWING: Could you tell us about what the percentage is? There are a couple of other things I would like the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) to take into consideration, one of which is the almost totally-incapacitated persons. You are providing old-age pensions for a certain percentage of people who are not seriously in need of it, but it provides for them a fair standard of living and I would not want to deprive them of it. But we have quite a number of people in Ontario who are almost totally incapacitated, and there is no provision for taking care of them, except by direct relief.

I know I was on the council in our municipality 15 years or so ago, and we were giving relief to a poor family—two families in fact—and in one family there was a man sitting in a wheel chair. Today he is still sitting in the wheel chair, and still accepting help from the council, and a great many people complain we should not be keeping this family all this time. I do not think it is fair for that man to be humiliated before his people. His condition was through no fault of his own, and he should be taken care of reasonably well, the same as the old-age pensioners.

I hope, Mr. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) you will be able to work out something and there will be a pension given under doctor's certificate where those people could draw the same as they draw the old-age pension.

We also have the crippled children. That is a serious problem in Ontario. I believe the hon. Minister of Prison Reform (Mr. Dunbar) said they have a farm secured somewhere. I think it should go much further than that. What I would suggest would be—you can take it or leave it, which ever you think is best—that a survey of this province be made of all the crippled children to find out how many children are crippled at birth, and what the infirmities are; how many were crippled by disease and what the infirmities are, and how many crippled by accident. When you get that information you will be in a position to know how you will be able to provide for them, how you can treat them, how you can cure any of them and how to take care of them. But I think that will have to be done before you will know what the problem is; before you will know what you are up against. It does seem a shame. I know a number of families in which is a crippled member; perhaps they are not too comfortably fixed and that crippled member is not getting the care, the education, nor the treatment that would help him or her to enjoy life and possibly in many cases be able to be cured so that they would be able to fill a reasonable place in society as they might, if they had the advantage of medical attendance and what this province could do for them. Just imagine the amount of distress in the province, and how much it could be relieved if something was done in this respect.

Another thing about which I would like to say a word or two is in connection with hydro. This shortage of hydro is a serious thing. I do not know the answers for it all. I know some things happened that ought not to have happened and I know that the first black-out we had should not have happened without some warning. The hydro was very, very lucky there was not some very unfortunate things happened on the first day. In a hospital where I had an operation two years ago a patient was on the table half way through an operation when the black-out came without any warning, and everything had to be held up until they got flashlights.

HON. MR. DREW: Where was that?

MR. McEWING: Over on Church Street at Dr. Shouldice's—it was a hernia operation.

HON. MR. DREW: I hope the hon. member (Mr. McEwing) realizes that they have an auxiliary system.

MR. McEWING: They did not happen to have. However, they were able to get over it without any serious affect. I think, if it had been some relative of mine, and he had succumbed under circumstances of that kind, there would be justification for civil action against the Hydro, which could be taken to the very highest court. However, I say the province is very fortunate something serious did not happen.

There is another thing, when we are discussing this change-over from 25 to 60 cycle, that is giving us some concern. I do not know whether the Minister in charge of hydro (Mr. Challies) can offer any suggestions which might help us out. What about these people who are about to wire up in a 25 cycle area?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Does not make any difference.

MR. McEWING: It is not the wiring I am thinking of, but a man hates to go and invest in this new equipment if in some short time the change-over will come about, and it is going to hold up those areas; where those areas are on the 60 cycle, they can go right ahead with the signing and putting in the new services. There may be no solution for it. I am not blaming you, Mr. Minister (Mr. Challies), because a man is in the 25 cycles. It just happens and he cannot help it. At the same time there is a problem. They are going to be handicapped and will have to take a back seat, more or less. I do not know whether the hydro is obliging him to go ahead and wire up and put the equipment in notwithstanding that.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Do you want an answer? The report definitely states all 25 cycle equipment will be changed over. It is a progressive thing, and will require a matter of 15 years. No one should hesitate to buy what equipment he thinks is necessary for his service. The 25 cycle will be changed to 60 and will cost nothing to the farmer.

MR. McEWING: I think I asked the question last year how long it would take and I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) said it would take 4 or 5 years.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: No; take 4 or 5 years before they get under way. It is expected to be finished by 1964.

MR. McEWING: Well, the time is getting more distant. If that is the case I think we would be safe in saying to the man: "Well, go ahead and wire up."

There is another thing that is of interest to our riding in connection with hydro concerning which there is a little misleading information being given out. There was a plant at Credit Forks—it is just outside my riding, but in the riding represented by the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) but it affects part of the riding I represent. This plant was purchased—it was a water wheel with Diesel engine—and was dismantled.

I think if the plant had been left there, it would have been possible to develop 400 horsepower, which would have helped out in the present situation, although the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) might say it was just a "bump" in the demand.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Does the hon. member (Mr. McEwing) want his answer to that now, Mr. Speaker?

MR. McEWING: I do not know of any particular question that I have asked yet.

In addition to that, it was understood that it was agreed with citizens there that the dam would not be blown up, as there were residences around there, and that the dam would be preserved. That dam has since been blown up and destroyed.

A further point is that there was an office there, and although assurance was given that the office would not be closed, it since has been.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Mr. Speaker, let us take one point at a time.

The hon. member (Mr. McEwing) says they had a Diesel and they had waterpower. It was serving a little area, with quite a mileage, and the Diesel engine was supplementary to the waterpower. That would have been of no use whatsoever now, because you cannot synchronize it with the larger system. With the system as now incorporated, you cannot synchronize small plants into the larger system; part of the time the larger system would be carrying the old water wheel and the old Diesel, because there is not the proper synchronization. I think that answers that question.

As far as the dam is concerned, a couple of feet have been blown off the top of the dam, because the water which came over the dam was washing away the Canadian Pacific Railway right-of-way. It was agreed by all parties concerned that would not interfere with utilization or the beauty of that part of the property.

With respect to the other point raised: no obligation was given such as you have mentioned that the station would not be closed at Erin. The fact is that an undertaking was given that there would always be a repair man or a service man with his truck at Erin, and I understand that he is still there.

Would the hon. member (Mr. McEwing) want to return to the old conditions of higher rates and intermittent service and all the rest of it which he had under the old private company?

MR. McEWING: That has nothing to do with this question here.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: It has a lot to do with it, because they have reduced rates and are getting an excellent standard service, and we have had no complaints whatever from that area.

MR. McEWING: I did not offer any criticism as to whether the consumers were—

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Well, if the question is "Would the plant be of any use to the system?" the answer is "no."

MR. McEWING: I see. And, as far as the office at Erin is concerned, my opponent was rather indiscreet when he produced a letter bearing the signature of the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies), stating that there was no thought of closing the office at all.

Turning now to education, there are one or two things in connection with that subject in which I am particularly interested. The hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) has advanced a larger school area, pointing out the advantages of the education that is obtainable under that system, which I am all for, but we are in a snow belt, in which it is almost impossible to work out this system. I think the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) understands the position as far as the snow problem is concerned.

While the officials are advising proceeding with this, it seems to me that we have got the cart ahead of the horse. I think probably at a convention and probably on a broadcast, the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) advised the people in those areas where the snow belt was and in the township roads, to "forget" about school.

HON. GEORGE DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Oh, no, not quite that way, sir.

MR. McEWING: I say that we have put the cart ahead of the horse. I think we ought to make those roads suitable. Then if we can keep them open so that the pupils can get transportation, the school area can come in. In the meantime, I think those facilities can be provided to the people at very little additional cost, even if it means transporting the teacher two days at each school around a triangle, rather than attempting to haul all those pupils, because last year, in the months of January and March, there were only four days when you could get from Arthur to Drayton, a distance of 10 miles. Of course I hope we will not have a winter like that very often, but they do happen.

As I say, I am all for those things that can be provided in the advanced courses because I think there are things that should be taught our pupils to help them fill their proper place in the community and which will assist them to prepare themselves to play their full part as citizens. I am in favour of a citizenship course. Some suggestion was made that the new citizens coming out should be given a course in citizenship.

I think we have a lot of people in Ontario who could be given a course in citizenship and made to realize they should make some contribution to help Canada, and not simply that this is a country to live on. We asked the boys to go overseas, and, if necessary, to give their lives for this country. If it is worth dying for, it is worth living for, and we ought to be able to teach our youth of this country that it is worth living "for," not just living "on," which too many people are doing, not only our young people but also some of our older people.

Mr. Speaker, the last subject I would like to discuss concerns education. I think I have spoken on this in 1944, in 1946, in 1947 and now in 1948, and that is, the teaching of communism in our schools.

I am told by pupils in our colleges that there is more of that in our colleges today than there ever was. We are reaping the harvest for it, and I think it is time we did something about it.

Let us look back ten years, to 1938. We were sitting here in a sort of apathy, under the impression that "war cannot happen here." Here we are in 1948 with the same attitude, more or less, thinking that war is not going to happen. To my mind we are a lot nearer to it in 1948 than we were in 1938. We should not be sitting idly by while this menace creeps in amongst us. The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) gave us some instances of what is happening. I think the United States next to us is cleaning house and necessarily some of the communists are drifting into Ontario. What are we going to do about it? You may say "it is a Federal affair." The management of our schools and our colleges is not a Federal affair.

I think we all remember some few years ago when the Government at Ottawa laid charges against, and imprisoned some people for taking part in sabotage, in the interest, apparently, of Russia, there was a howl went up about the "unfair" treatment that was accorded them. I do not think neither hon. members nor I, think it was unfair. It was not harsh enough, and not enough of it, to my mind.

These other little things that we discussed, hydro and those things, are very small compared with that problem, and I think that we in this House, when we are faced with this situation, should not take the position that it is a matter of coming here to oppose what hon. members on the Government side do, but we want to assist, to rid this country of a menace that will probably bring us down if some action is not taken.

Thank you.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

LIQUOR LICENCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 58th Order, second reading of Bill No. 59, An Act to amend The Liquor Licence Act, 1946. Mr. MacLeod.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 59, An Act to amend The Liquor Licence Act.

As hon. members of the House will recall, a bill somewhat similar to this was introduced at the session of last year, and was defeated on a recorded vote.

The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) a few days ago observed, somewhat prematurely, that hon. members on this side of the House in the course of the year had changed their opinions about certain legislation which came before the House last session. I begin my remarks by expressing the hope that during that period the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) may have undergone a change of heart and that what was unacceptable a year ago may be acceptable today.

Mr. Speaker, may I point out that what this bill seeks to achieve is already recognized and provided for in the Planning Act, and has been recognized and is provided for in a bill which came before us the other day, which enables a taxpayer who is not satisfied with his assessment to appear before the municipal board. I am of the opinion that if the principle contained in the bill before us is good for the Planning Act and good for the Municipal Act in the sense that it recognizes certain rights of individuals and of municipalities, I think the same principle should be recognized in the Liquor Licence Act.

The hon. members of the House are aware, I think, that during the last few months in the City of Toronto, residents in given areas became very much alarmed over the possibility of licenses being granted to people who were anxious to operate cocktail bars in that particular area. The anger of the residents who live in the area close to Bloor and Dundas arose to such a peak that the prospective applicant for a licence decided to withdraw that application.

What they are going to do with the building, I do not know; it is still there; I passed it the other day. At any rate that matter was disposed of very largely, I think, by the action which the citizens themselves took.

A day or two ago, I saw a small item in the Globe and Mail, which I would like to put on the record. The heading is: "University of Toronto to protest 20 applications for liquor outlets", and the news item continues:

"University authorities will protest to the Provincial Government 20 applications for liquor outlets in the school area', Dr. Walter T. Brown, President of Victoria, revealed yesterday during a meeting of the clergy at the Church of the Redeemer. 'If additional licenses were granted', he said, 'it would bring unusual temptations to the students'.

"Ministers from several university district churches voted to appeal to Premier Drew as Minister of Education to use his influence to ban further outlets. Rev. Gordon Domm of Bathurst United Church sponsored the main motion which opposed the granting of licences in the area around the University of Toronto and within a mile of all university residences."

As I pointed out in the brief remarks I made on this bill last year, it does seem to me that the municipalities should have prior right in protecting the welfare and the morals of the community over which it exercises the responsibilities of government. I think that the citizens in a given area, instead of having to appeal directly to the Provincial Government, or of having to appear before the Liquor Licence Board, should have the opportunity of appearing before the government of the municipality in which they reside, and there present the reasons why they feel the granting of a liquor licence would not be in the best interests of the neighbourhood in which the said liquor establishment was to be opened.

I feel that there is nothing unreasonable about the proposed amendment. I think it is something which the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), in his very great wisdom, should have incorporated in the Act in the first place, and I should have been very happy if such an amendment as this had emanated from the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) himself. If the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) would like to take it over now, and make it their own, that is very satisfactory to me.

I feel that what the amendment asks for is certainly in the interests of the citizens who reside in a given community, and is calculated to establish the authority of municipal government, and afford to them the right of so regulating such things as the dispensation of liquor, that the carrying on of this business will not in any way undermine the morality or welfare of a community.

Mr. Speaker, I close by expressing the hope that the passing of a year will have added to the wisdom of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell), and that he will end this eventful week by telling us, after giving the matter careful appreciation, he approves the amendment. If he does not do that, then I hope the Government will express its confidence in the Liquor Licence Act, as it stands, by giving the hon. members of this House an opportunity to vote on this amendment.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I was hopeful that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) would reply to the remarks made by the mover of the motion (Mr. MacLeod). However, he did not. He may have been waiting for a final wind-up. It looked as if he was ready to forego the opportunity. Therefore, I want to say just a few words about the bill before us.

Mr. Speaker, the liquor legislation adopted in this House is legislation which has not met with universal approval, and certainly has aroused a deep opposition to the legislation as a whole, and particularly in the way it was brought down to the House, and "railroaded" through the House. My opinion of that method of introducing and carrying on legislation was expressed at the time the bill was before us.

My hon. friend, the leader of my group (Mr. MacLeod) and I voted against that bill, primarily because it did not give to either the hon. members or the interested citizens an opportunity to present their views and to study the legislation, which is so important.

Certainly when an amendment of relative importance, such as this, is introduced into the House, the hon. members should at least receive an expression from the Government as to why they are opposed to it. In my opinion,

Mr. Speaker, it is very, very unfortunate and regrettable, when the Government of the province is fearful of the actions of municipal governments on a matter of this sort. I submit they are afraid to permit municipal governments to act on behalf of the citizens of a given community as a whole, on matters of liquor licensing. If they were not afraid of the opposition which municipalities might express, they would have no objection to this amendment being incorporated, which certainly is the democratic and reasonable thing to do.

What could be more appropriate than for the government of a municipality chosen by the citizens of that municipality, to appear and object on the ground that the licence in a given area in their opinion is not in the best interests of the citizens in that community?

Municipal governments can, and very often do, express the view that coincides with the interests of the community as a whole. They are supposed to be the guardians of the municipality and all its citizens; to deny that right to them is to express fear lest the interference of municipal governments may lead to a reduction in the number of licence.

They would only appear in case there was an objection, and that appearance would lend a lot of weight to the objection, and it might lead to a reduction in the number of outlets. I do not see why the Government should be so fearful of the reduction, if the electors feel that way about it. The municipal representatives go to the electors at the end of each year, and if they are wrong, and do not represent the view of the citizens, the citizens will find opportunities to get rid of them quickly enough, far quicker than they can those elected to the Provincial Government, as they only come before them from time to time, every four or five years, and then as a party bloc, whereas, in municipal government, they appear as individuals and they can be taken care of by the citizens, if, in the opinion of the citizens, they act contrary to their desires and best interests. I believe this is the least which may be done to control the number of outlets.

I am not a prohibitionist; I do not favour prohibition, but I do not favour this law. I do not think it is a good law; it was not properly executed, and I do not think it meets with the satisfaction of the people at large.

I think this bill to amend the Liquor Licence Act, 1946, would improve the situation somewhat, by granting to the municipalities the right to act as spokesman and agent of its citizens in matters of licence applications.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, after the speech of the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod), who introduced this bill, I felt very much in sympathy with the principle of the bill, and I had practically made up my mind, subject to hearing the rest of the debate, to vote in favour of it.

However, since the speech of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg), who has imputed other motives for the introduction of this bill, motives with which I do not agree, I feel, perhaps against my better judgment, constrained to vote against the bill.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I wish to assure you and the House that the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) was completely wrong if he assumed I had any reluctance to speak on this bill. It was my natural desire to be courteous in the matter and permit the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) to express his views, also the hon. Leader of the C.C.F. Party (Mr. Grummett) if he saw fit to do so; before I would express my view as the Minister to whose department the Liquor Licence Act, 1946, is attached for administrative purposes.

I hope the remarks of the hon. member in the Liberal Opposition (Mr. Belanger) indicate a change of heart in relation to this provision on the part of the entire opposition, and that, since last year, they now perceive the purpose and actual object which lay behind this proposal.

The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) stands up in this House, and exhibits to us here the effect on a mind that has suffered from mental malnutrition for years, or the over-stimulation of recently marching in a picket line, during the general strike in France, and viewing with such approval—

MR. SALSBERG: What picket line was that? I am sorry; I did not hear you.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: You should listen.

MR. SALSBERG: I did, but you spoke to the gallery instead of the hon. members.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Well, he has nothing to raise, so I will pass on, Mr. Speaker. I make that comment, Mr. Speaker, because he has the sheer effrontery to repeat what he knows to be untrue.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell) to withdraw. I did not say anything in this House which I knew to be untrue. If I said anything which the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) can show me is incorrect, I will withdraw. I think you should ask him to withdraw.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) will listen for one moment to what I have to say, then if he has the sheer effrontery to stand up in this House and say it is true, I will consider the question of withdrawal.

In the meantime, I wish to say that when that bill was placed before the House, I appreciated that it was a bill dealing with a very difficult subject, about which there is such a divergence of public view. I also appreciated that it was a long and difficult bill. Under those circumstances, I personally went to both the present hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and to the Leader of the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett) and consulted them as to their convenience as to when the bill should be called for second reading, and asked them how much time they wished. I believe that course of action is in accordance with the best traditions of this Legislature.

Both the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the Leader of the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett) assured me that the day on which that bill was called for second reading would be satisfactory to them.

Now, in the face of the fact that was publicly stated and accepted in the House at that time, the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has the sheer effrontery to stand up here and state that the bill was "railroaded".

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I appeal to you that you order the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to withdraw the accusation that I said something that I knew to be untrue. After his explanation, I certainly am not at all convinced that I have at any time, in connection with this matter, said what was untrue. I said it was "railroaded". That is an opinion.

MR. SPEAKER: May I say to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that he seems to be living in an atmosphere of anticipation, and is rather sensitive, so I would suggest he refrain from speaking when the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has the floor.

MR. SALSBERG: I am obliged to appeal to you, Mr. Speaker. The record shows that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) said I said something, knowing it to be untrue.

MR. SPEAKER: Just a moment. I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Blackwell) said that he would withdraw, providing that you could convince him along certain lines. Kindly drop it at that.

MR. SALSBERG: No, Mr. Speaker, he said "after his explanation".

MR. SPEAKER: Then, if you will not accept it, I will rule you out of order. Please do not interrupt the speaker.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, all I am asking is that an untrue remark should be withdrawn. Why am I asked to sit down?

MR. SPEAKER: He said he would withdraw it on certain conditions, if you could convince him. If you convince him, he will withdraw. At the present time, I think you should sit down, and just remain quiet.

MR. SALSBERG: That still does not—

MR. SPEAKER: I will ask the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) if he will please sit down.

MR. SALSBERG: I have no alternative, but just the same it is unparliamentary, and not according to the rules.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Mr. Speaker, may I say with reference to the fact that I have now heard what the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) had to say, that the bias relating to this bill, and its progress through this House, is well known to the hon. members of this House. Whether what the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) said was true or untrue is a matter of fact, and cannot have any effect, one way or another, on anything I may say.

MR. SALSBERG: That is an opinion.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Leave it where it stands.

If the hon. member of St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) wishes to deliberately misrepresent what has gone through this House, then he has to take the consequences, and it stands, true or false, on the record.

Mr. Speaker, may I express my surprise and amusement that on an apparently small-appearing amendment of this description, the speeches which followed from the two Communist members of the House, would indicate disapproval of the entire Act—of the entire Act. Mr. Speaker, that really proves the power of mind over matter, because what they are trying to do by this small-appearing amendment is to see that the whole structure and design of this Act is, in fact, sabotaged. That seems to be generally in accord with the practices they pursue towards all the institutions of the country. If by nice protestations of their apparent belief in democracy they can achieve a situation in this or any other field by which it fails to work, they feel, according to their objectives, they have accomplished a great deal.

What they want to do is to completely destroy the judicial system dealing with liquor licences, a bill which was brought in by the present Government, in The Liquor Authority Control Act, 1944, and brought forward in the same procedural form as the Liquor Licence Act, 1946.

Between 1934 and 1944, the liquor licences in this province were issued at discretion as a result of whatever conferences took place behind closed doors down in the Liquor Control Board. The provisions, in effect, today insure that before a licence can be issued anywhere in the Province of Ontario a public application must be made and advertised in the press. That indicates to the entire public in relation to this subject about which there is such divergency of views, that an application will be made. It creates the very public knowledge of the situation that enables people to come before the board and, on evidence, bring to the consideration of the board those factors that should regulate the issuance or withholding of a licence. Under that procedure, public hearings are held in each of the authority districts in the province.

Two references were made here to licences. The first was to an application it was thought would be made for a licence on the border of the riding which the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has the honour to represent in this Legislature. What might have happened with regard to that licence had it come before the board, I have no idea. The fact of the matter is that the person who had indicated his intention of applying, saw fit not to apply.

What will happen to the 20 licence applications that may be made in the university area of the City of Toronto I have no idea, for this simple reason: as the Minister responsible for policy under that Act, I have not heretofore, and I do not intend, whether pressure is put on me by one who seeks a licence or by one who opposes it, to interest myself personally in whether a single licence is granted or withheld.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. BLACKWELL: The fact of the matter is that when the administration under that Act was established, I sought for that job the best board we could obtain, and I induced his honour, Judge Robb who was extremely reluctant to undertake that very difficult task, to do so as a public service. I, myself, signed the recommendation to council that resulted in the appointment of that board, and by no act of mine do I intend to indicate to any individual or publicly in this province that I lack confidence in the board which I, myself, recommended to office.

It therefore follows that this Act having been in existence the time it has, it is a highly improper public statement for anybody to make, religious or otherwise, that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) and myself are sitting down considering at the moment 20 licences in the university area in Toronto. We have done no such thing. Neither of us has given a single degree of personal consideration to anything about any one of these licences. The first knowledge I had of who those 20 applicants were, was from pressure letters from people who said it was my duty to stop those licences being issued.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have either got to make up our minds whether we are going to strive to keep this question of liquor licences out of the chaos and corruption that surrounded it in the past, and make the judicial system stick, or we have got to go back to something else.

In fairness to the municipalities of this province, Mr. Speaker, I feel very definitely that both the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) and the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) should leave it to the municipal councils of this province to express the view of whether or not they want to be brought into this question.

The very sort of anarchy that these people seek, would result if there were to be two hearings in respect of every individual licence, one by the city council which would conduct it in an atmosphere of pressure group and in which every member of a municipal council would spend the whole of his year in office under perpetual pressures—which every hon. member of this House, Mr. Speaker, knows is true—and the effect of this so-called simple amendment is a sly attempt being made, not on behalf of or with the desire of the municipal councils of this province, to create that very chaos which would result if every municipal council of this province had a political issue on its hands every single time a single licence is under consideration.

I wish to conclude by saying this, Mr. Speaker, it is my hope, and I say this with all sincerity to every hon. member here, that the hon. members of the Liberal Opposition in this House and the hon. members of the C.C.F. group of this House will realize what is at stake in principle in this apparently simple little bill.

What is at stake is this; whether we are going to have an open and a judicial system of licensing or whether we are going to have created the very same sort of anarchy that the two hon. members in question are striving to create in relation to every single aspect of our administration in this province.

This Government, Mr. Speaker, is opposed to this amendment for those reasons.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) a question?

MR. SPEAKER: Will the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) answer a question?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I do not know whether I will or not, Mr. Speaker.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Oh, now.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: Both the hon. members have taken up a disproportionate amount of time now, Mr. Speaker, in relation to their strength in the House, and I think other hon. members should have an opportunity to speak, if they so desire.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I want to say a few words on this amendment before it goes to a division in the House.

I was not impressed by the debate so far, because it seems to me, as a layman, that debating this proposed amendment does not call for the wide range which the discussion has taken, both by the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) who introduced it and his supporter, and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell).

I think that the House will agree that whether we enact this amendment or not, it really does not call into question the whole Liquor Licence Act, and I am strongly of the opinion that we can either support or oppose this amendment without at the same time supporting or opposing the Liquor Licence Act as a whole.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, the question of "railroading" legislation has come up in this debate, and quite frankly I am not one of those who have been very much impressed with the charge of "railroading" legislation through Legislatures, because after all, as long as free speech remains and is the inherent right of each one of us, an opportunity to "railroad" any legislation through any Legislature would be very difficult indeed, so that I am not impressed by that argument at all.

I said in the beginning that the discussion of this amendment has wandered all over the provisions of the Liquor Licence Act. It should have been restricted both by those who proposed and supported it and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) in answering it, to the discussion of the principle involved in the amendment, that is now offered for debate and for enactment in this Legislature.

The one thing that concerns me, Mr. Speaker—and I say quite frankly to the House that this is not a question on which the official Opposition desires to take a united stand; the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) may smile, but there is an element of democracy and independent action left, particularly in this corner of the House, and as for hon. members who sit around me, they can vote as they see fit on this particular measure—as I say, Mr. Speaker, the thing that concerns me is that there are two angles that present themselves, which we must seriously consider. On the one hand, a casual reading or a careful reading—or a "reading"—let me leave out the supporting words—of the amendment would seem to indicate that it would be reasonable and plausible for a council of a municipality to have the right collectively on the part of its citizens to voice objection or, I suppose for that matter, to voice approval if they saw fit.

The only angle that bothers me in this particular discussion is that I would be the last one, Mr. Speaker, to want any element of municipal politics to be mixed up with the granting or with the refusal to grant a licence. That is the point that moves me at this particular time. I think we should be very careful in keeping, as far as we can, the influence of what might be in many cases municipal politics bringing its weight to bear on questions of this character.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I do not want to take up the time of the House to any great extent upon this question. It is a very small matter and I think we have already spent a lot of time on it so far.

However, I would suggest one point that has not been mentioned, and which I think should be brought to the attention of the House, and that is this, that if this amendment were to pass, then you would have those who support the opening of an authority in a municipality approaching the council and those who oppose it doing the same, and council would not have time to do its ordinary business. They would be continually under pressure from the two factions within the municipality. It would stir up a whole lot of animosity, both within the factions and against the council.

We now have the board set up to decide this question, but were the amendment to pass, we would have night after night of council sittings to thresh it out beforehand, whereas I believe the board is the proper place for that question to be brought up.

I do not see any benefit whatsoever in having it brought before the council.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there are one or two points I wish to make before this amendment is disposed of.

In the first place, may I say that the discussion which has already taken place, since the mover and seconder spoke, has demonstrated how very important it was that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) give to the Legislature the advantage of his legal knowledge and his ability to interpret in understandable terms what may to some seem an over-simple amendment.

The reason I say that the discussion has demonstrated the value of what the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has said, is that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has obviously convinced those hon. members of the Opposition who, last year, supported this very same bill that they now should not do so, and for that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) should be congratulated.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: It should be remembered that last year both the Liberal group in Opposition and the C.C.F. group voted on a recorded vote for precisely the same bill, so there is always hope that with sufficient explanation and argument our democratic processes may work to bring appropriate results.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: There was another reason why it was appropriate and necessary for the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) to cover a fairly extensive field. After all, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has exemplified in all that he has said his belief in the democratic system. He did not know of course at the beginning what the decision of the opposition groups would be, and it was obvious that he was seeking to enlighten them, having regard to the fact that they had voted for this bill last year.

He was attempting to deal with each of the points raised by the mover (Mr. MacLeod) and seconder (Mr. Salsberg), and I think it is obvious that the result of that discussion has been very satisfactory from the point of view of a better understanding of what the issue really is.

Actually, there is a very important principle at issue here. It is not just as simple and unimportant a measure as may be suggested. The issue really is whether we are to have judicial method of dealing with these extremely difficult applications, or whether we are to have them dealt with by elected representatives in whatever field it may be, with all the difficulties which have been clearly pictured by hon. members of the Opposition in the remarks they have made.

After all, it is either a judicial system of deciding on these applications, or it is not. May I say, as the head of the Government, that in any case where we do not refer a matter to a judicial tribunal of this kind, this Government will not shelve its responsibility, and if any elected representatives are to deal with this matter other than by a judicial tribunal, it will be by the elected representatives, who have the responsibility of government; it will not be a delegated authority in that field to a locally-elected body. That, I think, is irresponsible government. This Government is seeking to maintain and strengthen responsible government in this province against the threats which are directed toward that type of government here and elsewhere.

I was very much impressed with what the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) said, and since this is not his birthday, may I say that I am particularly pleased to see that he is smiling, even after the—(Prescott): Hectic.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER

HON. MR. DREW:—after his birthday, and that he now goes into his next ten years with that same smile on his face.

May I say that I was very much impressed by the point made by the hon. member for Prescott (Mr. Belanger) because he put his finger on something that goes even beyond the very important principle involved in this amendment. He really challenged the motive behind this.

Without any challenge as to the motives, the Government has made it quite clear that it would not in any event support an amendment which would upset the very clear principle of dealing with matters of this kind. The Government, in dealing with these matters, must also have regard to the purposes and intentions of amendments of this kind. The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has very properly pointed out that the hon. members who have placed this amendment before the Legislature have as their purpose—and let us not make any pretence about it—the very type of disruption which would result from a confusion created by an amendment of this kind.

The Government certainly has no intention of disregarding in any of these cases the obvious purposes and intents of bills put before this Legislature by the two Communists who sit here—or at least, by the two whom we know to be Communists.

I think that it would be well that each of us keep that in mind, and I do not think it is inappropriate on this occasion to say once more that this Government does not intend to ignore the associations of these two hon. members in considering the real sincerity and value of the things that are put before this Legislature by them. When they talk about their “belief in free discussion” and “ample opportunity to examine these things,” I, for one, do not forget that by their own declarations they are associated with that international form of treachery of which they approve, and have formally approved, through their organization, in this country.

I say that not on any general basis of interpretation of their purpose, but because it is only a few days ago at the convention of the Communist Party, meeting in Vancouver that Tim Buck, the Communist leader of that party in Canada, passed a resolution extending congratulations to Gottwald on his seizure of power in Czechoslovakia a short time ago.

This Government is not, in any of its dealings with representations that they make or amendments which they introduce, disregarding the fact that by such clear evidence as that, these men are allies of dictatorship, and of those who are destroying freedom wherever they can. We are voting against this amendment with that thought in mind, as well as the thought of the clear principle that is an issue in this amendment.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Before the question is put to the House, I think I should take a few minutes to explain the stand I take. It is a fact last year I voted for that amendment. Since that time, not so much on account of the explanation given by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) today or by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), but more due to the fact that I had a chance to go over the regulations concerning the issuance of such licences, I have come to the conclusion as it stands today, it is possible in any of the districts concerned to have petitions signed, and if the petition represents the majority of the voters on the voters' list, I understand the commission at once is inclined, and rightly so, to accept such petitions. I have found in the northern districts of the province it works very well. I might say that the time between advertising in the paper and the time given to present such a petition is not, to my mind, long enough, I think it is really the best way to handle those cases; in fact, I have come to the conclusion that it would be unwise to put the responsibility on the municipal government and I would sooner leave it in the hands of the voters at large and if they are interested in opposing such licence they can very well sign such a petition and send it to the Registrar and-so-forth. It has worked very well and I am satisfied with that part of the law, and for that reason I will vote against the amendment today.

THE NORTHERN DEVELOPMENT ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 72nd Order, second reading of Bill No. 94, An Act to amend the Northern Development Act, Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 94. This bill is merely routine; if there is any discussion, I would prefer to discuss it in committee.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister) : 73rd Order.

THE APPRENTICESHIP ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 73rd Order, second reading of Bill No. 96, An Act to amend the Apprenticeship Act, Mr. Daley.

HON. C. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to make a very few brief remarks in moving second reading of this bill.

It is quite an important amendment to a very important Act. The Apprenticeship Act, I think, is not fully appreciated by a great many people, that is, the extent and operation of this Apprenticeship Act. It has been carried on provincially and in co-operation with the Federal Government in their portion of it for training and rehabilitating returning boys.

This country because of its activities in the long period of the war was becoming depleted of tradesmen, particularly in the building trades, and I am very glad to say that with full co-operation from the Federal authorities, we have turned out actually thousands of young men who are now well on their way to becoming skilled tradesmen in their chosen field and thereby enabled to fit into the scheme of things and make a desirable living in this province.

This amendment enables us to clear up some administrative problems. For instance, to define a "designated trade." Today, in the automobile trade you have a number of skilled tradesmen included in the one trade because today is a day of specialists and men particularly skilled in the carburation and ignition systems, when they have completed that particular phase of it, they are skilled tradesmen. There are other men who specialize in body, chassis and springs repairs. This gives us an opportunity to designate these people and to define what is "trade" in that particular field and also in the case of other fields. It also gives us power to prescribe by regulation a course of training to ensure to the boy that he gets proper training, that he cannot just be taken out and put on a job without any training of a technical occupation at all.

We prescribe the course and the length of time to be spent in each year learning his trade. I might say we have been doing some of this, but we wanted to have authority because the Registrar of Regulations has questioned our authority and we think it is better to pass this amendment so that we can do the thing in a proper and legal manner. These items I have mentioned in the administration are extremely important.

Motion approved, second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): I think it would be appropriate for me on the discussion of this bill which might be regarded as dealing with the general problem of labour, to deal with a matter which is of very direct concern to all the hon. members of this Legislature and to those who are interested in good government in this province, and particularly in this case so far as it affects the relationship between labour and the Department of Labour of this Government.

Since I came into this Legislature this afternoon, I have been shown a copy of this afternoon's edition of the Toronto Daily Star which purports to report a meeting that took place this morning when representatives of the Ontario Federation of Labour made their annual representations to the Ontario Government.

It deals with one subject which was under discussion this morning and conveys an impression that is so false and so malicious that I think it is desirable I should take the first possible opportunity to correct it and to indicate to the hon. members of this Legislature just how far this publication will go in disregarding every honest tenet of a system embracing a free press.

The heading on the front page above the article to which I refer reads as follows—in heavy type: "Politically, we don't fear labour, Blackwell declares."

Anything more dishonest and more remote from the truth would be difficult to imagine even in the case of the Toronto Daily Star—and I grant you it is difficult to imagine any form of dishonesty they would not employ—but this goes beyond a matter of mere dishonesty in an attack on an individual. This seeks to create a feeling of prejudice in the mind of organized labour in relation to the Government of the day, no matter what that Government may be, which has the responsibility for dealing with labour relations in this province. To anyone who knows the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) and knows the way in which he discusses labour problems, it would hardly be necessary to emphasize that this is a false report.

Just because the press was present—and we knew that the Toronto Daily Star would be there—we had a court reporter there and I have before me his sworn report of what was said at that point. I assure you that we have complete confidence in every member of the Press Gallery except those representing two publications—the Toronto Daily Star and the Tribune. The rest, whether they agree with us all the time or not—represent the very best in the traditions of a free press.

May I also say something about the reporters of the Toronto Daily Star who were present. The remarks that I make do not apply to the reporters of the Star, because this report was being taken by Mr. Greenaway of the Star, who is a reliable reporter with the highest sense of integrity, who under no circumstances, to my own knowledge, would write a false report of what took place. Because this was being reported by a man of such unchallenged reputation the despicable character of this newspaper is better displayed, because it is perfectly apparent that the false heading and the false contents of the report were written by someone at the office with no relation to the report which went down to them from the meeting with the Government this morning.

I have referred before to that very evil old man who controls this newspaper and I refer again to Joseph Atkinson because I know—not by guess but by sworn evidence—that no course is followed by that newspaper without his approval and without his sanction, which has to do with any general question of policy. Fortunately I have his own sworn statement that in the vicious attacks of the paper upon myself and members of the Government he has approved of their course, and in many cases actually approved in advance.

Let us just see what this represents. Here you have a very evil old man, with enormous accumulated wealth, representing everything that can be criticized in the capitalist system—and there are things that can be; and Joseph Atkinson is number one—always parading his great concern about labour. Ask the workers in his own plant how much genuine interest he has in labour; ask the members of the Toronto unions in the Toronto Daily Star how soft-hearted and warm in his affections for labour they find Joseph Atkinson. Just find out how much he genuinely believes in collective bargaining. Find out how much Joseph Atkinson believes in the right of organized labour to protect their interests and you will find why I call him an utter hypocrite in everything he does in connection with this publication.

Having prefaced my remarks by saying clearly what I think of Joseph Atkinson and his publication, let me give you very clear evidence of just how far this publication will go. The heading, as I said before and I repeat again, is "Politically, we don't fear labour, Blackwell declares." To any of you who read the Toronto Daily Star—and I assume that all do not read it just for the comic page—there will be a familiar ring, because you have constantly been seeing—"Labour Condemns Drew." "Drew Uses Police Against Labour" and so forth. It is the same sort of dishonesty and is part of a continuous and unfailing pattern which is approved by this evil old man and followed under his instructions.

Under that heading we find the following, and I start exactly where it starts:

"'It is against the public interest,' for the Ontario Federation of Labour to be the 'political arm of labour,' Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell said today in replying to a brief presented the Ontario Cabinet. 'Politically we don't fear it,' he said."

He said nothing of the kind. The remarks that were being made were directed to the representatives of the Ontario Federation of Labour, and we had been discussing one part of their report which referred to "policing," and the discussion related to a particular quotation from their brief on that subject.

I had referred to these words in their brief—and I quote:

"The Provincial Government should not have lent its assistance to such an effort."

The "effort" referred to was what they claim to have been the use of the Provincial Police against the interests of the strikers in a strike which had taken place recently at Leaside.

It was pointed out to the Ontario Federation of Labour that this was a most improper statement, not in any way consistent with the facts and that it was made with full knowledge by them of what the real responsibilities of the police are in a case of that kind and what had actually taken place there.

Both the Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) and I had pointed out that one of the difficulties with which we were confronted as a Government was the fact that the Ontario Federation of Labour had stated that it is the political arm of the C.C.F. Party. I said—and the Attorney-General concurred in the statement—if that was the position of the Ontario Federation of Labour, that was their right in a free country, but we both pointed out that if any labour organization identifies itself exclusively with any particular political party—no matter which party it may be—and constitutes itself, according to its own statement, the "political arm" of that party, this Government, in reading what is presented to it, always has great difficulty in determining what is presented to it by the representatives of this group in the interest of labour and what is presented to it in their political capacity. We pointed out that, in our opinion, this presented certain undesirable features from the point of view of labour itself. But again we repeated if that was the choice, recognizing its difficulties, then no one could prevent their doing it, but we could not ignore it.

Then the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) went on with these exact words—and it is a distortion of those words which appeared in the Toronto Daily Star—and I quote now from the evidence taken by a court reporter. I will read it slowly so that the rest of the hon. members will know how dishonest the Star is, and how difficult it is for Mr. Greenaway to carry on his very onerous duties, in view of the fact that what he sends down to the Star has often so little relation to what appears down there. This is an exact quotation—Mr. Blackwell was addressing the Federation following the discussion I have described:

“If you want to carry on that political action as the arm of a political party, I would make this statement to you, that it is against the public interest, but as far as the present Government of Ontario is concerned, politically we do not fear it, because the people of this province want law and order and you may be sure that the opposition party you represent will remain in opposition until the end of time. Politically, if that is what you want to do, I welcome it.”

That is the end of the quotation. May I say that I believe this is a very clear indication of one of the difficulties which representatives of that political group are going to face, if they fail to see that once they identify themselves completely with any party, it is utterly impossible for this, or any other government, which may succeed it in the far-distant future, to determine which is political and which is genuine argument in the interests of labour. That was what was said and that is what we say now. But we said something more which indicates just how false this report in the Star really is.

I said we knew that labour was not expressing these opinions, and that no matter what might be done by the officials of the Ontario Federation of Labour, they were not speaking for the rank and file of the C.I.O. unions in making some of the statements they did as the “political arm” of the C.C.F. party.

In making that statement I pointed out that the party I have the honour to lead has amongst its membership, 66 hon. members of this Legislature, many of whom represent some of the largest labour ridings in Ontario, and they are sitting here from these labour ridings because they were supported by the rank and file of labour.

I said this morning—and I do not hesitate to repeat—that when any suggestion is made that we exercise arbitrary powers, we can only point out we are chosen by the people of Ontario and, far from challenging labour as a whole, we believe what we have done for labour will win the support of labour when the time comes for the next provincial election in this province.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) was simply stating if the officials of the Ontario Federation of Labour chose to identify themselves with the C.C.F. party, and be accepted by the C.C.F. party as the “political arm” of that party, and identify themselves as the “political arm” of labour in the C.C.F., we did not believe that was the way to further most effectively the interests of labour, but if they, in their judgment, carried it forward, we did not fear that form of political action as relating to the decision of the officials of the Ontario Federation of Labour, because we are quite sure that the sort of amendment which has been introduced here, and the sort of amendments which are being introduced by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) in the administration of that Act, are the kind of things which will win the support of those who recognize that labour organizations can best interpret the interests of labour when it is not compelled to mix political with labour activities, and to leave some doubt as to exactly which kind of representation we have before us.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 74th Order.

FACTORY, SHOP AND OFFICE BUILDING ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The 74th Order, second reading of Bill No. 97, An Act to amend the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act, Mr. Daley.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 97, An Act to amend the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, the spokesman for the retail gasoline and automotive service division of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada have presented a brief, I think, to all groups in the House, in which they set out certain objections to Bill No. 97. They are especially concerned with the question of Sunday work, and are extremely anxious to get an amendment to the bill which will safeguard the necessity for them working on Sundays. I would like to ask, Mr. Speaker, whether the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) is considering this brief, and whether he will agree to incorporate an amendment insofar as it affects Sunday work.

It is understood, Mr. Speaker, I have in mind the amendment of this bill, when it comes up in committee stage.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, I might say we have under consideration some amendments, and if this can be passed in second reading, we will certainly deal with the amendments in committee.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, is the hon.

Minister (Mr. Daley) not going to give a short explanation of the bill.

HON. MR. DALEY: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The first section of the bill deals with certain types of machinery which we have found to be exceedingly dangerous when operated under certain conditions, and particularly one machine that is called the "guillotine"—which in itself is not a pleasant word—but this machine is used in book-binding operations, and experience over the years, together with representations made by organized labour, and very careful examinations for a period of a year or more in the department, has convinced us that this machine is extremely dangerous when operated by more than one person.

It is only on very rare occasions it is operated by more than one, and that is generally in a rush trying to get work done a little too fast.

Accidents have occurred on at least two occasions; one, when a girl lost her whole hand, and another time a man lost the greater portion of his fingers.

In addition to the "guillotine," there is some other mill machinery, where safety devices are controlled by the operator, and if somebody else is there assisting in removing stock, or doing something that cannot be accomplished by one person, that person does not know what is going on.

We want to have the authority to control that phase, as we feel that the accidents which have occurred justify this procedure.

There certainly will be a measure of common sense expected, but there are numerous occasions where we feel that this Act will prevent a great many accidents.

The other matter, of course, is the gasoline sales, and, as I have already stated, Mr. Speaker, I am considering amendments, and they will be discussed in committee.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 75th Order.

UNIVERSITY AVENUE EXTENSION ACT, 1928

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 78th Order.

THE FARM PRODUCTS CONTAINERS ACT, 1947

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 79th Order.

THE BEES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 79th Order, second reading of Bill No. 102, An Act to amend the Bees Act, Mr. Kennedy.

HON. WM. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Kennedy, I move second reading of Bill No. 102, An Act to amend the Bees Act.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 81st Order.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 83rd Order.

THE TRAINING SCHOOLS ACT, 1939

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 83rd Order, second reading of Bill No. 106, An Act to amend the Training Schools Act, 1939, Mr. Dunbar.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 106, An Act to amend the Training Schools Act, 1939.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Speaker, I have something to say on that, but I will wait for the committee stage. May I suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) that when we come to committee stage, he will make the computations retroactive to the 1st of January.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It needs some consideration; we are a little short of money.

MR. A. BELANGER: Oh no, surely not.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 84th Order.

AN ACT RESPECTING THE PRO- VISION OF SERVICES BY THE PROVINCE AND MUNICIPALI- TIES TO PERSONS OCCUPYING DOMINION CROWN LANDS

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) if he will not press second reading this afternoon. I know the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) would like to speak on it.

HON. MR. DREW: Yes, I will be glad to have this stand over.

Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the chair, and the House resolve itself into committee of the whole.

Motion approved.

House in committee; Mr. Reynolds in the chair.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 68th Order.

THE INDUSTRIAL STANDARDS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The 68th Order, House in committee on Bill No. 81, An Act to amend the Industrial Standards Act, Mr. Daley.

Sections 1 to 10 approved.

On reporting:—

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, just a word or two on this point. I do not think the bill should be reported. I have given argumentation on this when it was up before the House on second reading, to the effect that the bill was not sent to a committee, and no opportunity was given to people who are most vitally interested in this legislation to object to it and to appear and present their own views. I refrain from moving an amendment, because it would be futile to do so. However, I do want to be recorded that I am not in favour of reporting the bill.

Bill No. 81 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 69th Order.

VITAL STATISTICS ACT, 1948

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 69th Order; House in committee on Bill No. 91, The Vital Statistics Act, 1948, Mr. Dunbar.

Sections 1 to 5 inclusive approved.

On Section 6.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): As I have said on other occasions, Mr. Chairman, I am very happy to see this section brought down. It is a very good amendment. But I wonder why we should state in the law that it is not the duty of a father of an illegitimate child to report, but evidently it is the duty of the mother? Am I right?

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Yes. If the mother alone reports the birth of a child, it is satisfactory, but the father and mother may both report.

MR. SALSBERG: This bill seems to go out of its way to state it is not the duty of a father to report the birth of an illegitimate child. Why should it be more the duty of the mother than the father?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The mother nearly always reports the child, because, as I think you will admit, she knows more about the case.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate that is generally true, but the law does, however, seek out one of the parents as being more responsible than the other. In regard to the knowledge; in a previous section, it is said "that the father or the mother, if she is able—and so on—shall report." I think the father of an illegitimate child should be as obligated as the mother, and I do not see why we have a law to let him shirk that responsibility.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): Where is he?

MR. SALSBERG: It is the quality of the duties and responsibilities of these two classes that is involved. I really do not think we should continue this favouritism that is offered to the man, saying that he does not have to register, but the mother does.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It is very simple to explain. There is no doubt that the mother usually is the one who registered the birth, but there is no objection if the mother and father register it together.

We brought that section down to try and get away from the fact where the mother of an illegitimate child has to marry the man, a thing to which you strenuously objected. We are now trying to get away from that.

MR. SALSBERG: I was wondering why one responsible parent was given an avenue to escape that responsibility. The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) knows I am interested, and I agreed to the other bill, when it was presented. In order to expedite the registration, I think it should provide for both. I have no objection otherwise, but I am a stickler for equality of responsibility and obligation, whether it is male or female.

Sections 6 to 12 inclusive approved.

On Section 13.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Section 13 may be the unlucky one; that is where his name should come in.

Sections 13 to 16 inclusive approved.

On Section 17.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, I see that sub-section 2 of section 17 is a new section. I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) would just tell us briefly the reason for that change.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Speaker, we now have a different system set up. We have inspectors covering all the province, and we feel that one year is sufficient time to leave the matter in the local registrar's hands, and after that it should be handled by the Registrar-General.

Sections 17 to 43 inclusive approved.

On Section 44.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Speaker, may I ask what is the reason, or the objection against the registration of the birth of any child really domiciled in Ontario but who happens to be born in another province? Is there any sound reason for refusing to have him registered in Ontario?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) that I think there is a very definite objection. I do not know of any province or of any country in which such a thing is done. You cannot say a child is born in Ontario when it is actually born elsewhere. When a birth certificate is made out, it is an important document from the point of view of insurance companies and superannuation, and you could not possibly register a person who was not born in the province. I do not know any way to get around it.

MR. CHARTRAND: Mr. Speaker, last year, as I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) will recall, I mentioned the fact that a number of children really domiciled in Ontario have been born in Hull, Quebec, and were not registered at the city hall because they were domiciled in Ontario, and they are not registered in Ontario because they were not born in Ontario. These children were, therefore, left without any registration whatever, and they are really domiciled in Ontario.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), there is provision, is there not, for registering a child born aboard ship outside of the boundaries of the province?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, there is.

MR. NIXON: May I ask where that appears?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Section 29.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): That, of course, is under the theory that that is an extra-territorial area for the time being.

MR. NIXON: Does that same provision apply to airplanes?

HON. MR. DREW: I do not think that that has yet happened.

MR. NIXON: What about all your air immigrants coming out?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Section 29 provides for registration of births and deaths occurring aboard ship.

Sections 44 to 58 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 91 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move that you do now rise and report certain bills without amendment.

Motion approved.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report 2 bills without amendment, and moves that the report be adopted.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Before moving the adjournment of the House, I might explain that we will proceed with bills on Monday, and resume the debate on the Speech from the Throne on Tuesday afternoon. We will sit Tuesday evening.

MR. H. A. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, may I ask if the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) could advise the House if the budget will come down before or after the recess.

HON. MR. DREW: That is something on which the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) alone is authorized to speak.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, may I make an announcement to the House? I would like to point out that we have our meeting of the committee on bills on municipal law on Monday next at 11.00 o'clock.

You will notice also that some of the amendments to the Assessment Act have not been printed in sufficient time to give hon. members an opportunity to study and consider them either on first reading or in committee, therefore, I would like hon. members to come at 11.00 o'clock on Monday to the committee room, and we will deal with amendments to the Assessment Act and the Municipal Act.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 5.10 o'clock p.m.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, moved by myself, seconded by Mr. Welsh, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act respecting the Research Council of Ontario, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by Mr. Blackwell, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to amend The Natural Gas Conservation Act, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, I would like to direct a question to the hon. Leader of the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett) in the House.

I noticed from press reports that it would appear that the hon. Leader of the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett) has expressed his approval of the presentation made to us by the Ontario Federation of Labour on Friday. In view of the fact the brief was a presentation to the Government, I think it would be helpful if we knew if it has received his support, as press despatches would indicate.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared to make a statement at this time.

HON. MR. DREW: There are times when it is very useful to know whether press reports are accurate or not.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the following:

The 42nd Annual Report of the Ontario Municipal Board to December 31st, 1947.

The Annual Report of the Inspector of Legal Offices for the year ending December 31st, 1947.

The 23rd Annual Report of the Department of Health of Ontario for the year 1947.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, may I revert to Introduction of Bills?

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. DANA H. PORTER (Minister of Planning and Development): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, in view of the conditions that exist in many parts of the province at the present time where floods have been causing serious damage, it is perhaps appropriate that I should outline the position of the Government with reference to its policy in connection with this matter.

I may say that I have been approached by a number of the hon. members of this House representing various constituencies affected, particularly the hon. members for Perth (Mr. Edwards), Huron-Bruce (Mr. Hanna), York West (Mr. Allan), Haldimand - Norfolk (Mr. Martin), and Waterloo South (Mr. Chaplin). In those places, as is well known, the unprecedented floods in some cases have involved a great deal of hardship and inflicted considerable damage.

This Government introduced a measure to deal with this problem in 1946, known as the Conservation Authorities Act, and the principle upon which that Act was based was that the municipalities concerned in a river valley could join together and set up an organization which has been defined as a Conservation Authority. That organization has power to adopt a scheme for the control of floods, and in general the conservation of resources in the area, and has power also of expropriation of land and power to carry out any works that may be required to effect an improvement of conditions in the area.

There are, of course, a number of provisions which provide that the Provincial Government must approve of schemes that might be adopted under the Act. There is also provision for provincial contributions towards schemes of this kind.

It is our view that the chief responsibility for dealing with matters which affect local areas lies upon the people who live in that locality, and that the less centralized any methods may be to deal with these problems the better it will be concerned. For that reason, the conservation authorities are elected by the municipalities in the valley.

I may say that in the course of activities under this Act at the present time there are 10 of these Conservation Authorities which have been established throughout the province. We have 1 established on the Ausable River, on the Upper Thames, the Etobicoke, the Grand River, the Humber, the Don, the Ganaraska, the Moira, the Napanee and the South Nation. I do not think I have omitted any. I merely mention that to indicate that the people who live in these areas, scattered throughout the southern part of the province, who have been afflicted with these conditions for some years, have taken advantage of this legislation, formed their organizations and are proceeding as rapidly as possible to work out a scheme, adopt it and carry out the necessary work.

This Government, through my Department, carries out preliminary over-all surveys of the resources of the area and makes general recommendations as to what may be done to cope with those problems.

We have, for instance, on the Etobicoke this year an Authority set up on that river, and we were approached to carry out a survey, which we did, and certain recommendations were made. We have been requested by that Authority to make a certain contribution toward the cost of some of the work which they have adopted. That request was met and we have agreed to do exactly what was requested of us. That has occurred in any of these areas where they have reached the point where they are ready to act in a definite way and come to us with a concrete proposal of that kind.

I may point out that none of these programmes which may be adopted and carried out in this way have any sudden and spectacular results. They all involve long-term planning and continued persistence on the part of the people who are backing them, joined with provincial guidance and technical advice and whatever contribution may be decided upon from time to time to make it possible to carry out these schemes. Therefore, in several of these areas which are now most seriously affected, we have already organizations set up where plans have already been adopted and work in some cases is actually proceeding, and in some cases, it is ready to proceed.

With those remarks, I think perhaps I have outlined in a very general way the position which we take with reference to these problems and the manner in which they are being taken hold by the communities concerned.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER
(Leader of the Opposition): Mr.

Speaker, would the hon. minister (Mr. Porter) say how many schemes have been actually approved? Has there been any construction work done in connection with any of the schemes?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, I think there are three schemes that have been definitely approved, to the best of my recollection. I know of a number of schemes which are just about ready to go forward.

There are 6 of these areas where complete surveys have been made, with recommendations, and it is left to the authority now to decide as to how much of those schemes they are prepared to adopt. Sometimes they decide to take it step by step and adopt a portion in one year and then proceed to the next step the following year.

For instance, in Etobicoke they decided that a certain open cut was required at the mouth of the river. That was the first step they chose to take under the recommendations we have made, and they approached us with regard to that matter and we came to an agreement with them.

In the Ganaraska area they decided the most important problem with which they were concerned was reforestation, and in that area there are 20,000 acres where reforestation apparently should be done—not that there are 20,000 acres of forests that have to be planted, but there are 20,000 acres on which to a greater or lesser extent, trees should be planted. In that case, we entered into an agreement as to the financing of that work. It was arranged through the Department of Lands and Forests, and I believe they have acquired more than 2,000 acres of land up to the present time on which reforestation is being pressed forward just as fast as they can get the trees and get them in.

The Upper Thames has set up their own Authority and they have had a number of meetings to decide amongst themselves as to which steps should be taken in the order of precedence that will best suit their problems. As a matter of fact, I happen to be meeting some representatives of that Authority tomorrow morning to discuss these problems.

The Ausable also have a programme which they have adopted and they have also come to us for approval of that programme. We have given that approval and have come to an agreement with them which apparently is quite satisfactory in so far as the province is concerned.

I do not think I have anything more concrete to report.

MR. H. A. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) if his Department has any authority over that Grand River Valley scheme. The province spent a lot of money on that Shand Dam, and it seems that whoever runs the outfit, whenever the flood reaches its highest point, open the sluices of the dam, which makes the situation infinitely worse than it would otherwise have been.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, to my knowledge the province has no authority as to the operation of the dam. It may be that the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) could supplement that statement in some way.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I might say that the Commission set up controls for the whole development, and we are interested to the extent of 37½ per cent.

HON. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): And we appoint them, I think.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, the Commission is appointed by the municipalities, and they figure in as part of the cost of the programme.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, I may say that we do not appoint either that Commission or any of the members of these Authorities, except in cases where the province makes a contribution. In that case, we may appoint some representative of the province, but we have not done so in any of these cases as yet. In the Grand River Valley scheme, the maintenance and the operation of the dam is entirely carried out by the Commission, which is appointed by the municipality.

MR. H. A. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, the province did spend a lot of money on that project. The Government should have some supervision.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: I quite agree with the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). I think we should have some.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, a delegation came from my riding to interview the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter). Unfortunately the matter is in the hands of this Commission. Our delegation today wishes to draw attention to the fact that something unfortunate occurred in this particular flood, where a man had put his life savings into a home which was built only last year, and the floods came and ruined his home and he stayed on the roof for nine hours until he was rescued. He lost his furniture and everything.

My contention is while I know what this Government is contributing, what the Federal Government is contributing and what the municipality is contributing, even if our whole programme in this Grand River Valley scheme is completed, the second survey is well under way, as the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) knows. If the three dams are built in this connection I doubt whether it will solve the particular problem in connection with Bridgewater, which is near Kitchener. It would not take more than 700 feet of retaining wall, and as the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) said a few minutes ago, the Government is ready to receive concrete proposals, and I think this is one which it will be glad to hear.

It is true that costs are high and so forth, but if this Government would still concentrate a little on this particular flood control, even if it takes a few thousand dollars, the people at Bridgewater have not this money to do it. I think this Government should fall in line and do these little things instead of having lives lost and millions of dollars worth of property destroyed in many cases. The cost is small. It could be done for a few thousand dollars.

MR. R. A. McEWING (Wellington North): Mr. Speaker, might I ask the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter),—I did not catch those three projects that were approved of; he named several that were being discussed. What are the three which have been approved of?

HON. MR. PORTER: It is my recollection that the Ausable, the Etobicoke, the Ganaraska. I am not sure whether the Upper Thames have actually settled upon their definite part of the scheme which they want to proceed with or not. I believe they have not yet come forward definitely with what they want to do, but they are just about at that point.

MR. McEWING: Mr. Speaker, there is another point I would like to raise. Under the Grand River Conservation Commission scheme, does the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) have to give any approval of the plans they are making, or is it just under the river Authorities that you are working? They are planning, as the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meininger) says, a second or third dam, and there has been a certain amount of work done on this river and the tributaries that lead into it, but it is aggravating the trouble of some of the other municipalities, and since the representatives on the Grand River Conservation Commission are not representing those municipalities, they are not interested in them.

The result is that these dams are being built and they are of no benefit to them. The trouble is being aggravated as far as they are concerned, and they are at a big loss. Has there been any discussion with your Department, or does the Commission just go on and carry out what plans they like?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, there is no control over that Commission by my Department. The Commission was set up, as you may recall, sometime prior to the war, on a somewhat different basis from the Conservation Authorities that are now set up.

I believe in the Grand Valley they have set up a Conservation Authority which brings in the rural municipalities as well as the urban municipalities, but the Commission which has been operating these dams was set up under a special Act of the Legislature. The Commission has power to carry out the works that have to be done under the authority of that Commission.

The Commission consists of representatives of certain specified urban municipalities only.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Might I rise on a point of order? We are all out of order, I think.

MR. SPEAKER: Yes, it is all out of order.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 81st Order.

THE COMMUNITY HALLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 81st Order, second reading of Bill No. 103, An Act to amend The Community Halls Act. Mr. Kennedy.

HON. T. L. KENNEDY (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this bill.

I would like to point out to the House that the change is an increase in the grant from the Provincial Government of $2,000 to $5,000, but still to remain at 25 per cent. of the costs. The grant is for community halls, and also for athletic fields, and whatever buildings are on the athletic field. It means that rural Ontario will have a great boom in the building of skating rinks, baseball diamonds, and lacrosse fields. This $5,000 is 25 per cent. towards the cost of a community hall or athletic field and all buildings on that athletic field, whether it is a grandstand or skating rink.

Any hon. member here cannot help but be very much impressed with the way Ontario has gone into hockey, and into sports. We think that is a good thing, that the young men and young women of this province should have a chance to play athletic games, and also hockey in the winter time. It will be a great boon to the north country, and to all parts of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of the bill.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, on second reading of Bill No. 103; I want to congratulate the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) and the Government upon taking this forward step. It is a forward step that the hon. Minister (Mr. Kennedy) will agree I have advocated for quite a number of years in this Legislature. The old Community Halls Act, with the grants which the province made thereunder, was hopelessly outdated and antiquated to a very great degree, and it is particularly pleasing that the Government at this time should take hold of this situation and bring the Community Halls Act and grants thereunder more in keeping with present-day conditions.

I agree altogether with my hon. friend, the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) in the thought he expressed that this province has to look in the future more to the development of athletic fields and what we might call "minor sports" or sports of that character. In regard to athletic fields; I know in my own riding—and I am rather conversant with conditions in other ridings—communities are getting together and are making an athletic field. They are lighting it so that the teams can play and compete in the evening after the chores are done. This is one particular measure I want to say I can agree with entirely, and I congratulate them for bringing it into the House.

HON. MR. KENNEDY: You follow me all the way, and you will be all right.

MR. OLIVER: No, no.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 83rd Order.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENTS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 83rd Order; second reading of Bill No. 111, An Act to amend The Fire Departments Act, 1946. Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, in rising on the second reading of this bill, I feel I should make some explanation to the House of the important principle it contains.

In the amendment last year, the principle of collective bargaining between the unionized fire departments of the province and the municipalities was introduced with compulsory arbitration. At that time I pointed out to the House there are only two types of sanctions that will make collective bargaining work. One is a strike, and the other is arbitration.

In this most important public service, namely, the fighting of fires, strike is out of the question, and, in fact, that has always been recognized by the A.F. of L. Union in this field, and in their charters to locals the unions contain a no-strike clause.

When legislation was introduced last year, it was thought the principle of collective bargaining had now received such general acceptance that the legislation would be carried out throughout the province by the municipal level of Government, without the necessity of a sanction. In fact, it was my very strong view that on the introduction of this legislation last year and its enactment into law by this Legislature, it would really amount to a breach of the amendment to place a sanction in the act.

However, contrary to the best hopes that we entertained for the good and smooth working of the legislation, in a limited number of cases there has unquestionably been, on the part of some municipalities, protracted negotiations, with the obvious view that the municipalities might protract negotiations sufficiently so that the estimates for the year for the municipality might be fixed without having made provision for the result of either collective-bargaining agreements or failing which, an award by a board of arbitration. Under those circumstances, as the principle of this legislation has been accepted by this Legislature, there is no alternative but to see that it works.

Consequently, the most important provision of this bill, putting it in layman's language, is that each year when the request for negotiation is made by the 30th of November, the result of either agreement or the award must be provided for in the ensuing year's estimates.

In relation to the current year of 1948, this bill procures the result which, where a written request for negotiations was made before that date, provision must be made this year, 1948, for the result of either agreement or the award.

The sanction that is included in the bill is, Mr. Speaker, I submit to the House, the only effective one; that is the withholding of an adequate provincial subsidy to ensure the provisions of the Act being complied with. That is the most important item of the bill.

I might refer to one of the other questions in passing. Provision is made in the case of inability to agree, the award of the Chairman shall be final.

The other provisions of the bill are those merely of a provisional nature. They involve no important principle, and can best be dealt with in committee.

While I am on my feet, I would like to say that although these difficulties have arisen, they have been very limited in relation to the whole number of municipalities throughout the province, and it is gratifying to find that many agreements have been reached without the necessity of arbitration, and that where there has been some arbitration, they have been proceeded with by the municipalities in question in perfectly good faith, and in those cases there has not been the slightest necessity for sanction, and, Mr. Speaker, I say to the Legislature there is nothing to do but go forward and place in the legislation a sanction that is adequate to make the provisions of the bill work.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 111, An Act to amend The Fire Departments Act, 1946.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 84th Order.

THE POLICE ACT, 1946

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 84th Order, second reading of Bill No. 112, An Act to amend The Police Act, 1946, Mr. Blackwell.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, in rising to move second reading of Bill No. 112, I might say that the remarks which I have made regarding the necessity of a sanction to make collective bargaining work, apply here as they do in the case of the Fire Departments Act and in relation to this bill I will not repeat them.

There are, however, other items in this bill to which I feel I should make reference beyond merely the formal items.

One item is the question of cost of policing where municipalities request provincial assistance.

There is an amendment in this bill which enables the hon. Minister to waive the cost and that is submitted on the basis that where it is necessary for local police authority to request provincial assistance, it usually happens in relation to forces raised outside the municipality as well as within, and under these circumstances it seems entirely unfair that where the impact reaches a single municipality, that municipality should have to meet those extraordinary expenses. In these circumstances, I put this forward on the basis such expenses should be met out of provincial revenues.

There is a further amendment to the Act which is rather inconspicuous. It is an amendment to the Regulations Act which enables by regulation to prescribe courses for training. I might say it is there in relation to a policy reached by the department to establish a number of various schools for policing throughout the province. These schools are to be operated in combination between the municipality and the province. They really are an extension of the Municipal Provincial Police School that has operated for some time in the city of Toronto, and this represents an effort to decentralize police education on a basis of convenient locality throughout the province.

Also in that policy it is proposed that in the very small municipalities—and in order to enable a policeman to leave his job and go to a school—his task will be temporarily taken over by a provincial policeman.

I am sure, Mr. Speaker, the Legislature will be glad to know that of these new schools one has actually already functioned at Fort William—Port Arthur with very excellent results, and it is hoped in this way, the police of the province will have an opportunity to improve their police education in a way that they have not before.

I move second reading of Bill No. 112, An Act to amend the Police Act, 1946.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Chairman, I move that Sections 2 and 5 of the bill be amended in accordance with the reprinted copy of the bill, and that Sections 7 and 8 of the bill be struck out and replaced in accordance with the reprinted copy of the bill.

Motion approved.

Sections 1, 2 (as amended), 3, 4, 5 (as amended), 6, 7 and 8 (as amended), 9 approved.

MR. AURELIEN BELANGER (Prescott): Mr. Chairman, before reporting the bill, I suppose I need not ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Michener) sponsoring the bill whether all these clauses have been submitted to actuaries and a report received on them as to these contributions and back contributions, and so on?

HON. MR. MICHENER: Mr. Chairman, perhaps the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) will recall when the Act was revised generally last session, the revision was proposed and made in accordance with the report of a committee which included an actuary from the University of Toronto, Professor Sheppard, and two other members of the committee.

This amending bill this session does not change the actuarial principles of the revised Act of last session, except with respect to the teachers. It does make some difference there.

MR. BELANGER: Yes.

HON. MR. MICHENER: That is Section 7. No actuarial report has been made since the bill was made last year.

These amendments are largely to clear up difficulties in the administration of the bill which have arisen in practice or been discovered in the course of applying the bill to the conditions of the service.

MR. BELANGER: What occasioned my remark, Mr. Chairman, was the fact that there are some important sections concerning paying back into the fund by a man who has not been contributing, either a magistrate, a teacher or an inspector. I suppose that has all been controlled by the actuarial computations and figures, and there is no difficulty to be anticipated. I just put the question. I believe it may be so.

HON. MR. MICHENER: If my hon. friend (Mr. Belanger) is asking whether the fund is on a strictly actuarial basis, I can say to him that it never has been.

MR. BELANGER: That is what I am afraid of.

HON. MR. MICHENER: It is improved substantially by the new rate of contribution under the bill that was passed last year. The rate of contribution by employees was 4 per cent. of their salaries prior to the amendment of last year. Now, new employees in the civil service will contribute 6 per cent. of their salaries, and the Consolidated Revenue will contribute an equal amount, so that instead of 8 per cent. altogether going into the fund in respect to each civil servant who is a contributor to the fund, the fund will now receive 12 per cent., which will obviously improve the status of the fund.

MR. BELANGER: It is hoped, though, that within a more or less short period the fund will sustain itself—will be on an actuarial basis, is it not?

HON. MR. MICHENER: Mr. Chairman, in due course it will become a self-sustaining fund at the 6 per cent. rate of contribution.

MR. BELANGER: Mr. Chairman, I suppose it would be too much to ask how many years "in due course" is?

HON. MR. MICHENER: It would be, Mr. Chairman. I could only answer that within a fairly large range. It depends so much on the experience of the fund. Actually, the fund is receiving more money every year than it pays out.

MR. BELANGER: Well, it must be.

HON. MR. MICHENER: It has a capital fund of over $10,000,000. If that goes on until the effect of the new rate of contribution is felt, it is altogether likely that the guarantee of the province which stands behind this fund will never be invoked. As hon. members appreciate, this pension plan was introduced in 1920 or 1921, and was made applicable to the service with respect to which there had been no contribution, so it will take a lengthy experience to bring the fund into a position where we can say it is actuarially sound.

MR. BELANGER: Hon. members next to me want to know when it will apply to hon. members of the Legislature.

Bill No. 78 reported.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): I beg to inform the House that the hon. the Lieutenant-Governor, having been informed of the subject matter of the proposed resolution, recommends it to the consideration of the House.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Resolution in respect to the Agricultural Development Finance Act.

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we might have some explanation as to the amount of money in this fund, where it came from, how it got there, and so on?

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: You will get that in the bill.

MR. TAYLOR: Thank you.

Resolution approved.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: By Mr. Frost,—

Resolved,

That the Provincial Treasurer may refund such part as in the circumstances he deems proper of any amount heretofore paid under Section 1 of Section 4 of the Athletics Control Act, 1947, if he is satisfied that the professional contest or exhibition, in respect of which the amount was paid, was conducted for charitable purposes.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: By Mr. Kennedy,—

Resolution approved.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): 68th Order.

AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT FINANCE ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 68th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 93, An Act to amend The Agricultural Development Finance Act. Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Act is to regularize procedure and to authorize us to do what we and other governments have been doing now for a great many years.

The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) will recollect the purpose of this Act which was passed, I believe 25 years or more ago. The Act at that time provided that moneys received from the Provincial Savings offices should be used to purchase debentures of the Agricultural Loan Board of those days for the purpose of making farm loans. There were in the section, as you will notice on the opposite page, certain specific things for which the money could be used by the province. In effect, the money is simply used in the Consolidated Revenue Fund for the purposes of the province, and that is the reason for the amendment—to regularize what all governments have done for many years.

Sections 1 and 2 approved.

On Section 3:

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On Section 3, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) tell us what would be the definition of an “abandoned farm” or “abandoned parcel of land”?

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): One that is abandoned.

MR. OLIVER: But for how long?

HON. MR. FROST: Well, the situation which is attempted to be dealt with by this provision is that years ago under the old Act,—it was under the Settlers Act, I think, not the Northern Development Act,—there were advances made to settlers and the lands have been abandoned; they have gone to work in the mines or war industries or somewhere else, and the result is these lands have in effect been abandoned for years, and there is no possibility of collection. It is only a question of trying to get these lands back into circulation again. There is no use leaving them the way they are.

The Northern Development Act did not contain provisions to deal with such situations.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I believe that there are certain amendments under consideration, and would ask that this Act be held until the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has had an opportunity to place those before the Legislature.

THE TRAINING SCHOOLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 80th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 106, An Act to amend the Training Schools Act, 1939.

Sections 1 to 4 inclusive, approved.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): Before this bill is reported, I just want to say a word. We are given many occasions by the Government to criticize a measure introduced, but I want to take advantage of this particular occasion to commend the Government and the hon. Minister concerned (Mr. Dunbar) on the step he has taken. It is certainly one in the right direction. I rise because there is in my riding one of the very important training schools which are doing such good work in the province and without too much complaining. I am speaking of the training school at Alfred.

We have there a school that has been built to the cost of many hundreds of thousands of dollars, I believe $600,000 has been spent privately on that school and not enough comes from the revenue to even pay the interest on that amount.

Most of the teachers in that school, caretakers and so on, are working really without any adequate salary. They are working for a higher motive than material gain, and therefore on that account I believe their work is to be praised and most satisfactory. The result, as will be testified to by all those who know something of the Alfred school, is something wonderful. The results they obtain there are remarkable.

This is a wonderful work of the Government which stands out in importance above many others upon which a great deal of discussion has been had in this House and to which a lot of attention has been given in our newspapers and so on.

These schools are redeeming part of the youth of this country, teaching them to become good citizens where they had, on account of certain circumstances of their birth and of their up-bringing, started on a rather downward path. I am speaking of this one because I know it best as a sample of what is being done in other schools of a similar kind in the Province of Ontario.

I am not saying this because it happens to be under the care of a religious order, because I know I do not want to deprecate the comparisons, generally, I do not want to deprecate what is being done by laymen in such institutions as Galt and others, where work is done of the same kind with as much devotion and as much affection for the redemption of the wayward youth of this province, as is being done at Alfred, but I cannot express too strongly what is being done there.

There is an important principle also involved in this. A government has no right to impoverish anyone who is doing a work which is a duty or care of a government. These men in Alfred are doing it through devotion and a higher conception of citizenship, and I believe the Government has no right to take advantage of such sentiments, to hamper or impoverish them on account of their doing that particular work. That is why I wish to commend the hon. Minister of this department (Mr. Dunbar) in doing what he is doing by means of this bill. He has gone into it fully, not piece-meal. He has increased by 50 per cent. the contribution of the province and the contribution of the municipalities to the work which is being done. So, I take this opportunity to commend him for that work, and call to his attention my purpose in rising in this House, which was to call the attention of my colleagues in this House to this most important work.

Of course, there are millions of dollars in these bills we are going to be called upon to discuss, hydro, electricity, industrial necessities and so on, but that is nothing, Mr. Speaker, compared to the redemption of our youth. As this province will grow in population, the problem will increase 100 fold and again I say of the future, all the successors of the present hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) will have to do, will be simply to follow in his footsteps and increase the contributions of this province and the municipalities as the need arises.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Reform Institutions):
This is very nice, indeed, of the hon. member from Prescott (Mr. Belanger) to mention the work being done at different training schools throughout the province.

You know, if I rise in the House to say something regarding the good work I think our staff is accomplishing, I am accused of being "pompous." I have been in the past. Some person said I was very pompous in that way.

However, I want to join with the hon. member (Mr. Belanger) in his word of praise for the work which has been carried on at the school at Alfred. It is wonderful work which is being done in that school. No doubt he is more aware of that than I would be. As to visitors coming from other countries and visiting Alfred school; one lady from Australia stated in the Ottawa paper that she thought the teachers in the Alfred school were doing a better job of teaching the boys than they were in our other schools. That was published in the Ottawa Journal, and I am sure we will try and improve ours if such is the case.

I might mention the wonderful work that has been carried on in St. John's school in Toronto and in St. Mary's School for Girls. The same with the work we have been endeavouring to do with our other training schools, carried on more directly under our department. So long as we have juvenile schools, and we have these institutions, such as you have at Alfred and at Bowmanville and the girls' school at Cobourg, you will find the odd boy and girl escaping. There might be some little incident which might not look well in print or might not sound well over the radio, but they are only "kids" growing up. Why should we be saying that so many boys escaped tonight, two or three, as the case might be, from Alfred school or any other school? They are always captured again, and brought back and continue with their training. The same with our girls' school at Bowmanville. We might have two or three girls go out the door that is not locked, and skip out through the fence during the day, and it might take an hour or two finding them, but that is not saying, if we have the odd instance of that, we are going to make this a closed institution, and build a wire fence around it. Never while I am the Minister of Reform Institutions in charge of the training schools. Because we might have a few disobey orders, and not fit in with the training, we are not going to punish the balance of the school.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): I beg to take advantage of the fact that we are in committee. There is one particular thing I want to bring to the attention of the Minister. In the Alfred school we have prepared quite a number of those boys to pass the entrance examination, which they did with some success. Unfortunately, perhaps eight or ten of these who would be ready to take high school work would be advanced if they were able to hire a teacher who would be able to do high school work. The present teacher doing entrance work, with the amount of work he has, cannot possibly at the same time do the high school work. They are called ninth and tenth grades.

I think some provision should be made because this is an exceptional case, and I think some special provision should be made so that these boys who are doing so well in getting an education, having passed their entrance examination and ready to take high school work, should be afforded the opportunity to take high school work right there where they are taken care of. Some have been classified for an insane institution for the young but unfortunately these institutions have no place for them and these people in the school have to take care of these cases. There are 4 or 5 cases at Alfred. That shows how the problem is more complicated than we generally think, and I am calling the attention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew) to these particular cases, especially those boys who can do high school work but are deprived of it because we have no teachers at the present time available.

Bill No. 106 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do now rise and report certain bills without amendment and one bill with amendment.

Motion approved.

The House resumes; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report certain bills without amendment and one bill with amendment and moves that the report be adopted.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 82nd Order.

RESPECTING THE PROVISION OF SERVICES BY THE PROVINCE AND MUNICIPALITIES TO PER-SONS OCCUPYING DOMINION
CROWN LANDS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 82nd Order; second reading of Bill No. 108, An Act respecting the Provision of Services by the Province and Municipalities to Persons Occupying Dominion Crown Lands. Mr. Drew.

HON. MR. DREW: I move second reading of Bill No. 108, An Act respecting the Provision of Services by the Province and Municipalities to Persons Occupying Dominion Crown Lands.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

MR. T. KELSO CREIGHTON (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I ask your permission to speak briefly in connection with the Act.

I would like to commend the Government for the introduction of this legislation, and as I regard it as a very important act, to urge its adoption by the House. I do so because I think the principles involved are sound, and particularly because I have a special interest in it, as I am satisfied it will correct the evils of a situation which exists perhaps in a more aggravated form in the County of Ontario, and particularly in that part of the county which I have the honour to represent in this House.

Our system of local government which we have developed over a century or longer is a very nicely-balanced system, constantly revised and adjusted to meet new conditions; its fabric interwoven with rights and obligations almost entirely within the jurisdiction of this House, and of the municipalities whose authority depends upon the jurisdiction of this House.

I crave the attention of the House while I explain the situation.

During the war years we expected a certain amount of this type of dislocation as part of our war effort. What this amounted to, in this particular case, is, in a few words, this: In Pickering Township, in 1942, the Crown in right of the Dominion established a very important munition plant. The first dislocation was to take a very large part of that township out of the ordinary assessment roll. It was a very large plant which was erected, and they took 3,000 acres, and that amounted to over 5 per cent. of the total assessable area of the Township of Pickering. That, in itself, is a very serious dislocation. The second dislocation—a more serious one still—was they imported into the township a great number of people and to meet the needs of that population erected 600 houses, which brought a population of between 2,000 and 3,000 people into a rural township having a population of its own of only about 7,200 people, and it added one third to the population. This means this rural township, and the county of which it forms a part, had to take the role of foster parent to this new community, a community which had no economic relation whatever to the township in which it was situated. It was in no sense a part of the township.

That raised a number of problems, which are specifically mentioned in the Act. For example, school attendance, education of the children, and the policing of the community. Those problems were adjusted on a somewhat temporary or almost makeshift basis, but they have been adjusted, but certain others have not been. There is, for instance, the question of the administration of justice and in this particular case the county was obliged to absorb our $10,000 of municipal accounts for the administration of justice arising out of an unfortunate coincidence of events. During a period of some 4 years, the county and township joined in an expense of $2,600 and more in connection with hospitalization. There was an item, somewhat smaller, of about $2,400 for tubercular after-care, that is, after-care of patients treated in sanatoria. There are other items. I do not propose to take up the time of the House to cite all statistics. We considered a few moments ago in this House, an Act respecting charges to municipalities relating to boys and young people committed to reform institutions, is a form of municipal responsibility. There are cases in juvenile courts, where children were made wards of the society and cost of maintenance is charged to the municipality. There are a great number of those things, as hon. members of the House well know. There is no semblance of logic or justice in the situation.

To keep the municipality under compulsion of furnishing these services is to compel a rural municipality, in effect, to subsidize a housing township. The housing area has no relationship to its own housing problems, because it is just a rural area. It is a method of permitting agencies of the Crown which own these houses, or administer them for the Crown, in the right of the Dominion, to apply all the revenue received from these houses in reduction of its capital investment, and do this at the expense of the small municipality which has to bear a substantial part of its cost. This, of course, is in no sense to be blamed upon the inhabitants of the communities themselves, because they, like the township, are victims. They have been deprived of the ordinary privileges of local government. They have no local council; they cannot vote for anybody to administer their affairs. They are entitled to better treatment. They were brought in for the purpose of serving in this important munitions plant, and they did a very good war job, and many of them have not been able to locate elsewhere. The problem still remains of restoring these people to the social and economic life of a community with full enjoyment of rights and privileges.

This bill seems to me to be an important step in that direction. Some intimation has already been given, I believe, that it will be effective for the purpose. There is more work to be done, and it almost entirely relates to the local-government bill and will be of continuing interest of this House.

I have much pleasure in supporting the bill, and urging its adoption.

MR. A. BELANGER (Prescott): There is no doubt at all that our Government here was confronted with a real problem, which has been very well explained by the previous speaker (Mr. Creighton). The problem is this: that municipalities are being called upon to give services to people who give no return for them, while other ratepayers of the municipality are paying for the services.

This problem is not new in a way. In Ottawa all government property is exempt from taxation, but they compensate through an agreement with the municipality. There is compensation by subsidy, which is granted to the City of Ottawa, and we enjoy in Ottawa the municipal services because they are being paid for by the owner of these properties, which is the Ottawa Government. It must have been very difficult and must have caused a lot of headaches to the hon. members of our Government to find a solution for it.

On the one hand, there are those people who are receiving municipal services, school services, etc. and on the other hand we have those who are paying and, of course, have got to pay for the increased costs due to this new population who, being lessees of the Government are exempted from paying any taxes as a matter of law.

So we on this side of the House—and I believe my colleagues think the same as myself—represent this province and, therefore, we have a duty towards the municipalities of Ontario, and I think we must give our aid to the solution of this problem.

Consider the question of education, for instance, in Ottawa, for those who lease properties. In their lease the Dominion Government has to pay for their educational services. It is part of the lease. A somewhat similar way must be found throughout the province for those who occupy leased properties from the provincial government and thereby, through a logical working of the law, happen to be exempt from municipal taxation. I think the Government has one way—and I have no other way to suggest—to force a solution of the question; let the lessees of the Dominion Government see to it that their lessors make an arrangement with the municipalities to pay for the services which their lessees enjoy or let there be a general arrangement. I think if the whole question is approached in a co-operative spirit by this Government and the government at Ottawa, there will be no difficulty at all in arriving at a suitable arrangement which might cover all the municipalities in this province who find themselves in that predicament.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, I, for one, will certainly support this bill. I think it is our duty, as hon. members of this provincial House, to see that the province comes into its own and the municipalities of this province should have the provincial government to which to look to for their powers and privileges, and for the right to uphold them, and see they are getting a proper return.

There is a domestic principle involved, by which everyone should be treated in the same way. This is a principle which, on some other occasion, I may have to invoke more strenuously. I believe in this great domestic principle that everybody should be treated equally, and, therefore, there is no reason why people who get municipal or provincial services in any district should not pay for them.

Mr. Speaker, that is why I support this bill.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, before the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) speaks, may I say to the House that this proposed legislation sets out a condition of affairs which calls for redress on the one hand, and compensation on the other. I think that is generally agreed upon by the hon. members of the House, and was well set out by my hon. friend from Prescott (Mr. Belanger), and my hon. friend from Ontario (Mr. Creighton).

May I be permitted to ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew)—so that he can answer when he speaks—what is the scope of the problem which we are seeking to attack in this bill? Does it refer primarily and solely to this condition which has arisen in places such as Ajax and Malton and some of the others, or are we going into the whole field? In reading the bill, one would be inclined to believe that the bill was passed, having in mind such Dominion Government property as post offices, customs buildings, and other Dominion property of that character.

I think, Mr. Speaker, it would be well to have that information before the House, if the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) will give us the magnitude of the problem, and the number of communities which would be affected, and the general scope that the bill envisages.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, I just want to add a few words. In my experience during the war period, from being in public office, may I say we have had many dealings with the Federal and Provincial Government. When we took over the military camp, it was on the basis of receiving it for a very nominal fee, and we were told that revenue accruing from the rental of this entire camp would, of course, have to be turned over to the Federal Government. You may be sure we made sure that we charged a rental by which we would be compensated for the services rendered. I think the longer our people occupy this camp, the more opportunity we have of getting back every dollar invested by the municipality.

This, however, is highly debatable, and I believe I could take either side of this question and make a fair job of it, but I will go on record as supporting this bill because the taxpayers have too many obligations as it is at the present time. If there is any money to be returned to these people, let them get it. As far as I am concerned, I am supporting the Government on this bill.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I am not going to speak on the bill, but since the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is going to speak, I wonder if he would deal with this aspect of the question; what effect would this legislation have on the proposal of the Federal Government, providing an agreement can be reached, to erect 4,000 homes in the city of Toronto or its environs? I would like to know, Mr. Speaker, just what bearing this legislation has on any developments which may take place in connection with the proposed 4,000 new homes.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will deal with the various points which have been raised, and then put forward certain comments on this bill which I think it would be well to have on the record, not only for the purpose of this discussion, but so that the reason for this bill may be clearly understood by the municipalities, as well as by the hon. members of this Legislature.

In the first place, may I say that this bill will have no effect, of which I am aware, in regard to the proposal of Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, concerning the 4,000 homes, for the reason that the proposal was quite meaningless when it was brought forward, so I can say quite definitely this bill will have no effect on it. I will repeat what I have already said, that it was no new proposal; it was something produced out of the hat for a particular occasion, and represented no change in the proposals which had been before this and other governments for a great many months.

Referring to the point raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver): I think there is a matter there which should be very carefully considered, and in replying to the point he has raised today, I would like to answer a question he asked earlier in regard to this same matter. At the time this bill was given first reading, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) asked if we had any idea how many pupils would be affected by it. I did not have the figures before me at that time. I have since checked our records, and I find the number of pupils affected by this bill to be approximately 3,000.

This bill is not directed to post offices or other long-settled establishments of that kind. It is primarily directed to the situation arising out of the devices employed during the war years, which created a special type of community in close proximity to war production of different kinds. So far as I am aware, similar situations have not arisen in the past. On this occasion with some new types of production, for obvious reasons, it was highly desirable that a plant should be located well away from large-settled communities, and it became necessary not only to erect the plant, but also to create new housing in the area, because the places chosen were actually rural areas.

In his very able, accurate and clear exposition of the situation at Ajax, the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Creighton) put his finger on the situation which has arisen. At that particular location, a filling plant for shells was created. It was a very large plant. Fortunately, due to careful supervision of that plant, any large disaster was avoided, although there were certain minor accidents, but at all times there was a condition which would have presented extremely serious possibilities, if the plant had been located in the centre of a large community. Doubtless there are hon. members in this Legislature now who recall, as I do, the disaster in London during the first world war, when a plant similar to this blew up on the outskirts of London and killed a very large number of people. I happened to be in London at the time, and I am sure that everyone who recalls that incident, or has read of it, and the very large death toll, will realize why it was desirable to place these plants outside of large, concentrated communities.

An increasing number of homes were necessarily provided in that area. One may well recognize that there were dangers in that area, as well. That danger has passed; the plant is no longer being used for the purpose of manufacturing and handling explosives on a large scale, and now the problem is what is to be done with the community which was created for that particular purpose?

Because of the general demand for homes, and the reasonably productive nature of the buildings, they have been constantly filled since the end of the war.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that this problem is not confined to the one area at Ajax.

At Malton, for another reason, it was obviously necessary that the great plant put up for the construction of heavy bombers, required large land areas for these airport facilities, which would not be available except well out in the country. There again a large community grew up in what had been strictly an agricultural area, spreading out from what had been a very small village at that point.

The use of that plant for the construction of aircraft has continued, but naturally not on the same scale, and again there is a community of residences fully occupied, erected on Crown lands, which had to become Crown lands because of the reasons I have mentioned.

As the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville (Mr. Davies) knows, there is a special situation there, not on the same comparable scale, but, nevertheless, presenting some of these very problems. And there are many places where similar situations, on different scales, have arisen.

In the case of Malton, there was great difficulty in connection with the services which were required, but, after extended negotiations, an agreement was reached in regard to the cost of education, which was regarded at the time as reasonably satisfactory, particularly having regard to the very large grants for education from the Provincial Government in such areas.

The arrangements in regard to other services are not equally satisfactory. In the case of Ajax, for reasons which I need not mention now—the fact is I do not know what the reasons really are—it has not been possible to reach any satisfactory arrangement with the departments of government affected at Ottawa. In that case the problem is primarily one concerning the local municipality, because, as the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Creighton) has pointed out, the local municipality has been called upon to furnish a number of essential services in that community, for which it has not been possible to obtain even the minimum figures which were called for to meet the expenses to which the municipal authorities were put.

Another point I would like to mention, which was very well put forward by the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Creighton), was that in this province for more than a century we have had a very highly-developed municipal system, with well-adjusted balances, and with very clearly-defined powers conferred under the Municipal Act. The general structure of our present municipal system was in existence some time before Confederation, in 1867, and without any measure of invidious comparison, I think it is safe to say that because of our long experience in municipal administration, we have the most highly-developed municipal system in Canada.

This new situation which has resulted from these special circumstances, which have already been pointed out, and which I have mentioned, upset that balance and created a community area where services of this kind are very definitely required, but for which, under any existing law, it is impossible for the municipality to levy any tax, because there has been no power conferred upon them to make assessments against that land.

The position of the Ontario Government in presenting this bill to the Legislature is, if the Dominion Government insists upon keeping these areas as segregated areas, and taking the revenue from the buildings which have been erected upon those areas, that they must do one of two things; either make some arrangement which will furnish the municipality with funds for the purpose of carrying out these services, or assuming the full responsibility for the things which are done in those areas. That seems to be the only fair way of dealing with the problem. It is their choice, not ours. It is open to them either to negotiate with the municipal authorities, and arrive at a settled figure by agreement, which shall be adequate for the purpose of furnishing these extremely important services, or make an agreement under section 2 of the bill, and submit the property in question to assessment and taxation in the ordinary way.

That simply means that Ajax or Malton or any of the other similar areas throughout the province, and the Dominion Government, may enter into a simple agreement, providing that the municipalities may assess the land in the same way they would assess any other land in the community, and may levy a tax against that land for the purpose of paying for the services rendered.

It seems to me that would be the most desirable way of dealing with it, because it would adjust itself from year to year in precisely the same way that taxation is adjusted to meet the requirements in any given case.

If, for any reason, they do not care to make that arrangement, they, of course, may make an agreement to pay a bulk sum to cover all those important services such as education, fire protection, police protection, planning, highways, sewage, garbage disposal, public health and so on, those tremendously important, vital and necessary local services.

There is another feature of this Act which I did not point out on first reading, but which I think should be in the minds of hon. members when they deal with this bill.

If the Dominion Government itself chooses to assume full responsibility for these services, then the Ontario Government does not withhold from the Dominion Government the same assistance it would give to any municipality that was providing those services.

You will note that under Section 4 it is provided that if an area is excluded by Order-in-Council, as the result of the Dominion Government deciding to assume full responsibility for an area, both as to services, as well as to the collection of revenue, then the Ontario Government may provide that the Dominion Government, or as it is expressed in the Act, "His Majesty, in the right of Canada," may receive the same grants or financial assistance or other assistance as would be furnished in relation to a similar area if it were under the ordinary control of any municipality.

That means, as an illustration, that if the Dominion Government decided to administer the Ajax property as a small crown colony—and that is really what it amounts to—and provide educational, health, fire, police and other services in the area, then the Provincial Government, if those were being carried out in the ordinary way, would pay to the Dominion Government in relation to education and all these other services precisely the same proportionate amount in contributions as they would in any other case.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that this provision is so eminently fair that hon. members may well feel that we have gone the very limit in providing for any possible contingency.

I assure you that it is not put forward in the way of a threat, nor is it a statute designed simply to be a legal club. It is, as we see it, the only practical way of dealing with a situation with which neither the provincial authorities nor the municipal authorities had at any time been confronted in the past. It will offer to the Dominion Government that simple choice, either by agreement you provide the funds that are necessary for the services that are required in this area, or you yourself provide those services by whatever means you see fit.

The Act provides if they do decide to furnish funds for these services, they may do that in one of two ways; either provide it by a bulk payment or by entering into an agreement which will submit this area to assessment and the taxation which would result from that assessment.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, from the discussion here today, we all realize the far-reaching implications of this Act.

I wonder if we fully understand what would happen if the Dominion Government "sat tight," as it were, and refused to do anything? What would happen to the people residing in the areas affected?

I would like to ask four questions of the hon. Minister (Mr. Drew).

(1) If this Act is applied, will it mean that families in Crown housing developments will be without educational services, fire and police protection?

(2) Will it mean that old-age pensions and mothers' allowances will cease to be paid to residents entitled to them?

(3) In case the Dominion and the province are unable to reach an agreement, is any means provided by which the residents can provide police and fire protection for themselves? Under the authority of what act can they proceed to do so?

(4) Has consideration been given as to whether the Act is constitutional?

That is, has the province the right to say: "We are going to discard the education of our people"? Education was one of the subjects given to the province by the British North America Act. Have we the right to say we will throw aside that provision as regards these areas to which this bill refers?

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, with the permission of the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), I might add a question I have in mind, so that the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) might answer them together. Did the Government make any attempt to bring together the affected municipalities with federal authorities, in an effort to find a solution? That is, not a Dominion-Provincial affair but on a limited scale, on a limited subject, was any attempt made?

HON. MR. DREW: I assure the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that we have neither attempted, nor do we intend to become the nursemaid for the Dominion Government. To carry that further, after all, these municipalities have these areas within their jurisdiction, and it is not for us to tell the Dominion Government what it is going to do. We have made continued representations to the Dominion Government in regard to this situation, and it is only because of the complete inability of this Government to get any results from those representations that this bill is now before the Legislature.

As to the questions that have been asked, certainly the introduction of this bill does not mean an end of the services, nor does it mean an end to the payments that are provided. I thought that I had made it abundantly clear that the choice is there. Either the Dominion Government assumes the responsibility or they permit the municipalities to carry out the ordinary functions of a municipality and receive the money for carrying out those functions.

As far as that is concerned, let me put it this way, the Dominion Government has assumed the responsibility—and I said on first reading that I was not questioning at this stage the wisdom or otherwise of the course they have followed—of creating these separate Crown areas within municipal areas under their wartime powers, and by that device have created areas over which this Provincial Government and the municipalities created by this Government have no power whatever.

I fail to see how any hon. member of this Legislature can suggest that if the Dominion Government assumes the responsibility for segregating these areas from any ordinary municipal authority, that either this Government or the municipal authority should be charged with the responsibility for carrying out the services in those areas, and I assure hon. members that we do not intend to do so.

As to the question of education and as this being constitutional, may I say, in spite of anything that may be suggested along this line, this Government has never claimed omniscience, or has it ever claimed that in the drafting of bills there may not be questions arise as to the wording of Acts or otherwise. When the time comes that no human errors can creep into these things, we will certainly have gone far beyond the present stage of human development.

As to the question of whether we have considered the constitutional aspect; may I say that this Government introduces no bill in this Legislature without first considering the constitutional aspects, and we would not be placing this bill before this Legislature were we not perfectly sure that this bill is constitutionally sound.

As to education; we supervise education as a Government. Education is a provincial responsibility. If under some emergency powers or unusual powers created by war, the Dominion Government sets aside land which remains in the Crown in the right of the Dominion Government, then obviously this Provincial Government has no constitutional authority over that area, and the only way we can perform the services which the people want in that area is if the Dominion Government will agree to let us perform those services, and the only way we can do it, from the practical point of view, is that they provide in the usual way that the municipalities which carry out the actual details of the service be able to obtain money in the usual way.

I hope that explains the situation, whether or not it satisfies the hon. member (Mr. Grummett).

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, I do not wish the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) to think I am overly critical. I was not looking at it from a critical angle whatsoever, I was just wondering what was going to happen to those areas if the Dominion Government "sat tight" as I said before and did nothing.

HON. MR. DREW: I can only say that I should think it would be unthinkable that the Dominion Government would say, with this choice before them: "We are going to assume the responsibility," and then do nothing. I find it difficult to believe, no matter how critical I might be of the course they follow on some occasions, that with a very reasonable choice of this kind before them they would say: "We are going to retain the control over this area, but we are going to do nothing for the people who pay rent to us for the property we own."

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) a question which I think is closely associated with this problem.

Is not this a problem somewhat similar to that of the mining municipalities? The Federal Government is taking all the revenue and the municipalities are providing all the services. Why should we not have a bill segregating the mining municipalities?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: No, the situation is not similar. Its net result may have some apparent similarities, but the situation is not at all similar. Those very vigorous mining communities are well organized municipalities under our municipal law. That is the very point. These areas are not under our municipal law.

MR. TAYLOR: But still, they get the revenue.

HON. MR. DREW: There may be certain similarities in the net result.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 85th Order.

ATHLETICS CONTROL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 85th Order, second reading of Bill No. 113, An Act to amend the Athletics Control Act, 1947. Mr. Frost.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Frost, I move second reading of Bill No. 113, An Act to amend the Athletics Control Act, 1947.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Before you put the question, may I say to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew): I understood that up until this year grants were given for the promotion of amateur sport, that is, speaking in general terms, and this Act does not provide for them. There is no way in which grants may be paid under this Act.

HON. MR. DREW: It was my intention to enlarge upon the effect of this bill.

This bill does not change the situation in regard to the financial support offered by the Government for the recreational activities in the various areas where those facilities have been organized.

MR. OLIVER: If my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) will permit me, you have particular reference to recreational facilities in conjunction with the educational system, schools and so forth, have you not?

HON. MR. DREW: No, not in the schools. Under the Department of Education, there is a Recreation and Physical Education Branch under a director, and as part of that work there is provision for the setting up of local groups. The Department of Education pays for the services of the secretary-organizer of those local groups who develop recreational and physical education activities in the different communities. There will, as a matter of fact, week after next, be a provincial conference of the communities in Oshawa, where a very large number of these communities will be represented in the annual conference dealing with these activities.

Those activities are within the very wording of the bill now under consideration in its original form, and as I explained in the October session, there were duplications of services which there was no necessity to carry forward.

I might explain now what the effect of this is. This will set aside in a separate fund the revenues from professional sports for which a percentage is charged, under the regulations laid down. From that fund, after paying the administrative expenses of the commissioner and his assistants, the remaining amount will be accumulated to be paid out under the terms of this Act upon the direction of the Minister of Education, for the purpose of any programme of athletics or physical education, including recreation for crippled children under 19 years of age. I think that will answer the question put by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and I think he will see that this fund still remains entirely available for the same purposes, but, in this case, upon the recommendation of the Minister of Education.

The reason for the amendment, and for the education of crippled children, has a direct relationship to a matter which has been raised in this Legislature on previous occasions. I thought I should wait until this bill was under consideration before dealing with the suggestions, which have been made.

It has been suggested by more than one hon. member, that there be a survey of the crippled children in this province, and that efforts be made to provide educational facilities for those crippled children, such as has been developed so successfully at Woodedden, where highly advanced instruction is given, which is a model by which this instructional work may be carried out in their homes and their own communities, when they return.

The very first of these provisions is that the first, and most important charge on the moneys collected from professional sports shall be for the care of crippled children, and we have plans which I did not feel it was appropriate to explain until the Act was before the Legislature.

There has been a complete survey of the crippled children of the province carried out by the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, with the necessary assistance from the Ontario Department of Health. We know where the crippled children are, and the nature of the treatments they require, which will be related to the treatments which will be available.

Tremendous advances have taken place during the war years in the treatment of paralysis and simpler ailments, even of very long standing. As so often happens, even with all the horrors of war, the concentration of skilled efforts in meeting these conditions, has brought about tremendous advances in civilian life in dealing with similar disabilities.

May I, Mr. Speaker, point out that a very vigorous and active gentleman, well known to the hon. members of this Legislature, and I think to the province at large—and perhaps more particularly at the present time—has assumed the provincial presidency of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. I refer to Major Conn Smythe. He is bringing to the activities of that Society the same sort of energetic work and effort which produced the National Hockey League championship over the week-end.

The care of crippled children has been a great concern of his for some years, and he has already brought to his support voluntary offers on a scale never before attempted.

I have explained on an earlier occasion that, as a result of representations made to us by Major Smythe and his committee, the Ontario Government has set aside for a school and recreational centre for crippled children an area of land valued at $150,000 on the eastern outskirts of the city, and there, through special arrangement made by the president of that Society, the most modern institution of its kind on the North American continent will be erected with funds now available, just as soon as they can proceed with the construction. That will take care of central Ontario.

Woodedden, outside of London, will take care of western Ontario, and at the present time a group is in eastern Ontario seeking a site for the erection of a third institution of similar nature for crippled children, so that the whole of southern Ontario will be covered in that way.

Arrangements have been made with the Society for Crippled Children, which will make available from these funds—those now accumulated and those which will be received in the years ahead—an adequate amount for them to proceed with this work, so that every crippled child in the Province of Ontario will be able to spend three weeks each year at these institutions, where they will get direct instruction and guidance, with recreational facilities as well, and be able to carry back to their own homes the instructional training which can be carried on throughout the whole year.

I hope the hon. members will agree this is a great advance in tackling this important problem of crippled children, and applying to their assistance all the accumulated experience gained in the war years in dealing with the disabilities of war.

As far as northern Ontario is concerned; in due course, when it has been possible to carry this out, the plan will be extended, but in the meantime it is hoped it will be possible to work out a plan for northern Ontario, in conjunction with those which will be constructed at these three strategic points I have mentioned.

To such an extent as the revenues from professional sports become in excess of the amount required for that purpose, it can be applied, under section 4 of the Act, for any other programme of athletics or physical education. That is part of the Act, and I believe the hon. members will agree that those who go to any professional sporting activity, whether they be spectacles, such as hockey or professional boxing, or anything of that kind, will know that from the money they pay there will be some contribution to this fund, and will feel there could be no particular purpose to which they would more gladly see that money go.

Perhaps I should mention on this occasion the fact that the gentleman who has been the Commissioner under this Act has won rather signal honours over this past week-end, which it would not be inappropriate to mention. Mr. Syl Apps, as hon. members of the Legislature know, has for some time been the Athletic Commissioner referred to in this Act. He has brought to this position an unsullied reputation connected with the very finest of things in sport, and to an extent that is really remarkable he has gone to different parts of the province speaking to groups of young men and young women and helping to organize these very recreational activities, which I have mentioned, under the Department of Education. Whether he is able to carry forward this work when he takes on his new civilian occupation, I am not able to say at the moment, but whether he does or not, I want to say that Mr. Syl Apps has contributed tremendously to the advancement of good sport in this province, not only in the field of hockey, but in the other contacts I have mentioned.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: I feel sure that every hon. member of this Legislature who loves good sport—and I am sure that includes every one of us—was thrilled by the fact that over the week-end, in completing his last regular season in competitive hockey, he achieved that objective of all hockey players, scoring 200 goals with the teams with which he has played during these past years.

I want to say that he represents the kind of thing we want to develop in sport. As captain of the Maple Leaf hockey team, he has developed a spirit of sportsmanship which displayed itself in more than one way in the game last night in Detroit, which was the final game of the season. I want to mention this, because it is part of the efforts of this Act to create sporting activities of that kind.

There were two things which happened in the game last night in Detroit, which should attract the attention of everyone who believes that the extending of a real sporting spirit is a very useful component of our social contacts in our daily life.

First, and very important, was the ovation given to Mr. Apps, an ovation on that occasion which could hardly have been surpassed by his own supporters here in Toronto. That, I think, is the kind of spirit in sport we want amongst those who watch as well as amongst those who play.

Another example of the kind of sport this Act seeks to develop was to be found when that very excellent young Canadian, Harry Watson—who, after all, has every reason to want to score goals himself—when he had a clear opportunity to score a goal, passed the puck to Mr. Apps so that Apps would have the opportunity of attaining that total they all want.

These are the things we want to encourage and for which this Act is designed, and I feel sure that those who are playing the games and those who pay money to see the games will welcome the knowledge that a portion of the money they pay will be so utilized that the crippled children of this province will have opportunities for recreation and highly-developed training, such as they have never had before.

AID TO HOSPITALS

HON. RUSSELL T. KELLEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Blackwell, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled An Act to provide for greater aid to public hospitals, and that the same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, in response to the question directed by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), I think that the bill which I just introduced, and the companion bill introduced by the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley), deserve rather an extended explanation.

The hospital problem in Ontario has assumed critical proportions. Over the years general hospitals have sprung up across the province altogether as the result of local effort, but without any real relationship to the municipal system. The municipalities acquired a responsibility because of the indigent problem which became very much magnified during the depression years. Many years ago the then Government fixed a rate to be paid by municipalities which had little if any relationship to the actual hospital cost. Subsequently, the province paid a grant to each hospital as a contribution to the indigent expense.

When the problem came to this Government, hospitals were being faced with deficits. The indigent payment on the part of the province and municipalities, amounting to $2.35, was totally inadequate. A great many municipalities had recognized this and had agreed to assume hospital deficits. The result was that they paid not only the statutory indigent payment, but also over and above that hospital deficits. These deficits began to assume very large proportions and created a very large municipal problem. The demand for hospital accommodation had risen to a point where there was a very great shortage of beds and there was no orderly way in which to provide any Governmental contribution.

In considering the maintenance problem, the Government has felt that it was wise that any contribution made by the Provincial Government should not be to indigents alone. It was felt that it was just as important to attempt to bring down the cost to the paying patient. As a result, last year the following schedule was adopted:—

(1) That each Class A hospital should be eligible for a grant of $1 per day for every public ward bed whether occupied or not.

(2) Every Class B hospital would be eligible for a grant of 75 cents a day for every public ward bed.

(3) Class C hospitals and lower would be eligible for grants of 60 cents a day for every public ward bed.

(4) —and this is important—in addition to the foregoing, (a) the Government would make grants of $1,000 per bed on new constructions in general hospitals; (b) $2,000 per bed in convalescent or chronic hospitals.

The above was the first effort made by any Ontario Government to meet the hospital problem on an orderly basis. This Government also set up a hospital committee under the chairmanship of the Inspector of Hospitals to make a complete review of the situation. The book-keeping systems of the hospitals were found to be in chaotic condition and, accordingly, better accounting methods were instituted, with the result that we now have a clearer view of the whole problem.

In the meantime, as I have stated, many of the municipalities have recognized the plight of hospitals to the extent of paying their deficits. This creates a burden on these municipalities which is unfair. The result is that many of the municipalities have urged the province to assume the amusement tax, in event of the Dominion Government vacating the field, for the purpose of raising revenues to offset the cost of hospital and social services, thus providing benefit to the municipalities. After a review of the situation, it is the opinion of the Government that all of the proceeds of an amusement tax would be required for hospitals, and therefore the Government has decided to introduce this Act providing for a tax on amusements in order to aid hospitals, to go into effect on proclamation, which will not be until the Dominion Government vacates the field. I shall refer to this in a moment.

The whole of the proceeds of this tax will be placed in a separate fund and will not go as other revenues in the ordinary course in the Consolidated Revenue Fund. The same will be placed in a Hospital Aid Fund Account. Particulars of this are outlined in The Hospitals Aid Act, which will be introduced today. I may say that it is the Government's intention to continue the assistance which it is presently giving from the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the Province and the amount of such assistance will be deposited in the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

The following are the particulars of the scheme:—

1. The Government will continue to pay the amount from the Consolidated Revenue Fund which it is presently paying in aid of public ward beds. There will therefore be paid from the Consolidated Revenue Fund this year the sum of $2,300,000, and the same will be placed to the credit of the Hospital Aid Fund Account.

2. The Government will continue to pay from the Consolidated Revenue Fund the capital grants of $1,000 a bed for every public ward bed, and $2,000 a bed for every chronic or convalescent bed. This amount will also be paid into the Hospital Aid Fund Account and will be disbursed from there. This year the sum of $1,150,000 is being appropriated, and will be paid from the Consolidated Revenue Fund into the Hospital Aid Fund.

3. From the fund into which the proceeds of the Hospital Tax will be deposited, together with the contributions from the Consolidated Revenue Fund above mentioned, the following will be paid to the hospitals of Ontario:—

- (a) The capital grants above mentioned which will be covered entirely by a Government contribution; (b) the maintenance grants payable to all hospitals in grades A, B, C, D, E, F, and G shall be computed by applying the percentage of 235 per cent. to the grant authorized to be paid to each of such hospitals in the calendar year 1947. This in effect means that a hospital entitled to a grant of $1 per day for every public ward bed will receive $2.35; a hospital entitled to receive 75 cents will receive $1.76; every hospital entitled to receive 60 cents will receive $1.41.

4. Hospitals which come into existence this year will be similarly treated. Their grants will be treated on the formula applied in 1947, subject to an increase of 235 per cent.

The balance of the fund, if any, shall yearly be carried forward to the ensuing fiscal year. The balance will be held to equalize yearly payments or to be used as the circumstances from time to time may indicate.

The above provisions will mean that the hospitals of Ontario will receive maintenance grants of $5,400,000 this year in place of $2,200,000 last year. I estimate that Toronto hospitals will receive from the fund about $1,800,000 in place of about $750,000 paid this year.

As far as the municipalities are concerned the above provisions should take the hospitals out of their deficit position and, accordingly, the municipalities will be relieved of the huge deficits with which they are obviously going to be faced. The present contribution by municipalities to the hospitals is not on a satisfactory basis. Obviously some hospitals render services and have expenses over other hospitals. The municipal contribution should be somewhat less than the hospitals will receive from paying public ward patients. We therefore are setting the following rates payable by the municipalities in the following classes of hospitals:—

- (1) To Class A hospitals, $3 per day.
- (2) To Class B hospitals, $2.50 per day.
- (3) To Class C hospitals, $2.25 per day.

The effect of the above plan will be, as stated, to relieve the municipal taxpayer of liability for large hospital deficits and at the same time it will place the hospitals in a position to go ahead with their very important work. It, however, does not remove the need for economy on the part of hospital administration.

A very important feature of the scheme is that it provides assistance for the patient who attempts to pay his or her way. At the present time we have many schemes which people are entering into providing insurance against hospital expenses. One plan alone has over one million subscribers. We feel that this is highly desirable. Every encouragement should be given to the person who makes provision to meet the costs of illness. We think, therefore, there will be general agreement that the assistance we give should be not only on indigent expenses, but to the person who is striving to pay his or her way and fears to be overwhelmed by the high cost of illness.

At the present time the Province of Ontario is levying no amusement tax. All, or practically all, of the other provinces are. In addition, the Dominion is presently levying a 20 per cent. rate in all provinces. At the present time, therefore, Ontario amusements are paying the lowest tax in Canada. It is not our intention to proclaim this Act until the Dominion vacates the field. It is our intention to impose a 20 per cent. tax.

Insofar as the Dominion Government is concerned, the Minister of Finance for Canada has recently announced the intention of the Federal Government to relinquish amusement tax. As a result of this, representations have been made by the municipalities of Ontario to the Dominion authorities urging that Government to vacate the field and concurrently representations have been made to us to enter into the field for hospital and social service purposes in event of the Dominion vacating.

We therefore are introducing this bill, together with a companion bill, The Hospitals Aid Act, in line with representations which were made to us and which, in view of our studies of the whole matter, appear to us to be sound. We at this moment have no intimation from the Dominion Government as to when they may vacate this field. I point out, however, that it is in accordance with their announced policy, and it would appear that the Dominion vacation of this field should not be too far removed. Obviously, our Act cannot be proclaimed until the Dominion vacates the field.

In this connection, the statement of the Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent, Minister of External Affairs, as contained in the press of March 5, 1948, is of interest. Speaking to a delegation of the Trades and Labour Congress, Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent urged the building of convalescent homes to ease the burden on hospitals. He urged the delegates to go back to their own communities, study what might be done in that direction, and "get things started." He pointed out that the great physical obstacle to the establishment of a national health insurance plan was that hospitals across the country were already full. If a plan were instituted with present facilities it would mean that people could not be given what they were being promised. This was exactly the position taken by this province at the Dominion-Provincial Conference.

The fact is that in Ontario, while we are better off for hospital accommodation than any of the provinces, we simply have not the facilities to take care of a national health insurance scheme such as was outlined by the Dominion.

To institute such a plan before the hospitals are taken care of would simply mean that money would be taken from our people for a service we could not perform. The first thing we have to do is to put our hospitals in order financially. With the extension of hospital facilities must come the means with which to maintain and operate them. The Ontario Government's plan is calculated to do both. We are not loaning money to our hospitals, which borrowing simply gets them into trouble. We are giving them money with which to provide more beds. With the commencement of our scheme last year we anticipated an addition of 400 beds to our hospitals. Actually, over 1,000 beds have been added, and a similar number is expected this year. With the addition of beds and with the provision for the sensible and reasonable maintenance of our hospitals, we can look forward to a hospital service second to none anywhere. In view of Rt. Hon. Mr. St. Laurent's statement and the indication given by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Abbott) that the field will be vacated, it is reasonable to suppose that this will be done shortly, upon which the present Act will be proclaimed immediately and the benefits contemplated in The Hospitals Aid Act will come into effect.

I may say that very far-reaching measures have been undertaken by this Government in connection with hospital betterment. We, however, do not think what we have done or what we are going to do is the last word. We constantly aim to improve the situation. This year a Provincial-Municipal conference is being arranged, at which time the whole problem of municipal taxation and sources of revenue will be considered. In the administration of The Hospitals Aid Fund we will have the advantage of the views of the conference.

I can assure you that we are most anxious to arrive at the best possible solution of the hospital problem and to create the best system in existence anywhere for providing for the same.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 27th Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 27th Order, Resuming the Adjourned Debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion for the consideration of the Speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor at the opening of the Session.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak at the tail end of the Speech from the Throne, I want to say at once that my remarks will be brief inasmuch as I have already spoken on this debate.

My primary reason for rising at this time was to make the position of the official opposition clear to the House and to the province on the sub-amendment moved by my hon. friend from South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett).

Before doing that, however, Mr. Speaker, I want to take the opportunity that now presents itself to congratulate those hon. members who have taken part in the Speech from the Throne debate. It has been our privilege in this debate to listen to some hon. members who previously had not spoken in one of the former debates, and it is always gratifying to know that these hon. members have made a contribution to the debate by intimate knowledge which they possess of conditions in their own particular riding. One is forced to meditate sometimes, Mr. Speaker, on the suggestion, both inside and out, that the Speech from the Throne debate should be curtailed somewhat.

From time to time we have heard the suggestion that the Speech from the Throne debate is something of a waste of time, and that the attention of the hon. members could very well be directed to things of greater moment, so to speak. I have always felt, and I think the feeling is generally held by hon. members of this Legislature, that the Speech from the Throne debate, and the budget debate as well, gives the hon. members an opportunity to cover many fields of provincial endeavour and to set out those things that seem to come home to the particular hon. members in either one of those debates.

There has been the suggestion, too, that the speeches on these two full-dress debates, should be limited. I recall one time in this Legislature when a motion was put before the House suggesting that the 40-minute rule should be applied to speeches on the Speech from the Throne debate and the budget debate; but that suggestion did not find favour with the hon. members of the Legislature, and I think I can say this, Mr. Speaker, and express the feeling held by every hon. member of the House, that with very, very few exceptions, the hon. members of this Legislature have not offended by making long speeches. There are exceptions, of course, to any rule and to any situation, but whether it is worthwhile to try to overcome the exceptions by a general rule, that is not necessary for the great majority, has always been an open question.

They have, of course, in the Dominion Parliament the 40-minute rule applying to speeches, but I doubt very much the wisdom of transplanting that rule to our provincial Legislature.

Mr. Speaker, as you are quite well aware, there are two amendments that have been offered to the Speech from the Throne. One has been proposed by the official Opposition, and the other has been moved by my hon. friend, the C.C.F. member from South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett). I want, if the House will bear with me, to sum up for a few moments some of the arguments that have been advanced relative to the main amendment.

Our contention, as the Opposition, in that amendment, is that the Government of this province should have proceeded forthwith with the development of the Upper Ottawa on the basis of the agreement passed in this Legislature in the spring of 1943. We say had that been done, Mr. Speaker, it would have had the effect in a very large measure of offsetting the power shortage in the province at the moment. That amendment has been before the hon. members of the Legislature, and many of them have taken the opportunity to discuss this question of hydro at some length.

I do not want at this time to call into discussion proposals or suggestions of the hon. members who have spoken in this connection, but I do want to say a few words relative to the speech of my hon. friend from Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) the other night, who made an extended reply to the hydro criticism.

My hon. friend from Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) laboured a long time and brought forth some very interesting conclusions. In the first part of his speech he sought to convey the impression to the House—an impression that is not by any means new—that the former Liberal Government of this province was and is responsible for the power shortage that exists. And the latter part of my hon. friend's speech completely turned around, so to speak, and blamed the power shortage at the moment on the conditions of the drought and shortage of water and low-water levels throughout these places where water is generated into electricity used in this province. He gave the House and the province the impression that the present power shortage was not one to be greatly alarmed over, that it was a shortage of a temporary duration, and left the impression, certainly with me, that as soon as drought conditions rectified themselves and the waters of the province that have to do with the generation of electricity assumed their normal level, our trouble so far as power shortage is concerned, would be at an end.

All I want to suggest, Mr. Speaker, and through you to the hon. members of the House, that a contention of that character on the part of the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) is completely at variance with the statements of officials of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. We read in the papers a short while ago where one of these officials spoke, I think in Brantford, in this particular instance, and said the worst of the present power shortage would come in the fall and winter of 1949 and 1950.

Surely we have not enough advance information about the weather to know that the drought is going to continue over the period of time that exists between now and 1950. So there must be, and there are, other basic reasons for the power shortage rather than the drought conditions which have existed in the province during these past few months.

In the first part of my hon. friend's (Mr. Challies) speech, he brought in the old arguments about the Liberal Government, up until 1943, being responsible for the power shortage. He brought in again that dilapidated argument of the cancellation of the Quebec power contracts, and held it up before the hon. members of the House as a contributory cause of the power shortage we are now encountering in this province.

We all know, Mr. Speaker, by this time, that although those contracts were cancelled, they were renewed at a later date. I think the time that elapsed between the cancellation and renewal was some 18 months or two years, although I am not saying that to be accurate, but I think it is reasonably safe to use that figure.

When these contracts were renewed, they were renewed for the same amount of power as contained in the original contracts. I think there was a difference only of some 25,000 horsepower between the new contracts and the old ones. Surely, Mr. Speaker, the fact that those contracts were cancelled cannot be a major cause of the power shortage at the moment. We are quite well aware, Mr. Speaker, that when these contracts with Quebec were renewed, they were renewed for the same amount as the old contracts, less perhaps 25,000 horsepower, but over the months that followed, additional power came in from those Quebec companies on the same basis and conditions as were present in the new contracts. So it is correct to say that in 1945 Ontario was drawing from these Quebec contracts power in excess—and considerably in excess—of what was contained in the original contracts. I do not think anyone can argue on that point. At least, I am perfectly sure, in my own mind, that it is a true statement, a factual statement of the situation as it then existed.

My hon. friend (Mr. Challies) went on to say that the cancellation of these contracts made for a lack of faith on the part of the Quebec companies on the one hand, and I presume the Quebec Government on the other, with those of us in the Province of Ontario who had anything to do with the cancellation of the contracts.

Mr. Speaker, there are two or three interesting off-shoots from that argument. One is that the faith was not broken so badly that these companies did not, in the succeeding months, step up their delivery of power to this province under the new contracts. That faith was not so badly shaken, Mr. Speaker, but that in 1943 the Government of the Province of Quebec, and that of the Province of Ontario, were not able to get together and form the basis of an agreement for development of power on the upper Ottawa River. If there was any damage to that faith, it could not have been very complete; it must have been rather insignificant, after all.

My hon. friend (Mr. Challies) then went on to say—and I think I followed him closely in his argument—that we should have had a joint development on the Ottawa River. Of course, what one would wish to have and what one can accomplish—particularly in dealings between two governments—is quite a different thing. However, Mr. Speaker, I think we can say this; I think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) will agree that when the debate was going on in the Legislature in the spring of 1943, the Conservative Opposition at that time expressed their opinions and their convictions, that it would be better for this province to develop as a joint development. In fact, I am sure it is correct to say that after that Government was defeated in 1943, the present Government did try to negotiate a joint development scheme for the development of these water powers. They tried with the Liberal Government, and they tried with the Government of hon. Mr. Duplessis, after he came into power. We are told now they are proceeding to develop. The hon. Minister for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) says “We are going to pour concrete very shortly in this great development on the upper Ottawa River.”

I say to you, Mr. Speaker, it is the contention of the Liberals that the Government of this province should have gone ahead with the development of these water powers much earlier, and that feeling is justified by the events, and by the pages of history which were written at that time, and since.

We have no desire on our part to "pull punches" in this respect. We feel that the interests of the province would have been served to a greater degree, if they had gone ahead in 1943 and proceeded as quickly as possible with that development, and brought it to where they would be delivering power to the people of this province.

There was a suggestion made—I do not know whether my hon. friend from Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) made it—the other night, that the reason they did not proceed at once on the upper Ottawa was that men and materials were not at that time available. I believe, Mr. Speaker, if an approach had been made to Ottawa, asking them to grant priorities for these very necessary materials for the construction of these very necessary power sites, the Ottawa Government would have given those priorities.

I do not know, Mr. Speaker, that one need enlarge on that. I remember the debate in the House referred to by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) when he criticized the then Prime Minister for the statement as to whether they actually had a written undertaking with the Dominion Government regarding granting priorities. The hon. Prime Minister of that day was not able to persuade the Opposition, and I doubt if he had a written understanding with Ottawa, but I fail to comprehend, Mr. Speaker, why, if this power was needed as was suggested in the Order-in-Council passed by the Dominion Government relative to this scheme for war purposes; if it was understood by the Dominion Government to be needed for war purposes, they would have hesitated to have granted the necessary priorities and have proceeded with the construction on that power site.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know that there was anything else of great consequence in the speech of my hon.

friend for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies). I want to make my position abundantly clear in this regard and when voting on the amendment to the motion for the consideration of the speech of the hon. the Lieutenant-Governor at the opening of the Session, in spite of what the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) will say in a moment, I will record my vote for the amendment, and I believe those who sit around me will do likewise.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to turn to the subamendment, moved by the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). I have read the subamendment over carefully, as I presume most of the hon. members of the House have. However, I want to read it with you, so that we can get the clear implications embodied in the subamendment itself. It says:

"That the amendment to the motion for consideration of the speech of the hon. the Lieutenant-Governor now before this House, be further amended by adding thereto the following words:

"And this House regrets that the Government has put forward thoroughly inadequate proposals for labour legislation, vague and insubstantial housing proposals, and no plans at all to meet the pressing need for adequate health and welfare services."

The only objection, Mr. Speaker, I have to the amendment is the words "vague and insubstantial housing proposals."

I suggest, Mr. Speaker, to you and to the hon. members of the House that we are in no position to judge whether the proposals of this Government for housing are "vague," or whether they are "insubstantial." We have the promise in the Speech from the Throne that the Government is going to meet the housing crisis by appropriate legislation. That legislation has not yet appeared on the order paper, and I, for one, cannot condemn a government for a piece of legislation promised, but not yet born. I think that is the position of most of the hon. members of the Legislature.

Then the last paragraph reads:

"And this House particularly regrets the failure of the Government to recognize the need for comprehensive planning and broad measures of social ownership in the economic life of the province with a view to maintaining full production and full employment."

I do not need to argue that last paragraph at length, Mr. Speaker. May I say, as far as the Liberal Party is concerned, we do not believe that the wide application of the principles of social ownership will be the salvation for this Province of Ontario.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. OLIVER: We are primarily of the opinion, Mr. Speaker, that a government is elected to govern, not to run the businesses of this province or of this Dominion, and if we completely segregate those things in our mind and approach the practical problems which exist, we will have gone a long way toward providing the cure for our difficulties. It does not lie, in my opinion, in the wide application of the principles of social ownership. It has been tried for many, many years in many, many countries, and it does not provide the answer; it does not meet the challenge; it does not fill the need; and it is no more apt to do it in this province than in the other jurisdictions where it has been tried.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to vote for the amendment and against the sub-amendment.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, first of all I propose to deal with the remarks of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and then with the amendment to the amendment.

I was very pleased, as a number of the hon. members must have been, last Friday to realize that sound argument, repeated, finally can carry some conviction and produce results.

We debated a bill last Friday which was an amendment to the Liquor Control Act, on which occasion both the Liberal group and the C.C.F. group in the Legislature voted with the Government against the bill which had been introduced. The interesting part about that was that when the same bill, in exactly the same words, was before this Legislature on a previous occasion, the Liberal and the C.C.F. groups supported it. It is very encouraging to us, because it does demonstrate that constant, repeated arguments can finally wear down even the most positive resistance.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: We have not been quite so successful in regard to the circumstances related to the development of the power resources of this province. I regret it is necessary once again to point out that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), has said nothing new, but simply turned on the old, worn-out record, and put the scratchy needle back at the same point, and gave us the same tune, which is a very dull tune, a very uninteresting one, and a very inaccurate one.

However, since he has seen fit to wind up this debate by criticizing the remarks made by the hon. Minister for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies), and has directed his comments to the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies), instead of to myself, I think it would be wise if I reviewed a few of the mis-statements he has once again made. I am hopeful that before too long we may actually have converted him on this, as we have in regard to other things, which have occurred in this Legislature this Session. Our only results were not in regard to the amendment to the Liquor Control bill. We earlier converted him in regard to other things against which he voted last year, as did other hon. members of his group.

There was no occasion in this Legislature, Mr. Speaker, to thresh wet straw, and to go back and review—

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): It is "old straw"; not "wet straw."

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: There is no necessity to go back, and review some of the things which have been said, were it not for the fact that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) insisted on taking our minds back to the time when he and others who were here sitting as supporters of the Government we succeeded. To the extent that he has once again brought that forward, it becomes necessary for me to remind the hon. members of this Legislature of the sort of things that government did, and the kind of business administration the province was being given while that government was in office. It is only because of that invitation that I am compelled today to review certain things which otherwise might seem quite unnecessary.

In the first place, even at this late date, when the temporary and emergency power shortage has come to an end—and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) may not know it, but the cuts have been stopped today—it might be well for him to recall there were two distinct problems involved; one was an over-all demand for an increase in the supply of power which had become available, and the other was a sudden and drastic reduction in the power available because of unprecedented low water in the rivers, which create the water flow which turns the generators of our electric-producing plants.

Because of that low water, not only were our own producing plants reduced in their producing capacity, but we were suddenly confronted with the announcement that it would be necessary to curtail the supply of power from the Province of Quebec because of a similar situation in that province where they, too, had low water.

Those were definitely different situations which should not be confused with each other, unless one is seeking to confuse. They should be kept quite separate, because they are not related to each other in any way. Natural events created the emergency power shortage, and natural events have met that situation.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that because of the confidence there is in the future of this province under good government, there is such a demand for new power supplies, that the increase in power available cannot meet those demands.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear:

HON. MR. DREW: To the extent there is any shortage, it is due entirely to the utterly incompetent government which preceded us, which was the most unbusiness-like management this province ever had, since Confederation.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: We saw an example of that when the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) was talking about things, about which they knew nothing. Of course, they did not. They did not know what was going on in their own Cabinet meetings in those days, because they were not held regularly, and when they did meet, it was in a sort of a catch-as-catch-can manner, where the hon. members were very fortunate if they found out what had actually taken place.

We have been trying for several years to unscramble the utterly confused condition they left behind, and put the departments in order, following the utterly inefficient administration they carried out. This hydro arrangement was a part and parcel of the general condition.

When they speak about the arrangements for power development on the Ottawa River, they simply do not know what they are talking about, for the simple reason they were not even kept informed as to what was happening. There is not an hon. member of this Legislature who was here in February, 1939, who does not remember perfectly well that no one knew what the facts were regarding the power contracts, when the subject was brought before this Legislature.

MR. JOSEPH MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): How do you know?

HON. MR. DREW: You were not here at the time, but if you had been here you would not have known it anyway.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: The fact remains that every hon. member who was here at that time will recall perfectly well that this bill and the accompanying agreements came forward over and over again, and I would suggest to those who were present, they go back and try to find out some of the facts behind that bill. If the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will go back and read the record of that time, he will find that this was one of the most confused presentations ever put before this Legislature.

MR. MEINZINGER: Then we ought to "sack" him.

HON. MR. DREW: I must confess that in one thing at least I do sympathize with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

HON. MR. DREW: The fact remains, however, Mr. Speaker, that when that bill came before the Legislature, we were not given one essential fact in regard to what the bill would produce; we were simply told in vague terms that it was necessary, because of the war emergency. When we tried to get the facts, they were denied to us, and we simply proceeded on that particular basis.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has said we may want one thing, but sometimes must take another, if we are going to get any results.

While joint development might possibly have been desired, it was a case of getting the development on any terms which were possible. And may I emphasize that the present development is a joint development.

MR. MEINZINGER: Good; you are doing all right.

MR. SPEAKER: May I ask the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meinzinger) not to interrupt the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) when he is speaking.

HON. MR. DREW: I am afraid the sound effects have come in too late.

The present development is a joint development which has some very interesting features which have been brought about as a result of that very high degree of co-operation existing between the Government of Ontario and the Government of Quebec. Under the arrangement which exists, the actual construction is being carried out by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and it will be possible for the Quebec authorities to draw their share of the power if, in the future, they decide they wish that power.

In the meantime, construction is going ahead on an entirely different basis than was contemplated. We have made arrangements under which every man who works on the Quebec side of the centre of the river, works under foremen from the Province of Quebec, who are chosen by the Quebec Power Commission. That is an entirely different arrangement, and is the sort of an arrangement which leads to goodwill and understanding between adjoining provinces, which is the very thing for which we were arguing in February, 1939.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes it is very difficult to stay within the confines of the legislative requirements in regard to statements which are made. The statements of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) are so far from accuracy that it is extremely difficult to refer to them in the moderate terms which are prescribed for debate here.

What makes them doubly surprising is the fact that he heard the explanation of these events at some length, to which obviously he could not have listened, and on an earlier occasion he also had been corrected in his wholly inaccurate statements.

He fell a little short of something in referring to the "Premier at that particular time," as one has to think quickly to decide who it was, because we had three in a very short time. It was a sort of process of musical chairs without music. At that particular time the Premier who happened to be in office when this arose, did not leave any doubt about the fact there were no priorities in the form of positive undertakings—none.

When it is said priorities would have been available if representations had been made, may I say that right up to the present time, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission cannot secure priorities it is asking for. May I repeat that? From the time this Government took office, it has been impressing upon the authorities in Ottawa the need for new power developments and not only was it found impossible to get priorities required for metal and for various things required for this development, but until recently we were not able to get within a very long distance of the Government regarding priorities. Even today we are not getting all we are asking for, or that we require.

MR. J. MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): Why?

HON. MR. DREW: If the hon. member (Mr. Meinzinger) who has just spoken is still a member of the Liberal Party, I suggest that he check with Ottawa through his own member in the riding and find out.

Regarding the question of priorities. If priorities had been so readily available, we certainly would not be having difficulties with them now. What I would like to remind the hon. members is we did not wait for some future time. The Hydro-Electric Power Commission and the Government took the necessary steps to proceed with construction immediately. One complete new power plant which was only started after we came into power in August, 1943, has come into production and is delivering over 80,000 horsepower at DeCew Falls. That is in addition to the unit that was completed just after we took office and for which the previous Government is entitled to the credit.

There is the great construction at Stewartville, which is coming in this year, and plant after plant is now nearing the point of development. Another great plant at Aguassabon will be producing power this year, and plant after plant will be moving into production as the development proceeds.

Neither this Government nor the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, since this Government took office, have held off at any time; they have moved as rapidly as material and men became available, and as priorities could be obtained from the Dominion authorities.

As to these agreements on the Ottawa River, may I say very definitely I do not believe the Government of that day ever had any intention of proceeding with these agreements—none.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): They most certainly did—every intention.

HON. MR. DREW: You left no record of that intention. On the contrary, you left a very positive record that you had no such intention, because when we came into office on September 17, 1943, no plans were ready, there was no authorization on record either by the Government or by the Commission to proceed with that development.

There is evidence to the contrary of that which has been put forward. It is evidence that the Government had no intention of proceeding, because they had been in office continuously for over seven months since the agreements were signed, without a single thing in the way of authorization to proceed with the construction of that development up until the time we took office.

Let me repeat again, because of those inaccuracies which have been repeated here by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), we immediately—I say “immediately”—made the decision that we would do everything possible to proceed with the Ottawa and the other developments I have mentioned, and three weeks from the time we took office I met the then Premier of Quebec, Mr. Godbout, in his office in the City of Quebec, and placed before him our decision and our desire to proceed as rapidly as we could with the development on the basis of joint development of those power sites.

You have heard a great deal about the fact that everything “stood still until 1946”. Nothing came of that because Mr. Godbout would not proceed, but the following year there were elections in Quebec, and following the election of Mr. Duplessis as Premier of Quebec, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) in 1944 called on him and indicated the same position and our desire to proceed, and from that time forward there were tentative understandings which materialized into actual plans for construction just as soon as Ottawa was prepared to make the necessary materials available.

I hope by putting this on the record for the second time, in a little more detail, I may avoid these repetitions of a wholly inaccurate interpretation of what took place at that time.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) says when the Government of which he was a member finally decided to re-negotiate the contracts with the Quebec companies, they got the same power under the same terms as under the original contract.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I did not say “the same terms.”

HON. MR. DREW: Yes, you did.

MR. OLIVER: If I did, I should not have.

HON. MR. DREW: With one qualification that I was going to put in—“except for some 25,000 horsepower.”

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, may I say to my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) if I used the words “the same terms,” I knew better and I should not have done so. I do not recall using the words “the same terms.”

HON. MR. DREW: I am quite prepared to accept the statement of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that he did not intend that. Even confining the remarks to the amount of power available, I do not think the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will question the fact that he sought to convey the impression they got the same amount of power, except there might have been a reduction of 25,000 horsepower. Now, that is not correct, because many hon. members here know full well that you can have a contract for power under very different terms which mean entirely different things and the new contracts provided for the delivery of power, not on the same firm basis as before, but with a difference in load factors which had a very great bearing on the value of the subsequent contracts. Without going into the details of these contracts now, I say very definitely that much of the power that was available was not available under the same favourable terms as under the first contract.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has said that they had power greatly in excess of their contracts when this Government took office in 1943. That is correct, but may I remind him that the additional amounts were not firm commitments and, therefore, these additional amounts were purely voluntary supplies of power from the Quebec power companies who had that power available.

May I make it quite clear that this Government and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission who, together have been called upon to deal with these contracts, recognize that we have received extremely fair and generous terms from those Quebec companies which have supplied power to us during the time we needed that power so greatly.

We might not have needed so much power in excess of the terms of the contract were it not for the policy of the preceding Government. I wish to refer to that again because of the challenge that has been put forward here today to this Government as to why it did not go ahead with the agreements which were signed, but no action taken in 1943.

When these contracts were cancelled in 1935, the explanation given was that the contracts were for more power than this province could ever use within any measurable time. The Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission at that time said not for 20 years could we use up the power we then had available. That would have carried us through to 1935. They said no more power was needed. That was the stated policy of the Government, and the then Premier of this province on a later occasion, just a year before the war, said that his Government—that was the government of the day—was not interested in the construction of any plants to produce more power in Ontario.

That had been the stated policy of the Government right up to the time the war broke out. I want hon. members of this Legislature to remember the fact that during those years between 1934 and 1939, when the war came, there was unemployment in this province and nothing could have contributed more effectively to the employment of a large number of men at that time than to go ahead with the construction of the needed power plants on the rivers which are now under construction at many points throughout the province. There are hon. members of this Legislature who were sitting here at that time who will recall that the Opposition did urge the Government of the day to go ahead with construction at that time, and the present hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was one of those who explained that was not a way to meet unemployment.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, I cannot let that statement go. Perhaps my memory is faulty, but I cannot remember using the terms employed by my hon. friend (Mr. Drew). Where, or when, did I say that to build power plants would not create employment?

HON. MR. DREW: On more than one occasion in this Legislature when debates were under way, not only in regard to Hydro-Electric Power Commission development, but in regard to public works. The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has a very faulty memory indeed if he does not recall the repeated requests of the Opposition that construction be undertaken on needed projects, either under the Department of Public Works or in connection with Hydro-Electric Power Commission development in this province. I will say that he was only one of those who gave the explanation that this was not the way that Government was prepared to meet the condition of unemployment.

I have repeated there was a clear, stated policy of the Government that they did not believe we needed any more power, and it was a result of that blind and stupid policy that there is any shortage of production of power in this province today.

It is a good thing to get these things in perspective. That was the time when it could well have been done. And then the war came, additional amounts of power were received from the Quebec companies and very limited construction indeed was started at that time. The total amount of new generated power brought in for the whole 9 years that Government was in power was only about 150,000 horsepower.

We have the situation today where we are going ahead with by far the greatest construction programme this province has ever seen, by far the greatest power construction programme ever undertaken in this country at one time. There is before this Legislature a bill that is related to that development, the Power Commission Act.

The Power Commission Act is specifically for the purpose of making the necessary amendments to the main Power Commission Act, which will make it possible to proceed with the financing of this great plan, but it contemplates the whole development.

I could not help being interested, in view of some of the criticism which has been directed outside this Legislature, particularly to this Government for the course it has followed. When every hon. member in this Legislature supported this Act on second reading, not a single member of the Opposition raised any objection at any time.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, on that point, if you will allow me, I have to catch my train Friday night. One thing I have always insisted on in public life is getting home Friday night, and I am going to do it as long as I possibly can. Last Friday night this bill was called after I had to leave the House, and I do not think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) should have called it at that time. It was called, and as he said, it did receive second reading, but it certainly did not get it with my co-operation and support.

HON. MR. DREW: I must say that I was, and still am, under the impression that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was in the Legislature.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, then my hon. friend (Mr. Drew) is under a completely erroneous impression.

HON. MR. DREW: I will check that up.

MR. OLIVER: Check it, then.

HON. MR. DREW: I was very definitely under the impression that my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver) was there.

MR. OLIVER: No, I was not.

HON. MR. DREW: In any event, Mr. Speaker, his supporters were. I would like to ask at this point, so that there may be no doubt about it, if the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) would indicate that he would have opposed it if he were here?

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, if I have any indication of my stand to give, it will be given in committee; and it will be in committee shortly.

HON. MR. DREW: That is about as definite and accurate as most of the things the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) says.

MR. OLIVER: It is not inaccurate.

HON. MR. DREW: It is the same sort of thing. We had the bill here, and there was no suggestion it be delayed. There are hon. members here who were present at that time, and they had ample opportunity to raise any objection to proceeding, and every hon. member who was in the Legislature at that time supported the bill, but today they question their support of it on second reading.

I want to say that this Government has undertaken these great commitments, and they are commitments, because the government must take the responsibility of deciding whether this whole plan can proceed or not, as the credit of the province is greatly involved in what is to be done, and it is necessary for us to take the required legislative action to make it possible to proceed.

So much for what has happened, Mr. Speaker.

As far as the future is concerned; I notice that the remarks of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) were directed particularly to the Ottawa River development and to the remarks of the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) in regard to that. Perhaps that is entirely within the ambit of the amendment, since the whole amendment relates only to this. For the benefit of the hon. members, I will read it:

"That this House condemn the Government and the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for their failure to provide adequate reserve of electric power to meet the needs of the people of Ontario."

Obviously, Mr. Speaker, since that is the entire amendment, the Liberal group, at any rate, agree with all the rest of the progressive things we have put before this Legislature in the Speech from the Throne.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if it is hoping too much, with the lights on now for 24 hours a day, and with the example of last Friday before us, we might even hope by reason, to convince them, and have them vote with us.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): "Reason" might, if we could see the "reason."

HON. MR. DREW: Well, apparently reason will not prevail.

May I now come to the amendment to the amendment. This has been put before us by the Leader of the C.C.F. group (Mr. Grummett) and his supporters. It covers a wider field, and the area of regret is more extended. Let us see exactly what it is, of which they do not approve:

"And this House regrets that the Government has put forward thoroughly inadequate proposals for labour legislation."

For some time the party of which the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) is the Leader in this Legislature, has been urging uniform labour legislation as between the Dominion and the Ontario Government. The Speech from the Throne made the positive declaration, carrying forward a statement already made on behalf of the Government by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), that this Government was going to accept the labour code adopted by the Dominion Government, and apply it to all labour relations in this province.

I would have thought, if there was any measure of consistency in the group headed by the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett), they would have commended us for this decision, because it was directly in accord with what they have been expressing for some time.

The amendment to the amendment goes on:

"Vague and insubstantial housing proposals and no plans at all—"

and mark this;

"—no plans at all to meet the pressing needs for adequate health and welfare services."

Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne indicated extended services of this kind. Every hon. member knows the Speech from the Throne does not put forward the whole legislative programme in detail. Some hon. members thought the Speech from the Throne was a little too long, as it was. It merely summarizes what is to be done, and every hon. member knows that.

The Speech from the Throne quite clearly stated there was to be increased services of this kind. May I say, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. members who heard the Speech from the Throne, have seen only one of the different examples of the far from "insubstantial action" taken by this Government to increase the health and social conditions of this province, in the bill which was introduced today. That is the positive sort of thing this Government is doing, and is by no means "insubstantial," as the figures given by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) wholly made clear.

May I read on?

"This House particularly regrets the failure of the Government to recognize the need for comprehensive planning and broad measures of social ownership in the economic life of the province with a view to maintaining full production and full employment."

In this case the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and I presume the hon. members of his group, and I are in complete agreement in regard to that aspect of this part of the subamendment, at least.

MR. MEINZINGER: I would not say that.

HON. MR. DREW: I see there is one dissenter. I feel sure that will not surprise the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: Never at any time has this Government suggested it was going to embark upon any plans under which it would become a producer in any of the fields of normal industrial production. We believe—and we have sought to make this clear before—that those who have developed skill and knowledge in particular fields of production can guide that type of production infinitely better than someone whose only qualification is that he happens to believe in the so-called “Socialist doctrine.”

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe it is without a good deal of significance that during the past war, the nations which produced the enormous quantities of aircraft, guns, battleships and weapons which destroyed the dictator powers were all nations which believed in the principle of allowing the energy of each individual human being to assert itself within their competitive system.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear hear.

HON. MR. DREW: It was no geographical accident the United States became the great arsenal of democracy; it was no geographical accident that Canada, with only a little more than 12,000,000 people—a relatively small population compared to many nations in the world—became one of the greatest industrial producers in the world, and is today. It was no geographical accident that Britain, with all the limitations of war production, carried out its tremendous programme of production under a system of free enterprise and free initiative, where the energies of the individuals were able to produce the great results which did so much to win the war.

Please let us remember, for all practical purposes, the war was over when the present Socialist experiment in Britain began. I think it would be appropriate for us to remember something of what those people did, not only in their valour, not only in the fortitude with which they met the onslaught of the German air and sea forces, but what those people in that little beleaguered island did, amidst the sinkings by submarines and the havoc of air attacks, to produce the needs of war, before any allies outside of the British Empire were standing beside them to defeat Germany and her partners in that war.

Did I hear “Russia”?

MR. MEINZINGER: No, you did not.

HON. MR. DREW: I thought I heard the word “Russia.” If I did hear “Russia,” may I say that Russia is a perfect example of what it really means not to have free enterprise, because Russia did not produce the needed machines of war on a scale that was necessary. The valour of her people did produce great results, and they were able to survive, able to interpret that valour in terms of successful combat only because of the enormous quantities of war materials which went from the United States, Canada and Britain, carried by ships from countries where men work as free men, and produce in that way.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: As far as this Government is concerned, it conceives it to be its duty to assure the general welfare of our people, and to avoid any abuses of concentrated authority, whether in the form of public monopoly or private monopoly, and each can be equally bad. The Government also conceives it is its duty to assure fair relationships between our people on terms that will make it possible for a strong and vigorous people to use the brains God gave them to strengthen the possibilities of work, to save, and to develop their own lives as free human beings.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

HON. MR. DREW: That very compact form is what this Government believes will produce the best results for this country. I may say that in the face of our previous statements, I think it would have been a source of great surprise, if not regret, if this Government had embarked upon any such schemes as are contemplated in the subamendment.

May I go one step farther? We have this Power Commission Act before us which provides for the conversion of the power resources of this province to a uniform 60 cycle. That was one of the main statements in the Speech from the Throne, which is still under debate, and upon which we are presently going to vote.

I asked the Leader of the C.C.F. group in the Legislature (Mr. Grummett) yesterday, a question which he indicated he was not prepared to answer. I asked him if the impression conveyed by certain press reports that he had expressed approval of the brief submitted by the Ontario Federation of Labour was a correct impression, but he indicated that he was not prepared to answer.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Speaker, since the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has raised this question, I have the right to reply to that statement.

The hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) is mistaken in the different organizations. He does not know to which organization my letter was addressed. He is completely confused. The organization which presented the brief to the Government on Friday last was not the organization with which my name was mentioned in the press.

MR. MEINZINGER: Are you sure?

MR. GRUMMETT: I am sure of that.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. GRUMMETT: The brief presented to the Government last Friday was presented by the Ontario Federation of Labour, of the Canadian Congress of Labour. The brief with which I had been connected was from the Trades and Labour Council, a brief presented several weeks ago by the Ontario Federation of Labour of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. They are two separate organizations altogether, and the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) is confused.

I resent the remark he made in his statements yesterday and today.

HON. MR. DREW: I would like to know, Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) resents. I asked him if the impression given by the press reports was correct. What is there to resent?

MR. GRUMMETT: Trying to confuse things.

HON. MR. DREW: I am not trying to confuse things at all, Mr. Speaker.

MR. GRUMMETT: Then you did not know what you were talking about yesterday.

HON. MR. DREW: I knew perfectly well what I was talking about. I was speaking about this report which appeared over the weekend, which indicated that the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) would give us some of this valuable information, and if he was going to appear before one of these labour bodies, to explain the brief, I wanted to know if we would have the advantage of ascertaining whether he believed in this brief or not.

MR. MEINZINGER: I do not think he does.

MR. GRUMMETT: The brief to which you refer, Mr. Premier (Mr. Drew), was not the brief to which I had been referring previously.

MR. MEINZINGER: It was a "brief case" anyway.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. GRUMMETT: If you were out of the House, we would be a lot better off.

MR. SPEAKER: May I once again call the attention of the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Meininger), that he should not interrupt when an hon. member is speaking.

MR. GRUMMETT: I would like to make this explanation. Obviously the briefs were similar in some respects, and corresponded, but not in every detail, with our programme.

As the C.C.F., we have the right to believe in certain problems, and certain approaches to those problems. The different congresses of labour have the same right. I am not here to state that I approve of everything that was in the brief submitted to the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), because I do not know what was in that brief. That never came before me. The hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) thought I was referring to that same brief. That is not correct. I was referring to another brief altogether, which was submitted to the Government about three weeks ago.

HON. MR. DREW: The difficulty was, Mr. Speaker, that the press reports stated the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) was going to give this group the advantage of his knowledge of the proposals which had been made by the Ontario Federation of Labour with regard to the legislative programme which was being placed before the Government. Since the brief did refer to the legislative programme, I did not think it was unreasonable to assume it was to that brief, to which the press reports were referring. If it does not, that is all there is to it. It would have simplified matters if I had known the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) felt that way about it. One of the reasons I wanted to know was the very interesting statement made in that brief with regard to the frequency change-over.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) that they are two distinct and separate organizations. The one on Friday was presented by the Ontario Federation of Labour of the Canadian Congress of Labour; the other one to which I directed the letter was from the Ontario Federation of Labour of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. They were two separate organizations.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), will understand that I only had the press reports before me, and they simply referred to the "brief of the Ontario Federation of Labour" without any additional explanation. I did not have the intimate contact with the details which the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) had, and I was simply asking for information. Now, I have it. We do not know yet whether he agrees or disagrees with one or the other.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

MR. GRUMMETT: I have not seen the brief. How could I approve of it?

HON. MR. DREW: It was available to everyone, because it was quite fully quoted in the press, and copies were circulated very freely on Friday.

Mr. Speaker, the reason I was anxious to have some enlightenment on the point was that this brief which was presented last Friday referred to "frequency change-over" in a way which was in keeping with the statement made earlier by the Provincial Leader of the party to which the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) belongs. I was anxious to know whether there was conformity on party lines in that respect. It would have helped me in making some comments with regard to frequency change-over.

However, Mr. Speaker, perhaps I had better wait and discuss this later when possibly we will know what the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) really does think about frequency change-over.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) tell us what they said about the frequency change-over?

HON. MR. DREW: I will be glad to. I would like to read into the record what was said. If I am wrong I would like to be enlightened, but I believe there is now a very clear association between the Ontario Federation of Labour and the C.C.F. party. If that is in accordance with their good judgment, it is quite correct. That is why I wanted to understand how close the association was.

The remarks concerning frequency change-over as contained in the brief are as follows:—

“The Federation registers a distinct condemnation of the high-handed action and interference in the affairs of Hydro. We, as citizens of Ontario, are shareholders in this great public enterprise, and we regard it as a vital and necessary part of the economy of this great industrial province. Political interference can only be condemned in the most vigorous terms.

The lack of planning of your Government and its consistent refusal to accept the engineering recommendations of experienced and competent technicians leaves us no alternative but to conclude that Hydro is being used by your Government as a pawn and political football.

Our members have lost considerable income through current hydro shortages—income that can ill be spared. We are, therefore, especially interested in the problem presented in the administration of our source of electrical power.

We would urgently request that this number one public problem be dealt with according to the recommendations of Hydro's own able and efficient staff, presenting as it does a common problem over and above any political considerations whatsoever. It is in fact the very life blood of the economy of this great province.

We put forward the viewpoint that the extension of electricity into the rural areas of this province, to serve the many farming communities that now have no electric lights at all, is much to be preferred over removing the flicker from electric lights in a few large cities.

Heavy industry will continue to use 25 cycle power. Large industrial areas would not likely be changed to 60 cycles. Further, we do not subscribe to the proposition that Ontario is an “isolated island” in a sea of 60 cycle power. There are several large areas on the North American continent remaining on the same frequency that we use in Ontario, primarily because of their industrial nature.

A Hydro slogan used not long ago impressed us very much. It was “Hydro is yours, use it!” Since hydro is ours, we further make strenuous objection to the dissipation of $200,000,000 of Hydro reserves for a change-over from 25 to 60 cycles. We regard this as primarily a transaction to leave substantial profits in the pockets of large electrical manufacturing corporations.”

That is what was presented to us in the brief. You may now realize why I thought it would simplify things, if I knew whether the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) agreed with the general proposal. If so, I might have directed some of my remarks in the debate on the Speech from the Throne to the view so expressed.

Would the hon. member of Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) care to make any comment on that? It is his wish entirely.

MR. GRUMMETT: How can I? I have not seen the brief. What the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) was reading were apparently some quotations from the brief.

HON. MR. DREW: No, that is the whole of the brief in regard to frequency change-over—every word of it.

MR. GRUMMETT: I am not going on the witness stand at the behest of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew).

HON. MR. DREW: You would not make a very good witness.

MR. GRUMMETT: You would not get very far cross-questioning me, either.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. DREW: I was interested in knowing because, whatever the views of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) may be—and we do not know—the provincial leader of his party has been very critical of our proceeding with the frequency change-over.

However, since reason has produced such beneficial results on other occasions, I might for a few moments try and remove some of the misunderstandings which have crept in here.

In the first place it is quite obvious that the statement that “$200,000,000 from the reserves was to be used for this purpose” is very far afield. The total estimate of the gross cost for the frequency change-over, as distinguished from contracts now outstanding is $191,000,000. As the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) will now know well, having read it, as he referred to all the details in it, he will be aware there is a very large reduction from the figure mentioned, the net figure being slightly above $160,000,000. He knows further that part of the cost of the change-over is the conversion of the local plants, which will account for $20,000,000, and against that there will be an actual saving of all but a couple of hundred thousand dollars to the municipalities.

Industry is paying one-third of the cost of converting the industrial equipment above $250.

These are all things which will reduce the figure mentioned very considerably, and indicates that “$200,000,000 from reserves” is something not related, even in a remote degree, to the facts.

Mr. Speaker, there is one other point I should like to mention so that any uncertainty may be removed.

The second paragraph of the part of the brief I read, says, in part:

“Consistent refusal to accept the engineering recommendations of experienced and competent technicians . . .”

You have before you a large volume which I hope you will read. It contains the recommendations of the most competent technicians available, and the recommendations of those competent technicians is support in every detail by the highly-competent engineering staff of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and it is upon their recommendation we are presenting this legislation, accepting the recommendations of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission's engineers 100 per cent. in asking for your approval of what we are doing. I thought I should remove any doubt on that score.

As to the statement that this is something which simply benefits a few limited areas, may I point out that this great project is an integrated project, and the frequency change-over is tied in with actual construction.

As has been indicated before, it is essential within the next few weeks that a decision be made, so that the winding of the generator units which are now nearing completion may be carried out without any delay.

I have already explained to the Legislature, and without unduly enlarging upon it, I would like to repeat, to correct any misapprehension in that respect, that no orders were given by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission for 60 cycle generators or 60 cycle equipment for the new generating sites on the Ottawa River.

I pointed out the metal generators and the metal equipment is the same for either 25 cycle or 60 cycle, and the only time it is necessary to make a decision as to which cycle it is going to be is when the time comes to wind the generators.

We are now approaching that time, and it is essential to make this decision.

May I get this quite clearly in the minds of all hon. members? If, as I imagine will be the case, this Legislature supports the frequency change-over, if we have general approval and decide on the change-over, we can proceed immediately, as every step taken will be related to the frequency change-over. The generators, and all the equipment at the generating plants, right through to the municipal distributing points, will be on a 60 cycle basis. To remove any doubt in the mind of anyone, may I say that conversion will begin immediately, because as soon as new power flows in at 60 cycles, it will be necessary to make the adjustments to carry that new power at 60 cycles into those areas where it will be supplied.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, do I understand the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) to say that conversion will begin in the municipalities immediately?

HON. MR. DREW: Conversion will begin immediately, but it will be a long-drawn out process, covering a period of fifteen years. The beginning of the conversion is, of course, the setting up of the generating units at 60 cycles. It will probably be some time before the power comes in. One of the plants which will come in later this year, at Stewartville, will make it necessary for some conversion to handle the power coming in from that new 60 cycle generating plant. So it will be right across the province when the power is received, and from the time approval is received, it will be carried forward promptly.

Mr. Speaker, may I add one word, so that everyone will understand how big the proposal really is?

The whole plan contemplates a change-over which will cause no inconvenience to the consumers. The method adopted is simple and effective. In any area where 60 cycle power is to be brought in, where 25 cycle power was previously used, the area will be marked out, depending upon the amount of equipment in it, rather than the size of the area. A careful survey will be made as to the equipment in that area. The Commission will know exactly how many refrigerators, washing machines and electrical equipment of any kind there is in the area which is to be converted.

Then they will make sure they have units of that same kind available in the full amount required in that particular area. They will have a pool of equipment corresponding precisely to the equipment in that area. They will have the connections which will carry both the 25 cycle and the 60 cycle power. They will have a large staff of technicians and electricians for the area. The moment they are ready to begin they will start out with their trucks and equipment, go to every house and put in new units wound for 60 cycle, in place of the 25 cycle, using equipment of the same type and the same quality. All that remains then to be done will be to switch over from 25 cycle to 60 cycle, and that will be the end of the 25 cycle in that area.

You can imagine the great undertaking this is for the whole of the province, and an orderly change-over will commence just as soon as they are given the green light, and will proceed steadily year by year during the fifteen years or less it will take to complete the change-over.

I mention that for this reason; it should be understood we are not dealing alone with frequency change-over, we are dealing also with this great construction project and the fact that by carrying out this construction project at 60 cycles as well as making the frequency change-over, we are able to integrate our power supplies with Quebec, with New York State, with Michigan, and I believe, before long there is a prospect of a similar connection with Manitoba on a very substantial scale. That advantage will give us very great interchangeable reserves of power across our provincial boundaries, and also will provide us with a complete grid network throughout the whole province where power at a uniform cycle may be moved back and forth in a way that will make the power available eventually more valuable to us due to the flexibility of supply, through having one uniform cycle. Therefore, in asking that approval, we are not only asking the approval of the 60-cycle, but of our whole programme. I want that realized because this programme embraces not merely $191,000,000 expended on the frequency change-over, but a figure well over $300,000,000, which will be required for the construction of the great projects on which we want to go ahead on a 60-cycle basis of production. There you will have a combined plan which will involve an expenditure of over $500,000,000, by far the largest undertaking ever contemplated by any provincial government in the Dominion of Canada.

That, Mr. Speaker, is the most important project before this Legislature referred to in the Speech from the Throne. The scale of that project is the scale of our confidence in the future of this province, and in asking hon. members of this Legislature to vote down the sub-amendment and the amendment, and to vote for the main motion, we are asking for a vote of confidence, not only in this Government, but a vote of confidence in the future of Ontario in the years which lie ahead.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

The amendment to the amendment was negative on division.

Ayes: 8

Nays: 72

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I believe that I am in order now, under the rules of the House, if I move a further amendment to the amendment. Is that correct?

Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Salsberg:

"That the amendment to the motion for the consideration of the Speech of the hon. the Lieutenant-Governor now before this House be amended by adding thereto the following words:

"That this House expresses its deep regret that the Government has failed to make available to all old-age pensioners in the province the $10 monthly supplement now being paid to a restricted number of Ontario's aged citizens."

MR. J. MEINZINGER (Waterloo North): I would like to vote for it, but I cannot vote for a Communist platform.

Sub-amendment negated on division.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): I might say before proceeding with the next order of business I would like to obtain the views of the different parties of the Opposition. If it is agreeable, I thought we might not sit tonight. We can make up time when we come back. Many members are sitting on committees and have other work they would like to do tonight. We will adjourn at six o'clock? I would like to obtain the views of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): That is agreeable.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 38th Order.

AN ACT RESPECTING THE RESEARCH COUNCIL OF ONTARIO

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 38th Order; second reading Bill No. 114, An Act Respecting The Research Council of Ontario, Mr. Michener.

HON. MR. DREW: Apparently it is not in all the books. I think we will go back to the Committee of the Whole, because these later bills do not seem to be fully distributed.

Mr. Speaker, I move you do now leave the chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion approved.

House in Committee; Mr. Reynolds in the chair.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): In order to expedite things, you can have second reading of the bill as far as we are concerned.

HON. MR. DREW: The mover (Hon. Mr. Michener) was anxious to explain the bill and it is not in his copy.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 29th Order.

FACTORY, SHOP AND OFFICE BUILDING ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 29th Order. House in committee on Bill No. 97, An Act to amend The Factory, Shop and Office Building Act. Mr. Daley.

On Section 1 . . .

MR. C. H. TAYLOR (Temiskaming): Mr. Chairman, is not this the bill to which we were promised the amendments?

HON. MR. DREW: I want that to stand over as well.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 31st Order.

COMMUNITY HALLS ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 31st Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 103, An Act to amend the Community Halls Act. Mr. Kennedy.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 32nd Order.

Mr. Speaker, will you kindly hold that one, we will go on with the 34th Order.

PERSONS OCCUPYING DOMINION CROWN LANDS

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 34th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 108, An Act respecting the provision of services by the province and municipalities to persons occupying Dominion Crown Lands. Mr. Drew.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2:

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, Section 2 of the bill offers the opportunity to say a few words in connection with this section which is the essence of the bill.

The bill seeks to protect certain municipalities which are burdened with responsibility they find difficult to discharge, and which was placed upon them by the Federal Government during the war.

To the extent, Mr. Chairman, that the bill seeks to relieve the municipalities affected from that additional burden, I have no quarrel with it, as in the case of Ajax and similar places. The relief that may be given to the municipalities is something important, and the bill to that extent would serve a purpose.

However, there is the establishment of a principle here in this bill which goes far beyond that, and which is important.

The hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) has told the House that it may affect some 3,000 pupils attending the various schools, and that is a large number of pupils who may, if this bill is applied arbitrarily, find themselves outside of the educational facilities to which they, as children of the province, are entitled.

I asked a question of the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), and I was very sincere in asking it, whether he has attempted to negotiate with the Dominion Government and the municipalities involved for the purpose of arriving at a settlement that will be fair to the municipalities, and that will provide them with the funds required. His reply was that no such approach was made concretely on this subject, and I am afraid, Mr. Chairman, that this bill will create a situation similar to the story of the child brought before King Solomon and two women claiming maternity and rights over the child, only to have it cut in two.

It is a political approach to a question—this legislation is, in my opinion, a political approach which may be good politics. I have no defence for the Dominion Government's attitude in the case of Ajax or any other such municipality, and I say it may be good political legislation to throw the bomb at Ottawa and say: "Why you are responsible for not doing it," and Ottawa will say: "Constitutionally, Ontario is responsible for education," throwing it back. In the meantime, more than 3,000 children of the province will be without educational facilities while this question becomes a political football between the two governments.

I think it is a serious matter, and I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that rather than approach this problem from a partisan political point of view, it should have been approached from another angle, and even now should be approached differently.

Furthermore, Mr. Chairman, I am a bit concerned whether this may not hinder the people of this province from getting certain relief on the housing shortage. I am worried, and I frankly express that concern, that as a result of this legislation the Dominion Government may have an ideal excuse for saying that they cannot proceed with certain housing projects that they have in mind which may necessitate the purchase or acquisition of land, because the Ontario Government has indicated legislation which will throw the burden on them. I am not certain that they will not do that. Ottawa may. That is the reason I am a bit concerned about this legislation. It is true that these remarks could have been made on second reading. I asked a question only, and I am glad of the opportunity to express this opinion now, because it is, in my opinion, important, and to express the hope that the problem will be approached otherwise than through this bill, and a solution found equitable to the municipalities and at the same time, remove this issue from a battling political arena and deal with it in a manner that the situation warrants.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Chairman, I think the remarks of the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) are very far-fetched. These municipalities he is referring to in Ontario County, the Federal Government came in and took this property and built the homes. They are furnishing the education at the present time, and we are paying our share of that as a province, so there is no suggestion, as the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) says, that the children are going to be left without educational facilities—none whatever.

Does the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) think it is fair to place a municipality in such a position with what you might call a number of houses that were placed there under special legislation, a special Act, the War Measures Act, and leave that whole county to bear the expense of the hospitalization—

MR. SALSBERG: I do not.

HON. MR. DUNBAR:—or the relief or anything of that nature? If you were a resident of that county, and you did not know when perhaps some epidemic might break out and quite a number of these people be taken to the hospital, who would you think should pay that hospital bill?

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I quite agree with the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar).

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, who is going to put up the relief bill? What we want to get is a settlement for the municipalities with the Federal Government. I do not think there is anything political about it at all, it looks like quite sane, sound common sense that they should come to some reasonable agreement with the municipality surrounding that area, or the township, or the county of Ontario, as the case may be. They should not carry on so long after the war has been completed, they should not leave these municipalities in a position that they do not know what they might be loaded up with, and this legislation is to relieve and assist the municipality, nothing more.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I want to reply to the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar), that I fully agree with the efforts that should be made to relieve municipalities or the County of Pickering and so on. I have no quarrel with you on that score, and I have no defence for the Dominion Government's attitude, but I am trying to say that this bill will make possible the exclusion of education facilities if Ottawa should not come to terms, which I hope they will.

I suggest that another method should be tried in order to remove it from the political arena and make it a matter for negotiation in which the province may take the initiative, bringing together the Dominion and the affected municipalities, and set it there on an equitable basis.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, they have endeavoured through good fellowship and public relationship and every way they can, but nothing has been done.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, yesterday I directed four questions to the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew), and he gave a rather lengthy answer. I believe he omitted to give me an answer to the second question, which was as follows:

"Will it mean that old-age pensions, and mothers' allowances will cease to be paid to residents entitled to them?"

I am prompted to ask that question from the wording of Section 2, subsection 1, clause (H), near the top of the second page, which reads as follows:

"Welfare, including relief and payment under any Act of this Legislature with respect to inhabitants of the area."

I would like to be assured that this does not mean recipients of old-age pensions or mothers' allowances, because I do not think they would be affected by this same set of circumstances. They are paid out of funds of the province, and the loss of any revenue would not, in my mind, substantiate any reason for depriving these parties of old-age pensions or mothers' allowances, but I would like to be assured that that is what is intended by the Act.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): The Act simply provides that we do not assume any responsibility for anyone in that area. However, as I explained yesterday, the Act goes on to provide that any payments that are available for any purpose related to any of the various things that would be done in these municipalities, would be payable through the Dominion Government instead of through the ordinary channels.

Sections 2 to 6 inclusive approved.

Bill No. 108 reported.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 35th Order.

ATHLETICS CONTROL ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 35th Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 113, An Act to amend the Athletics Control Act, 1947. Mr. Frost.

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive approved.

On Section 4:

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, just a question if you will permit me. In Section 4 there is a provision that funds not used be turned over to the Consolidated Revenue Fund. While I imagine that a provision like that is necessary if extra funds accumulate, there is no question where they go, but I think it is also somewhat dangerous that under a wave of so-called economy, such money would be spent and a considerable portion of the amount could be diverted to the Consolidated Fund, and whereas we know we are not anywhere near the stage where there will be enough money on hand to develop the necessary facilities and opportunities for the athletic activities of the young people of the province. I am suggesting that this portion may be utilized by a government that is not very anxious to proceed with that work, to divert most of it to the Consolidated Fund at the expense of necessary athletic work. I do not think there is any danger that we will have too much money, the needs for the extension of the service is so great.

HON. MR. DREW (Prime Minister): Actually of course, that is more imaginary than real, because insofar as that fund is concerned, the amount in that fund will inevitably depend upon the attitude of the Government anyway, and there is nothing to prevent any government supported by a majority of hon. members of the Legislature repealing any Act that is on the statute books at any time.

This device is one simply to make a provision that if for any reason the sum acquired by this method is substantially in excess of what shall be required for the purpose declared, it should, instead of remaining idle, be transferred to the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

I recognize that it might be used in the way the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has suggested, but it could be used in that way by a government supported by a majority of hon. members of the Legislature, no matter what was in the statute.

Sections 4 to 7 inclusive approved.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the Day.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, may I present to the Legislature the 80th Annual Report of the Hospitals division of the Department of Health for the year ending March 31, 1947.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. Premier (Mr. Drew) would give us any indication when we may expect some answers to the many questions now standing on the order paper.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think we will begin to get them very quickly and in large numbers. Naturally, answers to these questions take some time to prepare in the different departments, and as most of the questions were not put on the order paper at the beginning—I recognize that some were, but most were not—the work has been proceeding and the answers will be coming forward very quickly.

I do not think hon. members of the Opposition have had any reason to complain about our answering questions, but we check with the various departments to make sure they are complete.

RESEARCH COUNCIL OF ONTARIO

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 36th Order, second reading of Bill No. 114, An Act respecting The Research Council of Ontario. Mr. Michener.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 114, An Act respecting The Research Council of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, this bill, as the title indicates, is to establish a Research Council of Ontario, with the general object of the betterment of industrial, agricultural and other research and scientific activity in Ontario as a means to the utilization of the resources of the province. As the Speech from the Throne indicated and the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) has already stated to the House, this legislation is to give effect to the report of one of three very important commissions of inquiry which have completed their work and made their reports in the course of the past year. In a sense it is the fruit of over two years' inquiry by a large and competent commission. As such it deserves more than passing mention and is likely to be of far greater consequence than its brevity would indicate, and I propose to take a few minutes not only to describe the bill but to describe what precedes it. I hope the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew), who is the author of the inquiry, will add some comment on the importance of research generally in the development of the province.

For many years the province has had an interest in research. In the early days almost all scientific inquiry was carried on at the universities, which were the great agencies for the discovery of fundamental scientific laws capable of economic application. Notable among such discoveries in Ontario was that of insulin, well known to everyone, by the late Sir Frederick Banting, Dr. Charles Best and others, from which has grown a great centre of medical research known as the Banting Institute, which was founded by the Provincial Government in 1930, when Hon. Howard Ferguson was Premier.

Of the same order is agricultural research carried on at the Ontario Agricultural College. Industry has to some extent done its own research; there are several notable laboratories maintained in Ontario by electrical, chemical and other large industries, although they are not as extensive as they might otherwise be because many of these industries are subsidiaries of parent organizations in the United States which provide the basic research and information for the subsidiaries. Industrial research, however, has received very substantial support from the Government by the creation in 1928 of the Ontario Research Foundation. The government of that day, the Conservative Government of the late Howard Ferguson, provided a capital sum of $1,600,000, which was matched by industry and resulted in the foundation of a research laboratory just across the park from the Parliament Buildings which has rendered invaluable assistance to industry throughout the succeeding years.

The departments of government, notably Agriculture, Forestry, Games and Fisheries, Mines, Hydro-Electric Commission and others, have also carried on some fundamental research and a good deal of what might be called applied research and extension work.

The Dominion Government later entered into the field and has become the principal spender. Through the Research Council in Canada established in 1917 it has carried on much useful research and scientific investigation. During the war this was greatly enlarged for war purposes and continues on an expanded scale, the total expenditure of the Dominion Government in 1945 for research and development being in the neighbourhood of $35,000,000. We are likely to see increased Federal expenditures for research and its application, not only for the purposes of our peacetime economy but for war purposes.

However, although the Dominion Government has the financial resources and the undoubted responsibility to sponsor research, it is not in direct contact with the universities which are at once the home of research and the source of research workers.

When the present Ontario Government assumed office, it was apparent to the hon. Prime Minister that the variety of research agencies and division of responsibility made it important, in fact essential, to survey the whole problem to obtain answers to the following questions:—

- (1) What overlap and duplication existed?
- (2) How all these efforts could be related and co-ordinated.
- (3) What should the province undertake in a co-ordinated programme?

Accordingly, the Government, in August, 1945, set up the Ontario Research Commission under the chairmanship of a distinguished scientist and university president, Dr. R. C. Wallace, of Queens. The hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) will not hold it against Dr. Wallace that he was educated in Scotland as I do not hold it against him that he was at one time President of the University at Alberta.

The other members of the Commission included the following from the universities: Dr. Sidney Smith, President of the University of Toronto; Dr. W. Sherwood Fox, then President of the University of Western Ontario; Dean C. E. Burke, of McMaster; Dean C. R. Young, of Toronto; and also included Dr. G. I. Christie, then Principal of the Ontario Agricultural College, for whom Mr. W. R. Reek, substituted for a time due to Mr. Christie's illness, and Dr. T. H. Hogg, of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

There was also a strong representation from industry, including Mr. E. Holt Gurney, of the Gurney Foundry Company Limited; Colonel W. E. Phillips, of Research Enterprises, Phillips Glass and other large and technical industries; Mr. Harold M. Turner, President of Canadian General Electric, and Dr. R. K. Stratford, a highly trained and distinguished research chief of the Imperial Oil.

Later Mr. E. T. Sterne, of G. F. Sterne & Sons, Brantford, joined the Commission to represent particularly the point of view of other industries which had not yet engaged in research in any extensive way.

All of these gentlemen undertook to serve without remuneration. I mention their names in detail because of the great service which they have performed in the course of the two and a half years which their inquiry has covered.

In that time the Commission held 22 meetings, some of which extended over three days. In addition individual members of the Commission have attended meetings of the advisory committees, have conducted many inquiries, and spent much time in independent investigation outside of the Commission. As one who was privileged from time to time to sit in with the Commission at its meetings, I cannot speak too highly of the public spirit and devotion to the cause which all members of the Commission displayed. For their time—and they are all busy men—for their skill and judgment, the province is deeply indebted to them.

Mention should also be made of the Secretary, Professor J. O. Wilhelm, who left his teaching post at the University and engaged full time in the work of organizing and carrying on the inquiry.

As the hon. members will recall, an interim report was presented to the Legislative Assembly, as Sessional Paper No. 47 for the year 1947. This has been followed by the final report, which was presented a week or two ago and will be known as Sessional Paper No. 42 of this Session. I trust that all members of the House will avail themselves of the opportunity to read the recommendations at least in the Final Report and as much more of both reports as time permits.

The method of conducting the inquiry is of interest. The Commission organized in each of the following principal fields of research, namely: Fisheries and Wildlife; Soils; Agriculture; Mines; Forestry; Industry; which were called advisory committees, and were constituted by bringing together representatives and leading research workers in each of these fields as a committee. Perhaps this could be best explained by giving the particulars of one of the committees, that of Mines: Mr. N. F. Parkinson (Chairman), Ontario Mining Association; Prof. H. S. Armstrong, Geology, McMaster University; Prof. S. L. Bruce, Research Geology, Queen's University; Prof. C. A. Carson, Metallurgy, Queen's University; Dr. O. W. Ellis, Ontario Research Foundation; Dr. C. S. Evans, Union Gas Company of Canada, Limited; Dr. G. S. Farnham, The International Nickel Company of Canada; Dr. D. L. H. Forbes, The Teck-Hughes Gold Mines, Limited; Mr. T. W. Hardy, Climax Molybdenum Company; Prof. J. E. Hawley, Mineralogy, Queen's University; Prof. L. M. Pidgeon, Metallurgical Engineering, University of Toronto; Prof. G. H. Reavely, Geology and Geography, University of Western Ontario; Mr. H. C. Rickaby, Ontario Department of Mines; Mr. R. H. Rimmer, Aluminium Laboratories Limited; Mr. W. Samuel, Steep Rock Iron Mines, Limited; Mr. G. M. Thomson, General Engineering Company of Canada; Mr. W. B. Timm, Dominion Department of Mines and Resources; Dr. C. R. Whittemore, Deloro Smelting & Refining Company Limited; Dr. G. E. Willey, Algoma Steel Corporation Limited; Prof. C. G. Williams, Mining Engineering, University of Toronto; Prof. J. T. Wilson, Physics, University of Toronto; Mr. R. B. Young, The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario; Prof. J. O. Wilhelm, Ontario Research Commission.

It is apparent that an advisory committee of this kind would have a knowledge of all research being done in the particular field, would be able to determine where there was overlap, and what were the gaps. They would also be able to advise as to the agencies best equipped to do needed work.

It was gratifying to learn from the Commission that to date no serious overlap or duplication has developed.

The Commission's work has produced four definite results as well as the bill before the House, namely:

1. Scholarships to develop needed re-research workers.
2. The advisory committee set up, which I have already described and from which positive recommendations have already come forward for specific research projects, some of which have been taken up by departments and others have been financed by the Government and are well advanced. A good example is the research on mine cables which is being carried on by the Ontario Research Foundation on the instruction of the Government, and the fisheries researches which are being done at the universities.

3. Industry: It was found that industry was not making the most of available technical information resulting from research already completed. Last year the Ontario Industrial Research Service was instituted as a co-operative effort of the Commission, the Department of Planning and Development, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and the Ontario Research Foundation.
4. The Commission, in its organization, has provided the prototype for the permanent advisory council which the bill seeks to establish.

The bill establishes a body corporate to be known as the Research Council of Ontario, to be composed of not more than twelve members, who will be appointed for three years and eligible for a second term. For the sake of continuity a system of retirement of four members each year after the third is provided for.

The general object of the committee has already been stated. The particular powers include the power to carry on from where the present Commission leaves off, taking over the staff and advisory committees as now constituted, the inquiry into research generally, the organization of advisory and other committees, the tendering of advice and reports to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council on the variety of subjects stated in subsection (d) of Section 9, the arrangement with others to carry out such special or general research programmes as may be approved (but not the undertaking of research itself). In other words, the Council is an advisory council, but it will continue to administer the scholarship system which has already been established, and it is enabled to receive funds for specific or general research purposes. As constituted it could act as the recipient of funds from both the Federal and Provincial Governments for specific and general research programmes which might be generally sponsored by the two.

Section 10 provides for funds from the Consolidated Revenue. It is proposed in this year's estimates to provide the following:

$25,000 for administrative expenses, $50,000 for the scholarships, of which 58 were awarded last year under a system which is already established and operating,

$100,000 for the encouragement of smaller industries to combine together in group research projects and activities.

As the committee indicates in its report, there is a very real problem with small industries. Many of them are unaware of the import of scientific research. To many the idea has never occurred that science has any practical bearing upon their business. Many firms are so small that they are unable either to set up laboratory research facilities of their own or to support fellowships in a public research institute. Such firms are without defence against the penalties that result from obsolete processes and products.

In Great Britain over the course of the last generation many different groups of industries have been encouraged to found and operate their own research organizations, by the provision of such contributions now proposed here, contributions which will be limited to 50 per cent. of the cost, the balance of which will be found by the industries.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Michener) why no provisions were made in the bill to guarantee the findings of the Commission or the results of the research carried on by the staff under their supervision will be made available to all industry and all agriculture in the province? In other words, Mr. Speaker, there is a danger, I submit, that the valuable information and data gathered may become the property of only small groups which are powerful in a given field of endeavour.

I am sure no hon. member in this House would like that to be the result. We like to feel that whatever achievement is made will be made available to all citizens of the province.

I was wondering why there was not some provision for that in the bill?

HON. MR. MICHENER: Provision has already been made in part through what I have called the "Ontario Industrial Service," which is under the Department of Planning and Development. That makes available upon request the great mass of technical information which is now contained in the library of the Research Foundation as a result of the different studies made over a course of years.

Furthermore, the bill calls for publication by the Commission of all results and enquiries; there is provision for publication, and that combined with the technical service would make available to anyone the results of any research that is in part sponsored by public funds.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 37th Order.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 37th Order, second reading of Bill No. 115, An Act to amend The Natural Gas Conservation Act. Mr. Frost.

HON. L. M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, I beg to move second reading of Bill No. 115.

The purpose of this bill is simply that in the matter of natural gas conservation and storage, it will be necessary to move gas from one area to another and store it in the ground.

As many of the hon. members of this House are aware, plans were approved some time ago to bring natural gas from Texas to south-western Ontario, and store it in some of the fields in that area during the summer months, when the gas could be received "off peak," and would then be available for use in the winter months.

That plan has developed further. One of the difficulties in connection with gas—and I can assure the hon. members of this House there are thousands of difficulties—is the piping of gas from one area to another. Cold weather affects the facilities for piping, and in the very cold weather, in some cases, where pressure is low, it makes it almost impossible to pipe. The result is that it is desirable, according to the engineers and people familiar with this problem, to move the gas from one area to another in the summer months, so that it is available close to the places where large amounts of gas will be required in the winter time. That is the situation which arises in connection with the larger cities, notably Windsor, Sarnia and some other places.

Mr. Speaker, this matter has been discussed with the producers of natural gas, of whom there are many hundreds in south-western Ontario. If gas is piped from one area to another, it is highly undesirable there should be any drilling in that area to which the gas is piped; otherwise, it might be that a great quantity of gas would be brought in from Texas, or some other field, and some enterprising individual would drill for it, and use the gas which had been brought into that area.

The purpose of the amendment is to control drilling in areas into which the gas is piped.

Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. members of this House, I may have something to say later on in connection with another bill I may introduce concerning the Fuel Control Act.

In any event, this matter has been very thoroughly discussed. Last summer, when the price of natural gas rose, we formed a municipal committee covering the Dominion Gas Company's area, comprised of some 50 or 60 municipalities, under the chairmanship of Reeve Green, of Port Colborne, who gave us very excellent service. Subsequently, we formed a committee of municipalities in the Union area. In addition to that we had a large representation from the industries of the Union area. There are practically no industries in the Dominion area. We had the advantage of the advice of representatives from some of the trade unions in the Windsor area. Every step taken in connection with this very difficult problem was very thoroughly considered by those committees and individuals, before we acted, and I am glad to say that practically everything we did was carried on with the approval of all those who were connected with this very difficult problem.

The hon. members of the House are no doubt aware there is not sufficient natural gas in south-western Ontario by any means, to take care of the loads on the lines of certain companies, and it is necessary to supplement that gas by gas which is artificially manufactured.

The difficulty this year was largely occasioned by the shortage of oil and oil derivatives, from which artificial gas is manufactured.

There are two new plants coming into being, an oil gas plant which manufactures, I believe, about 5,000,000,000 cubic feet per year, and another artificial plant in the neighbourhood of Windsor. If everything works out satisfactorily, there should be no difficulty next winter.

On the other hand, we are living in an age of shortages, and the shortage of oil, gas and fuel in the eastern States was the cause of the situation which we had in Ontario. However, acute and unfortunate as it was, it was not as difficult nor acute as the situation which arose in the State of Michigan, in Chicago, and a number of the seaboard States.

Mr. Speaker, I beg to move second reading of this bill.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Minister permit a question or two? How many industrial centres, other than Windsor, are dependent in a large way on natural gas?

HON. MR. FROST: Actually speaking, Windsor is really the largest centre of them all. Hamilton now is practically entirely serviced by artificial gas. As some of the hon. members of this House know, a few years ago practically one half of Hamilton was serviced by natural gas. Now it is all serviced by artificial gas, and there are several industries in Hamilton which are also serviced by artificial gas, notably, the Dominion foundries, the Stelco Company, and some others.

In speaking of "artificial gas," I mean the combination, because, generally speaking, there is no such thing as pure artificial gas. It is a mixture of various types.

In the Dominion area there are a large number of industries using a comparatively small amount of gas. They are largely bakeries, and industries of that sort, in the Dominion area.

In the Union area, there are a very large number of industries, in Windsor particularly, which are using very large amounts of natural gas. Roughly speaking, the figures are these; it was anticipated at the peak of this last winter, the union load would be about 32,000,000 cubic feet per day. Of that, about 19,000,000 cubic feet would be domestic, and the balance of 13,000,000 would be industrial.

One of the difficulties which created the situation in Windsor was the fact that, due to shortages of other fuel, and the appliances for the use of other fuel, people who had domestic heating appliances turned to gas. It is strange that much of our difficulties there followed the increase in the price of oil, which affected many oil furnaces, and many people cut down on their oil furnaces and turned on the kitchen stoves. That happened in many places, where it was comparatively easy to connect the gas appliances. People would bring down a gas appliance from the attic and put it in the living room, with the result that the load increased from 19,000,000 cubic feet to 30,000,000 cubic feet per day, and crowded industry out of the picture. That was the primary cause of the difficulty in the area.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the hon. members would rather have me ask a brief question than make a speech on the bill. Has it ever occurred to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Frost) that he might blaze a new trail, and take his place beside Sir Adam Beck, if he took steps to make gas, both artificial and natural, a public utility, in the Province of Ontario. It seems to me, if it was a public utility, we would be in a far better position to deal with such emergencies as that which arose during the past winter. Has that thought ever occurred to the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost)?

HON. MR. FROST: I am glad to learn the confidence the hon. member (Mr. MacLeod) has in public utilities.

MR. MACLEOD: You have, have you not?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member's (Mr. MacLeod's) reference is prompted by the signal success which hydro has had in dealing with their troubles.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think there is a single thing to be gained by taking over these gas companies as a public utility. I think we would be increasing our troubles. After all, these people have many, many problems. The gas companies in the last year or two have lost money very, very heavily. Their problem is not an easy one. They might be glad to have us buy them. I do not know. But I would say that turning these companies into a public utility would gain exactly nothing.

Actually speaking, the three principal gas companies, including the United Fuel Co. at Hamilton, have really done a most remarkable job in the face of the most extreme, unusual and unthought-of difficulties. These companies actually were in a position to meet the situation this past winter. There was a possibility of some minor interruptions, but only for a day or two.

However, the situation entirely changed because of the shortage of nutrones and proteins, and other oil derivatives necessary to manufacture artificial gas.

Speaking for myself, Mr. Speaker, I would say there would be absolutely nothing gained by making these a public utility.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) if there has been any research carried on which would indicate the probable loss in natural gas by transferring it from its source to the fields in which it is to be stored? Has any research indicated the probable loss occasioned by that transfer?

HON. MR. FROST: I could hardly answer that question, Mr. Speaker, except to say that people engaged in that business are not going to engage in anything which will result in a loss, if they can avoid it. This gas business is a very complicated and strange affair. As I understand it—and there are perhaps hon. members here from southwestern Ontario who are familiar with the actual operation of the wells—once a well is drilled and is in operation, it is desirable to keep a steady flow of gas from that well. If the open flow is, we will say, 1,500,000 cubic feet per day, the rule seems to be not to exceed 500,000 cubic feet, or about one third the amount. The difference between the open flow and the controlled flow has a great deal to do with the life of the well. There is much to be said about keeping the flow from the well steady throughout the year. I suppose they figure in doing that, they actually gain in the use of natural gas, rather than lose by it.

That is the best answer I can give to the hon. member (Mr. Grummett).

MR. C. D. HANNIWELL (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) concerning one point in relation to this particular matter. Speaking of the control of this natural gas, we have had a very serious situation in the riding I represent, where so-called “controlled gas” exploded, and it was only due to good fortune that the men involved did not suffer death or serious disability. I give credit to the Department of Mines for having sent a representative down there to look over the situation. However, there still seems to be not the proper control, which is necessary. I am referring now to the village of Crystal Beach. I think the engineers have made a report on this. I do not know how it can be controlled, but there is certainly not the proper control, and I have had complaints about that situation frequently.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I say that I know something about the case my hon. friend (Mr. Hanniwell) mentioned in the village of Crystal Beach. I think that situation has existed for some years.

MR. HANNIWELL: I quite agree with you.

HON. MR. FROST: There is a leakage of gas from some source. It may come through a crevice in the rock, or from some other source, which certainly is not known. Every year experts have been down there trying to find the source of this leak, but were unable to do so. I will be glad to supply the hon. member (Mr. Hanniwell) with the necessary tools and gadgets, and other things, and let him go down there and see what luck he has.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: Order No. 38.

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 38th Order, second reading of bill No. 116, An Act to amend the Highway Traffic Act. Mr. Doucett.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 116, An Act to amend the Highway Traffic Act.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, is the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) going to speak on the bill?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Speaker, there are just a few slight changes in connection with the unsatisfied judgment funds. There is nothing drastic at all, and they may be taken care of in Committee of the Whole.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) what the experience of the Department has been with the legislation passed last year.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Speaker, up to the present time there have been only two cases where awards were made. There are several others before the courts at the present time. The Act, as you know, came into effect on July 1st last, and in connection with accidents which have occurred since, calling for judicial decisions and court proceedings, they are only now getting to the stage where the orders are coming forward.

I think the Act has worked most satisfactorily, and is doing a very good job. I think it is doing what we thought it would do, when the bill was introduced. That is why this year we did not add to it, because up to the end of the year, only two payments have been made. If we leave this until next year, we will know approximately the amount of money the Government will be liable to pay, under the Act.

MR. J. A. HABEL (Cochrane North): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) explain the reason for the change in sub-section 2? I notice that beside the fine and imprisonment for a term not exceeding 30 days, the vehicle for which the permit was issued, will not be permitted to operate in Ontario.

Do you not think that is going a little too far?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: What?

MR. HABEL: Would that not be going too far? After all, you have the finality there.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: To forfeit the car to the Crown?

MR. HABEL: Yes.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, Mr. Speaker, that is not a change; that is reciting last year's Act. What we are changing there is to provide a penalty where a driver's licence is cancelled and he procures a licence in some other way, probably under a false name or by changing his name slightly, or by using another address—and many people do that at the present time. There was no penalty for doing that. As regards forfeiting the car to the Crown under certain conditions, that was in the Act already.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Did the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) get any cars?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, Mr. Speaker, a couple. They would not suit the hon. member (Mr. Oliver) or me.

MR. HABEL: I notice, Mr. Speaker, here in the explanatory note with reference to Section 2, it says:

"In the case of an illegal permit, the penalty is increased by providing for the confiscation of the motor-vehicle."

Therefore, that was not in the Act last year. It was added this year.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Speaker, the amendment makes it an offence to apply for, procure, or have a motor-vehicle permit while prohibited from driving a motor-vehicle registered in his name, and provides for the confiscation of the motor-vehicle improperly registered.

Similarly, it will be an offence for a person to apply for, procure, or have in his possession a driver's licence while a driver's licence issued in his name is under suspension.

MR. OLIVER: The amendment does provide for the confiscation of the car for the first time.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, in adding that one offence, which comes under that clause.

MR. OLIVER: Yes.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I think, Mr. Speaker, the House will agree it is quite necessary to prohibit that false registration.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. LESLIE M. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): 39th Order.

SNOW ROADS AND FENCES ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 39th Order, second reading of Bill No. 117, An Act to amend the Snow Roads and Fences Act. Mr. Doucett.

HON. GEORGE H. DOUCETT (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 117, An Act to amend the Snow Roads and Fences Act.

Motion approved; second reading of the bill.

HON. LESLIE M. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): 40th Order.

AMUSEMENTS TAX

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 40th Order, second reading of Bill No. 118, An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals. Mr. Frost.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 118, An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals.

Mr. Speaker, it is not necessary for me to make any extended reference to this bill, due to the fact there was a very complete statement given yesterday on the introduction of the bill. However, I may assure hon. members of the House that the effect of the two bills was not one which was thought up over night. The provision which was made for public hospitals is one which is as a result of a study going back for many years. It is now about six months since a committee under the chairmanship of Mr. Telfer, of the Department of Health was formed, with representatives on it of the Bureau of Statistics, the Department of Public Works,—Mr. Gladman, the Department's architect, who deals with hospital matters—and a representative of the Department of the Provincial Auditor, and the formula which was arrived at was reached after months of study by those gentlemen.

I can only say to you, Mr. Speaker, and to hon. members of this House, that this matter is one full of complications. The hospitals of Ontario have grown up, as hon. members of this House well know, in a patch-work manner. They have no relationship, or did not have any real relationship to municipal government; they grew up as a result of the interested work of citizens who perhaps lived many years ago.

In my own community, the Ross Memorial Hospital came into existence probably 50 years ago, as a result of the benefaction of one of the builders of the Canadian Pacific Railway, I think, Sir James Ross. That hospital, at the time it was instituted, was equipped without any particular regard for the needs of the community, but as a result of the money which was made available and the plans which were instituted at that time. That is true of many of the hospitals of Ontario, and I may say that it has been most difficult to integrate that picture.

The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has been interested in this matter, and I may say that he has given the matter hours of study over a long period of time, and I can say to hon. members, that the help which he and others have given to at least the present solution, has been of very, very great value.

Since the introduction of this bill yesterday, I have had no adverse comment in connection with the matter. It may be there will be a deluge of adverse comment later, but there certainly is not any indication of it at the present time, and I am of the opinion that there will not be. I think there will be nothing but commendation for this move because, as I say, it is one that has been arrived at not in a haphazard manner but after very thorough study of the basic difficulties in this situation.

Mr. Speaker, I did notice that somebody said something about indigent payments in one of the papers. Let us consider, for instance indigency in the Toronto General Hospital. The plan provides for the payment of $3 by the municipality to the Toronto General Hospital which is a class A hospital, and a payment of $2.35 from the Hospital Aid Fund, which makes $5.35. If you were to translate into terms of indigency all the payments which are being made from the fund—because, remember, the funds payments are based on all the public-ward beds in the hospital, not just the indigent beds—it would actually mean the Toronto General Hospital would be receiving $7.70 for every indigent patient in the hospital. That is very much above the indigent cost in that hospital, but I just take that example to show you that these payments in too far exceed the amount of indigent expenses that any hospital is going to be faced with, unless every one of the public ward beds are indigent beds.

Another point I might refer hon. members to—and they may have some questions to ask—is in connection with graded payments by municipalities, that is, $3 a bed by municipalities in Class A hospitals, $2.50 in Class B, and $2.25 in Class C and lower. That is a matter which received a very great deal of consideration. I can say to hon. members of this House that it would not be sound to relieve the municipalities of some payment in connection with indigent admissions. It would not be sound to do that.

Furthermore, there is this to consider, you know the situation here in Toronto where we have several Class A hospitals, let us take the Toronto General Hospital as an example. It may be that an indigent is admitted from the City of Toronto. Under the old scheme, the City of Toronto was paying $2.25 and the council of this city in recognition of the problem was really under-rating the deficits of the hospital so that Toronto was paying not only $2.25 but was also paying the deficits that arose in that particular hospital, which would bring their indigent costs away above $3, probably $4. On the other hand, you might have some outlying municipality that would send an indigent to Toronto—and there were lots of cases of that—paying the Toronto General Hospital $2.35 when, actually, the costs were much higher, and leaving the City of Toronto to make up the deficits in connection with that patient. Nothing could be more unfair than that, and therefore, it seemed to be fair to raise the indigent contribution in that class of hospital to $3, so that if the patient comes from Toronto or from Markham, or Aurora, or any other place, and it is chargeable to a municipality, the payment shall be $3. That applies down to the lower two classes, Class B hospitals where the amount would be $2.50, and Class C hospitals which cover all the balance of hospitals in Ontario, at $2.25.

There is also this to be considered in connection with the problem: One of the basic difficulties in connection with hospitals is the crowding of hospitals by patients who should not be in that particular class of hospital, if indeed they should be in hospital at all. Not long ago, I was in northern Ontario, having gone there primarily with some of the members of the Treasury Department and some of the officials of the Department of Health, to look into the situation in a particular hospital. It was at the time when we were commencing an intensive study of this problem. We went to a certain hospital and the officials went through the hospital to see just what was taking place there. They went into one ward,—and I will take a typical case—and saw an old lady sitting beside her bed knitting. Upon inquiry, she was found to have been there for about two years. The municipality in that case was one of the municipalities which was not only paying the then going rate of $2.25, but was paying the hospital deficits. That old lady was sitting there, and yet that hospital was crowded for accommodation and was asking that extension be built in order to take care of the case load from that area.

Hon. members can see the situation. There was no other place to send her, and actually she was in a hospital which was supplied with a great deal of very modern equipment to be used in connection with serious cases. She should have been elsewhere.

Our grants are devised to take care of that situation. We are encouraging the building and equipping of convalescent hospitals and chronic hospitals which can take care of situations like that without crowding them into the hospitals where a very high degree of efficiency and a great deal of very expensive equipment is maintained to deal with particular classes of cases.

In the City of Toronto, I am inclined to think that the problem will correct itself from this standpoint: we have in Toronto generally the three classes of hospitals. We have a number of Class A hospitals, which are teaching hospitals, to which students from the university have admission for purposes of carrying on their training in the medical profession. I think the solution in Toronto will come by the creation, building and equipping of hospitals which are designed to take care of cases, whether they be indigent or other cases, which are not serious enough to go to one of the Class A hospitals.

The City of Toronto at the present time is considering acquiring the Chorley Park Hospital which was used during wartime by the Department of Veteran's Affairs, and equipping that as a hospital of that nature. I may say the Department, the Hospital Committee, and the Treasury Department have looked into that proposition and are willing and quite anxious, I think, to give the City of Toronto a sufficient grant, under the grants' system, which would enable the acquiring of that particular hospital.

Speaking from memory, I think the grant which would apply for public-ward beds from that hospital would be $1.41 a day. That would probably bring their indigent cost down to where $2.25 would take care of the situation, so that the tendency, I think, will be not only on the part of indigent cost—after all, remember an indigent who is seriously ill deserves just as good treatment as some person who is able to get a private room in a hospital and pay for it—the desire of everybody is to see that anybody who is seriously ill is taken care of, and I think that is basic in this plan.

On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, I think this is also true, that if we are going to meet this hospital problem in an orderly sort of way, we have to make it that people who are able to pay, just because they are able to pay, or just because they are ill, should not be admitted to some of these highly equipped hospitals to the exclusion of other people.

I mentioned a moment ago the case of an old lady in one of the hospitals in northern Ontario, who had occupied a bed which was urgently needed for upwards of two years, and yet she was not a person who was seriously ill. I think it was simply a case that she was getting old and I suppose there was no one to look after her, and she was not in sufficiently poor health, perhaps, to go to one of the homes.

I know of another case, that of a well-to-do man who became ill with a lingering illness. He was able to pay for his room and pay for his board, and he engaged three nurses, at a time when we need nurses, and he occupied the room and the bed and had the three nurses looking after him for upwards of 2 years. It did not matter to him; he could pay $6 or $7 a day—probably $10,000 a year—for that, yet he was taking a bed in a hospital where he should not have been.

That is one of the problems that has to be met in relation to the hospital situation, and I can assure hon. members of this House it is going to take time to cure that situation. While the present system of grants which we have devised are by no means the last word—because a person would have to have the wisdom of Solomon to cure this situation all at one time—nevertheless, I say that this is a step which is sound in theory and practice, and it meets the various points which have to be met in the situation, and I think it is a step which will help to put our hospitals on a basis on which they can be expanded to meet the needs of this great and growing province.

Mr. Speaker, this Act and this plan, as I intimated yesterday, does not go into effect until the Dominion vacates the field.

I may say that as the 31st of this month is the termination of the Dominion's fiscal year, it would be a natural time for the Dominion to step out of the picture. Perhaps the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), who, perhaps, possesses a lot more influence down there than we, might intimate that it would be very well received in this great old province if the Dominion should decide to vacate that field on the 31st of March. We are anxious to have this bill in a position to proclaim on the 31st of this March—a week from today—so that if the Dominion Powers—that-be should decide to vacate the field, as they have indicated they would—and having indicated that, it would seem good that they should do so as soon as possible—we would be able to enter the field and proceed with the plan which we think is going to improve the situation in Ontario very much.

In that regard, Mr. Speaker, I may say that the Dominion Government in August, 1945, placed before the provinces a plan in regard to health insurance which I have no doubt every hon. member of this House has at one time or another looked over. It must be apparent to all of us that to enter into a scheme of health insurance with the hospital facilities in Canada in the shape they are in would be simply a mockery, that is all. As I said yesterday, in Ontario our hospital facilities are very, very much better than they are in most places in Canada, indeed in some places we have hospital facilities which are sufficient to take care of the needs of the community even if we had health insurance. On the other hand, we have very large areas of this province where we have not anything of the sort, and it follows if the Dominion Government and the provinces desire to enter into a health insurance scheme, we have to do more than engage in empty words and hold out glittering promises which cannot be performed, to the people. We have to start soundly to improve the situation. I accept the Dominion's offer or proposal in connection with health insurance as being advanced with sincerity, and if such is the case and I have no reason to doubt that they are sincere in the matter, then quite obviously the best way they can help would be to do what they said they would do in connection with amusement tax and vacate the field and let us go ahead with the job.

MR. HARRY C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) when they said they would vacate this field?

HON. MR. FROST: I beg your pardon?

MR. NIXON: What responsible Minister said they intended—

HON. LESLIE M. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Just a Minister.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it was the Minister of Finance. Whether he is responsible I will leave to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon).

MR. NIXON: But, Mr. Speaker, did he say they were going to vacate this field—

HON. MR. DREW: Certainly.

MR. NIXON: —as of the 31st of March?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right, the statement has been made before, but it was made by the hon. Mr. Abbott of the Dominion Government in connection with the Nova Scotia negotiations.

The promise was made to hon. Mr. Macdonald that, as the price of his acceptance of the Dominion offer, the Dominion would vacate the gasoline tax field and they would vacate the amusement and pari-mutuel fields just as soon as possible.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) would tell us whether or not any consideration was given to the question of graduating the tax? I see by the Act that it is a 20 per cent. tax throughout, no matter what the admission fee may be. Was any consideration given to graduating that tax, so that the smaller admission fees would not be taxed?

I am thinking of the case of children going into some of the smaller theatres, where they would not be burdened with this tax, but the proposed tax set out in the bill is a straight 20 per cent. I admit that it is a good way of raising money, and I think that the bill possesses merit, but I believe that admissions for children, particularly children in some of the poorer districts, should be left as they are at the present time, without having a tax added to them.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, the answer to that of course is that the admission price charged graduates the tax in itself. With a 30 cent ticket the tax is 6 cents, whereas with a $2 ticket, the tax is 40 cents, so that the answer is self-evident, that the 20 per cent. tax depends upon the amount of the admission, which is the governing factor in each case.

Mr. Speaker, in Ontario we have no amusement tax. We had amusement tax up to, I think, 1935 or 1936, somewhere in there, and the amusement tax was then removed.

In all the other provinces, however, they have amusement taxes. The average tax in Quebec runs between 14 per cent. and 15 per cent. That is the provincial tax, and then plus the Dominion Government's 20 per cent. it means that a theatre-goer in Quebec pays approximately 35 per cent., that is taking the average. That varies, of course. But in many of the provinces it runs on an average of about 10 per cent. so that the theatre-goers there are paying about 30 per cent.

In Ontario we only have the Dominion tax which is a 20 per cent. tax that the theatre-goer pays at the present time, which is the lowest tax in Canada. This bill provides that when the Dominion vacates the field, we step in and impose an amusement tax of 20 per cent.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane, South): Was there any consideration given to making smaller admission fees exempt from the tax, that is 50 cents or less?

HON. MR. FROST: No.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): What would the estimated revenue be from the imposition of this tax.

HON. MR. FROST: I would say the amount of revenue required to implement this scheme is $3,200,000, that, added to the revenue we place in the consolidated revenue fund, amounts to $5,400,000.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that this tax does not help our budgetary position at all. We have not imposed the tax for that reason. We are carrying on our present commitments for this year which we will have in the Department of Health estimates of $3,450,000 covering capital grants. The capital grants are not increased by $1,150,000. They might be next year. The number of beds installed or added to existing hospitals might be two thousand, in which case if they are all public-ward beds would be $2,000,000.

The amount of revenue is, of course, a question, but we are entering into this picture with this view, we want to receive $3,200,000. We hope to receive more than that, but the amount I cannot say. We will have to see how it works out, but we have made this provision that this money goes into this fund and in the ordinary course of things, as in other Government financing, it does not just end at the end of the year and the amount reverted to the consolidated revenue fund; it is carried on in the fund. I am hopeful it will be a great deal more because I am satisfied and the Government is satisfied the hospital problem in Ontario is one of our major problems and it is going to require such moneys as can be received from this source. I only hope it is double that.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Does the hon. Minister (Mr. Frost) know what the Dominion Government received from the province?

HON. MR. FROST: The amounts the Federal Government receives from the provinces are not segregated. They appear in one item and it is difficult to say what they receive from any one province. I can say to the hon. members if there is any surplus, it is going to be needed and I can assure the hon. members it will be wisely used to assist in this great problem. There is always this; if you are after close to $3,200,000 which I hope we will not be, you will have to have an equalizing amount because if there were variations that might have a definite mental effect upon the grant.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): I would have thought there would be more discussion on this very important bill; I even thought perhaps it would stand over until the hon. members of the House had a chance to study it a little more closely. It was introduced yesterday and we only got the printed bill today. I think the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) will agree that is going pretty fast. There might have been a day in between. I simply want to say I do not think anyone in the House will disagree with any proposal which is calculated to enable the hospitals of the Province of Ontario to carry on their work, and more particularly to build new hospitals. I do not think there is any disagreement on that, but I do say that the burden is being placed upon the shoulders of the wrong people.

The hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) has told us on many occasions that the ordinary people of this province have to "fork over" at least $100,000,000 a year in doctor's bills and other health services while the province itself has been paying out, the provincial budget has included about $18,000,000 a year for various health services. I think that is about right, $18,000,000 in the Department of Health estimates.

HON. MR. FROST: That is what it was last year.

MR. MACLEOD: Well, it will be up slightly. I say there is no question whatever as to the need of providing help for hospitals, but I say the Government should have secured this additional revenue by adding another 2 per cent. to the Corporation Profits Tax. Adding another 2 per cent. to the 7 per cent. which you imposed last year, will give you more money than you are going to get from this 20 per cent. and you will be placing the tax on the people who are in the best position to assume that burden.

What this tax actually means is, if a man and his wife attend a show in the City of Toronto only once a week, they are going to have to subsidize his earnings to the tune of $10 or $12 a year, it is going to cost a man and his wife in the City of Toronto an extra $10 or $12 a year on top of all the taxes that he pays now. I am rather surprised—

MR. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick): No, no; he is paying them now.

MR. MACLEOD: The hon. member can speak on this when I am through. That is what a man is paying. I thought it was the policy of the Conservative Party to wipe out such taxes. I have read many speeches of Diefenbaker and MacDonald and others arguing against a sales tax of 8 per cent. and I agree this is a tax that ought to be wiped out, and certainly is in addition to other taxes. We learn the Federal Government is going to step out of the field and they are no sooner out than you are going to step in. If they abandon the 8 per cent. sales tax who knows but this Government might try to solve some of its financial problems by imposing a sales tax in the Province of Ontario. I think the people who pay taxes in the Province of Ontario have reason to be concerned over the way in which the taxes they pay are being used. It is common knowledge in this Legislature that there is no tax agreement between the Government of Ontario and the Government at Ottawa. Had an agreement been concluded in 1945 on the basis of the formula advanced at the August conference, the Province of Ontario would have received, according to an Ottawa despatch of February 13th, the sum of $77,247,000. Now we are not permitted to anticipate the budget but we are permitted to say that at the last session it was estimated that the Province of Ontario would receive approximately $38,000,000 from the 7 per cent. corporation profits tax, and the chances are by the time we get around to the budget it will be up around $40,000,000 or $42,000,000, but that still leaves an excess of $38,000,000 unaccounted for, which the taxpayers of Ontario have paid to the Federal Treasury from which we derived no benefit so far as this province is concerned.

As I say, this is a matter which the taxpayer has a right to be concerned about, having to pay taxes to Ottawa, and we would be entitled under what appeared to be a reasonable agreement to a very substantial return of the amount we pay, but in the years 1947 and 1948 we are going to pay out perhaps $37,000,000 more than we will get back.

Now, I do not quite see the justice of a tax for hospitals which imposes the same burdens on the wealthy financiers as are placed upon the man earning $25 or $35 a week. I cannot quite see that at all. It means the president of the Robert Simpson Company is going to make the same contribution so far as this particular tax is concerned as any ordinary working man.

I say one of the reasons why there is a demand for hospital accommodation, why people are ill to the point where they require hospitalization is because the people are not earning sufficient wages to keep themselves in good health.

The hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) told us not so very long ago the loss of production through sickness in this province amounts to $40,000,000 every year and the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Kelley) also told us 10 per cent. of the 1,800,000 gainfully employed persons in this province are sick at a given moment. I think I am quoting him correctly; that is what I got from the press. These people are already paying a pretty heavy share, carrying a pretty heavy load, having to pay doctors' bills and the oculist and the dentist. Now you come along with a tax that is going to make it necessary for the average man and his wife, to say nothing of his family, to hand over another $10 or $12 a year by way of amusement tax. I do not think there is anything fair or democratic about it and I think there were other courses open to the Government to follow, and I repeat again you had the opportunity, if you wanted to be fair and just in the matter, to "up" the corporation profits tax by another 2 per cent. and that would give you infinitely more money than you are getting from the amusement tax, because I say if the present rate of taxation is going to continue and the sales tax is going to continue and income tax is going to continue and amusement tax is going to continue, then the people are going to have to cut down on the amount of amusement in which they indulge and I say I am absolutely opposed to this measure and if there is a recorded vote I will cast my vote against it.

HON. LESLIE E. BLACKWELL (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I am extremely interested in the contributions made to this debate by both the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett), the Leader of the C.C.F. group of the House, and the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod), the Leader of the Communist group in the House. The combined measures now before the House are measures which place them in a position of extreme embarrassment in this Legislature. The reason for that is obvious. They are in violent competition in the trade union movements as to who shall be the "political-action arm" of organized labour.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): That is worrying you a lot.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: In these circumstances it is extremely difficult for either of them to have anything good to say about this bill.

MR. GRUMMETT: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I said nothing about the bill, I only asked the hon. minister (Mr. Frost) a few questions. Why try and tie me in with the Communists the way you are trying to do?

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: The hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) completely misunderstood me. I said within the labour-union movement they were competing as to who should be its "political arm," which is hardly tying him in. I hope the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) was speaking on the bill; I thought that is what the debate was about.

MR. GRUMMETT: You are not speaking on the bill.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: I say the bill must be extremely embarrassing to the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) and the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) for the reasons I have stated.

It will be very interesting in this House to see after the proclamations from the professionals speeches of the labour union movement that there must be any such tax as this and then the condemnation without reflection of both the bill and the tax measure to support it whether any of the hon. members who wish to be that "political-action arm" can in this House support those measures. That will be of extreme interest to the Government. The hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) suggested he should have more time. May I say the principle of the hospital bill and the tax measure that supports it is extremely simple.

It means simply this—illustrating one class of hospital only—that where a hospital got $1 to help defray the cost of all public-ward beds, when these measures become effective there will be $2.35 to defray the cost of these beds. That measure is a benefit not only to indigents but for those people who have to have those expensive services and need some help. I am referring to the ordinary decent citizen who tries to pay his way. With this measure in effect in public-ward beds in a Class A hospital, he will get $2.35 of assistance. That is paid on his hospital bill before he ever goes in there.

On the other side of the picture, the combined underwriting of that public-ward bed plus the indigent payment by the municipality, will pay very close to the cost of that bed for indigents, which in our large centres run about 50 per cent. of occupancy, I am told.

I cannot think of a service, carrying with it, as it does, hospital assistance to the paying patients, for which those very same citizens throughout this province will pay a tax that almost amounts to an insurance scheme in itself. Not on the necessities of life, not a sales tax, as we have in some provinces, not a corporation tax which, after all, is an indirect sales tax; and the hon. member from Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) knows it. The Government of this country is using corporations the way the Romans used to farm out the taxes, and it is a tax on those services which the corporations render and it is the people who pay. It is not a tax where they choose whether they can pay it or not. It is a tax which overtakes them with absolute certainty.

Let us consider the cheap seats. This tax means, in a small Ontario town, or an uptown community in one of our large centres of population, that a man and his wife will go to the movies at a tax-cost of $1.50 a year. That is what it amounts to on the cheapest seats.

Before I sit down I would like to add one observation about the general tax of the country. The Dominion Government—the Ministers of that Government have said this field will be vacated—is taxing the people of this country for a huge sum of money, for which they have no legitimate government object at the moment. What that will be will appear when their budget comes down. It will be between $650,000,000 and $750,000,000 surplus as a result of the revenue structure which were created in wartime, and retained. For what purpose? What we are asking here,—in accordance with the promises they gave, that in this field, representing a small amount of taxation in relation to the huge surplus collected, for no object of Government that is presently visible,—is that this province and other provinces on provincial and municipal levels of government, be no longer starved in the essential tasks they have to perform for our people, and we fully expect when the budget is brought down, hon. Mr. Abbott will appreciate it is a moral thing to claim this tax, which was originally an accepted provincial field, when today it is so badly needed for essential provincial objects, and today is being collected by Ottawa to serve no essential purposes of government.

MR. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I am extremely sorry to see so little opposition to this bill.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That would be—

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, that would be, and I am not at all affected. I am quite proud that this very small group is opposed to this bill on principle, and says so.

Mr. Speaker, everything the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) said about hospital needs—and he said it very eloquently—is absolutely correct and there is no disagreement about it. It will be belabouring the point to emphasize the need. He might have added—he did not; so I intend to—that the hospitalization problems are some that seriously affect the municipal governments, but the reason why the hospital boards and municipal governments are so seriously affected by the problems is because this Provincial Government has not assumed its due share of responsibility for hospitalization.

The Government comes along with a bill that is intended to provide the funds for hospital deficits,—and I want to say that this is through reactionary taxation. I consider this oppressive taxation. It is directed against the section of the population that is least able to pay. That is true.

Some hon. members say it is not a new tax; it is merely attempting to continue a tax which is now in force. That may be true, but the fact of the situation is that the working men and their families are suffering. That is true of the majority of farm people and middle-class people, who are overburdened with taxation and are crying for relief from those oppressive types of taxation.

If the Federal Government, as a result of this clamour from the public, should relinquish the amusement tax, then the people will be given no relief because this Government will continue it immediately. It sounds unconvincing to me to say we are not guilty; there is a tax and we will merely continue it. If a rope was tied around a person's neck, you say—"we are not choking him, we will just hold on to the rope that is choking him, that other people put on his neck before." The question is, who shall provide the funds necessary to meet the debts which the hospitals incur, and to help in the construction of additional accommodation? I submit this is not the way to raise the necessary funds.

My colleague, the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod), has very correctly pointed out what channels are open to the Government to raise more than is required without continuing this undemocratic and reactionary type of taxation which Ottawa has put on. They may find an excuse by saying it was done because of war costs. If they should be compelled to relinquish it, certainly this is not the way we should finance the whole hospital deficit. The corporation tax would provide more than is required, and the people could be given some relief—relief, I submit, which would be translated immediately into purchasing power. The millions that will be taken out of the pockets of the working man and his family, the farmers, and the middle-class, through this type of taxation, would be immediately transferred into purchases at the grocery store, the milkman, and haberdashery establishments. All this money will be missing from the purchasing capacity of the people, and certainly this is not desirable. It is wrong taxation.

The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) has a very novel argument. He says—and I agree with him, and I am glad he made that admission—that the big corporations pass the taxation on the consumer. That is true. "Big business," in this country, when taxed, passes it on to the poor—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is what they do in Russia too.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, I am not Russian, and I am not discussing Russia.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: You are pretty close to it.

MR. SALSBERG: What these corporations do is to increase the price on whatever they make or sell.

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: That is what they do in Russia too.

MR. SALSBERG: And their dividend payments increase until we reach the stage we are at, at this moment, when the purchasing power of the mass of people is declining alarmingly, so that milk consumption is reduced, so that food consumption is reduced, but dividend payments last month were higher by almost 50 per cent. as compared with what they were two years ago. The public is "soaked" by monopolists, and the cartel, and the big corporations, who have a stranglehold on production—

HON. MR. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): How about the farmer?

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Blackwell) says if that is the case, it is almost the law of the land; you cannot change it. The corporations will pass it on. Well, I do not agree with that. I think the corporations should be made to contribute instead of "soaking" the public for it, and legislation to that effect should be introduced. Not this type of legislation to retain a bad tax, but to refuse to tax, on the other hand, where the ability to pay is beyond question at this time.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is another point of this legislation I want to make a remark on. The legislation is also full of political content and purposes. Like some other legislation, it has come down to this; it is for the purpose of creating footballs to kick to Ottawa, and have them kick them back.

What is the situation? The hospitals today are in a desperate condition. The municipalities are in the same circumstances. They appeal for help to relieve the property taxpayers from the burden of hospital costs. What does this Government do? Does it come to the assistance of the municipalities which cry for help? No, it does not. It just lets them groan—

HON. MR. BLACKWELL: It cuts down their deficits.

MR. SALSBERG: Instead they adopt a bill which enables them to say, "Well, you want assistance; it is entirely up to Ottawa. As soon as they drop the tax, we will pick it up, and then we will help you. Go ahead and get them to drop the tax; we already have the basket ready to catch the money, when it is dropped by the Federal Government."

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Did the mayors and reeves ask for that?

MR. SALSBERG: In other words, legislation which does not bring any immediate relief to the municipalities, or relief to the hospitals, but provides an excuse and an alibi for not doing anything, when and if it is necessary. It is an oppressive tax, to which I do not want to be a party and will vote against it without any hesitation.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It is a good thing to have you on the other side.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): 31st Order.

THE POWER COMMISSION ACT

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The 31st Order, House in Committee on Bill No. 105, An Act to amend the Power Commission Act. Mr. Drew.

Section 1 approved.

On Section 2.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on this section I would just like to say that the bill makes it very clear how the change-over is to be financed. It is to come from the various reserves and other funds of the system. What I want to point out on this occasion is simply this, that an impression is being created that the change-over will be made without any cost to the consumers. This is being emphasized very frequently by spokesmen for the Government, thus creating the impression that the change-over, which will cost so much money, is in some form a gift, for which they pay nothing. Mr. Chairman, I think this should be corrected. The cost will come out of funds which otherwise would make possible reduction in rates.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Are you discussing Section 2?

MR. SALSBERG: I am, Mr. Chairman. The utilization of funds for the change-over will make such reductions impossible. I am not objecting to the bill, but I think it should be pointed out quite clearly that the consumers will pay; that it is not a gift. It is not in the amendment just who will pay, but will they?

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Chairman, first of all, only for the purpose of record, I want to say that, as usual, the statement of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is quite inaccurate. Documents have been placed before every hon. member and in this case I think this particular member (Mr. Salsberg) reads what goes in front of him. That is the only compliment I will pay to him, because it excuses that much less the inaccuracy of the statements he makes.

The fact is, as everyone knows who has read those documents, the reserves are used to some extent, but very heavy public finance is involved. In any event, I would like to point out that no one at any time has suggested there is any magical source of money for any operation, and we have made it quite clear it is real hard cash that is going to be spent for this development. It is going to be real money, and money on a big scale. It is not only the $191,000,000 involved in this; it is considerably more than $300,000,000 involved in the construction of the power developments that are related to this operation—as I said yesterday, over $500,000,000 in all.

Never at any time has this Government made any suggestion this money was coming out of thin air. There has been put before every hon. member a recommendation as to a method of financing which was prepared by people who, I believe, are as highly qualified as any financial experts in the country. Every hon. member has an opportunity there to see exactly how it is proposed that this be done.

There is no mystery. There has been no suggestion of misrepresentation except on the part of the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) who has just spoken.

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Hear, hear.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I think we will all admit, Mr. Speaker, this is very important legislation, and the measure deserves our very considered examination.

I did not have an opportunity, when the bill was down for second reading, to move it be submitted to a Select Committee. I was wondering if the cabinet would consider referring it to a Committee of the House where we could ask these experts to explain in layman's language what is set out in the report?

I know some may understand those reports, but all of us do not. It is difficult for an ordinary layman to understand the technical terms used in the report, and if we had these experts appear before us, just a simple phrase or a simple explanation might let us understand in a much better manner just what is meant. I would urge the Government to give consideration to the appointment of a committee, and let us have these experts come in and give us some information.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Chairman, we have done more than that; we have not only had the experts give advice, but it has been put into written form for every hon. member to read, and has been placed on the desk of each hon. member of this Legislature. A more comprehensive compilation of documents it would be difficult to find anywhere in regard to any subject to be dealt with by this Legislature.

I do not claim any expert technical knowledge, but since we have been dealing with this subject and since this report is based on the unanimous advice of the greatest engineering experts on frequency change-over in the world, I feel we are well advised. We are now in Committee of the Whole and possibly if the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) will indicate some of the passages or phrases of which he is in doubt, I might be able to help him.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER
(Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman—

HON. MR. DREW: If the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will permit me—the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) has indicated there are some points in regard to this matter about which he is in doubt. If so, I will be glad to do what I can to explain.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, I suggested that I would like to see all hon. members of this House have an opportunity to hear these experts. It is quite all right to lay down on our desk a very large volume such as we have, but it is difficult to find in that volume just what one wants to ascertain. If these men were before us, we could ask them questions that occur to us as we go along, and it would be very much more helpful than to pick up a volume and read it.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Chairman, I certainly have no desire to limit the opportunity of any hon. member to obtain adequate advice in regard to a step of such importance as this.

I would point out that this matter does not come suddenly before the hon. member (Mr. Grummett). So there would be no doubt about what the Government proposed to do, I took the opportunity of making a very detailed statement over the radio, which was very fully reported in the press throughout the province, before we met. In that statement, the summary of the reports which we have received was put forward.

This matter has also been before the public because on the day before we met in this present session, the representatives of the municipal bodies were meeting in their annual gathering here, and on that occasion a full presentation was made in regard to all the facts, and every aspect of this problem has been very fully before hon. members ever since that time.

At the beginning of the session, a digest of the presentation to the municipal representatives was placed before hon. members, and so everything might be clear, a full copy of the recommendations of Stone and Webster, engineering experts on frequency change-over, of Mr. Harold Hobson, who at the time he was asked to come here was chairman of the Central Electricity Board in Great Britain, and of J. D. Woods and Gordon, the business experts who advised on the organization, and of Clarkson and Company, who advised on the financial details. In addition to that, as I have stated, we received the advice of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, with the support of all their technical experts and we adopted, without variation in any way, those recommendations.

Mr. Speaker, that is the position before us, and I feel sure that if there is any actual doubt in the mind of the hon. member for Cochrane South. (Mr. Grummett) as to any feature of the matter, he knows what his doubt is, and if he will appraise us of it, possibly we can remove his doubt.

MR. OLIVER: I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that inasmuch as the present bill received its second reading last Friday, I did not have an opportunity of discussing some features of it.

So far as the principle of the bill is concerned, I indicated a good many weeks ago that personally I was in favour of the change-over, and that I was only anxious we should have the information made available to all hon. members in order that they might make a proper deduction and a proper finding.

I want to ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) a number of questions relating to this bill, which I think will be of general interest, and in the interest of the public at large.

In the first place, as the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) is well aware, there are certain areas that are now being supplied with 25 cycle power. In those areas there is room for a great deal of expansion, particularly among the farming element. I am thinking of the hon. member for North Wellington (Mr. McEwing). The County of Wellington is under 25 cycle. Now, it would seem to me there would be a danger that further expansion into the farm buildings in Wellington and other counties in a similar situation, might be curtailed in view of the ultimate turning from 25 to 60 cycle. There is the suggestion it would not be advantageous to put new 25 cycle equipment into these farm buildings in these areas when in the course of a year, or two, or three, that equipment would be changed to 60 cycle.

There is another point which comes up and which needs clarification, and I am sure the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) can explain the matter.

If manufacturers of 25 cycle equipment know, as they do know, that from now on Ontario as a whole is going to be on 60 cycle power, and the need will be for 60 cycle equipment, there would be no inducement for those manufacturers to continue the production of 25 cycle equipment which would be necessary to continue the expansion in those areas not fully served at the moment.

I think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) grasps the question, and I think it has very wide ramifications.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Chairman, I hope that I can deal very quickly with both those questions.

First of all, in regard to expansion in rural areas, there will be no delay. On the contrary, there will be a much more rapid expansion possible, because with the standardization of the frequency throughout such areas as are brought in there will be, as I explained before, a greater flexibility of power delivery, which will facilitate rather than delay the extension of rural lines.

It has already been pointed out that no one need have the slightest hesitation about buying 25 cycle equipment, because they can buy that in complete confidence that, at such time as the frequency change-over takes place, they will, at the appropriate time, receive a new piece of equipment of the same type, condition and make, wound for 60 cycle. As I indicated in my remarks yesterday, it will be all done in a matter of comparatively few hours once the time has come to change any given area.

I can only repeat that under the plans set out in these combined statements which I recognized are very voluminous in their total, it is quite clear everyone can safely go ahead and buy 25 cycle equipment. I would, of course, emphasize the fact that this only applies to equipment which has a motor of some kind. Resistance equipment is not affected, but such equipment as refrigerators, washing machines and everything of that kind which is fitted with a motor, large or small, must be re-wound. Of course, the bulk of the re-winding—when I say “bulk” I mean the largest single item—will be the motors in refrigerators.

I believe that answers the first question.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, that is the first question. There is another part.

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Chairman, in regard to the second question, I want to say there very definitely will be no reason for the manufacturers to hold off in the production of 25 cycle equipment for this simple reason; very naturally they are anxious to sell equipment, and until there is a change-over, they cannot sell in any area which has not been changed from 25 to 60 cycle, therefore, the reasons for making 25 cycle equipment are precisely the same as they were before, having regard to the varying percentages as changes are made.

In other words, any wise manufacturer will obviously follow from year to year the percentage of change-over which has taken place, and the amount anticipated for the following year, and guide his production accordingly. In the meantime his market is based upon the area which remains 25 cycle.

He is just as interested in making equipment at 25 cycle as at 60 cycle in the meantime, because the change which is made afterwards in the motor will have nothing to do with him. He has manufactured the article. After all, if he makes a refrigerator, he makes the frame and container, and the parts, and the only thing which will be changed later is the motor. The same is true of washing machines or of any equipment of that kind, when the time comes to change the motors, experts of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission will do that re-winding.

For instance, you have a given type of refrigerator. Under the survey they have made, they will have a similar piece of equipment which has been already wound in advance for 60 cycle, and that will be moved in and the other piece taken out and it, in turn, will be re-wound for 60-cycle frequency, to become part of the pool that can be moved into further areas in the future. So it goes on progressively, year by year, until the whole change-over is completed.

I think it is quite definite that every reason exists for a manufacturer making equipment of any kind to continue in regard to 25 cycle just as much as 60 cycle, so long as the potential purchasers in a substantial area can only buy 25-cycle equipment.

MR. A. A. MacLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, just one question that I would like to ask. I raised it during some earlier remarks in the House, and I think this may be an appropriate time to raise it again.

The point I made when speaking earlier in the House on this question was this, that an important project of this kind, it seemed to me, would fall within the category of some of those public investment projects that were mentioned specifically in the public investment programme advanced by the Dominion Government in August, 1945.

Now, assuming that an agreement had been reached between the Ontario Government and the Ottawa Government, and assuming that the social security programme of the public investment programme had come into effect, would not the Government of Ontario in those circumstances have felt warranted and justified in asking the Federal Government to bear part of the cost of a project which is bound to contribute very greatly to the industrial development of this nation of ours? I realize, of course, that in the present circumstances, perhaps the Government is not in a very good position to make such a request, but I would point out that I think a year or so ago when the Toronto Transportation Commission was contemplating developmental work in connection with the proposed subway in Toronto, negotiations were carried on between the Toronto Transportation Commission and Ottawa, and there was a possibility that the Federal Government would assume a portion of the cost.

This programme is going to be extended over a period of fifteen years or so, and that being the case, is it not reasonable to assume that with better relations established between the Government of Ontario and the Government at Ottawa, the national jurisdiction might be convinced that this important step in the enrichment and development of Ontario's economy contributing as it would to the enrichment and development of the national economy, justified a contribution toward the cost by the Government at Ottawa?

HON. MR. DREW: Mr. Chairman, the question just raised brings up a very interesting point in regard to those proposals, which is very often forgotten. It is in relation to this Government or any other government reaching agreement on the basis of those proposals.

The fact was—and still is—the proposals of the Dominion Government under which they would support certain public developments by a contribution of 20 per cent., had a very important limitation.

It must be remembered we were informed by the Rt. Hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. King) that these proposals must be regarded as an integrated whole, and they must be accepted all together, and not in part. The fact remains, although that was still the position when we adjourned on May 3, 1946, we were dealing with it in that way, later on deals were made with other provinces which violated that very condition. Assuming we had proceeded to deal with a hypothetical proposition that was put forward, if we had agreed to these proposals, they contained clear and explicit reservations that the contributions for public development did not apply to public utilities, consequently, if we had accepted these proposals, there would not have been one cent available to this province, or the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, for this purpose.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Chairman, I have one or two questions on Section 2. It is quite evident that the financial structure for the change-over is to levy a contribution from all the Hydro-Electric Power Commissions, in this section, which are under 60 cycle power. May I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) if he would tell us what is to be the expected contribution from the eastern sections of the province, and for how many years.

HON. MR. DREW: The answer is "nothing," so it will be for no years.

MR. CHARTRAND: Is there no levy to be made?

HON. MR. DREW: No.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): The reserves will be called upon?

HON. MR. DREW: No, not for a cent.

MR. CHARTRAND: Will there not be any direct or indirect contributions by the eastern sections?

HON. MR. DREW: When you say "indirect," that refers back to an earlier question. To such an extent as the reservations of the Central Commission might have been applied, one can argue they could have been used for another purpose. I do not want any doubt left in the minds of anyone in regard to any point in this matter. In regard to any contribution from any local commission, only a commission not changing from 25 cycle to 60 cycle makes any contribution.

MR. MACLEOD: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) just clear me up on this point, in view of his closing remarks in reply to my question? The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Drew) said that public utilities were specifically excluded from a public project. In view of that, what is the explanation of the fact that the T.T.C. people did get a commitment on paper from Ottawa that they would bear part of the cost for building the subway.

HON. MR. DREW: There is, in fact, no satisfactory explanation whatever. I pointed out that at the time. The fact is, the Dominion Government had no authority to make such an offer to the T.T.C., under the terms of its own proposals. That is the situation.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I want to get this clear, if I can, in respect to reserves, Mr. Chairman. My hon. friend (Mr. Drew) had reference to the reserves of the local commissions, when he was answering my hon. friend from Ottawa (Mr. Chartrand)?

HON. MR. DREW: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: Is there a segregation of the reserves as between the different districts, such as Georgian Bay, southern Ontario and eastern Ontario? Are they divided as to districts, or does it go into the whole provincial reserve for hydro?

HON. MR. DREW: You are speaking about the reserves of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario as distinguished from the local commissions?

MR. OLIVER: That is right.

HON. MR. DREW: There is one reserve fund for the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

MR. OLIVER: And out of that fund will be drawn the capital with which to effect these change-overs?

HON. MR. DREW: Not the capital to effect these change-overs. There will be drawn that part of the capital required for this change-over, as set forth in the book which you have. That is only a very limited part of the money required for the change-over.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, in the reports, I think in the Clarkson, Gordon Section "C," the reserves set up for contingencies and stabilization of rates amounts to the sum of $87,000,000, and this report suggests that only $42,000,000 is required. Why was this tremendous sum allowed to pile up? Why was it not used to stabilize rates, as was intended, in the first place?

HON. MR. DREW: Because of a war which ended only a little over two years ago, and the very reasonable anticipation that there might be danger of the destruction of some of the power plants during the war. Fortunately that did not materialize. In the event of any destruction by any damage, by sabotage, or otherwise, happening at any of these great power plants, the amount of reserves which had been created might not have been adequate to repair that damage.

It will be remembered that a single plant at Des Joachim will cost around $55,000,000, and when finally completed, perhaps even more, so the reserves in excess of $80,000,000 were in no way excessive reserves, against the possibility of something of that kind happening.

They have been accumulating over a number of years, and were piling up, and, as the hon. member for Cochrane

South (Mr. Grummett) has pointed out, while there are reserves of $87,000,000, a figure slightly above $40,000,000 is to be used as part of the money required for the frequency change-over.

May I point out in relation to remarks which have been made, that the remainder very properly continues as a reserve to meet contingencies of a big system of this kind.

MR. OLIVER: Are there areas of what might be called "heavy industries" which are to be left out of this scheme, and not be changed over?

HON. MR. DREW: Yes, Mr. Chairman. That is set out in the recommendations. There are certain heavy industries which do not draw their power through the local transformer stations, but receive it direct. In those cases, because of the type of operation, it is anticipated there will be no change from the 25 to 60 cycle. That represents only a small fraction of the amount of power used in the province. It will mean there are certain large industries which are not included in the anticipated change-over. That does not affect the general plan, because the supply of that power does not pass through the ordinary channels of local distribution.

MR. OLIVER: And the estimated costs made allowances for that? When the estimate was arrived at, it was considered that certain areas would not be changed over?

HON. MR. DREW: Yes. The estimates are very carefully calculated, and we assume will remain as they are. I may point out, Mr. Chairman, that all these very, very detailed recommendations have been put forward after the most exhaustive examination of the situations, and from contacts with those affected.

In any case where engineers have suggested that certain parts be continued at 25 cycle, it was only done after consultation with the plants, and an indication from those plants themselves that they would prefer to continue at 25 cycle.

I emphasize, however, that does not change the effect on the general change-over, nor the application of the plan nor a charge to any individual, because of the continuance of the 25-cycle power by a limited number of very heavy industries because it does not affect the consumers at all. It merely means that a limited amount of generators will remain at 25 cycle, particularly in the Niagara area to supply those industries.

Conceivably at some future time they might decide to change over with the advancement in electronics or other electrical development which we cannot foresee at the moment. If that should happen, that change-over would be outside the scope of the present plan.

MR. C. D. HANNIWELL (Niagara Falls): Mr. Chairman, if I may rise to make a brief remark. The riding of Niagara Falls is actively concerned in this matter. I think it has about 425,000 horsepower remaining on 25 cycle, chiefly for the large industries, and, if I may, I might assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that is what they want, and, from the report as I read it, that is what they are going to have.

MR. G. I. HARVEY (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Chairman, may I ask a very elementary question? Assuming a person is living in a 25-cycle area, and the change-over is made, and the motor of his washing machine, for instance, is changed to a 60 cycle, and then he moves out of that changed area into another 25-cycle area; would that change be made back again to 25 cycle? That might happen.

HON. MR. DREW: That conceivably might happen. That is a practical possibility. However, I think it will be recognized the number of cases in which that will occur will be very limited, and as each year passes, the area in which that could happen would be that much less. The fact is under this plan, there are allowances made for such variable factors, and they were fully considered when arriving at these figures. Naturally, these can only be estimates based on the general knowledge, and would be reasonably expected to do that.

They have taken all these things into account. In regard to all these permutations and commutations before any figure was arrived at, every detail was carefully studied. If a man changed back, under those conditions, he would again get 25 cycle, because the provision is clear that no domestic consumer is to be limited in the use of his equipment during the change-over.

Section 2 approved.

On Section 3.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, on Section 3, I believe it is the intention to continue purchasing power from private corporations in Quebec. If that power is on a 25 cycle, and you are changing over, who will bear the cost of changing over the machinery? If the Commission bears that cost, has any arrangement been made with these companies, that they will compensate the Commission for that expense.

HON. MR. DREW: It is set forward, both in the summaries which the hon. members received earlier in the Session, and in the more completed document. The generators which will provide power for the Province of Ontario were originally wound at 25 instead of 60 cycle at the request of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and under this plan the Hydro-Electric Power Commission will bear the expense of re-winding those generators. That was the only way we could get the power.

Sections 3 to 11 inclusive approved.

Upon reporting.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, before the bill is reported, I would like to ask this question: After the present projects are completed in the Province of Ontario—after the completion of the “5-year plan”—to what extent will the Province of Ontario then be dependent upon the Province of Quebec for power, that is, from private companies? I understand now we purchase about 30 per cent. from the Province of Quebec.

HON. MR. DREW: I do not want to engage in any exchange of dialectics, but the fact is we are not dependent upon the Province of Quebec. We are dependent for a considerable quantity of our power upon companies which are situated in the Province of Quebec, which constructed their plants on the basis of contracts entered into by the Province of Ontario.

The fact is, with the present increase in demand, I believe we will want every horsepower we can obtain from those Quebec companies for many years ahead, and my own hope is that nothing will happen to change in any way the continuity of that supply, because present indications are that business expansion in this province will absorb all new energy which can be created by the construction we are carrying on, for many years to come.

I think most of the hon. members will have read in the press today where the Dominion officials released the figures for construction for the year 1948, and of the total, considerably more than half of all construction in Canada contemplated for 1948, is in the Province of Ontario. That is a measure of the general scale of industrial and business developments which will, in turn, be calling for all increased power we can see ahead of us for some time. I hope the present happy relations between the Province of Quebec and the Province of Ontario will continue in the years ahead, and, similarly the satisfactory relationships between these companies which are supplying the power under contract will also continue, so there will be no interference at any time with this very important source of power.

MR. MACLEOD: So the only new sources of power which are available in the Province of Ontario today, exclusive of projects already planned, will be on the St. Lawrence, if it comes along?

HON. MR. DREW: Oh, no. There are a number of other new potential sources of power. As the hon. members will recall, I outlined the developments that are now under way, Des Joachim, Cave Fourneau, Chenaux, Stewartville, Mississagi, Aquassabon, Nipigon and Ear Falls.

In addition to that, there is a very extensive power area east of the Manitoba boundary which has a potential of between 400,000 and 500,000 horsepower, and it is conceivable with the development of new generating devices and new engineering concepts, further power may be developed in the Niagara River at some time in the future. There are still great sources of power for development.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, the report proposes the construction of, I believe, ten generators along the St. Lawrence, and three of those generators are presumed to be ready about 1955. Have you any understanding, or have you entered into any negotiations whatsoever with the State of New York regarding this construction? Have we any assurance this will be put into effect, or may be put into effect?

HON. MR. DREW: Statements have appeared in the press, so I am not disclosing anything new when I say I have had a number of discussions with the present Governor of the State of New York, and since he has publicly made the statement, I am not breaching any confidence when I say that the State of New York has made it quite clear that they are prepared to proceed with the power developments alone, if the plans for combined water-way and power development do not materialize. That is the situation.

Bill No. 105 reported.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: There are a few resolutions on money matters which have been referred to the House by his honour the Lieutenant-Governor.

HON. MR. DREW: I beg to inform the House that his honour the Lieutenant-Governor, having been informed of the subject matter of the resolutions, recommends them to the consideration of the House.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: Resolved,

That there shall be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund such sums as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may authorize, for the following purposes:

- (a) The administrative expenses of the Research Council of Ontario;
- (b) the establishment and awarding of scholarships to assist in the training of research and scientific workers; and
- (c) contributions to the cost of such group industrial, agricultural and other research projects and activities as are recommended by the Research Council of Ontario and are undertaken by industrial, agricultural or other organizations or groups on a basis on which the contribution from the Consolidated Revenue Fund does not exceed fifty per centum of the cost of the project or activity.

in accordance with Section 10 of An Act respecting The Research Council of Ontario (Bill No. 114).

Resolved,

(a) That every person who purchases admission to any place of amusement as defined in Bill No. 118, An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals, shall pay to the Treasurer of Ontario for the use of His Majesty in right of Ontario, a tax at the rate of 20 per centum calculated upon the price of admission charged by the owner, and that, in the calculation, every fraction of a cent shall be counted as one cent;

(b) That the taxes paid under the said Bill (No. 118), less the expenses of collection thereof, shall be paid into the Hospital Aid Fund established under Bill No. 119, An Act to provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals; and

(c) That the expenses of collecting the taxes imposed by the said Bill (No. 118) shall be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund and that at the end of each fiscal year the Consolidated Revenue Fund shall be reimbursed for the sums so paid out from the taxes imposed by the said Bill (No. 118).

Resolved,

That the moneys paid into the Hospital Aid Fund established under Bill (No. 119), An Act to provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals, namely:

- (a) All unexpended moneys appropriated by the Legislature for aid to hospitals; and
- (b) all moneys collected under Bill No. 118, An Act to impose a Tax on Amusements to provide for Greater Aid to Public Hospitals, less the expenses of collecting such moneys.

shall be dispersed as grants to aid public hospitals, and that if the amount at the credit of the Hospital Aid Fund is insufficient to meet the sums required under the said Bill (No. 119), the deficiency shall be made up out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report certain bills without amendment, and one with amendment.

Motion approved.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. W. B. REYNOLDS (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report one bill without amendment, and one bill with amendment, and certain resolutions, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion approved.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, I might say I consulted with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett), and I trust the result of our discussions meets with the favour of the hon. members of the Legislature.

Having regard to the fact that we are adjourning tomorrow over the Easter holiday, and a number of hon. members like to leave around 5 o'clock in the afternoon, I thought it might be desirable to meet at 2 o'clock, so that we can sit through until 5, and adjourn at that time instead of later.

Mr. Speaker, I move the house do now adjourn, and when it adjourns, it stands adjourned until 2 of the clock tomorrow afternoon.

Motion approved; the House adjourned at 6.08 of the clock p.m.

LABOUR RELATIONS ACT

HON. CHARLES H. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, moved by myself, seconded by Mr. Porter, that leave be given to introduce a bill intituled the Labour Relations Act, 1948, and that same be now read a first time.

Motion approved; first reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, I think in view of the importance of this bill I have just introduced, it would be desirable at this time I make a statement in regard to it.

This bill, which is known as the Labour Relations Act of 1948, will replace the Labour Relations Board Act, 1944, the Labour Relations Board Amendment Act, 1946, and the Labour Relations Board Act, 1947, and has the effect of continuing the Ontario Relations Board. The sections providing for the appointment of, and prescribing the composition and rules governing the operations of the board are similar to the corresponding sections of the 1944 Act, but the board will, under this bill, consist of a chairman, an alternate chairman, and four members.

The bill provides for the enactment of regulations in the same form and to the same effect as in legislation which may be introduced at the current session of the Parliament of Canada, which in the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, is calculated to cover the same field as Part I of Bill 338 of the 1947 Act of the Parliament of Canada.

The regulations made under this Act may depart in form and effect from the Dominion legislation only to the extent necessary to vest jurisdiction in the appropriate provincial authorities to provide for a system of appeals from the Ontario Board to the Dominion Board and to effect a working agreement between Dominion and Provincial authorities. Provision is made for an agreement between the Minister of Labour for Ontario and the Minister of Labour for Canada.

I want to point out to hon. members that because of an often-expressed desire on the part of organized labour, of management, and to a great extent, of the general public, there should be uniformity in labour legislation. In a great many respects this is highly desirable.

I would like to take hon. members back to the time when the Federal Government, during the war period, introduced an Act known as P.C. 1003, which was to apply to all war industry wherever it was situated, in any part of the Dominion of Canada. This Government envisaged at that time a great difficulty, could see a great many jurisdictional disputes arising in endeavouring to have an Act apply only to war industry, because there were a great many industries which were partially on war activities and partially on their normal peace-time production. I think it is not difficult for hon. members of this House to realize that to have had that condition prevail at that time would have led to a great deal of difficulty and jurisdictional dispute, which would have led in a great many cases to court action. For that reason this Government decided at that time to incorporate that Act into the statutes of the Province of Ontario, and apply it to all industry.

I think it is appreciated, Mr. Speaker, by hon. members of this Legislature that the operation of that Act throughout those years was extremely satisfactory, considering all the difficulties, because that was the particular time when organization of labour was at its greatest height, and I think the action of this Government in incorporating that Act has done a great deal in the interests of labour, of management and of the people in general.

When the war emergency period was deemed to be over, and the Federal Government withdrew from that field, this Government simply, by an Act, carried those regulations forward and today we are operating under that very system of rules and regulations controlling labour relations, and we will, in spite of the introduction of this Act today, continue to operate under that system.

I want to point out, Mr. Speaker, it has proved of great benefit to industry and to the people of this province that such was the case, because it developed more than most people realize a spirit of co-operation between the Federal Department of Labour and not only the Provincial Department of Labour of Ontario, but of many of the other provinces as well, and it was a start towards uniformity.

I will say, without fear of contradiction, that in the operation of my department, I have received the very best co-operation from the Department at Ottawa, which is highly desirable. I point out a couple of instances. For instance, we have some dispute which requires conciliation service and which may take place at the head of the lakes or in Kenora. To send a man there would mean that the man's time would be consumed for an entire week or maybe more. Under the method of co-operation we have, what I do in cases of this kind—and the same applies if the Federal Government has some case here in Central Ontario—is to call Ottawa and have them send a man, say, from Winnipeg to Kenora, which he can reach in a few hours and possibly settle the dispute quickly because in a great many of these cases speed is essential. The same procedure has been applied in all cases, with very, very satisfactory results.

I know, Mr. Speaker, the thought exists in some people's minds that this province is simply leaning on the Federal Government to enact legislation and we then take it as is. I would like to point out this is not necessarily so. We will be willing to bend a long way to bring about uniformity, because that is the desirable situation, but we are not compelled actually to accept anything that would, in our opinion, be unsatisfactory for this province.

I can say that I have carefully reviewed the proposed Act covered by Bill No. 338, that is to be introduced at this session of the Parliament of Canada. I have been told by the hon. Minister of Labour for Canada (Mr. Mitchell) it will be introduced without amendment or, if any, very minor amendments. To protect ourselves in that respect, we have section 7, sub-section 1, which authorizes the making of regulations in the same form and to the same effect as Dominion legislation therein enacted, with only such variations as may, in the opinion of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, be necessary for the purposes enacted in clauses A, B and C. Sub-section 2 is a further but much more restricted authority for the making of regulations.

Therefore, when the Parliament of Canada passes Bill No. 338, I assure hon. members of this House, Mr. Speaker, that we will, to the greatest extent, follow its scheme for uniformity. If in the meantime—as the Act has not yet been passed—there are amendments we could not possibly feel would work in this province, we then have authority to enact such legislation as we deem desirable.

The main purpose of this Act which I have introduced, Mr. Speaker, is to endeavour to continue in a spirit of co-operation with the federal authorities in regard to labour-management relationship, and to bring about as far as possible the uniformity which seems to be so desirable.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) a question? Does the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) mind answering a question to clear up a point?

If this bill passes, its effect will be to give the Government, through Order-in-Council, authority to make operative in this province, legislation with which the Legislature itself will have no opportunity to deal.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

MR. A. A. MACLEOD (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I would like an answer to my question. It is a reasonable question. I am sorry if the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) is not ready to answer it offhand. If not, he can say so.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): The hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) has made an explanation that is clear enough for every hon. member to understand thoroughly, and the question was not asked for the purpose of obtaining information.

MR. MACLEOD: That is ridiculous. It is a perfectly legitimate question, and you know it.

MR. SPEAKER: I will say to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. MacLeod) that the question was asked, and the answer is not forthcoming.

HON. D. ROLAND MICHENER (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the following reports:

Report of the Settlers Loan Commissioner for the fiscal year ended 31st March, 1948.

Report of the Minister of Public Welfare, Province of Ontario, for the fiscal year 1946-47.

Third Annual Report of the Liquor Authority Control Board of Ontario. 1st April, 1946, to 31st December, 1946.

Annual Report of the Commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police from January 1, 1947 to December 31, 1947.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Minister of Mines): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, may I take this opportunity of advising the hon. members of the House that the informal meetings of hon. members who are interested in the amendments to the Mining Act will continue on Wednesday morning next, at 10 o'clock. These informal meetings have now been held on two occasions, and all hon. members who are interested in the amendments to the Mining Act are invited to attend at the Mines Library, Wednesday morning next, at 10 o'clock.

HON. GEORGE A. DREW (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I would like to table answers to questions numbers 9, 10, 11, 15, 33, 36, 37 and 45.

Mr. Speaker, again before the orders of the day, I wish to take up with the House a matter of the utmost public importance.

On Sunday, March 14th, the first airborne immigration operation carried out anywhere by any government was completed successfully with the arrival at Malton airport of the 7,000th immigrant who had been flown direct to Ontario under our plan. From the first flight on August 3rd last year up to that important flight a week ago Sunday 80 per cent. of all the airborne immigrants had been carried by Transocean Air Lines, with whom the original arrangements were made. In every respect, their flying operations had been completed satisfactorily and were handled on every occasion with the utmost efficiency. The remaining 20 per cent. of the immigrants have been flown to Canada by Trans-Canada Air Lines, with whom we had been compelled to sign the overall operating contract by the order of the Hon. C. D. Howe.

Because of our satisfactory experience in handling the first 7,000, under the special arrangements we had provided, the Government decided to continue this operation, and already there have been five more flights under our second contract. There is an increasing demand for transportation of this kind in Great Britain, and we had planned to carry on these operations throughout 1948 on a steadily expanding scale.

Now, without satisfactory explanation of any kind, our contract with Trans-Canada Air Lines, under which Transocean Air Lines was also operating, has been summarily cancelled. Upon receipt of this notice, the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), whose department has been in charge of these operations, wrote to Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe as follows. I will read the letters in full because they will give the Legislature a very clear picture of what has taken place and the extraordinary situation which has now developed.

"Dear Mr. Howe:

"The whole question of the TCA contract with this Government has reached a state of confusion which requires a definite settlement without delay. Yesterday I received a letter apparently intended as a one-month's notice of termination of the existing contract. This was entirely inconsistent with a letter of March 11th—

That is March 11th of this year.

“—from TCA which settled the schedule of flights for April consisting of eighteen flights from April 2nd to April 30th as we had requested. This letter also stated that these flights would be performed by the Transocean Company. TCA have since informed us that Transocean were prevented from performing these flights by reason of the refusal of the Air Transport Board to renew the license of Transocean, in spite of the fact that TCA had requested the board to do so. The reasons for this are obscure. They have been presented to us in various ways.

“The position of this Government is a perfectly simple one. We wish to continue our air immigration plan expeditiously and economically. However, past events and negotiations point to the need for caution in considering any of the pending proposals of TCA. Under our contract with TCA, 186 flights have been undertaken, of which TCA performed 43 and Transocean 143. More than 7,000 immigrants have now been flown from the British Isles at a price that was reasonable within their financial capacity. This, of course, was made possible by the charter agreement under which this Government was liable for a fixed amount per flight. Under such an arrangement it was inevitable that there should be deficits arising from occasional empty seats. Throughout the whole of the Transocean's 143 flights the total deficits incurred amounted to less than $6,200. For the 43 flights of TCA the deficits amounted to a total of approximately $30,703.81. This was partly due to the fact that TCA did not use equipment of the capacity called for by the agreement. It was partly due to some division of authority within the TCA organization as the result of which instructions given by the Canadian office were not followed by the London office of TCA. If it was in part due to some deficiencies in the number of passengers brought forward for some of the flights, our difficulties in this respect were increased by the confusion of instructions mentioned. Finally, in order to settle the matter amicably we offered to settle this deficit for $12,887, which TCA accepted.”

I might explain, the TCA recognized the inefficiency of their own operations to that extent, and regarded the settlement as satisfactory.

“In addition to these difficulties, a series of other incidents occurred in the TCA operation which caused a variety of inconveniences to our organizations both in London and at this end. These matters were always discussed fully with the TCA officials in Toronto. I believe that they endeavoured to rectify them. Indeed, they have co-operated as fully as they could to make the whole project a success. But, for some reason, their efforts to this end were not always effectual. Through some weakness in the organization as applied to a special operation of this kind, conditions did not materially improve. In December, 1947 it was decided that all flights up to April 1st should be undertaken by Transocean.

“During December and after, we have held several conferences with TCA as to a further contract. In the course of these proceedings two incomprehensible incidents occurred. At the first conference, early in December, TCA informed us that some new charter tariff rates had been established that would set the minimum cost per flight at $12,400 as opposed to the $9,000 of the existing agreements. This was found to be incorrect—”

I am quoting the letter, Mr. Speaker, but I pause to interpolate it was a great deal more than “incorrect.” The statement was false and false to the knowledge of the department at Ottawa. When it was found what the facts actually were, they, of course, abandoned that position.

“—In our exchange of correspondence of the 6th and 11th of December this point was mentioned. Since the flights have continued on the original basis the incorrectness of this statement has been confirmed.

“Secondly, after the settlement of the April flights, as confirmed in the letter from TCA of March 11th, TCA informed us that the Air Transport Board had refused to continue the license to Transocean beyond April 1st because of a show cause order before the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington. It was intimated that, owing to some violation of regulations by Transocean, the Air Transport Board had no alternative but to discontinue the license. This also we found to be incorrect. It is true that some complaint had been made in January before the C.A.B.—”

That is the Civil Aeronautics Board.

“—in Washington with respect to certain technicalities affecting a charter operation of Transocean in the Pacific Ocean and one in Europe. They had no direct bearing upon the operations under our contract, and had no remote relation to any safety factor. This was known to the Air Transport Board in January. The status of the matter is still the same. The C.A.B. have made no decision, and the matter is still pending. The refusal of the Air Transport Board to renew the Transocean license at the request of TCA is made for some other reason. I am at a loss to understand why the board should not accede to the request of TCA—especially since TCA in settling the April schedules for Transocean stated that they were doubtful as to whether TCA would be equipped to take this business at that time.

“I have outlined these points in some detail to indicate how unsatisfactory the whole situation is. We expect the volume of immigrants who will wish to come out to Canada by air during the next few months will steadily increase from now on. We wish to carry on expeditiously and economically. We know that Transocean can perform to our satisfaction. We know that TCA has not done so. We therefore wish to continue as at present with Transocean for at least six months. Moreover, the terms of our present contract are more favourable than anything yet offered by TCA. We do not desire to switch in the middle of the most active season from a highly satisfactory and efficiency operation. I think you will agree with me that our experience with TCA so far has been very unfortunate. We have been met with unreliability of statements in our negotiations, indifferent performance, and confusion in dealings. Therefore, we are inclined to be somewhat cautious in entering into a new contract to be performed by TCA under these circumstances. We should much prefer to carry on under the present arrangement until we have some definite proof of the ability of TCA to perform. That is our plain position. We seek your co-operation to make this possible.

“I have stated our position and relationship with TCA very frankly, as I have done with their officials on many occasions.

“Finally, I wish to mention that in the course of the immigration activities of this Provincial Government, we have of necessity many dealings with a number of Federal Departments. I wish to express our appreciation for the high degree of co-operation that we have had at all times. The medical staff and other officials of the Immigration Department have enormously facilitated our proceedings at Rainbow Corner, and at Malton. The National Employment Service has proved highly effective in placing immigrants in jobs in record time. On the other hand, I might remind you that since the order requiring the production of chest X-ray plates, British immigrants passing through the Federal Offices in London, as well as those coming through Ontario House, may obtain X-ray plates made on our machines under the direction of our technicians free of charge. This was done at the request of the federal authorities in London. I merely mention it to indicate the degree of co-operation that has been achieved between certain departments of our two governments in the interests of immigration.

"With all this in view, I trust that you will further co-operate with us by assisting us to carry out our operation in the way that we wish to do it.

"Your sincerely,
(Signed) "DANA PORTER."

To that letter the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) received, on March 22nd, a letter dated March 20th, from Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe. I will read the letter because it completes the story contained in this exchange of correspondence which brings us to the present position, except for two brief telegrams.

"Dear Mr. Porter,

"I have your letter of March 16th, regarding TCA contract with your Government. I regret that the matter of this contract is in a state of confusion, and I sincerely trust that the existing situation, which is wholly irregular under the international civil aviation rules, can be straightened out without delay.

"You will recall the situation when the Transocean matter first came to the attention of this Government. It was to save embarrassment to your Government, as well as to encourage a worthwhile immigration movement, that I persuaded TCA to take Transocean under its wing as its sub-contractor and thus enable a U.S. operation to carry traffic between Canada and the U.K. I had thought that we both understood this to be a temporary arrangement. We have now permitted the arrangement to continue until the entire movement of 7,000 immigrants has been completed.

"You will appreciate that the policy of Trans-Canada Air Lines is to put safety above all else. For that reason, TCA has the best of equipment and the most modern protective devices. It is now in the position of being responsible for an operation that would not be permitted by its own Government to carry passengers across the Atlantic, its operating standards being far below those of any established air line. This, in my opinion, is asking TCA to jeopardize its reputation for safety in a manner that is wholly unjustified under present day conditions.

"In comparing the activities of Transocean Air Lines with those of TCA in reference to the Charter flights flown by both companies in 1947, I would ask you to consider the several conditions which tended to place the Canadian company at a disadvantage.

"During 1947 TCA had at its disposal never more than 6, and for a great proportion of the time, five, North Star aircraft. With these machines it was required to maintain a daily scheduled service and the additional flights which it undertook as its proportion of your total requirement. You will appreciate that this put a severe strain on both the organization and its equipment, which was subject to the frequent minor mechanical troubles inherent to all new types.

"Furthermore, licencing authority and the TCA imposed weight limitations and wide margins of spare fuel which, while limiting the capacity of the North Star well below that of the CD-4 operated by Transocean were required to maintain the highest possible standards of safety until the new aircraft type's performance is entirely known, and it can be worked up to its peak efficiency.

"I am inclined to the opinion that the apparent lack of co-ordination within TCA to which you refer was due primarily to this condition of varying maximum passenger loads between one flight and another, rather than to any failure on the part of the company to have its London office carry out instructions issued from Canada.

"I fully appreciate the apparent inconsistency represented by a communication from TCA, dated March 11, establishing dates for the performance of Transocean flights, and a further communication reaching you March 15th, announcing that TCA would be responsible for these flights between April 1st and April 15th, and that flights thereafter performed by TCA would be subject to the negotiation of a new agreement. This sudden change resulted from the following circumstances." . . .

May I interpolate, Mr. Speaker? He refers to "sudden change," and it is to that I have referred:

"TCA realized that it could not give the Ontario Government satisfactory charter service and at the same time maintain its daily schedule trans-Atlantic service with the six North Star M I aircraft referred to previously. It had therefore assigned all the required flights to Transocean during the months of December, 1947, January, February and March, 1948, and it had applied to the Air Transport Board for permission to extend the sub-charter arrangement to March 31st last January, fully expecting at that time that by March 31st, it would have received ample deliveries of the new North Star M 2 aircraft to make any further extension of the sub-charter agreement unnecessary.

"Later, it became doubtful whether such deliveries would be in sufficient time to adhere to these plans, and therefore it applied to the Air Transport Board for a further extension through the month of April. The Air Transport Board, however, had withheld such authority, in the hope that the delivery picture might improve, and that TCA could perform the flights, and in so doing would be able to bring to an end a condition entirely at variance with this country's policy under which Sterling indirectly, and Canadian dollars directly, were being paid to a U.S. company.

"On March 12th, it became evident that a sufficient number of the new North Star M 2 aircraft, completely modified and flight-tested, would be delivered to TCA during the last two weeks in March to make unnecessary the use of Transocean aircraft to meet your requirements.

"Knowing that only your April flight requirements would involve a payment in U.S. dollars to a U.S. firm of something over $180,000 and that this drain on Sterling and Canadian currency could be avoided, the Air Transport Board's action in advising TCA that its sub-contractual arrangements with Transocean would not be extended was, I think you will agree, entirely justified and in accordance with declared Government policy.

"In reference to your remarks regarding the statements made by TCA's representative regarding the Board's reasons for withholding authority for sub-charter contract extension, I think it should be pointed out that the said representative was without definite knowledge as to the actual reason for this action, but did know that Transocean was in some difficulty with the Civil Aeronautics Board, and also knew that the Air Transport Board would not authorize the operation in Canada by any American company which was not in good standing with the air authorities of its own government. On questioning TCA on this point, I am informed that the representative intended to convey to you, and believes that he did say that he did not know the reason for the Air Transport Board's action, but assumed that it might have to do with reported difficulties between the Civil Aeronautics Board and Transocean. Incidentally, entirely apart from the other considerations which I have mentioned, it would be incumbent upon the Air Transport Board to refuse Canadian operating authority to Transocean if its difficulties with the Civil Aeronautics Board are not resolved, whether or not the circumstances resulting in these difficulties had anything to do with a Canadian operation.

"The question of whether TCA or Transocean flies the services required by your Government under the existing contract is one which I believe to be a matter for TCA's decision providing that company meets its commitments under its contract with the Ontario Government, and it was, I think, always understood that the Transocean subcontract could be expected to come to an end when TCA was in a position to meet your entire requirements, in addition to its other commitments.

"It would therefore seem that the company's action in notifying you of its desire to terminate the present contract with the Ontario Government, at the same time expressing the hope that it might be replaced by a new contract, is not closely related to the question of whether or not Transocean Air Lines participates in these flights.

"As you know, the existing contract calls for a payment of $9,000 per flight for the flights performed by TCA, and as you say in later discussions involving a revision of that contract, TCA proposed a price of $12,400 and is now prepared to enter into a contract on the basis of $11,500.

"These fluctuations, I am told by officials of TCA, represent the effect of gradually lengthening experience with the operation of a new type. The first figure mentioned was based purely on estimated costs, while the second was indicated by the actual results of only a few months' operation of the M I type aircraft, and the third is based on the estimated operating cost of the M 2 aircraft. I cannot find great fault with TCA's apparent vacillations in this regard, as I know that discrepancies between estimates and actual experience result when introducing new aircraft types, on all airlines. Actually, I am rather favourably impressed with the fact that, while its purchases of fuel and material average 75 per cent. higher cost than its American competitors, TCA is able to quote $11,500 per flight as compared with Transocean's price of $10,400 in U.S. funds.

"I have also been informed by TCA that it is prepared to make good the discrepancy in carrying capacity between the North Star in its present form, and the DC-4, by agreeing to fly free of charge, such additional flights as may be necessary to make good the guaranteed lift of 8,000 pounds. It would seem to me that this offer removes any ground for complaint on the score that TCA will render less transportation service per revenue flight than would be the case with Transocean.

"I hope that my somewhat lengthy remarks on this subject will have eliminated much, if not all, of the confusion to which you refer.

"In considering this whole matter I would again ask you to make due allowances for the difficulties experienced by any airline during the period of introduction of new aircraft types, I would also ask that in dealing with the question of negotiating an agreement with TCA to replace the contract terminating on or about April 15th, you take fully into account the national need for deflecting expenditures from United States to Canadian channels wherever that is possible.

"After discussion with TCA management, I feel entirely safe in assuring you that, with the more than adequate fleet which it will have at its disposal, and the enlarged group of already fully trained personnel now available, you will have no cause for regret if you entrust the continuation of your well-established and very commendable immigrant movement to that company."

I hope all hon. members will remember these words by Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, "continue with your well-established and very commendable immigrant movement to that company."

". . . To sum up, this unnecessary drain on Canada's supply of U.S. dollars, the risk to TCA in being responsible for a sub-contractor using sub-standard equipment and the violation of international rules covering passenger traffic between Canada and the U.K., all combine to make it imperative that this needless diversion of Canada-U.K. traffic to a U.S. carrier must end. I sincerely hope that you will co-operate to the extent of making your arrangements accordingly.

Yours sincerely,

(signed) C. D. Howe."

Immediately upon receiving the letter, the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) sent the following telegram to the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, dated March 22nd:

"Your letter of March 20th received (STOP) Nothing in this letter indicates any reason why plans settled with TCA for Transocean to fly in April cannot be carried out (STOP) Flights fully arranged for on basis of 40 passenger aircraft (STOP) Any change at this date will cause great inconvenience (STOP) Please advise today by wire whether these April arrangements will be confirmed so that our settled plans will not be disturbed.

Dana Porter."

To that telegram, the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) received the following in reply:

"Regret cannot authorize Transocean to operate from Canada to United Kingdom during April (STOP) You will note from my letter that TCA has agreed to handle your traffic for that month at basis Transocean contract (STOP) TCA assures me that their own aircraft are available for the purpose (STOP) Therefore I see no reason why expenditure of U.S. dollars can be justified."

Mr. Speaker, and hon. members of this Legislature, that is the situation with which we are now confronted.

Under Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe's orders the contract for air immigration has been cancelled, and even the flights arranged for the month of April by Transocean Air Lines with the approval of the Ottawa authorities have been disregarded and we are left with the uncertain possibility of these flights, for which tickets have been sold, and for which arrangements are complete in every detail, in fact, not being handled by Trans Canada Air Lines.

Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe has scuttled the first successful plan for airborne immigration in history. He has sought to explain this in as dishonest and hypocritical a letter as was ever written by a supposedly responsible Minister of a Dominion Cabinet. From beginning to end, it is a mass of misrepresentation and outright dishonesty.

Mr. Howe's letter contains three explanations for not continuing with the arrangements which have worked out so well. His objections may be briefly summed up as follows:

First, Canadian dollars must not be used to buy United States funds.

Secondly, he is not prepared to permit sub-standard equipment to be used on flights of this kind.

Thirdly, the operation is in violation of international agreements and cannot continue for that reason.

Each of those explanations are utterly untrue and transparently dishonest, to anyone who knows the facts.

Not one cent of Canadian money—and I want to underline that for those who are disturbed about Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe—has been used to buy U.S. funds in carrying out these flights. That is how dishonest that letter is.

Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe is perfectly aware that all the money spent for these flights is collected from the immigrants themselves in England under arrangement with the Bank of England, and no Canadian dollars are involved in these transactions. That is why I said I doubted if ever there had been so dishonest and hypocritical a letter written by an hon. Minister of the Dominion Government. That is one of the reasons. The others are just as strong.

To resume, Mr. Speaker; on the contrary, Canada has actually benefited by an amount in excess of $15,000. This is not large, perhaps, in the realm of Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, but I say this to show that instead of Canada being out-of-pocket, it is actually benefited to an extent of $15,000 as a result of payments by Transocean Airways in U.S. funds to Trans-Canada Air Lines for certain services they were called upon to perform.

Let us now, Mr. Speaker, consider the next suggestion, that Transocean Airways are using inferior or dangerous equipment is a shameless slander upon one of the finest-operating air lines to be found anywhere in the world today.

There are hon. members in this Legislature who have crossed the Atlantic in Transocean machines who know there is no line operating anywhere today which gives better service in better-operated machines than does the Transocean Airways.

From beginning to end they have carried out every single detail of this operation with the utmost efficiency and dispatch.

Sometimes I wonder how even Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe thinks he can "get away" with statements like that. Apparently he is in the habit of "getting away" with statements of that kind in Ottawa. You would think he would exercise a little caution, because there is a record which shows how false his statements are. When he speaks of Transocean having "sub-standard equipment," he quite overlooks the fact that there is on file a letter from his company, to Trans-Canada—or from the District Operating Manager of his company—who said they had on two occasions gone to the United States and examined the equipment of Transocean Airways and found it satisfactory in every respect. They have made very careful examination, and said they would not take any chance with faulty equipment.

May I now refer to his third suggestion, that this operation is "in violation of international agreement." That statement is wholly untrue.

We have a letter from Sir William Hildrid, an international authority on these matters, stating that no international agreement has been violated in the manner suggested. These things are all figments of Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe's imagination, used for the purpose of explaining his attempt to scuttle the efficient operation, which he has tried to block at every step since it was first announced.

I want to recapture some of the things which happened. First of all, this whole operation came under consideration in London in May of last year upon a definite basis. Having first considered the possibilities of air-borne immigration, I flew to London last May and there entered into the first negotiations with representatives of Transocean Air Lines for the flight of 7,000 air immigrants to Canada. I discussed this matter with hon. members of the Government of the United Kingdom, and with officials there who would be interested in this subject. On every hand we received the utmost co-operation and indications of approval of our plan.

I then came back and within 24 hours of my return, the Government met and we decided to proceed with the negotiations of this arrangement. In June, they had reached the point where it was possible for us to announce our arrangements with Transocean Air Lines. Before announcing this, the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter), in whose very efficient hands this operation has been from the very beginning, went to Ottawa to see Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, who expressed his complete approval of the plan we had under consideration. With that approval, the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Porter) returned to Toronto, indicated that approval to the Government and to the officials of Transocean Air Lines, and we proceeded to negotiate.

At that point, certain other considerations entered in, and without going into details, I can simply say Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe forced us to sign a contract with Trans-Canada Air Lines but did permit us to carry forward our operations with Transocean Air Lines as originally intended under the sub-contract terms of the basic agreement.

You will remember Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe's insulting and offensive remarks in the House of Commons, utterly unprovoked and utterly uncalled for in any way, when he said I had my fingers burned by getting mixed up in something with which an amateur had no business dealing.

At every point, Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe has tried to block this very successful operation of ours. We have refrained from any comment upon these details up to this point because our one concern has been to make sure that this operation was carried out.

I do want to say this on behalf of Transocean Air Lines, who are not in a position to speak here on this subject.

As every hon. member of this Legislature knows, I have had fairly extensive contacts with commercial air lines in many parts of the world. I have flown in the machines of many air lines and I have crossed the Atlantic a number of times; I have never seen any operation which was more efficiently carried out in every detail than that operated by Transocean Air Lines. I have never seen machines maintained in better condition, and I have never seen finer crews from the pilot right through to the stewardess than those who are operating these fine Transocean machines. There are many hon. members in this Legislature who have been at Malton and seen these flights come in; you must have admired the obvious efficiency and skill with which they brought these great aircraft in and made their first landing on Canadian soil right here on the outskirts of Toronto with these new citizens of our province.

I want to say, that while we are very critical of Trans-Canada Air Lines and its operation, I want to make it quite clear—and I hope the two newspapers, the Star and the Tribune—will observe when I speak of the “inefficiency of the Trans-Canada Air Lines,” I do not apply “inefficiency” to the pilots or crew or any members of the crew or ground staff who operate the ships. The only problem of “inefficiency” involved in this is the constant interference of Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe himself with this operation at every stage. If they had their way, these very efficient pilots and crews would really be performing, as they should be performing, with the aircraft they could have, if it were not for Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe's interference.

I want to emphasize once again when we undertook these flights, we made perfectly sure that no question of Canadian dollars was involved because we had obtained an agreement before it started that the fares would be paid for in sterling in the British Isles, which has been done with the consent of the Bank of England and the Government of the United Kingdom.

There is the picture.
